There are a lot of questions regarding the issue when `Eid-ul-Adha (the Festival of the Sacrifice) or `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) coincides with a Friday, which is the weekly festival. Is Jumu`ah Prayer obligatory on those who offer Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) or is it enough to offer Salat-ul-`Eid and offer the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer instead of Jumu`ah Prayer? Should the Adhan (call to Prayer) be announced in mosques for Zhuhr Prayer? The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' issues the following Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified Muslim scholar):

There are some Marfu` (a Hadith narrated from the Prophet with a connected or disconnected chain of narration) and Mawquf (words or deeds narrated from a Companion of the Prophet that are not attributed to the Prophet) Hadiths in this regard, including:

1- A Hadith narrated by Zayd ibn Arqam (may Allah be pleased with him) (that Mu`awiyah ibn Abu Sufyan (may Allah be pleased with him) asked him: "Did you witness with the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) two `Eids (festival days) that happened to be on the same day?" Zayd said: "Yes" Mu`awiyah asked: "What did he do?" Zayd said: "He offered the `Eid Prayer and gave a choice in offering Jumu`ah Prayer and said: 'Who wills to perform (i.e. Jumu`ah Prayer) can perform it.'") (Related by Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'y, Ibn Majah, Al-Darimy and Al-Hakim in his book Al-Mustadrak and ranked its Isnad [chain of narrators] as Sahih [authentic], but it was not reported by Al-Bukhari and Muslim and it has a similar report on the condition of Muslim). Al-Dhahaby agreed to that and Al-Nawawy said in his book Al-Majmu`: "Its Isnad is good."

2- The evidence of Zayd ibn Arqam's report is a Hadith narrated by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: (Two `Eids have come on this day (Friday). If anyone does not want to offer the Friday Prayer, the `Eid Prayer is sufficient for him. But we shall offer the Friday Prayer.) (Related by Al-Hakim as mentioned above and also related by Abu Dawud, Ibn Majah, Ibn Al-Jarud, Al-Bayhaqy and others).

3- Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) said: (Two `Eids came on the same day at the time of the Prophet (peace be upon him), so he led people in Prayer, and then said: "He who wishes to offer Friday Prayer, it is up to him, and he who wishes to only perform `Eid Prayer and not attend the Friday Prayer, it is up to him.") (Related by Ibn Majah and Al-Tabarany in his book Al-Mu`jam Al-Kabir with the wording: (Two `Eids coincided on the same day at the time of the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him); `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) and Jumu`ah (Friday). The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) offered Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer), then he turned to face the people and said: "O people you have achieved great good and a reward. We will offer the Jumu`ah Prayer, so if anyone wants to offer it with us, let him do so, and if anyone wants to go back home, let him do so.")

4- Ibn Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) said that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: (Two `Eids (festival days) have occurred together on this day of yours. Whosoever desires, this (`Eid) will suffice for his Friday Prayer, but we are going to perform the Friday Prayer.) (Related by Ibn Majah). Al-Busiry said: "Its Isnad is sound and its narrators are trustworthy."

5- There is a Hadith Mursal (a Hadith with no Companion of the Prophet in the chain of narration) related by Dhakwan ibn Salih who said: (Two `Eids coincided at the same day (i.e. a festival came on Friday, which is the weekly festival) at the time of Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him), `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) and Jumu`ah (Friday). He (peace be upon him) offered Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer), then he rose and delivered a Khutbah (sermon) to people: "You have achieved great good and a reward. We will offer the Jumu`ah Prayer, so if anyone wants to remain (i.e. in his house), let him do so, and if anyone wants to offer it, let him do so." (Related by Al-Bayhaqi in his book Al-Sunan Al-Kubra).

6- `Ata' ibn Abu Rabah narrated: (Ibn Al-Zubayr led us in Prayer for `Eid (Festival day) on Friday in the morning. Then, we went to offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer but he did not come to us and we offered it without him. Ibn `Abbas was in Al-Ta'if and when he came we mentioned that to him. He said: "He achieved the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet).") (Related by Abu Dawud and Ibn Khuzaymah with another wording and added in the last of the Hadith: Ibn Al-Zubayr said: "I saw `Umar ibn Al-Khattab when two `Eids concur, he would do that."

7- In the Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book) of Al-Bukhari (may Allah have mercy upon him) and the Muwatta' of Imam Malik (may Allah be merciful to him) it is reported on the authority of Abu `Ubayd, the freed slave of Ibn Azhar who said: "I witnessed the `Eid with `Uthman ibn `Affan and it was on Friday. He performed `Eid Prayer before the Khutbah (sermon) and said in the Khutbah: "O people, you had two festivals this day. So, whoever wants to wait for Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer from the remote places, let him do so and whoever wants to return home, I permit him."

8- It is reported on the authority of `Aly ibn Abu Talib (may Allah be pleased with him) who said, when two festivals (i.e. a `Eid and Friday) happened to come together in one day: "Whoever wants to offer the two Prayers, let him do so and whoever wants to

to sit, let him do so." Sufyan said: "He means to sit in his house." (Related by `Abdul-Razzaq in Al-Musannaf and a similar report is related by Ibn Abu Shaybah).

According to these Marfu` Hadiths, Mawquf Athars (narrations from the Companions) and what was maintained by the majority of scholars regarding the meaning of these reports, the Committee states the following rulings:

1- Whosoever attends Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer), it is allowable for him to overlook Jumu`ah Prayer and offer Zhuhr Prayer instead of it, but it is better to offer the Jumu`ah Prayer with people.

2- If someone does not attend Salat-ul-`Eid, he is not allowed to have this Rukhsah (concession) and it is obligatory on him to perform the Jumu`ah Prayer. Therefore, it is obligatory on him to go to the mosque and offer Jumu`ah Prayer and if there isn't a sufficient number to perform Jumu`ah Prayer, it should be offered as Zhuhr Prayer.

3- It is obligatory on the Imam (one who leads the congregational Prayer) of the mosque where the Jumu`ah is offered to perform Jumu`ah Prayer on this day, so that whoever wants to witness it can do so. In addition, if someone does not perform Salat-ul-`Eid and there is not a sufficient number required for offering Jumu`ah Prayer, they may offer it as a Zhuhr Prayer.

4- Whoever attends the `Eid Prayer and observes the Rukhsah should offer it as Zhuhr when its time is due.

5- It is not allowable in this time to announce Adhan (call to Prayer) except in the mosques where the Jumu`ah Prayer is offered and therefore the Adhan for the Zhuhr Prayer is not prescribed on this day.

6- The claim that whoever attends Salat-ul-`Eid will be not required to perform neither the Jumu`ah Prayer nor the Zhuhr Prayer on this day, is a mistaken opinion. For this reason, scholars avoided it and ruled that is a mistake, because it disagrees with the Sunnah and involves cancellation of an obligatory act without evidence. Those who maintained this opinion might not have comprehended what is mentioned in this issue from Hadiths and reports which permitted a person who attended Salat-ul-`Eid not to attend the Jumu`ah Prayer and that it is obligatory on him to perform it as a Zhuhr Prayer. And Allah knows best.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16353

Q 2: Some people hold their hands up and say Amen while the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) is delivering the Friday Khutbah (sermon) and supplicating. Is this permissible?

A 2: Neither the Imam nor the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) are allowed to raise their hands during Du'a' (supplication) of Friday Khutbah, because this was not reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). An exception of that is that when the Imam supplicates for rain in the Friday Khutbah. In this case, he should raise his hands, following the example of the Prophet (peace be upon him), and the people should do the same.

The third question of Fatwa no. 19765

Q 3: What is the ruling on offering Du'a' (supplication) for someone who built a Masjid (mosque) at his own expenses? Please note that the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) offers Du`a' for him during Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayers by saying: "O Allah! Forgive the sins of the person who built this Masjid !" May Allah grant you success and benefit Islam and Muslims through you!

Q: Making Du`a' regularly for the person who built the Masjid is a Bid`ah (heresy in Islam) that has no basis in Shari`ah (Islamic law). Neither the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet Muhammad) nor the Salaf (righteous predecessors) publicized the good deeds of others. Allah did not ask us to worship Him in this ostentatious and excessive pride nor display good deeds. There is no harm if the Khatib (preacher) exhorts the people to build Masjids and perform other pious acts and explains the reward for this meritorious act for them, and to encourage Muslims to offer Du`a' for others in their absence for their good deeds.

May Allah grant you success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 20430

Q: Is it permissible to become occupied with Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) and Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) at the expense of listening to the Khutbah (sermon) of the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer?

A: Anyone who attends the Jumu`ah Prayer must listen to the Khutbah and not become occupied with other things such as Istighfar, Dhikr, etc., because it is not permissible to speak while the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) is delivering the Khutbah. A proof for this is the Hadith narrated on authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) stated: \(If, during the Jumu`ah Prayer, you ask your companion to be quiet while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah, you have engaged in idle talk.\) (Related by Al-Bukhari, Muslim and the other authors of the Sunan [Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes]) It was related by Imam Ahmad, Al-Bayhaqy and others on the authority of Abu Al-Darda' (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: \(One day, the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) took his seat on the Minbar \(pulpit\), addressed the people and recited an Ayah \(Qur'anic verse\). Ubayy ibn Ka`b was sitting next to me, so I asked him: "O Ubayy! When was this Ayah revealed?" As he refused to answer me, I repeated my question. He refused to speak to me until the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) descended the Minbar. Then Ubayy said to me: "All you got from your Jumu`ah was speaking idle talk." When the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) left, I went to him and told him what had happened. He said: "Ubayy spoke the truth. If you hear your Imam speaking, then listen to him until he finishes."\) Allah (Exalted be He) states: [\(So, when the Qur`ân is recited, listen to it, and be silent that you may receive mercy. \[i.e. during the compulsory congregational prayers when the Imâm \(of a mosque\) is leading the prayer \(except Sûrat Al-Fâtihah\), and also when he is delivering the Friday-prayer Khutbah\]. \(Tafsir At-Tabari\).\)](#)

Some of the Mufasssirs (exegetes of the Qur'an) such as Mujahid and others mentioned that the Ayah was revealed concerning the obligation of listening to the Khutbah, indicating that those who attend Jumu`ah Prayer must listen to it attentively. However, if a person cannot hear the Khatib (preacher) due to the distance between them or due to his low voice and so forth, then there is no harm if he occupies himself with Dhikr, Istighfar and reciting the Qur'an provided that he does not distract those around him; this is better than remaining silent. Likewise, there is no objection if one silently asks Allah to enter Jannah (Paradise) or distance him from Hell-fire when the Khatib mentions them, invokes Allah's Blessings and Peace upon the Prophet when he hears his name, or says: "La ilaha illa Allah (there is no deity but Allah)" when the Khatib asks the congregants to mention Allah since all of the above are not considered idle talk if they are not audible.

Q: I would like to mention that the people of Al-Iskan mosque in Dammam asked me to refer the following question to you. It is regarding their weekly suffering from teenagers who mess around in the upper floor during Friday Khutbah (sermon) and make a lot of noise and disturbance which deprives them from listening to and benefiting from the Khutbah. A praying person would ask them to stop making noise and may punish them, thus making him speak during the Khutbah. I hope you will give me an answer, so that I can inform the worshipers of the mosque of the legal ruling.

A: There is no doubt that all the people are required to listen attentively to the Friday Khutbah. Speaking during the Khutbah is prohibited except for someone who speaks to the Imam who delivers the Khutbah or the one whom the Imam speaks to during the Khutbah. As for what is mentioned in the question about some ignorant people who mess around during the Khutbah, the Imam should criticize and forbid that and if they do not obey, they should be prevented from going up to this floor to evade their harm.

Q 2: The Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade touching stones while the Imam (the one who leads the congregational Prayer) is delivering the Khutbah (sermon) on Friday. I hope you will clarify for us the manner of touching stones? Does someone come under the prohibition and its consequences if they remove tiny stones that cling to their forehead and legs from the prayer rug, after offering the supererogatory Prayer?

A 2: The prohibition of touching small stones while the Imam is delivering Friday Khutbah means to avoid playing with dust and messing around and to listen attentively to the Khutbah, because playing with stones distracts one's attention from listening to the Khutbah. Accordingly, the prohibition does not include what is mentioned in the question, because it is not a trivial act.

Q 1: What is the ruling on making Tasbih (glorification of Allah) on the fingers of the right hand or using Misbahah (counting beads used when remembering Allah) while the Khatib (preacher) is delivering the Friday Khutbah (sermon)?

A: It is obligatory to listen attentively to the Friday Khutbah. This is based on the Prophet's command which prohibits talking or making excessive deliberate movements during the Khutbah. Accordingly, it is not permissible to make Tasbih on the fingers of the hand or to use Misbahah. Using Misbahah is allowed provided that a person does not think it more virtuous than counting on the fingers. It is better to make Tasbih on the fingers, because this was the regular practice of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and the fingers will be called as witnesses for or against a person on the Day of Judgment.

Q: Should I implore Allah's Peace and Blessings upon the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) when the Khatib (preacher) mention the name of the Prophet while delivering the Friday Khutbah (sermon)?

A: It is obligatory to listen to the Friday Khutbah attentively and avoid talking or making excessive deliberate movements. This is based on the fact that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) prohibited indulging in talk while the Khatib is delivering the Khutbah. When one hears the Khatib mention the name of the Prophet Muhammad, then one may implore Allah's peace and blessings upon him inaudibly. One is not allowed to raise their voice while uttering this. This is because the imploration here is an act of Du`a' (supplication) and not just any words.

Q1: When the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) delivers the Jumu`ah (Friday) Khutbah (sermon) and comes to mention the name of the Prophet (peace be upon him) by reading, for instance, the Ayah (Qur'anic verse): ﴿Allâh sends His Salât (Graces, Honours, Blessings, Mercy) on the Prophet (Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم), and also His angels (ask Allâh to bless and forgive him). O you who believe! Send your Salât on (ask Allâh to bless) him (Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم), and (you should) greet (salute) him with the Islâmic way of greeting (salutation i.e. As-Salâmu `Alaikum).﴾ the attendants say congregationally and loudly: (May peace and blessings be upon him and his family!)

Is this a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) or is that a conduct narrated from the best of all creature, Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) or from his Companions?

A: Sending peace and blessings upon the Prophet loudly while the Imam delivers the Khutbah is a Bid`ah that has no basis in Islam. However, it is obligatory upon each one to send peace and blessings upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) privately.

Q 6: Is it permissible to invoke Allah's Blessings and Peace upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) if the Khatib (preacher) happens to mention his name while delivering the Friday Khutbah (sermon)?

A: It is obligatory upon the attendees of the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer to remain silent once the Khatib starts the Khutbah. Talking becomes prohibited in this case, for the Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said: \(If you ask your brother to remain silent while the Khatib is delivering the Friday Khutbah, you have engaged in idle talk.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

If, however, the Khatib makes Du`a' (supplication), the audience may say: "Amen". If he mentions the name of the Prophet (peace be upon him), the audience may invoke Allah's Blessings and Peace upon him in a low voice. In this way the apparent contradictions between various texts on this subject may be reconciled. Another reason is that one is not prohibited from saying: "Amen", or invoking Allah's Blessings and Peace upon the Prophet while listening to the Khutbah. Rather, it is an act of `Ibadah (worship) which is related to the Khutbah.

Q 8: I know that there is a Hadith implying that it is not permissible for a Muslim who comes to a Masjid (mosque) to perform Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer to speak once the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) ascends the pulpit. In the Hadith I speak about, the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(Whoever distracts himself with pebbles during the Khutbah \(sermon\), has engaged in idle talk and anyone who engages in idle talk, there is no Jumu`ah for him \(i.e. will not get the reward of Jumu`ah Prayer\).\) Observing this, there are some people who use Miswak (tooth-cleansing stick) while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah. Is using Miswak one of the prohibited things during the Friday Khutbah?

A: The congregants who attend the Jumu`ah Prayer should carefully listen to the Friday Khutbah. They are forbidden from speaking and making any idle motions. As for Miswak, it is one of the motions that are not permissible during the Friday Khutbah since this is not its specified time.

May Allah grant us success and peace and blessings be upon our Prophet and his family and companions!

Fatwa no. 18978

Q: What is the ruling on returning Salam (Islamic greeting of peace) and blessing the sneezer saying: "Yarhamukum Allah (may Allah have mercy on you) during the Friday Khutbah (sermon)?

(Part No. 7; Page No. 129)

A: It is not permissible to say: "Yarhamukum Allah" to the one who sneezes or to return Salam to one who greets you with Salam while the Khutbah is in progression, according to the correct opinion maintained by scholars. This is based on the Prophet's general prohibition of any talk during the Khutbah. It is related in the Two Sahihs (authentic collections of Hadith, i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of Sa'id ibn Al-Musayyib that Abu Hurayrah told him that the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: (If you (even) ask your companion to keep quiet on Friday while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah, you have in fact indulged in idle talk.) This is the wording of Al-Bukhari, part 1, p. 224. The version as related by Imam Ahmad in his "Musnad (Hadith compilation of) Imam Ahmad", part 2, p. 474 states: (If a person says to his companion on Friday while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah (sermon), "listen!", he has engaged in idle talk.) You may only shake hands with a person if they greet you with Salam or extend their hand to shake with you. You may answer back their greeting of Salam only after the Khatib (preacher) has concluded the first or the second Khutbah. You are also allowed to hold up your hand as a gesture of greeting them back, like the case when a person greets another person who is performing Salah (Prayer). The same ruling applies to the case when a person happens to sneeze. One may implore blessings on him saying: "Yarhamukum Allah," only after the Khatib has finished the first or the second Khutbah, as has been stated earlier.

shall not receive full reward for performing Jum`ah (Friday) Prayer.) It was also authentically reported that he (peace be upon him) said what means: (A miser is someone who, when I am mentioned in their presence, does not invoke Allah's Blessings and Peace upon me.) It is quite well-known that the Khatib (preacher) may quote some Hadiths of the Messenger (peace be upon him) and may require the audience to invoke Allah's Peace and Blessings upon him. Is there anything wrong with that? Does the audience have to invoke Allah's Peace and Blessings upon the Prophet in a loud or a low voice? Please enlighten us, may Allah reward you!

A: Whenever the Khatib happens to mention the name of the Prophet (peace be upon him), you may invoke Allah's Peace and Blessings upon him in a low voice. In this way, you will be applying the rulings pertaining to the two Hadiths cited above. It becomes clear enough that the apparent contradiction between these two Hadiths is of no account.

Q3: Once the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) has ascended the pulpit and has not yet started the Khutbah, is it permissible to supplicate Allah at this time or is it obligatory to remain silent and wait for the Khutbah to start?

A3: It is obligatory to hearken and pay full attention during the Khutbah based on the directions of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). Supplication is permissible while the Imam is sitting on the pulpit as well as during one's Sujud (Prostration) and after the conclusion of the last Tashahhud (a recitation in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) before Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer). When the Prophet Muhammad was asked about Sa`at Al-Ijabah (an hour when invocations are more likely to be answered by Allah) on Friday, he (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) replied: \(It is when the Khatib \(preacher\) sits on the Minbar \(pulpit\) until the end of Salah.\) (Recorded by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (authentic collection of Hadith) on the authority of Abu Musa Al-Ash`ary (may Allah be pleased with him).

Q: In one of mosques in the city of Jeddah, the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) delegates another person to delivers the Friday Khutbah (sermon) in his stead due to the former's absence on vacation. In every Friday Khutbah, this deputy-Imam constantly reminds us saying:

"O Muslims, I remind you that there should be no Du`a' (supplication) during the pause between the two Khutbahs." I disagreed with him regarding this and asked him to bring a proof from the Noble Qur'an, a Sahih (authentic) hadith, or a Shar`i (Islamically lawful) Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) to validate his saying that making Du'a' between the two parts of the Khutbah is prohibited. He just argued that this is mentioned in some book, without naming it. What is the correct opinion on this issue?

A: We know of no evidence prohibiting supplicating Allah during the interval between the two Khutbahs on Friday. On the contrary, this time is the most likely for Du`a' to be answered by Allah. Some scholars even argued that the hour during which Du`a' is most likely to be answered is that which extends between the Khatib's (preacher) sitting on the Minbar (pulpit) and the end of the prayer. This is based on what was related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him): \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace and blessings of Allah be upon him\) said: "There is a time on Friday in which no Muslim offers Salah \(Prayer\) and asks Allah for anything \(that is good\), without his supplication is granted by Allah. And he \(peace and blessings of Allah be upon him\) indicated the shortness of it with his hands."\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

It is related also on the authority of Abu Musa (may Allah be pleased with him) \(that he heard the Prophet Muhammad \(peace and blessings of Allah be upon him\) talking about the \(special\) hour during Friday saying that it is between the time when the Khatib \(preacher\) sits on the Minbar \(pulpit\) until the end of Salah.\) (Recorded by Imam Muslim and Abu Dawud).

Q 2: Is it permissible to talk during the interval between the two Jumu`ah (Friday) Khutbahs (sermons)?

A: If two persons talk during the interval between the two Khutbahs, they will not be sinful and doing so does not affect the validity of their Jumu`ah Prayer. This is based on the Hadith narrated by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) to the effect that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «If you say to your companion, 'Be quiet!' on Friday while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah, you have spoken laghw \(idle talk\).» (Related by the Six Hadith Compilers [Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y, and Ibn Majah] except for Ibn Majah) The way in which the Hadith lends support is that it indicates the prohibition of talking while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah, which implicitly indicates that talking is permissible in case the Imam is not delivering the Khutbah, which includes the interval between the two Khutbahs.

Q 2: While delivering the Friday Khutbah (sermon), the Wudu' (ablution) of the Khatib (preacher) was invalidated. Should he discontinue the Khutbah and perform Wudu', or what should he do?

A: It is indicated by Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) that it is strongly recommended that a Muslim should head to the Masjid (mosque) on Friday

after having performed Ghusl (full ritual bath) and Wudu'. This is based on the Hadith narrated on the authority of Samurah (may Allah be pleased with him) to the effect that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: «Anyone who performs Wudu' on Friday, it is good; and if any of you performs Ghusl, it will be better.» (Related by Ahmad and Ahl-ul-Sunan [authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes]) It is also reported on the authority of Abu Sa'id al-Khudry (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Performing Ghusl on Friday is an obligation on every adult.» (Related by Al-Bukhari)

However, if the Imam's Wudu' is invalidated while delivering the Jumu`ah Khutbah, he should continue delivering it and perform Wudu' thereafter for the Jumu`ah Prayer. Wudu' is not a condition for the validity of the Khutbah, but a condition for the validity of any Salah (Prayer).

Q 3: Some people including me sleep during the Khutbah (sermon) of the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer. What is your opinion, our eminent Shaykh? What is the ruling of Islam on this regard?

A 3: It is obligatory for a Muslim to listen to the Khutbah and stay away from distractions like talking or sleeping. It was reported by Muslim in his Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book) on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who performs Ghusl \(full ritual bath\) and then goes to offer the Jumu`ah \(Friday Prayer\) and performs the \(supererogatory\) prayer that has been ordained for him, listens until the Imam \(the one who leads congregational Prayer\) concludes the Khutbah \(sermon\) and then offers the Prayer along with him \(the Imam\), he would be forgiven for what he did between then and the following Friday, and even three days more.\) It was reported on the authority of Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who speaks during the Jumu`ah \(Friday\) Prayer while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah is like the donkey who is carrying books, and for those who tell him to listen, there is no \(reward for the\) Jumu`ah.\) Al-Hafizh ibn Hajar said that this was related by Ahmad through a good Isnad (chain of narrators).

All this indicates the greatness of the Khutbah of the Jumu`ah as it implies advice and admonition, guidance, calling to goodness and reminding the Muslim of Allah (Exalted be He).

(Part No. 7; Page No. 136)

Hence, the Muslim must be careful about this and must not take it lightly because of the previously mentioned grave warning involved here.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20094

Q 2: During the Friday Khutbah (sermon), one of the worshippers fainted in the Masjid (mosque) and he was very sick, especially that he had had a heart attack before. Two of the worshippers stood to help him and sit him down. He asked them to take him out of the Masjid due to him being unable to stay and complete the Salah (prayer). When they stood to help him and take him home or to the hospital, the Khatib (preacher) forbade them and told them to leave him in the Masjid and if he died, he would thus die in the Masjid. That man stayed lying on his back until Salah was over.

The question is: Was what the two mentioned men did to help that sick man during the Khutbah not permissible? Are they considered from those who engage in idle activities during Salah? We know that if a man says to someone "keep silent" during the Khutbah, he will be considered as indulging in idle talk and will receive no reward for offering the Jumu`ah. Was what the Imam did, forbidding people from helping that sick man, right or wrong?

What should he have done? If something like that happens during the Khutbah, what should be done? Please advise us, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: What these two men did, trying to help that sick man, is what should be done. We do not believe that what the Kahtib did is right. We ask Allah to forgive him.

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 14770

Q 7: Is it permissible for me to offer Nafilah (supererogatory) Prayers during the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah (sermon)?

A: If you enter the Masjid (mosque) on Friday while the Imam is delivering the Khutbah, you should offer Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) and sit to listen to the Khutbah. If you were already in the Masjid before the Imam enters, it would be impermissible for you to stand during the Khutbah to offer Nafilah because you are required to listen attentively to the Khutbah and to keep away from any distraction.

Q: One of our scholars lives near the Masjid (mosque) and comes to the Jumu`ah (Friday Prayer) only after the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) ascends the Minbar (pulpit). When I asked him about the reason, he said that he listens to the Khutbah (sermon) of Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) on the radio, which is better than going to the Masjid early. Is that true?

A: Hastening to the Jumu`ah Prayer is of great virtue and reward for it was authentically reported in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) and other books of Hadith on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: Anyone who makes Janabah Ghusl \(full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge\) on Friday, and then goes \(to the mosque\), is like the one who offers a she-camel as a sacrifice, and he who comes during the second hour would be like the one who offers a cow, and he who comes during the third hour is like the one who offers a ram with horns, and he who comes during the fourth hour is like the one who offers a hen, and he who comes during the fifth hour is like the one who offers an egg. And when the Imam comes out, the angels are also present and listen to the mention of Allah \(the sermon\). Hence, it is permissible for the Muslim to be keen on going early to the Masjid on Friday as much as possible unless he has something more important to take care of such as his family affairs and other worldly and religious affairs.

Q: I had the honor of being a member of the Board of Trustees of Bournemouth Islamic Center which is located in south England. During my last visit to this Center two months ago, the Imam (the one who leads congregational prayer) delivered an eloquent khutbah (sermon) in Arabic, yet his translation of the Khutbah was very bad because of his bad English. Out of Allah's Grace, brother Tariq Palmer an Englishman who embraced Islam during his stay in Jeddah for eleven years and now works in Bournemouth, his birthplace, volunteered to give a translation of the Khutbah with his fluent English. However, the Imam asked him to give his translation after finishing Salah on the pretext that it is not permissible to have two Khutbah for Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer. Needless to say, worshippers who have their business and engagements cannot wait after finishing Jumu`ah Prayer, and consequently they leave the Masjid without gaining any benefit from the translation which provides the content of Khutbah.

So I wish Your Eminence will write to me with what should be legally done in this regard, so that we can ask the Imam to act according to your Fatwa.

A: There is nothing wrong in translating the Khutbah into a language understandable by the attendance or many of them, provided that it comes after the Khutbah is delivered in Arabic and before Salah.

Fatwa no. 20575

Q: In our Islamic Center located in a European country, we perform the Jumu`ah (Friday) and the congregational Salahs (Prayers) in the Masjid (mosque). About one hundred of the Non-Arab Muslims regularly visit the Masjid. They constitute about one-fifth of the worshippers and the rest are Arabs. Since our Khatibs (preachers) do not have any command of the foreign language of our country and their accent is too poor, we agreed for general benefit to assign a translator to give a simultaneous interpretation to the Khutbah (sermon). This interpretation is lively transmitted to the non-Arab worshippers via wireless transmitters. Do you see this act as permissible, and brings a Shar`y interest and does not constitute a Bid'ah (innovation) in religion? Is this act legally regarded as a kind of the forbidden Laghw (idle talk) with regards to the translator who is one of the worshippers attending the Jumu'ah Prayer? What about those using the transmitters as they sometimes need to move it? And is there anything wrong in allocating a place in the back of the Masjid for the non-Arabs

to avoid disturbing the Arab worshippers by the sound penetrating from their wireless transmitters, which would result in depriving them from the first rows? We hope to receive your answer as soon as you can, as this issue happens every Friday.

A: There is nothing wrong in translating the Khutbah from Arabic into a language understandable to some of the attendance so that they may benefit from the Khutbah, yet this should be done without incurring noise to the other attendance.

Q 1: Is it permissible for someone other than the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) to translate the Khutbah (sermon) of Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer to help those who do not know Arabic to understand the Khutbah?

A: It is permissible to translate the Khutbah of Jumu`ah Prayer into a language understandable to those who do not understand the language of the Khatib so that they can benefit from the Khutbah.

Q 6: Is it permissible for the Imam preaching the Khutbah (sermon) of Jumu`ah to supplicate for people right after finishing the Khutbah and while still on the pulpit and the attendance say after him: "Amen"?

A: Du`a' (supplication) at the end the second Khutbah of Jumu`ah Prayer is permissible only for the Imam. As for the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer), they should not say: "Amen" collectively, but

(Part No. 7; Page No. 142)

Two `Eid Prayers

Fatwa no. 14089

Q: How would the Prophet (peace be upon him) perform the Two `Eid Prayers?

A: Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) is comprised of two Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) to be offered before the Khutbah (sermon). In the first Rak`ah the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) pronounces Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer), after which he pronounces six additional Takbirat. He then recites aloud both Al-Fatihah and another Surah. Then pronounces Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") and performs Ruku` (bowing). After raising up from the second Sujud (prostration), he pronounces Takbir for rising up and follows this by pronouncing five Takbirat. Thereafter, he recites aloud both Al-Fatihah and another Surah and completes the second Rak`ah. After Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), he delivers two Khutbahs in which he is to remind people of Allah and admonish them. In the Khutbah of `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast), he should exhort people to give in charity and explain the ruling on this, whereas in `Eid-ul-Adha (the Festival of the Sacrifice), he should explain both the virtue and ruling on offering an Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims).

Q: It rains very heavily in India, which sometimes makes it too difficult for Muslims to perform Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) in the place designated for performing it. Thus, they perform it at Masjids (mosques). Once it occurred that some Muslims performed Salat-ul-`Eid in a Masjid that was not spacious enough to accommodate everyone who came to perform it. Therefore, the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) led a small group and then the others asked the same Imam to lead them, which means that he performed Salat-ul-`Eid twice. This often happens . Is this permissible, Your Eminence Shaykh? Please answer me, may Allah benefit us and you!

A: The basic ruling regarding Salat-ul-`Eid is that it should be performed in open areas outdoors . However, there is nothing wrong in performing it inside the Masjids when there is an excuse which calls for this. Whoever misses performing it behind an Imam should make up for it either in congregational Salah (Prayer), or individually without a Khutbah (sermon) being delivered. It should not be repeated by the same Imam.

Q2: What is meant by Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") when Allah says: (and that you must magnify Allâh [i.e. to say Takbîr (Allâhu Akbar; Allâh is the Most Great)] for having guided you) ?

A: Takbir in these Words of Allah (and that you must magnify Allâh [i.e. to say Takbîr (Allâhu Akbar; Allâh is the Most Great)] for having guided you) is in regards to saying Takbir on the arrival of month of Shawwal. It is a kind of thanksgiving to Allah for the completion of Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan. This Takbir lasts until the Khatib (preacher) finishes the Khutbah (sermon) of `Eid (Festival). It should be pronounced as follows: "Allahu Akbar, Allahu Akbar, La ilaha illa Allah, Allahu Akbar, Allahu Akbar, wa Lillahi al-hamd (Allah is the Greatest, Allah is the Greatest. A: `Eid-ul-Adha (the Festival of the Sacrifice) is actually celebrated on the tenth day of Dul-Hijjah.

All Muslims have unanimously agreed upon this. During this `Eid, it is prescribed to offer Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) as two Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) after the sun rises in the sky to the height of a spear, then draw near to Allah by slaughtering Ud-hiyahs (sacrificial animals offered by non-pilgrims) after the prayer and distributing some of their meat in charity to the needy. Also, what should be said between each two Takbirs?

A 3: The Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") of the Eid Prayer in the first Rak'ah (unit of prayer) is to be made seven times, including Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) and in the second Rak'ah there are only five Takbirs after the takbir for standing up from Sujoud for the Imam and Ma'mum in general. (Part No. 7; Page No. 149) the hands in the extra Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") of Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer); what is the most correct opinion concerning this?

Should the hands be raised when saying the Du`a' (supplication) of the Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units): "Allahumma ihdini fiman hadayta...(O Allah! Guide me among those You have guided...)"? What is the most authentic opinion reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) in this regard?

A: Raising the hands in Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) and the extra Takbir of Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) and the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer is Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) and not obligatory. A Muslim is rewarded for doing it and not punished or rebuked for giving up. Whoever does not observe it should be informed that it is Sunnah without being made to feel duty-bound to do it. Similarly, raising hands in Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) is Sunnah. The basic principle in this regard is to raise the hands while performing Du`a', except in the positions where the Prophet (peace be upon him) supplicated but did not raise his hands, such as in the Du`a' of the last Tashahhud (testification recited in the sitting position in the last unit of Prayer), Du`a' after offering the obligatory Prayer and Du`a' of the Friday Khutbah (sermon) in cases other than the that of Salat-ul-Istisqa' (Prayer for rain). However, such issues should not be a subject of controversy and dissention among the seekers of knowledge, because the matter is flexible and doing or giving it up does not result in any deviance from Islam.

Second question of Fatwa no: 16428

Q 2: What is the ruling on missing the Takbirs (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") of the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer or of Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer); should one make up for them or complete his Salah (Prayer)?

A: First, If one catches up with the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) in the Janazah Prayer after missing some of the Takbir, they should continue with the Imam and make up for the Takbir they have missed and then perform Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), considering the part they catch with the Imam as the start of their Prayer.

Second, If one misses the extra Takbirs of Salat-ul-`Eid with the Imam, they are to catch up with the Imam and not make up for the extra Takbirs they have missed because they are Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) whose time has passed; however, if they miss an entire Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) with its Takbirs, they are to make up for it with its extra Takbirs.

The eighth question of Fatwa no. 17332

Q 8: Is Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) permissible at the last Rak`ah (unit of Prayer) of the Two `Eid Prayers?

A: Qunut is Mashru` (Islamically prescribed) and is only to be done in Witr (Prayer with an odd number of units), or in the Daily Obligatory Prayers in case there is a calamity. This is authentically reported in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet of acts, sayings or approvals). Yet, Qunut in case of calamity is permissible to be done in all the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers, and its place is to be in the standing position after

Ruku` (bowing) in the last Rak`ah (unit of Prayer). Also, the narrations from the Prophet (peace be upon him) tell us that he used to do Qunut more in Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, namely Qunut in case of calamities.

The first question of Fatwa no. 14271

Q 1: What is the ruling on praying a supererogatory Salah (Prayer) before Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) held in Musalla (place for Prayer)?

A 1: No Sunnah (supererogatory) Salah is to be performed before Salat-ul-`Eid. The reason is that one of the times in which it is impermissible to offer a supererogatory Salah is the time after offering Fajr (Dawn) Prayer until the sun rises a spear's length. Moreover, Salat-ul-`Eid is performed in other than the Masjids (mosques) which means that there is no Tahiyat-ul-Masjid (two-unit-Prayer to greet the mosque) before Salat-ul-`Eid held in a Musalla.

Q: Out of necessity, we were compelled to offer Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) more than once in one Masjid (mosque). The worshippers were more than seven thousand, a great number that is beyond the capacity of the Masjid along with its spacious courtyard. I was asked about the Shari`ah (Islamic law) ruling on repeating the congregational Salah (Prayer) in one place under the leadership of multiple Imams (those persons who lead congregational Prayer). This means assigning three Imams, for example, for three times of Salat-ul-`Eid; one to lead the first Salah, another to lead the second Salah one hour later, and the third to lead the third Salah one hour after the second. Referring to the book of Al-Mughny and other Fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence) books, I could not find a single opinion of scholars on the permissibility of repeating the congregational Salah unless one makes up for a missed Salah (kindly, refer to Al-Mughny, vol. 2, p. 390). I know no classic Fiqh scholar whatsoever who viewed the permissibility of organizing the performance of congregational Salah, such as Salat-ul-`Eid, by repeating it in one place under the leadership of multiple Imams. Please, bear in mind that it is impossible to provide a safe Musalla (place for Prayer) outside or inside the city. Moreover, I was informed that Muslims in non-Muslim cities as London repeat the congregational Salah three times or more in one place. Please, inform me about the preponderant opinion.

A: It is impermissible to repeat the performance of Salat-ul-`Eid in consecutive congregations as this is a newly-invented practice (in Islam). In this regard, the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: «Whoever introduces anything into this affair of ours \(Islam\) that is not of it will have it rejected.» Accordingly, every group should offer Salat-ul-`Eid in the respective Masjid in which they offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, if it is unfeasible to provide a place in which everyone can offer Salat-ul-`Eid only once.

Q: There are some people in our country who offer Salat-ul-`Eid twice. This is clear in which they first pray Salat-ul-`Eid in the Masjid (mosque) then they gather in a spacious place to pray it again (in congregation). Is this act legally permitted?

A: What is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) is that he used to pray Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) once only, not twice. Praying it twice does not fall under the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet of acts, sayings or approvals). Moreover, this is clear when `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him) went to pray Salat-ul-`Eid in the Musalla (place for Prayer), and appointed Abu Mas`ud Al-Badry (may Allah be pleased with him) to lead Salat-ul-`Eid in the Masjid as an Imam for those who are old, or unable to pray in the Musalla. Yet, `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him) did not pray it again with those people.

In addition, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Anyone who introduces anything into this matter of ours \(Islam\) which is not a part of it, will have it rejected.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her)). In a narration by Muslim, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Anyone who does an action which is not in accordance with this matter of ours \(Islam\), will have it rejected.» So, it is not permissible for them to pray Salat-ul-`Eid before praying it in the public Musalla in which people will pray. They should join the people in the Musalla in order to follow the Prophet's Sunnah, and to keep away from Bid`ah (innovation in religion).

Fatwa no. 18244

Q: What is the ruling on slaughtering sacrificial animals for six days beginning with the day of `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) as an act becoming closer to Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He)? All the people of my village offer these sacrifices. Every home buys a sheep and slaughters it on this occasion justifying it by saying that it is an old custom established by their fathers and ancestors. Throughout the six days, each group of people, including women and children, is assigned one day to distribute the meat to the neighborhood. They slaughter their sacrificial animals and gather to eat all the meat leaving nothing at all. Was this practiced during the time of the Prophet (peace be upon him), his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) or the Salaf (righteous predecessors)? Give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar), may Allah reward you with the best! Am I sinful for having done this in the past before knowing your Fatwa? If I stop doing so from now on, am I liable for any Kaffarah (expiation)?

Give us Fatwa, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the case is as you mention, i.e. you customarily slaughter sacrifices thinking that they bring you closer to Allah during `Eid-ul-Fitr, this act is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) that you must forsake. In fact, a Muslim should not slaughter unless it is following a practice ordained by Allah at times ordained by Allah, such as Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims) and Hady (sacrificial animal offered by pilgrims).

The custom that was practiced by your ancestors is of no significance, for they run counter to Shari`ah (Islamic law) and must be forsaken. Doing so should be understood within the context of forsaking a Bid`ah, rather than one's ancestors. Furthermore, you should make this clear to countrymen and those who practice this that it is impermissible to do so.

Q: Some people used to slaughter cattle in `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) out of expressing their joy, honoring their guests, maintaining ties of kinship, bringing happiness to their neighbors and Muslim brethren, and congratulating each other with greetings such as, "May Allah accept from you and us," "May you be successful," and "have a blessed `Eid." Some claim that all this is Bid`ah (innovation in religion). They refrain from visiting or receiving relatives on the `Eid, claiming that all this is Bid`ah. Those who make this claim asked for a written Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) from Your Eminence, so that everyone can be enlightened on this matter. I Hope Your Eminence will guide us.

A: There is nothing wrong with slaughtering some cattle in `Eid-ul-Fitr in honor of the guests, but without extravagance and arrogance. As for congratulating Muslims with the `Eid with the statements mentioned in the question, there is nothing wrong with this; for it is Du`a' for Muslim brethren that Allah may accept their deeds, prolong their lives, and bring them happiness, so there is no harm in this regard.

Q: I was living at a small town in the United States of America where more than one hundred and fifty Muslims once assembled to offer Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer). A fierce battle would have erupted between them because of a dispute on whether reciting Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") in congregation is permissible. Had it not been for Allah's Mercy, the Muslims would have been the laughingstock of those lying in wait, including secularists and non-Muslims. The pro-impermissibility party argued that this was not the practice of the Salaf (righteous predecessors) and that the basis regarding Adhkar (invocations and Remembrances said at certain times on a regular basis) and Du`a' (supplication) is to be said individually. Moreover, there is no explicit Nas (Islamic text from the Qur'an or the Sunnah) either in a Marfu` (a Hadith narrated from the Prophet with a connected or disconnected chain of narration) or a Mawquf (words or deeds narrated from a Companion of the Prophet that are not attributed to the Prophet) Hadith on reciting Takbir in congregation. The pro-permissibility group that adopted that reciting Takbir in congregation is Mashru` (Islamically prescribed) and not just permissible supported their argument using the same corps of Nas quoted by the first party while interpreting them differently:

1- Admitting that the basis regarding Du`a' is that it should be said individually does not exclude the permissibility of saying it in congregation. An analogy should be drawn between this and congregationally saying Amen at the end of a certain form of Du`a, which is a practice consistent with the nature of Du`a'.

2- The two Hadiths reported on Takbir explicitly state that someone says Takbir and the people follow suit either simultaneously or consecutively. The first narration reads: "Ibn `Umar and Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with them both) used to go out to the market place during the ten days (of Dhul-Hijjah) saying Takbir so that they caused the people to say it as well." (Related in Sahih [Authentic Hadith Book] Al-Bukhari, Kitab Al-`Eidayn (Book of the Two Festivals), chapters on 'Superiority of Good Deeds during Days of Tashriq [11th, 12th and 13th of Dhul-Hijjah]' and 'Reciting Takbir during the Days of Mina'. The other narration states: "`Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) used to say Takbir in his tent in Mina (in such a loud voice) until the people at the Masjid (mosque) heard him and would follow him saying Takbir. Indeed, the people at the markets of Mina also followed suit until the entire Mina would shake with Takbir." Moreover, women would say Takbir following Abban Ibn `Uthman and `Umar ibn `Abd al-`Aziz during the nights of Tashriq. (See Al-`Asqalany's Fath Al-Bary Vol. 2, P. 535) The proponents of this view argued that the two narrations clearly indicate that Takbir was said in congregation for the following reasons: the wording of the statement "would follow him saying Takbir" is used to denote doing some act congregationally as in the Hadith: (The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to offer Salah (Prayer) during the night. Seeing this, people stood up to follow him in Salah.) (Related in Sahih Al-Bukhari, Kitab Al-Adhan (Book of Adhan [call to Prayer]), 'If there is a Wall or a Sutrah [barrier placed in front of a person praying] between the Imam and Ma'mums [persons being led by an Imam in Prayer]'. Another narration of the Hadith states: (and he (peace be upon him) offered Salah there for a few nights, and so some of his Sahabah (Companions) followed him in Salah.) (Related in Sahih Al-Bukhari, Kitab Al-Adhan (Book of Adhan), 'Night Prayer')

A: First: Du`a' and Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) are among the great acts of `Ibadah (worship). In fact, acts of `Ibadah are based on following authentic Nas rather than on innovation. The basis for Du`a' is to be said individually and in a low voice as indicated by Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) and authentically reported Hadiths. To this effect, Allah (Exalted be He) says: (And offer your Salât (prayer) neither aloud nor in a low voice, but follow a way between.) It is reported that `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) said, "This Ayah was revealed concerning Du`a'."

(Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) Allah (Glorified be He) also says: (Invoke your Lord with humility and in secret. He likes not the aggressors.) Some Mufasssirs (exegetes of the Qur'an) interpreted 'aggressors' to refer to those who say Du`a' loud. Moreover, Allah (Exalted and Glorified be He) says: (And remember your Lord within yourself, humbly and with fear and without loudness in words in the mornings, and in the afternoons and be not of those who are neglectful.) It is reported in the Two Sahih Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) that Abu Musa Al-Ash`ary (may Allah be pleased with him) said: (When we were with Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) in a battle, we never went up a hill or reached its peak or went down a valley without raising our voices with Takbir. Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) came close to us and said, "O people! Do not exert yourselves, for you do not call a deaf or an absent one, but you call The All-Hearing, The All-Seeing.") Since the Prophet (peace be upon him) disapproved of raising voices with Takbir while in an open space, doing so at Masjids and in harmonious melodious voices should be disapproved with greater reason. Furthermore, a group of Salaf, from among the Sahabah and later generations, are reported to have disapproved of assembling to say Du`a' or Dhikr (were it Tahlil, saying: "La ilaha illa Allah [There is no god except Allah]", Takbir or Tasbih, saying: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]") in one voice. Abu `Uthman Al-Nahdy is reported to have said, "A governor under `Umar ibn Al-Khattab sent him the following letter: 'Some people here assemble to invoke Allah for Muslims and for the emir.' `Umar replied: 'Come all to me'. `Umar ordered the gateman to prepare a whip. The governor came along with those people. On entering upon `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him), he proceeded to whip the emir.

Moreover, `Umar ibn Yahya said he heard his father reporting his father as saying: "We used to sit by the door of `Abdullah Ibn Mas`ud before Salat-ul-Ghadah (morning Prayer) so that when he came out we would walk with him to the Masjid. (One day) Abu Musa Al-Ash`ary came to us and said: 'Has Abu `Abdul-Rahman come out yet?' We replied in the negative. He sat down with us until he came out. When he came out, we all stood along with him, so Abu Musa said to him: 'O Abu `Abdul-Rahman! I have just seen something at the Masjid which I considered wrong, but all praise be to Allah, I did not see anything except good in it.' He inquired: 'What is it?' Abu Musa replied: 'If you live you will see it. I saw in the Masjid people sitting in circles awaiting Salah. In each circle they had pebbles in their hands and a man would say: 'Repeat Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest) a hundred times' and they would do so. Then he would say: 'Say La ilaha illa Allah (There is no god except Allah) a hundred times' and they would do so. Then he would say: 'Say Subhan Allah (Glory be to Allah) a hundred times' and they would do so. 'Ibn Mas`ud asked: 'What did you say to them?' Abu Musa said: 'I did not say anything to them. Instead I waited to hear your view on it.' A lengthy conversation took place until Ibn Mas`ud (may Allah be pleased with him) said addressing those people: 'Woe to you, O Ummah (nation based on one creed) of Muhammad (peace be upon him)! How quickly are you heading to destruction! Here are your Prophet's Sahabah still alive, and there are his clothes which have not yet decayed and his bowl which is yet unbroken. By Him in Whose Hand is my soul! Either you are following a religion that is better guided than the religion of Muhammad (peace be upon him) or you are opening a door of Dalalah (deviation from what is right).' They said: 'O Abu `Abdul-Rahman! By Allah, we only intend good!' He said: 'How many are there who intend good but do not achieve it.'"

As we can see, Abu Musa Al-Ash`ary and Ibn Mas`ud (may Allah be pleased with them both) denied the manner and the congregational style of saying Dhikr. Therefore, although Dhikr is Mustahab (desirable) and recommended, it should not be said in such an innovated manner. Moreover, its style and method should conform to the way in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) and his honorable Sahabah (may Allah be pleased with them) are reported to have said it.

Besides, Mujahid said: "I offered the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer along with Sa`id ibn Al-Musayyib. Immediately after Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), the people hurried to listen to the storyteller. Sa`id then said, 'I wonder how fast they are going to this assembly!' Mujahid said, 'I answered him that they act in accordance with that which Allah (Exalted be He) says.' Sa`id said, 'In what Ayah?' Mujahid answered: ﴿And turn not away those who invoke their Lord, morning and afternoon﴾ Sa`id then said, 'This Ayah refers to the Salah which we have just offered. Certainly, it refers to Salah.'

Moreover, Mujahid also said: "Abdul-Rahman ibn Abu `Amrah offered Salah at Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy (the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah). Once he finished Salah he sat reclining against the room of the Prophet (peace be upon him). People crowded around him. He asked the people to leave him alone. People then said to him, 'May Allah have mercy on you! They came seeking to act in accordance with the Ayah that reads: ﴿And keep yourself \(O Muhammad SAW\) patiently with those who call on their Lord \(i.e. your companions who remember their Lord with glorification, praising in prayers, etc., and other righteous deeds, etc.\) morning and afternoon﴾' He replied: "Do you think the Ayah refers to what you are doing now? In fact, it refers to Salah." No doubt, this narration and others like it obviously indicate that the Salaf used to disapprove of assembling for saying Du`a' or Dhikr and doing so as a regular practice. If raising the voice and saying it in melodious tones are added to this, such a practice would be even worse.

To sum up, the Mashru` practice regarding Du`a' and Dhikr is that they should be said individually and in such a low voice as may be heard only by the speaker or the person nearby. In fact, the Law-

Giver (the Prophet) made few exceptions to this rule such as the Du`a' of the Imam during Salah and saying Amen after his Du`a', were this after Al-Fatihah (Opening Chapter of the Qur'an), in Qunut (supplication recited while standing after bowing in the last unit of Prayer) or otherwise.

Second: As for the Athar (narrations from the Companions) that states that `Umar would be in his tent in Mina and say Takbir until the people at the Masjid would hear him and follow suit, and that the people at the market place also followed them until the whole of Mina would shake with Takbir and that Ibn `Umar and Abu Hurayrah used to go out to the market place during the ten days (of Dhul-Hijjah) saying 'Allahu-Akbar', causing the people to follow suit, we can say that though the people at the Masjid in the first case heard `Umar, this does not necessarily mean that he said Takbir in an outrageous loud voice. Rather, he (may Allah be pleased with him) was sonorous and his tent was adjacent to the Masjid. Therefore, when he would say Takbir, the people at the Masjid would become alert and start saying Takbir individually. The same was the case with Ibn `Umar and Abu Hurayrah. In fact, they (may Allah be pleased with them both) were not reported to have exaggeratedly raised their voices with Takbir. Indeed they were far from acting contrary to the Hadith: \(Do not exert yourselves, for you do not call a deaf or an absent one.\) Moreover, `Umar, his son and Abu Hurayrah would say Takbir individually as well as those who heard them. Actually, they did not assemble to say Takbir in congregation in one melodious voice. And Allah knows best.

Third: All Muslims at all times and places should exchange advise, explore all related issues in light of the Book (the Noble Qur'an) and the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet) objectively and completely free themselves from being slanted towards other than Al-Haqq (the Truth). Moreover, they should love good for their Muslim brothers exactly what they love for themselves and do their best to achieve unity and affability and avoid dispute and alienation. In addition, everyone should exert efforts to follow the Sunnah and the way of the Salaf being the source of all good and virtue. Given this, disagreement on such issues should never cause hostility and fighting. Rather, it is Wajib (obligatory) to advise one another, clarify the correct Sunnah practice and not to dispute on offering Salah in congregation because of such issues. We ask Allah, The Generous, to grant our Muslim brothers and us success and guidance and to confer on us the bounty of following and remaining steadfast on Al-Sirat-ul-Mustaqim (the Straight Path). We also ask Him to guard us against following the way of those who earned His Anger, nor of those who went astray for indeed He is The All-Hearing, The Ever-Near and The Supreme-Answerer.

Q: Recently, a phenomenon has become widespread among some villagers, and tribal people residing in cities. They gather at clubs or rest houses on one of the days of Blessed `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast). This gathering is funded by raising money from the individuals taking part even if they do not attend the gathering. Moreover, under the terms of this gathering any delay of payment is conditional to paying in excess. Those who refuse to pay are put on the black list and boycotted; no one accept their invitations, and no help is given to them when in need. Please provide us with your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on this issue. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: This money taken from individuals to establish a party for the Day of `Eid, gatherings, and so on, without their willingness, or consent is impermissible. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The property of a Muslim is unlawful \(to take\), unless \(he gives it\) willingly.\) In another Hadith, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: [\(Surely your blood, your property, and your dignity are sacred among you like the sacredness of this day of yours in this month of yours in this land of yours \[i.e. Do not kill one another! Do not take others' property without right! Do not destroy the dignity of one another!\]\)](#)

➤ This was the Khutbah (sermon) delivered by the Prophet (peace be upon him) on the Day of Nahr (Sacrifice, 10th of Dhul-Hijjah, when pilgrims slaughter their sacrificial animals) at the Farewell Hajj (Hajj performed by the Prophet before his death). Moreover, boycotting those who did not pay is unjust.

The first and second question of Fatwa no. 18957

Q 1: On Friday morning, Rabi` Al-Thany, there was a total lunar eclipse after Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. Some Imams (the ones who lead congregational Prayer) offered Salat-ul-Khusuf (Prayer on a lunar eclipse), and others refused arguing that praying (a supererogatory Salah) after Fajr Prayer is impermissible. Please, clarify the ruling on this for me!

A: Salat-ul-Kusuf (Prayer on a solar eclipse) is one of the Salahs (Prayers) performed for specific reasons. According to the preponderant opinion, Salahs which have reasons are excluded from the times when it is not permissible to offer supererogatory Salah, meaning that one can pray those Salahs at these times. Thus, the prohibition is only applied to those Salahs which do not have particular causes. Based on this, if, for example, a solar eclipse happens after `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, it is permissible for Muslims to pray Salat-ul-Kusuf along with Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah), Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah), and Sadaqah (voluntary charity). By the same token, if a lunar eclipse happens after the break of dawn, it is permissible to offer Salat-ul-Khusuf because the apparent meaning of the evidence indicates this and because the light of the moon is not totally obscured. But in the case of offering Salat-ul-Kusuf before Fajr Prayer, it is better not to prolong it lest the time for Fajr Prayer becomes tight.

Q 2: Some Imams (the ones who lead congregational Prayer) offer Salat-ul-Kusuf (Prayer on a solar eclipse) only when there is total eclipse and others offer it as soon as the eclipse begins; which is correct?

(Part No. 7; Page No. 168)

A: Muslims should hasten to offer Salat-ul-Kusuf once they see the eclipse; they should not wait until there is total eclipse. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(Verily, the sun and the moon are two of the signs of Allah and they do not eclipse on account of the death or birth of anybody. So whenever you see this, pray and invoke \(Allah\) until it is over.\) (Related by Muslim) He (peace be upon him) also stated: \(So whenever you see them, make haste for the remembrance of Allah, invoking Him and asking Him for forgiveness.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) This indicates that Salat-ul-Kusuf should be offered as soon as the eclipse begins and should not be delayed.

Salat-ul-Istisqa'

Q 1: It did not rain for a very long time and the ground became dry and we were forced to buy water. We were then called to perform Salat-ul-Istisqa' (Prayer for rain), so people gathered and said in a low voice: Ya ilah al-'alamin, la raja'na kha'ibin, nas'aluka bil-Mustafa wal-Wasiyy wal-Husayn (O lord of the worlds, do not send us back disappointed, we ask You by the Prophet, Al-Wasiyy and Al-Husayn (to send us rain)). What is the ruling on that? Please inform us of the correct way of performing Salat-ul-Istisqa'. May Allah reward you.

A 1: What is Mashru' (Islamically prescribed) for Muslims if the rain is late and the ground becomes barren is to be commanded to perform Salah, fast, give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and abandon sins and disputes because obedience to Allah brings about blessings, whereas sins bring about drought. The Imam (one who leads congregational prayer) should set a date for people to gather and perform Salat-ul-Istisqa'. They should be in a state of modesty and humility; beseeching and imploring Allah (Exalted be He). The Imam must then lead them in Salah by offering two Rak'ahs (units of prayer). He should make Takbir (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]") seven times in the first Rak'ah and five in the second one like Salat-ul-'Eid (the Festival Prayer). In the first Rak'ah, he should recite, after Al-Fatihah (opening chapter of the Qur'an), the Surah (Qur'anic chapter) of Al-A'la and in the second Rak'ah, he should recite the Surah of Al-Ghashiyah. He must recite out loud. After making Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), he must deliver a Khutbah (sermon) including the Ayahs (Qur'anic verse) of Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah), urging people to make Istighfar, calling them to give Sadaqah and to stick to piety by obeying the commands of Allah and avoiding sins. He must also inform people that performing Salat-ul-Istisqa' whenever needed revives the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet) of the Prophet (peace be upon him). Then, he should supplicate Allah to send them blessed rain as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did.

You may refer to the Hadiths mentioned in the chapter on Salat-ul-Istisqa'.

As for what was mentioned in the question about making Tawassul (seeking to draw close to Allah through unlawful means) in the name of creatures, it is prohibited because it is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion). It is impermissible to make Tawassul to Allah except through faith in Him, His Names and Attributes and through one's righteous deeds. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And \(all\) the Most Beautiful Names belong to Allâh, so call on Him by them﴾ Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿"Our Lord! Verily, we have heard the call of one \(Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\) calling to Faith: 'Believe in your Lord,' and we have believed. Our Lord! Forgive us our sins and expiate from us our evil deeds, and make us die \(in the state of righteousness\) along with Al-Abrâr \(the pious believers of Islamic Monotheism\).﴾ Moreover, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿O Allah, I ask You, I bear witness that there is no deity but You, the One, The Self-Sufficient Master, Whom all creatures need, He neither eats nor drinks, He begets not, nor was He begotten and there is none co-equal or comparable unto Him) In another Hadith, he (peace be upon him) said: (O Allah! I ask You that all praise is Yours. There is no true God except You, You are Al-Mannan (The Ever-Giving, the Originator of the Heavens and Earth, Possessor of Majesty and Honor.) until the end of the Hadith.

It was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said that three men, belonging to one of the previous nations, were forced by the rain to spend the night in a cave. A rock then rolled and blocked the entrance of the cave.

They could not come out; so, they made Tawassul to Allah by virtue of their righteous deeds.

One of them made Tawassul by virtue of his dutifulness to his parents, the second made Tawassul by virtue of his refraining from committing Zina (sexual intercourse outside marriage) although he had the chance; and the third made Tawassul by virtue of conveying the trust to its owner. Allah, thus, answered their supplication and removed the rock. It is also recommended to ask Allah for rain during the Friday Khutbah because the Prophet (peace be upon him) did that.

The second question of Fatwa no. 17572

Q 2: Is it permissible to call people to Salat-ul-Istisqa' (Prayer for rain) by making Adhan (call to Prayer) because some people do not witness this Salah (Prayer) either because they forget or because they do not know? So, is it permissible to make Adhan in this case to remind and urge them? A 2:

It is impermissible to make Adhan for Salat-ul-Istisqa' because the Prophet (peace be upon him) and the Rightly-Guided Caliphs after him offered it without Adhan or Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) and it is impermissible to introduce an act of 'Ibadah (worship) that was not permitted by Allah and His Messenger (peace be upon him).

The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is that if the Imam (one who leads congregational prayer) intends to perform Salat-ul-Istisqa', he must inform people of the day he has set for that purpose so that they can get ready by repenting sincerely, avoiding sins and disputes and giving Sadaqah (optional charity) from the best of their property in addition to other reasons that withhold rain.

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 17575

Q 7: Our people are accustomed to offering Salat-ul-Istisqa' (prayer for rain) before Salat-ul-'Eid (the festival prayer), whether Eid-ul-Adha (the Festival of the Sacrifice) or 'Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast). The Imam (one who leads congregational prayer) gathers them for Salat-ul-'Eid and before that they offer two Rak'ahs (unit of prayer) as Salat-ul-Istisqa'. If we object to that, they say that they take advantage of the large number of people who gather to perform Salat-ul-'Eid. They also do that after the Jumu'ah (Friday) Prayer at a specific time of the year when there is a drought and little rain. As for the way they perform that, the Imam, after finishing the Jum'ah Prayer, orders people to have the intention of offering Salat-ul-Istisqa'. Then, they pray two Rak'ahs like those of the 'Eid. If we tell them that it is sufficient for the Khatib (preacher) to ask Allah to send us rain at the end of the Khutbah (sermon) and for people to make Ta'min (saying: "Amen"), as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did, they say that the chief ordered them to perform Salat-ul-Istisqa' on Friday and that this is the best time for it because of the large number of people who gather to offer the Jum'ah Prayer.

Your Eminence, we need a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) from you that we may convince people of the impermissibility of this Salah which they perform in this way, if it is impermissible. If what they do is permissible and right, then all praise be to Allah the Lord of the worlds.

A 7: It is sufficient for the Khatib to ask Allah to send them rain during the Khutbah of the Jumu'ah Prayer. He should not perform Salat-ul-Istisqa' after that because the Prophet (peace be upon him) asked Allah for rain during the Khutbah of the Jumu'ah Prayer and did not offer Salat-ul-Istisqa' after that. The same thing applies to Salat-ul-'Eid; it is enough for the Khatib to ask Allah for rain in the Khutbah and he must not perform Salat-ul-Istisqa', neither before nor after that because that contradicts the guidance of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Q 2: Is it better to deliver the Khutbah (sermon) of Salat-ul-Istisqa' (Prayer for rain) before praying or delay it until after the Salah (Prayer)? Once I delivered the Khutbah first, but some people objected although our Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) did so. Please advise us. May Allah grant you success.

A 2: It is better to offer Salat-ul-Istisqa' before the Khutbah because that was most often done by the Prophet (peace be upon him) and particularly if it will confuse the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer).

Q 3: Is it a Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) for the Ma'mum (person being led by an Imam in Prayer) in Salat-ul-Istisqa' (prayer for rain) to make Du'a' (supplication) standing or sitting after the Khutbah (sermon)? Is it permissible to turn one's garment on the opposite side?

A 3: It is Mustahab (desirable) for the Ma'mum to turn his Rida' (garment worn around the upper part of the body) while standing and offer Du'a' while facing the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer) and standing as the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) does.

Q 2: Some people refuse to ask Allah for rain or repent of their sins because they deny the fact that committing sins is the reason that goodness and rain are withheld. They claim that this is not true since Kafirs (disbelievers) commit graver sins, yet they always have rain. What is your opinion on this?

A 2: Denying what has been proven by the Qur'an and the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet) and what has been reported in the Hadiths Mutawatir (Hadiths reported by a significant number of narrators throughout the chain of narration, whose agreement upon a lie is impossible) is considered Kufr (disbelief). Whoever denies the fact that asking Allah for rain (through Salat-ul-Istisq' (prayer for rain)) when there is drought is a reason for making rain fall is actually denying the Sahih (authentic) Hadiths that urge Muslims to resort to Allah and seek relief from Him. This also implies disbelief in the Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) that encourage Muslims to turn to Allah in times of adversity as Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿I said \(to them\): 'Ask forgiveness from your Lord, verily, He is Oft-Forgiving;﴾ ﴿He will send rain to you in abundance,﴾ Denying this and having doubts about it makes one's Tawhid (belief in the Oneness of Allah) defective. Moreover, having such a belief and denying the Ayahs and Hadiths reported in this respect is Kufr that takes a Muslim outside the pale of Islam. Hence, the one who claims this must sincerely repent.

As for what is mentioned in the question about Kafirs and how they receive a lot of rain despite their Kufr and excessive sins, one must not be deceived by this for there is no proof that Allah loves them or is pleased with them. Rather, Allah may be gradually leading them to their own destruction. Allah gives oppressors time and bestows blessings on them generously and then seize them with punishment after that. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿Let not the free disposal \(and affluence\) of the disbelievers throughout the land deceive you.﴾ ﴿A brief enjoyment; then, their ultimate abode is Hell; and worst indeed is that place for rest.﴾ Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿while those who disbelieve enjoy themselves and eat as cattle eat; and the Fire will be their abode.﴾ And: ﴿You received your good things in the life of the world, and you took your pleasure therein. Now this Day you shall be recompensed with a torment of humiliation,﴾

Also, Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿until when the earth is clad in its adornments and is beautified, and its people think that they have all the powers of disposal over it, Our Command reaches it by night or by day and We make it like a clean-mown harvest, as if it had not flourished yesterday!﴾ And: ﴿So, when they forgot \(the warning\) with which they had been reminded, We opened for them the gates of every \(pleasant\) thing, until in the midst of their enjoyment in that which they were given, all of a sudden, We took them \(in punishment\), and lo! They were plunged into destruction with deep regrets and sorrows.﴾ ﴿So the root of the people who did wrong was cut off. And all the praises and thanks are to Allâh, the Lord of the 'Alamîn \(mankind, jinn, and all that exists\).﴾ .

As for the poverty, adversity, scarcity of rain, loss of wealth, lives and crops with which Allah tries his believing worshippers; it is a way to test them and make them more attached to Allah and increase their hope in Him. Whenever they are afflicted with any of these trials, they realize that it is from Allah, hence, they return to Him, implore Him and seek refuge with Him. In this way, their reliance on Allah is reinforced and their faith in Him is strengthened. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿And certainly, We shall test you with something of fear, hunger, loss of wealth, lives and fruits, but give glad tidings to As-Sâbirûn (the patient).﴾ Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) also says: ﴿And surely, We shall try you till We test those who strive hard (for the Cause of Allâh) and As-Sâbirûn (the patient), and We shall test your facts (i.e. the one who is a liar, and the one who is truthful).﴾

Q 4: Whenever the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) says: "Line up and straighten your rows", some praying persons say: "We are lined up and obedient." When the Imam says: ﴿You (Alone) we worship, and You (Alone) we ask for help (for each and everything).﴾, the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) say: "We've asked Allah for help." When the Imam pronounces Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer), they gently pat their thighs with their hands and offer Taslim. I want to know if this is authentically reported from the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet). In other words, did the Prophet (peace be upon him) do this? Does this have any origin in Shari`ah (Islamic law)?

A 4: It is impermissible to say : "We are lined up and obedient", because there is no supporting evidence. Moreover, it is impermissible to say: "We asked Allah for help" when the Imam recites the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) where Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿You (Alone) we worship, and You (Alone) we ask for help (for each and everything).﴾ This is impermissible because it was not reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). As for striking the thighs with the hands when offering Taslim, it is a Bid`ah (innovation in Islam) that must be avoided and prohibited.

Q 3: What is the ruling on reciting Du`a'-ul-Istiftah (opening supplication when starting the Prayer) before Takbirat-ul-Ihram (saying: "Allahu Akbar [Allah is the Greatest]" upon starting Prayer) saying: Wajjahtu

wajhiya liladhi fatara as-samawati wal ard (I turned my face to the One Who created the heavens and earth)...until the end of this Du`a'? What if one says: I intend to offer the Maghrib (sunset) Salah (prayer) as three Rak`ahs (units of prayer) to Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He), whether he is an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer), a Ma'mum (person being led by an Imam in Prayer) or someone praying alone, then recites the Basmalah (saying, "Bismillah Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim [In the Name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful]") audibly?

A 3: Du`a'-ul-Istiftah in Salah must be after Takbirat-ul-Ihram and before the Isti`adhah (saying: "A`udhu-Billahi mina Al-Shaytan -ir-Rajim [I seek refuge with Allah from the accursed Satan]"), the Basmalah and reciting Al-Fatihah (Opening Chapter of the Qur'an). It must conform to what was reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him), which is mentioned in the books of Sahih (authentic) Hadiths. It is impermissible to pronounce intentions out loud because one's intention lies in the heart and vocalizing it is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) since the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not do it.

Q1: There is an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) who recites in every Jahri Salah (Prayer recited out loud) the last Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) of the Surah (Qur'anic chapter) of Al-Baqarah. When he reaches (so give us victory over the disbelieving people.) , Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) say "Ameen" aloud. Has this been authentically reported from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him)? If not, what is the ruling on praying behind such people? Please advise us. May Allah reward you.

A 1: Saying 'Ameen' audibly after reciting the last Ayahs of Al-Baqarah in Salah is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion). This requires advising worshippers to refrain from doing it; however, it does not invalidate the Salah.

Q: Some people are accustomed to making Sujud (prostration) after finishing the Salah (prayer) and making Du`a' (supplication) therein. Is this permissible? Does this Sujud have any origin in Shari`ah (Islamic law)? Has it been reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) and the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet)?

A:

If this is Sujud-ul-Sahw (Prostration of Forgetfulness), then it is permissible and one may say whatever they normally recite in Sujud: Subhan Rabbiyal-A`la. One is to repeat it and then recite whatever Du`a' one wishes. However, if this Sujud is not to make up for anything forgotten during Salah, then it is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) and impermissible act. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: «Whoever performs an action that is not in accordance with this affair of ours \(Islam\) will have it rejected.» The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not command us to perform this type of Sujud and did not do it himself; hence, it will be rejected. Fatwa no. 18210

Q: Is reciting Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) from the Qur'an while in Sujud (prostration) Makruh (reprehensible) act?

A girl read that there is a Mustahab (desirable) Salah (Prayer) which consists of twelve Rak`ahs (units of Prayer). In each Rak`ah, one is to recite Tashahhud (testification recited in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) without Al-Salat-ul-Ibrahimiyyah (the second part of the Tashahhud), except in the last Rak`ah. Also, according to this Salah, after Tasbih (saying: "Subhan Allah [Glory be to Allah]"), praising Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He), and invoking Allah's Blessings and Peace upon the Prophet, one can recite Al-Mu`awwidhatayn (Surahs Al-Falaq and Al-Nas), Surah Al-Ikhlās, and Ayat-ul-Kursy [the Qur'anic Verse of Allah's Chair, Surah Al-Baqarah, 2:255] seven times. In addition, Du`a's (supplications) can be offered after that. Later on, however, the girl came to know that reciting Qur'an during Sujud is Makruh. Please, provide us with the answer! May Allah reward you with the best!

A: Reciting Qur'an during Ruku` (bowing), and Sujud is not permissible because of the prohibition mentioned by the Prophet (peace be upon him) in this regard. Ibn `Abbas said: \(Once the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) \(in his last illness\) opened the curtain \(from which he could see the mosque\), while people were about to enter into the Salah \(and Abu Bakr was the Imam\), and said: 'O people! Nothing will remain of the glad tidings \(my Prophethood\) \(which usually come through revelation, or inspiration, etc.\) except a good true dream which a Muslim has, or is seen about him by another. Also, I was forbidden from reciting Qur'an in Ruku`, and Sujud; as for Ruku`, glorify Allah in it \(by Tasbih\), and in Sujud increase Du`a \(supplication\). In this way your Du`a is more likely to be answered.') (Related by Ahmad, Muslim, Al-Nasa'y, and Abu Dawud). Moreover,

Ruku`, and Sujud are not suitable positions to recite the Qur'an. As for the Salah mentioned, and described above by the questioner, it has no basis in Shar`ah (Islamic law). In addition, it falls under Bid`ah (innovation in religion), so it is not permissible to offer this Salah, on the contrary one should avoid it. The Prophet (peace be upon him) states: \(Whoever performs an action which is not in accordance with this affair of ours \(Islam\), will have it rejected.\).

Impermissible Acts in Salah

Q: Attached is a copy of the file about 'Electronic Mihrab (A niche in the wall of a mosque or a room in the mosque that indicates the direction of Qiblah)' which Shaykh `Abdullah Al-Bassam previously presented to you. I hope you issue a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on the ruling on using such electronic Mihrab for supererogatory Salahs (Prayers), Qiyam-ul-Layl (optional Prayer at night), and Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer) since it helps the worshipper follow the order of reciting the Ayahs (verses) of the Qur'an. In addition, we hope it helps the worshipper to be in a state of complete tranquility and Khushu` (the heart being submissively attuned to the act of worship) during Salah (in which one is considered to be standing before Allah, Glorified and Exalted be He) and read as many different Ayahs and Juz's (30th parts of the Noble Qur'an) as possible.

The 'Electronic Mihrab' is made of high quality wood. In the middle, there is an electronic rectangular screen whose dimensions are the same of a maximized book page. In addition, when operated, one can browse the Noble Qur'an and display the chosen page in an easy, convenient and readable manner for the worshipper standing in the Mihrab about two meters from the screen. After reciting each page, the worshipper use their right index to press a button on a plastic bracelet worn around their left wrist to go to the next page. Moreover, the worshipper can determine the Juz' or the Surah (Qur'anic chapter) they want to start their Salah and follow recitation in an orderly manner without being worried about the order and accuracy of the recitation. In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), this helps the worshipper to perform Salah in a state of tranquility and Khushu`. In addition, the Mihrab is provided with an electronic memory, which allows the worshipper to resume recitation from where they stopped last time if they so desire. It is noteworthy that the first model of the Mihrab will be the largest expected to be used at Masjids Jami` (the large mosques where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held) and small Masjids (mosques) as well as palaces and large houses whose inhabitants would like to dedicate special place for Salah.

A: Originally, the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) origin of all acts of `Ibadah (worship) is to be based on following the orders and actions of Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him), easiness, and moderation and to be away from austerity, artificiality and immoderation. Moreover, `Ibadah must be Tawqifiy (bound by a religious text and not amenable to personal opinion) so that Allah is not worshipped by any other means not mentioned in His Shar` (Law). Consequently, Salah must be offered according to the described Shar`y way which came down from the Prophet (peace be upon him) and which Muslims practically followed down the ages, including, the Rukn (integral pillar) of reciting Al-Fatihah (Opening Chapter of the Qur'an) in each Rak'ah (unit of Prayer), a Surah even illiterate Muslims one generation after another. Moreover, it is known that if a person cannot memorize it, they could recite Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) instead because in case of default one does not have to do the Wajib (obligatory) act.

During Salah, whether obligatory or supererogatory, the Muslim should occupy themselves with the Salah, have presence of heart, obtain tranquility and abide by submission. Allah (Exalted be He) says:

Therefore, the Ijma' (consensus of scholars) is that it is Haram (prohibited) to speak during Salah in words not related to it, and that too much continual and unnecessary movement during Salah render it invalid. Moreover, according to the Nas (Islamic text from the Qur'an or the Sunnah), immoderation (in a way which is against Shar') is prohibited and therefore scholars prohibited the worshipper from being entirely occupied with the rules of recitation e.g. the manners of articulation like Qalqalah (vibration of the non-voweled sound until a strong trembling sound is heard whether the absence of vowel [sukun] is original [asli] or temporary [`arid]), Imalah (deflection of Fat-hah [vowel point that sounds like "a"]), Idgham (merging letters), and so on because this would result in disturbing the worshipper's concentration on Salah and presence of heart which are among its major objectives.

Moreover, it is authentically related in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon) him said: (Indeed, in Salah there is an occupation of one's full attention.) The Prophet (peace be upon him) used the word 'Shughl (occupation)' in the indefinite to magnify the status of Salah because it is soliloquy with Allah (Exalted be He). Therefore, Salah requires the worshipper to be fully absorbed by it. The worshipper should not perform any of the prohibited actions in Salah. This was the way of the Salaf (righteous predecessors) (may Allah be merciful with them). Mujahid, for instance, says: "When Ibn Al-Zubayr stood in Salah, he would stand like an upright piece of wood." (Related by Al-Bayhaqy, with an authentic chain of narration)

Given this, it should be noted that recitation during Salah using the so-called 'Electronic Mihrab' includes a number of Shar'y prohibitions as follows:

Entering Salah with the intention of occupying oneself with operation of this device in all its stages: This leads to too many movements which prevent Khushu'. In addition, it results in overlooking some Sunan (supererogatory acts, following the example of the Prophet), implies immoderation not stipulated by Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) or the Prophet (peace be upon him), and changes the Shar'y way for performing Salah. The movements the worshipper has to do to when using such device are as follows: pressing the buttons many times to operate it; looking up in the index to find the Surah or the page; searching, and so on; the eye will also be occupied with following the screen when standing, the movement of lines, the end of the page, and so on, let alone fear of being disconnected from the electricity source, or the device breaking down. All these actions disturb the worshipper's concentration in Salah, cause the mind to be occupied with matters of no value, prevent Khushu' and dissipate the ecstasy of soliloquy and render the Salah incomplete. It is mentioned that a Khamisa (woolen colored cloth) disturbed the concentration of the Prophet (peace be upon him) during the Salah and therefore he changed it. Then, what would be the case with this device and its buttons, bracelet, screen, and so on?

Moreover, it is authentically narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade his Sahabah (Companions) from occupying themselves during Salah with other matters. For instance, he prohibited rubbing the place of Sujud (prostration) during Salah. In the Two Sahih Books of Hadith, it is related that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said regarding leveling the earth upon prostrating: ﴿If you have to do so, then do it once.﴾ Moreover, it is related that the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade tucking the clothes and hair during Salah, which is done accidentally. Therefore, what would be the case with this device? In addition, with this device one will not be able to observe some Sunan such as looking steadfastly at the place of Sujud during Salah, tranquility, and presence of heart. Again, as mentioned above, this act implies immoderation and overstrictness in religion which is against Shari`ah (Islamic law). Anas ibn Malik (may Allah be please with him) narrated that [﴿The Messenger \(peace be upon him\) once entered \(the Masjid\) and noticed that a rope was tied between two columns. He asked about it and the Sahabah replied that it was for Zaynab: when she wants to offer a supererogatory Salah and feels lazy or tired, she pulls it to stand. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said: "No! Loosen it; if a person wants to offer \(supererogatory\) Salah, let them offer it as long as they are active. Once they feel lazy or tired, they can offer it sitting \[commence the Salah sitting, or sit during it.\]\]﴾](#) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) Here, the Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered a person in this state to continue the supererogatory Salah while sitting and not to seek other means. Applying this to the case in question, the person performing Salah does not have to recite a large number of Ayahs, Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So, recite you of the Qur`ân as much as may be easy for you.﴾ The general rule with `Ibadah is to follow the way practiced by the Prophet (peace be upon him) and the Salaf and stay away from adding to the Mashru` (Islamically permissible) acts. This includes not changing the set manner of performing Salah that Muslims inherited from one generation to another and that is supported by Shar`y evidence.

To differ in this will lead to worshipping Allah (Exalted be He) in a way that He did not prescribe. In addition, among the prohibitions that this device violates are that the concentration of the Ma'mums (persons being led by an Imam in Prayer) will be disturbed by looking at the screen. It may lead Muslims to be lazy in the honorable act of memorizing the Qur'an. This may lead to negative innovation in Salah which is against Shar` and promoted by evil people of mundane thinking. It may lead to unfairly setting aside qualified people, e.g. the most knowledgeable people about Fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence), the most pious people, and so on, from leading the Salah and replacing them with functional non-qualified persons. In addition, this may open the door to Bid`ah (innovation in religion) in this great Rukn, i.e., Salah, practiced by all Muslims all over the world. This will cause Muslims to lose the real feeling about Salah prescribed by Allah (Exalted be He) which helps Muslims keep themselves away from prohibited matters. However, drawing an analogy with the permissibility of reciting from the Mus-haf (copy of the Qur'an) during Salah is tenuous and impermissible because there are broad differences between them. Therefore, the Fatwa of the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' is that the use of this device in Salah should be prohibited.

Q: There is a device known as the Qiblah Finder that helps determine the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer) and the number of Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) a person offers and is fastened to a pray rug; is it permissible to use such a device?

A: Using the device that is fastened to a pray rug to determine the direction of Qiblah and the number of Rak`ahs requires a detailed explanation.

It is permissible to use it to determine the direction of the Qiblah; for what helps to identify the Qiblah is required according to the Shari`ah (Islamic law).

As for using it to determine the number of Rak`ahs, this is a kind of bringing sophistication to `Ibadah (worship) which is based on easiness in Islam. Besides, relying on this device distracts the mind from the purposes of Salah (Prayer) and affects one's presence of the mind. This opens the door also to altering this great Rukn (Pillar); and anything that leads to this should be abandoned according to Shari`ah.

Q: Kindly, examine the attached report providing the date of the construction (part I) and completion of the first stage (part II) and the proposed construction and completion of the final stage (part III and IV) of the Masjid (mosque) and the Islamic center in Croydon, south-western London. Please, inform us about the Shar`i (Islamic legal) ruling on the issues stated at the end of the report (part V): We ask for the Shar`i ruling on the issues stated below:

105- Taking into account the building whose construction is proposed, are funds raised for building which considered Sadaqah Jariyah (ongoing charity)?

205- After finishing the first stage of the Masjid construction, can we work on the final stage as shown in part III including proposed multiple usages taking into account that the house was used as Masjid before demolition?

If your answer to question no. 2 is in the affirmative, can we offer Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer, Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer), Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) in this building? We stress the fact that one Imam will lead all Salahs (Prayers) in the two buildings facing the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer).

405- Otherwise, which Salah of those stated in the previous paragraph may we offer in the proposed building in accordance with Shari`ah (Islamic law)?

505- Is it permissible to build residential apartments equipped with toilets and bathrooms over halls and rooms which will be used for offering Jumu`ah, `Eid, and Tarawih Prayers if the number of worshippers exceeds the usual limit as we explained to Your Eminence earlier?

A: First: Funds raised for building Masjids are considered Sadaqah Jariyah as it is a permanently beneficial charity, whose reward will be ongoing even after the donator's death.

Second: The part specified for Salah should be used only for establishing the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers, Jumu`ah Prayer, the Two `Eid Prayers and Tarawih as well as other Nafilah (supererogatory) Salah. It may also be used for holding beneficial educational symposia and Islamic and Qur'an teaching circles. However, using Masjids for the activities you mentioned above is considered to be undervaluation of Masjids.

Third: It is permissible to offer Salah in congregation led by one Imam in the two buildings adjacent to the center if the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) can see the Imam or other Ma'mums lined up behind the Imam.

Fourth: It is permissible to build residential units for the Imam and the supervisor with utilities such as toilets and the like over the halls which will be used, when needed, for Salah.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18368

Q 2: What is the ruling on praying while there is some food residue between one's teeth? I heard that angels curse anyone who does so, is this true?

A: It is part of Islam that Muslims should concern themselves with cleanliness and hygiene including cleaning the teeth from the remnants of food. However, if a person prays while there are remnants of food between their teeth, their Salah (prayer) is valid. What has been said regarding angels cursing one whose mouth contains remnants of food has no basis in Shari`ah (Islamic law).

A 1: It is not permissible to deliberately distract worshippers from their prayers with speech or any other thing. The reciter of the Holy Qur'an are banned to raise his voice when reciting, so that those praying near him will not be distracted. In a Hadith on the authority of Abu Sa'id (may Allah be pleased with him) the Allah's Messenger (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: [\(Surely all of you are supplicating your Lord. Q: When combining Maghrib and `Isha' Prayers together, should we make only one Adhan (call to Prayer) and one Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) or two? Likewise, after making Taslim (salutation of peace ending the Prayer) and ending the prayer, is it permissible to collectively offer Du'a' (supplication) and send peace and blessings of Allah upon our Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him)? Also, what is the ruling on doing so audibly, even though there is only one row in the mosque?

A: When there is a legal excuse for combining the two Salahs (prayers), then one Adhan (call to Salah) and two Iqamahs (call to start the Salah) (one Iqamah for each prayer) are to be made. As for collective supplication, it is Bid'ah (heresy in Islam), whether made after Salah (Prayer) or not. Also imploring Allah's peace and blessings upon the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) collectively is a heresy in Islam. As for repeating aloud what the Imam says when changing positions during the prayer, it may be done by someone so that the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) shall hear the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) if he is standing afar, due to the multitude of worshippers.

Q 2: The military leadership specifies times to the soldiers for offering Salah (prayer) during the performance of field training with the following arrangements:

a- The time allowed for prayer is ten to fifteen minutes. A group with the even numbers is to go first to pray, then those with the odd numbers group comes forward to pray, and they are given the same span of time?

A: a: If the allowed time is merely for offering prayer, it is enough to offer the obligatory prayer and adjoining Sunnah (supererogatory) prayer. However, if this time is for performing prayer and Wudu' (ablution), a reasonable addition of more minutes must be given for making Wudu'. Also, the entire personnel should offer the prayer in congregation, unless there is a security need for such division into two groups.

B- The leadership forbids the soldiers to come forward to perform prayer as soon as its time becomes due when hearing the Adhan (call to Prayer)?

A: b: If their coming to pray in the way mentioned in the question affects the performance of their job, they are to wait until the time of Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) approaches. However, if doing so does not affect the performance of their job, they should not be barred from offering the prayer at the beginning of its due time.

C- Some soldiers request to go to the Masjid (mosque) and leave their duty place in order to recite the Holy Qur'an and then offer the prayer and listen to the preaching, if there is any. But the leadership fixes the time of leaving the duty place for performing prayer. This means that no opportunity is given to sit in the Masjid beyond the specified time?

A: C: The answer is as follows:

(Part No. 7; Page No. 198)

D - The soldiers sometimes have the responsibility of evacuating the injured or performing other important duties that compel them to delay the offering of prayer. This is due to either their being busy with tending the injured. or other compelling circumstances. Is it permissible for them to delay it (prayer) or will they be sinful if they do so?

A: D- There is no sin to do what you have mentioned in the question, if there is a compelling need to do so.

E- The troops sometimes march to escort the royal procession or to accompany important guests of the state. Due to the fear of the occurrence of terroristic attacks or any security threat, the guard squads may be obliged to delay prayer. Will they be sinful for such a delay?

A: f- They must observe the prayer at its due time, even individually at their posts if they cannot perform a congregational prayer because of their duties as mentioned in the question. Allah says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ .

Q 4: If a man wearing trousers sets out to pray and he is Musbil (one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles) and then rolls them up during prayer, is this act included in the prohibition to tuck up garments during prayer? If it is included in the prohibition and he does not roll his clothes, he then becomes Musbil (one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles) while praying. Therefore, should he tuck them up or remain Musbil, particularly if he is of the view that Isbaal (lengthening and trailing clothing below the ankles) is prohibited only if done as haughtiness?

If one's sleeves are long and one rolls them up before praying, is he prohibited to do so? And is Al-Shamagh (traditional Arab head covering) considered clothing which is forbidden to be tucked up? A 4: It is haram (unlawful) for men to wear garments which hang below the ankles, regardless of the type of clothes, i.e. shirt , garment, underwear or trousers; and regardless of whether the intention of the Musbil is haughtiness or not. According to the general statement of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him): \(The part of an Izar which hangs below the ankles \(will cause the person wearing such clothes to be\) is in the Fire\)

Al-Bukhari, in his Sahih (Authentic collection of Hadith) and Imam Ahmad, in his Musnad (Hadith compilation) and the statement of the prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him): \(There are three types of people to whom Allah will neither speak on the Day of Resurrection, look at \(with compassion\), nor purify \(of their sins\), and they will be tormented severely. They are: One who trails his Izar \(garment worn below the waist\), one who boasts of kindness shown to another, and one who promotes their business through false oaths.\) Recorded by Imam Muslim in (his Sahih vol.1, p.102) and Imam Ahmad, in (Al-Musnad)

Therefore, one is not permitted to pray while he is Musbil, and he must change these long garments with others that are over the ankles up to the middle of the leg. If he cannot do that, he should roll up his long garments over the ankles before commencing Salah.

However, if the worshipper prays while he is Musbil, his prayer is valid per se, but he is sinful for doing what Allah has prohibited and should offer sincere repentance to Allah. It is reprehensible to fold up or roll up one's trousers while praying and the same is true for sleeves, according to what was mentioned in the Two Sahih (authentic collections) of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of Ibn Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them) that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: \(I have been ordered to prostrate myself on seven bones of my body and not to fold up the hem of my garment or hold back my hair during Prayer\). What is meant by Al-Kaf in the question is to gather and hem the garments so that they do not fall on the ground while praying. Included in this prohibition is the folding of Al-Shamagh and similar clothes.

May Allah grant us success! peace and blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and companions.

Q: What is the ruling on the Salah (Prayer) of a Musbil (one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles) particularly if he is an imam? Is it reprehensible or invalid? If your eminence view it to be reprehensible, what do you say about the the last part of the Prophet Muhammad's (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) Hadith as recorded by Abu Dawud concerning which Al-Nawawy said in (Riyad Al-Salihin): its Isnad (chain of narrators) is Sahih according to the conditions of Imam Muslim: This hadith also points out that Allah, Exalted is His Mention, does not accept the Salah (Prayer) of a Musbil (one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles),? Does this clearly render the Salah of the Mosbil as null and void, as one of the students asserted to us? We would like to draw the attention of your eminence to the urgency of answering this question, since this matter causes huge dissension among us in Egypt. Many of us are totally disturbed by ignorance about this question, and so I hope that your Eminence provide us with the correct view concerning it. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: Isbal (lengthening and trailing clothing below the ankles) of one's clothes below the ankles is Muharram (prohibited), regardless of the clothes being a garment or trousers or any other thing. There is severe punishment for him who is Musbil (one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles), and this is clarified in the statement of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him): \(The part of an Izar which dangles below the ankles \(causes the person wearing it to be\) in the Fire\) recorded by Al-Bukhari, and Imam Ahmad, and others. Also, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: \(There are three types of people whom Allah will neither address on the Day of Resurrection, look at \(with compassion\), nor purify \(them of their sins\), and they will be tormented severely. They are: One who trails his Izar \(garment worn below the waist\), one who boasts of his kindness to another, and one who promotes their business by false oaths.\) recorded by Imam Muslim and Ahmad Al-Nasa'y. Whoever prays and is a Musbil (one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles) of his clothes below the ankles, his prayer will be valid as such if he fulfilled its conditions, pillars and requested rites. But he is sinful and liable to be punished for his Isbal (lengthening and trailing clothing below the ankles). As for the mentioned Hadith in the question, it has been narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) with the following wording: \(A man was offering Salah \(Prayer\) while in the state of Isbal \(lengthening and trailing clothing below the ankles\), the Messenger of Allah \(peace and blessings of Allah be upon him\) said to him, "Go and perform Wudu' \(ablution\)." He performed Wudu' and returned. The Prophet \(peace and blessings of Allah be upon him\) told him again, "Go and perform Wudu'." He performed Wudu' again and returned. Another man asked, 'O Messenger of Allah! Why did you command him to perform Wudu' \(twice\), and then you said nothing?' He \(peace and blessings of Allah be upon him\) said, 'He was offering Salah while in the state of Isbal and Allah does not accept the Salah of a Musbil \(one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles\).\) However, this Hadith is not Sahih, Al-Nawawy was under Wahm (illusion) (may Allah be merciful to him) when ranking it as Sahih (authentic), but in fact it is Da`if (a Hadith that fails to reach the status of Hasan, due to a weakness in the chain of narration or one of the narrators), since its Isnad contains an unknown person and a Mudallis (a Hadith narrator who provides misleading information about his shaykh or the chain of narration) who cited no Sanad. In case of assuming the soundness of its content, the commandment of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) in this hadith to the Musbil (one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles) to repeat ablution was for correcting him and drawing his attention to impermissibility of Isbal (lengthening and trailing clothing below the ankles) so that he may realize the gravity and reprehension of what he has done. This will eschew such a sin and his purity will become complete inwardly and outwardly. Isbal (lengthening and trailing clothing below the ankles) is thought to be the manifestation and cause of arrogance and conceitedness. The outward purity affects the inward one. The commandment of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) to perform 'Wudu' was to be the cause of forgiving the sin resulting in the wrath of Allah and the rejection of his prayers. 'Wudu' expiates for sins and completely removes them and eradicates their causes, in the same way as 'Wudu' extinguishes anger. The evidence for this is the narration of `Aly ibn Abu Talib on the authority of Abu Bakr

(may Allah be pleased with him) who said: Allah's Messenger (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: \(There is no person who commits a sin then performs Wudu' \(ablution\) and offers two Rak`ahs \(two units of Prayer\) asking Allah \(Exalted be He\) for forgiveness, but Allah will forgive them.\) This Hadith is narrated by Imam Ahmad and the compilers of books of Traditions of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) with a Sahih chain of narrators. As for the statement attributed to the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) in the early Hadith that: \(Allah does not accept the Salah of a Musbil \(one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles\).\) this is an obvious threat and disapproval which implies prevention and deterrence as interpreted metaphorically. Salah (Prayer) is valid for him and he has fulfilled its obligation, though he has offered it while being a Musbil (one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles). The Salah (Prayer) as such is valid as mentioned before, although it might be unacceptable in the Sight of Allah. The evidence for this is the narration of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: \(O mankind! Allah is Good and accepts only that which is good.\) The hadith is recorded by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (authentic collection of Hadith) and Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith compilation). Since Isbal (lengthening and trailing clothing below the ankles) is thought to be the manifestation and cause of arrogance and conceitedness and this conflicts with the Islamic principle of humbleness and submission to Allah, it became likely for the Musbil (one who lengthens and trails clothing below the ankles) that Allah would not accept his prayer. Allah accepts the deeds of only humble and submissive servants. The more humbleness, submissiveness, supplication and turning away from sin a person is inclined to, the more acceptable to Allah his deeds become. Allah, the Most Exalted, says: \(Verily, Allâh accepts only from those who are Al-Muttaqûn \(the pious\).\) Hence, every Muslim man should rather refrain from this major sin and offense jeopardising the acceptance of his prayer. Every Muslim man should eschew such a sinful attitude, repent from it and draw near to Allah (Glorified be He) with what makes him most obedient to His Commands. Every Muslim man should also turn away from all that displeases Allah so that he may win His Pleasure and Paradise and shield himself from a painful torture and punishment in the Day of Resurrection.

Q: We have a morgue for the deceased. It is a room containing shelves on each one of them the body of one deceased is placed. The bodies of the deceased belong to Muslim and non-Muslim men and women. Each dead body is wrapped up with a piece of cloth and placed on a separate shelf. My question to your eminence is about the ruling on this issue: is our preservation of the bodies in this way considered to be mixing between men and women? Does it contradict the rulings of the Shari'ah (the Islamic Law), bearing in mind that this is system followed in all public and private hospitals of the country?

A: There is nothing wrong with the placement of the bodies of the deceased, men and women, on the shelves of the same morgue as mentioned in the question, if this is necessary for some legal reasons requiring the delay of their burial. The reason of preventing intermixing between men and women who are alive is the fear of causing temptation, and this is not realized regarding those who have passed away.

Q: The issue of cremation. What is the Islamic ruling concerning the cremation of dead bodies? I am a French Muslim and I live among Christians and Buddhists who are keen to know the view of Islam on this matter?

A: Cremation is not legally permissible, and it is a pagan act. The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) concerning death and funerals in Islam is that the body of the deceased Muslim is washed and shrouded. Then the funeral prayer is proceeded and once it has been done the body is to be carried to the burial spot in the public cemetery for Muslims. This is because the sanctity of the living Muslim remains the same after death. As for a non-Muslims, they should be buried in a pit far away from urban areas so that his grave can be distinguished from Muslims' graves. But his body should not be cremated.

A 4: Teaching Muslims the affairs of their religious is one of the methods of calling to Allah (Exalted be He) and is a duty upon Muslim scholars. Of these affairs is the clarification of the Islamic rulings on funerals. However, teaching such rulings should not specifically be connected with a particular time, that is to be offered upon someone's death, lest ignorant people may think that this is one of Al-Sunan Al-Rawatib (supererogatory acts that were stressed and regularly performed by the Prophet Muhammad) in the Shari'ah (Islamic Law). When there is a need for education, it should be given at the proper time without specification.

He urged the worshippers existent at that time to turn up and offer Salah Janazah (Funeral) Prayer, which is so far normal. Later on, one of the worshippers came forward and gave a piece of admonition to people reminding them of the incident that: "One day the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) asked his companions while they were sitting with him: Who from among you is fasting today? Abu Bakr (may Allah be pleased with him) replied: I am, Oh Messenger of Allah! Once again the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) asked his companions: Who from among you has given in charity today? Again Abu Bakr (may Allah be pleased with him) replied: I have, Oh Messenger of Allah! Then the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) asked his companions: Who from among you has attended a funeral prayer today? Abu Bakr (may Allah be pleased with him) replied: I have, Oh Messenger of Allah! Then the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) declared: Whoever performs these three actions (regularly), paradise has become certain for him, or as the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) stated. Therefore" - the man who gave the brief admonition commenting on the announcement of the director of the mosque about Janazah (Funeral) Prayer in the following day continued - "from this Hadith I urge you, dear worshippers, to come to perform Janazah (Funeral) Prayer and fast and give charity tomorrow. This is because, as you have heard in the Hadith that whoever has performed these three actions, paradise is certain for him." The people in the Mosque and I understood that whoever intended to come to perform Janazah (Funeral) Prayer should - or at least is recommended - to fast that day and to give or intend to give in charity on that day so that he may get the great reward, which is paradise In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills) as mentioned in the Hadith.

Now the question is: Does the request of that man who commented on the director of the Mosque in urging people to fast and give in charity on the day when they perform the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer conform to the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet Muhammad Are fasting and giving in charity on the day when an individual wishes to perform Janazah (Funeral) Prayer in conformity with the teachings of the Sunnah and Shari'ah (Islamic Law)? Kindly give us the correct ruling on this matter. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is not denied in the Shari'ah (Islamic Law) to combine between two or more types of goodness, such as giving in charity and fasting. However, it is not required or indicated in Islamic Law that the one coming to perform funeral prayer and follow it to the burial spot should fast and give in charity when intending to do so, for the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) did not order us to this effect. Also Abu Bakr (may Allah be pleased with him) did not fast or give in charity for the sole purpose of attending the funeral; but his attendance of the funeral coincided with his fast and giving in charity on the same day. What this preacher mentioned is not correct. You should draw his attention to this (incorrect direction).

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and companions!

The sixteenth question from Fatwa No. 17883

Q 16: What is the Islamic way of alleviating grief over the death of a loved one?

A 16: The Islamic way in this regard is to follow what was mentioned in the Qur'an. Allah (Exalted be He) said: ﴿but give glad tidings to As-Sâbirûn (the patient).﴾ ﴿Who, when afflicted with calamity, say: "Truly! To Allâh we belong and truly, to Him we shall return."﴾ ﴿They are those on whom are the Salawât (i.e. who are blessed and will be forgiven) from their Lord, and (they are those who) receive His Mercy, and it is they who are the guided ones.﴾ and what the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) mentioned by his saying: ﴿No servant of Allah is afflicted with a calamity and says: Truly! To Allâh we belong and truly to Him we shall return,

O Allah reward me for my calamity and compensate me for it with something good, except that Allah will reward him for patience in his calamity and compensate him with something good.﴾

The second question from Fatwa no. 16523

Q 2: How correct is the statement "Allah will punish the person whom He loves beforehand in this world"? Does (affliction with) disease belong to the punishment by which sins are forgiven?

A: Al-Tirmidhy (may Allah be merciful to him) related on the authority of Anas (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «When Allah wills good for His Slave, He hastens to punish them in this worldly life, and when He wills evil for His Slave, He withholds punishing them for their sin until they come to Him with that sin on the Day of Resurrection.» It shares similarities with other Hadiths. Punishments are of numerous types, some of which include illness and so on until the servant meets his Lord (i.e. passes away) and no sin is recorded for him. May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family and companions!

Paying Off the Debt of the Deceased

Fatwa no. (11480)

Q: A functionary whose salary does not meet his needs fell in heavy debt. He intended to pay back his debt, but he could not until his death. What should be done regarding this?

A: The debt of a man who has died and did not pay it should be paid out of his estate.

Q: My brother passed away about eight years ago in a car accident. He had some debts and I have paid back them except one debt that remains uncleared. I am doing my best to pay it off, but so far I am not able to do so. My question is: does the delay in paying back the debt affect my dead brother? Kindly provide me with the answer, may Allah reward you with the best.

A: The rights of the servants of Allah over each other are mostly attained through dispute. Therefore, you have to hasten in paying back the remaining sum of your brother's debts, unless the creditor foregoes it. However, you are worthy of being thanked for your endeavor to fulfill the debt of your brother. This is a sort of kindness and keeping good relationship with one's relatives. May Allah bless you and help you to clear the rest of the debt.!

Q: Do we, the children of the deceased, have to pay back the full loan taken out by our later father immediately after his death, though the policy of the loan mentioned above was to pay it back in installments for twenty five years. We are regularly paying all the instalments to the real-estate bank at their due time? Does our father incur any sin if we do not pay back all the instalments of the loan at one time to the bank, knowing that we are small functionaries who do not possess the means to pay the full debt to the bank? Also, if our father (may Allah be merciful to him) owed a debt to some unknown people who did not come to demand it, though we have approached every each one of our father's acquaintances and asked them (Is our father indebted to him?) They all answered in the negative, but we fear that there may be some creditors unknown to us. For, our father had a large circle of acquaintances. Kindly provide us with your view concerning this matter. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: You have two options: either to pay back the debt of your father to the real-estate bank all at once, or to pay back the debt in instalments according to the agreed upon policy by the bank. In both ways, there will be no sin on your father in sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), because the pay-back policy agreed by the bank gives him the right to repay the debt by instalments.

Also, the debt may involve pawning. If you know no creditors to your late father other than the bank and you publicized your readiness to pay back his debts, but no one came forward, then there is no sin on him or you. You have done so good so far. May Allah reward you with the best for your keenness to discharge the responsibility of your father!

Q 1: How do we pay off the debt of the deceased if he just indicated that he is indebted but did not identify the creditor or clarify the size of the debt?

A 1: When a person before death had mentioned that he had a debt but he did not name the creditor or specify the amount of the debt, it is obligatory in this case to announce in the press that whoever claims a debt from so and so should approach his deputy or his heirs. Whoever comes with proof of a debt owed by the deceased, this debt should be cleared from the estate of the deceased.

Q: A rigorous conflict occurred between a woman and her husband, especially over financial matters. Her husband is slothful and does not endeavour to subsist for the needs of his family. So, as an alternative, she decided to buy electrical devices on credit and sell them for cash in order to support her children and her husband. However, her husband divorced her, and after ten days he sold all her furniture and appliances. Unable to cope, she set herself on fire and died. Is it permissible to supplicate to Allah for her, give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and perform Hajj on her behalf as Kaffarah (expiation) for her sins? Who should pay her debts? Should the husband pay off the debt? Or should the claimant of her dues from her husband resulting from his selling of her furniture and appliances fulfil the debt? Or should the debt be jointly paid by her children and her husband? It is noteworthy that the husband refuses to pay a share of her debts. Kindly illuminate us in this matter, may Allah reward you with the best and bless you!

A: Committing suicide is Haram (prohibited) for which there is severe punishment. However, this does not take the person out of the fold of Islam, for it is a major sin other than Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). One who commits suicide is still regarded a Muslim and so it is permissible to supplicate Allah for them, give Sadaqah and offer Hajj on their behalf. All these are acts of obedience that will avail them if Allah accepts them. As for the debts due on the woman who killed herself, they should be repaid from her estate. The objects she left are to be sold and the debts are to be repaid out of its total value. Her children are not entitled to any share of her estate except after her debts are paid in full. If there are still some debts that have not been paid, they are still due on the deceased and it is not obligatory on the children or the husband to pay her debt, except by way of charity. They and other Muslims should seek Allah's Reward and participate in the payment

Q1: Our father died leaving behind a debt that will take us more than two years to repay. His responsibility has been absolved on account that his son-in-law has taken upon himself to repay the debt. My father left us two buildings hired annually during Ramadan and the season of Hajj. However, their revenue does not suffice repaying his outstanding debt at the present time. My father left two married daughters, a third adult unmarried, and other five children who are underage. My questions are:

- 1- Should we meet with the creditors to reach an agreement with them regarding repaying them the debts in instalments i.e. to pay them a certain sum every year?
- 2- Is there still any sin for which the deceased is punished, though after his responsibility has been cleared by his son-in-law who undertook paying back the debt?
- 3- Or, should we sell one of the two buildings, bearing in mind that they both are pawned and can only be repossessed after paying the money due on them? Please guide us!

(Part No. 7; Page No. 218)

A1: It is obligatory to hasten in repaying the debt due on the deceased, either through selling both or just one of the two buildings to fulfil his obligation, unless the creditors agree to receive their dues from the annual rent of the two buildings till the payment of the full debt. There is no harm in this. On the other hand, undertaking to pay back the debt of the deceased on the part of any relative only discharges former's responsibility after the debt has been repaid in full.

Q2: What is the ruling on a debtor who has died without making a will that his debt should be repaid?

A2: If the deceased has an estate, his debt should be paid out of it even if he had not left a will to do so. If he has no inheritance, it is Mustahab (desirable) for his heirs or other virtuous people to voluntarily pay his debt on his behalf. Otherwise, the debt will remain due on him.

Q2: My father died owing some money to people. Some of them has absolved him from the debt, and I managed to repay the debt due to some creditors and asked the rest to absolve my father's obligation on the understanding that I shall pay them back later. Is this permissible? What is the ruling concerning this matter?

A2: The debt remains due on the deceased until the creditor forgoes it or it is paid back on his behalf. His responsibility is not discharged once another person has taken upon himself to repay it. Thus be mindful, may Allah grant you success, to repay it in order for the deceased to rest in peace.

Q: My father died leaving a debt of sixty silver Riyals, which is the price of clothes and furnishings he had bought forty years ago. I tried hard to find the creditor, but I could not. What should I do now regarding the debt of my father? Should the money be paid according to the market value of silver? Kindly advise me on this issue, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: The mentioned dirhams are a debt on your father. They should be repaid either as silver coins if available or to pay their equal value in cash. They should be paid out of his left estate, if he has left any. If he has no inheritance and you are earnest to repay his debt, this is most virtuous. But if you can not find the creditor after exerting all means of searching, then you may give the sum of the debt in charity on his behalf.

Q 2: If a deceased debtor has a brother or some relative who wants to pay back his debts, but he has no money available at the present time, will the debt of the deceased be waived if a relative borrows money to repay the debt on his behalf? Is the responsibility of the deceased discharged in this case? Please answer us!

A: If a person undertakes to pay back the debts of the deceased, whether he has enough money to do so or borrows this sum and pays it to the creditors, this discharges the responsibility of the indebted deceased and his burden is lifted from him. To put it in plain words, his responsibility is only discharged when the rights due on him are paid back to those who are entitled. This is clearly understood from the Hadith narrated by Jabir (may Allah be pleased with him): «A man died and we washed him, perfumed him, shrouded him, and then brought him to the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) asking, 'Would you offer Janazah \(Funeral\) Prayer over him?' He \(peace be upon him\) walked some steps and then asked, 'Is there any debt due from him?' We replied, 'Yes, two Dinars.' The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) left. Abu Qatadah then undertook to pay them back. Coming back to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\), Abu Qatadah said, 'The two Dinars are my responsibility \(on his behalf\).' The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) asked, 'Will the right of creditor be taken care of and the deceased be absolved from them?' Abu Qatadah replied in the affirmative. Consequently, the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) led them in offering Janazah Prayer over him. The following day the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) asked, 'Have the two Dinars been repaid?' Abu Qatadah replied, 'He only died yesterday!' The next day Abu Qatadah came to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) and said, 'I have repaid them.' The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) said, 'It is now that his skin has cooled.'» (Related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad, vol. 3 p. 330; Abu Dawud and Al-Nasa'y related a similar Hadith)

The first question of Fatwa no. 19679

Q 1: A relative of mine died while liable for payments on a car bought on an installment plan. The question is: Do these installments become due immediately, or should repayments remain deferred as they are? Answer us, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: There are two cases regarding a person who dies while liable for payments scheduled on an installment plan. If heirs guarantee to pay the creditors through mortgage or by a solvent guarantor, installments may remain as they are, and thus be payable at their fixed deferred times. However, if heirs do not commit to the installment plan, payment becomes due immediately by the death of the debtor. In this regard, heirs should proceed as soon as possible to pay off the debts of the deceased out of his wealth, if he had any; or out of their wealth, if it is within their capacity. This is meant to discharge the responsibility of the deceased and to free him from being accountable for people's debts, for indeed (the soul of) one who dies is held hostage by his debts until they are paid off.

Q: I have employed an Egyptian driver for a fixed monthly salary. He has worked for three months on a refrigerator car. Feeling that he was diligent and wishing to help him get more than the fixed monthly salary, I rented him the refrigerator car for seven thousand riyals per month. In fact, he already benefitted from the rent revenue for three months and twenty days. Late during the last month of Ramadan, 1413 A.H., namely on the 27th night thereof, he died in an accident. The only passenger who was with him was unharmed, but the car was completely destroyed. Anyway, I fulfilled my obligations toward his dead body fulfilling his family's request to send it to Egypt. In fact, I made the necessary procedures and sent his remains at my expense, although he owes me a certain sum of the car rental. I hope that Your Eminence will inform me of my Shar`y (Islamic legal) responsibility toward the deceased, so that I might be free from accountability before Allah. Actually, the incident as I described is based on the traffic's report as it took place near `Afif.

A: Your obligation toward this dead man is to submit his dues to his Shar`y attorney through a document from the Shari`ah (Islamic law) court to this effect in order to be free from accountability. As for your rights on him, you have the option to waive them or demand them from his family either through the court or a mediator.

Is this action permissible or prohibited? Give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar). May Allah reward you with the best!

prohibited or polytheistic matters. Acceleration of burying the dead

The third question of Fatwa no. 20123

Q 3: Is it preferable to accelerate the process of burying the dead or is it preferable to wait until people gather in large numbers and the time of an obligatory Salah (Prayer) becomes due? May Allah reward you with the best!

A 3: It is a Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) to accelerate the process of preparing, shrouding and praying for the dead, even at a time other than that of the obligatory Salah when a sufficient number of praying persons are present. Evidence for this is what has been narrated by Sa`id ibn Al-Musayib on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Hurry the funeral up. If the deceased is righteous, you will be bringing him towards good and if otherwise, it will be an evil that you take down from your shoulders.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). This is the wording of Al-Bukhari (vol. 2, p. 88).

If the time of an obligatory Salah is approaching, Janazah (Funeral) Prayer can be delayed in order to be performed at the time of any obligatory Salah for the benefit of increasing the number of praying persons. This will be acceptable under the condition that the deceased will not be harmed. This is more preferable, according to the narration of Ibn 'Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him) that he heard the Prophet (peace be upon him) saying: \(If a Muslim dies and forty men, who are not Mushriks \(those who associate others with Allah in His Divinity or worship\), perform the Janazah Prayer for him, Allah will let them intercede for him.\) Related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book) and Abu Dawud in his Sunan (Hadith compilations classified according to jurisprudential themes). Abu Dawud reported in another narration on the authority of 'Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her): \(Each dead person for whom a community of Muslims, whose number amounts to one hundred, performs Janazah Prayer

(Part No. 7; Page No. 227)

and wants to do Shafa`ah \(intercession\) for him, their Shafa`ah will be accepted.\) There is no contradiction between the two narrations. Allah (Exalted be He) informed His Prophet (peace be upon him) of the status of the dead person for whom one hundred persons prayed. The grace of Allah increases with giving the same reward for the deceased one for whom forty people offered Janazah Prayers, of which the Prophet (peace be upon him) was informed. The concept of how many does not serve as supporting evidence in the view of the Jumhur (dominant majority of scholars) of the principles of Islamic Jurisprudence. Information on the acceptance of Shafa`ah of one hundred does not preclude the possibility of accepting the Shafa`ah of a less number. The grace of Allah is great and abundant.

Washing and shrouding a deceased

The second question of Fatwa no. 16299

Q 2: We have people who used to prepare the dead for burial by washing, embalming, and shrouding them. However, there are some matters which we would like to be clarified, in terms of permissibility and impermissibility. They are:

- 1 - Uncovering the `Awrah (private parts of the body that must be covered in public) of the dead during washing.
- 2- Spraying the shroud with perfume after washing and shrouding them.
- 3- Uncovering the face of the dead when undoing the ties of the shroud in the Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer) while lying on their right-hand side and before burial.

A 2: 1- It is not permissible to uncover the `Awrah of the dead because their inviolability during death is like their inviolability while being alive.

2- Perfuming the shrouds with incense and so on before wrapping the dead in the shroud is an act of Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet).

3- It is Mashru` (Islamically permissible) to undo the ties of the shroud after placing the dead in the Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer) and before burial. It is to be noted that uncovering the face of the deceased has no basis in Shari`ah (Islamic law).

The first Question of Fatwa no. 17035

Q 1: One of my sons is 18 years old. Allah (Exalted be He) decreed that he and another three persons died while travelling in the car of one of his friends. He hired the car from a company. The car fell with them from the top of a mountain and they all died. On burying them, they bled so much that we thought that their blood would not cease. By then, one of the Shaykhs came to us and said: "Do not wash them as long as they bleed, perhaps they are martyrs. Wrap a shroud over their remaining clothes and around them as they are. We did so without washing them. We do not know whether this is permissible or not. Please give me Fatwa about this matter.

A 1: It is obligatory to wash the above-mentioned dead people as is done with other dead Muslims. The above-mentioned statement that their ruling is like that of the martyrs is incorrect, because the martyr, who is not washed, is the one who dies on the battlefield doing Jihad (fighting in the Cause of Allah) against the unbelievers. However, due to the fact that they were buried and the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer has been offered for them, these (rituals) should not be repeated. Those who neglected to do this should make Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) and repent for failing to do their duty towards the dead Muslims.

Q 4: Is it permissible for a man to wash the dead body of his mother or daughter in case no woman knowing the rulings of washing the dead is available? Please, give us your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar)!

A: Washing the dead is a Shar`i (Islamic legal) obligation. However, it is permissible for neither a man to wash the dead body of a woman nor vice versa. An exception to this is the case of two spouses, as it is permissible for a husband to wash the dead body of his wife and for the wife to wash the dead body of her husband. This is supported by the Hadith reported on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that reads: \(If you die before me, I will wash you and shroud you.\) (Related by Ahmad and others). Moreover, Asma' bint `Umayy (may Allah be pleased with her) washed the dead body of her husband Abu Bakr As-Siddiq (may Allah be pleased with him) in execution of his will. Similarly, the dead body of Fatimah (may Allah be pleased with her) was washed by her husband `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him).

Q: My father (may Allah be merciful to him) died in 1377 AH, i.e. about 37 years ago. He fell to his death from a high mountain peak but those who were present at the time of death could not bring him down as the mountain was so rugged. However, they put his body under a protruding rock plugging its sides so that it might not be exposed to the danger of beasts of prey. Moreover, they neither washed his body, shrouded him nor offered Janazah (Funeral) Prayer for him.

Is it permissible to move the remains of his body to the nearest grave in the plain. How can we perform washing, shrouding and Janazah Prayer?

A: It is well-known that the Shar`y (Islamic legal) ruling is that it is Wajib (obligatory) to wash, shroud, bury and offer Janazah for the deceased. In case washing the deceased is unfeasible, an alternative, i.e. Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth), should be employed and if shrouding is unfeasible, it will be waived. Moreover, if offering Janazah for the deceased is unfeasible, it should be offered over the grave and if one dies in a country whose citizens did not offer Janazah for him, Salat-ul-Gha'ib (Funeral Prayer in absentia) should be offered. Seemingly, it is apparent according to the question that those present at the time of your father's death did their best but could not bring him down from the mountain. In this regard, Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾ He (Glorified and Exalted be He) also says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ Since death took place a long time ago, you do not have to do any of the above-mentioned things.

Fatwa no. 16265

Q: We would like to ask you about those who die in the hospitals of Makkah Al-Mukarramah and other similar entities like traffic, police, and municipality concerning washing the dead since it is noted that those mentioned above, specifically hospitals cover the face and head of the dead Muhrim (pilgrim in the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) whether a man or a woman. We would hopefully like you to give us a written Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) explaining how to deal with such cases taking into consideration the following:

- 1- If the face and the head of the corpse is totally burnt.
- 2- If the face and the head were damaged because of an accident.
- 3- If the face of the dead woman was pretty.
- 4- If it is necessary to keep the dead body in the morgue.

A: The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is to wash the person who died in a state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) with water mixed with Sidr (lote tree) or similar substances, never to apply perfume to either men or women, never to cut any of their hair or nails, never wrap dead men in Makhit (clothes sewn to fit body limbs) or to cover one's head or face. If there are Ajanib (men lawful for the woman to marry) present in the wash of a dead woman, they must cover her face relying on what has authentically been proven from Ibn Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both) that the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said about one of his Sahabah (Companions) whose camel broke his neck while he was staying in `Arafah : wash him with water mixed \(with the leaves of\) the lote \(tree\) and keep his face exposed; \(he, the narrator\) said: And his head \(too\), for he would be raised

on the Day of Resurrection pronouncing Talbiya.) As for a woman, her head and face must be covered exactly like other parts of her body; since it is Niqab (face veil) which is not allowed in Hajj, but covering her face with anything else is Wajib (obligatory) specifically in the presence of Ajnaby men. If the dead body is burnt, Taymmum (dry ablution) should be applied, as well as in a case if is not easy to wash the face of the dead body.

Q 2: I participated in washing a very old woman whose hair was curly in a strange complicated manner, a woman who was present with me then, advised me to braid her hair, so I tried to undo her curly hair to braid it like what the woman said but it was in vain, I could not achieve the job, at last I cut the tips of the complicated curly hair of the dead woman until I was able to braid her hair three plaits depending on the opinion of that woman, Is there any sin on me doing so, or should I pay any Kaffarah (expiation)?

A 2: If the reality is as you have mentioned, then there is no sin on you since you did not cut the hair without any excuse, but you only acted like this to be able to braid her curly hair three plaits following the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet). It was reported by Um `Atiyyah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said: (We braided her hair in three plaits, and put them behind her) referring to one of the daughters of the Prophet (peace be upon him). This Hadith is agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim.

Q 1: Is it permissible for a brother to stay during the washing of the dead body of his sister or mother if there are two Ajnaby men (man lawful for the woman to marry) washing them?

Q 2: Is it permissible to write Shahadah (Testimony of Faith) on the forehead of the dead person using aloes wood perfume after washing him?

A 2: It is impermissible to write anything by any means on the forehead of the dead person. Moreover, it is impermissible to write anything on his grave; this is applicable to shahadah and anything else since it is categorized as Bid`ah (innovation in religion). The prophet (peace be upon him) himself did not allow writing on the graves of dead people, and this applies to writing on any part of his body because this does not avail him anything.

Q 3: Is close sequence a condition for the validity of washing a deceased? What if this sequence is not followed?

A 3: The washing of the dead body is to perform Istinja' (cleansing the private parts with water after urination or defecation) for them to remove any found secretions, then a complete ablution should be performed like that done before Salah (Prayer), the head should be washed with water mixed with the leaves of Sidr (lote tree) or any other cleaning substances. Water should be poured over the whole body to overwhelm it all, this is obligatory only once, but it is Mustahab (desirable) to do it three times until the dead body is purified, otherwise they must be washed until they become clean.

Miscarriage

Q: My wife used to have health troubles whenever she was pregnant, especially in her six months of pregnancy. Five or six years ago, she miscarried a fetus in its fifth month in the military hospital of Riyadh. This took place twice in the same hospital in Riyadh one of them was five months old while the other was only four months old.

The hospital has its own system for burying miscarried fetuses, when my wife miscarried, they put the fetus in a jar and asked me if I would like to take it or to sign a statement which gives the hospital the right to manage the whole affair. I signed giving them all credits to do what is Islamically needed in this case. Was I right in my behavior or not? Also, I did not give this miscarried fetus a name; is it permissible after six years to give it a name? Is there any sin on me? I hopefully wish Your Eminence will clarify this issue, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: There is no blame at all in authorizing the hospital to carry out the necessary procedures like washing, enshrouding, offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer, and burying it. It is desirable to give Aqiqah (sacrifice for a newborn) for it and give it a name even after the long period you mentioned in your question whether it was a male or female. May Allah make it intercessor for you, accept his Shafa`ah (intercession), and grant you children better than it.

Q: I got married, became pregnant, and gave birth to a child, it was the first child. Five months later I became pregnant for the second time, but I miscarried in the fourth month and cast it in the drain of the bathroom out of my ignorance of Shari`ah (Islamic law) rulings. I hopefully wish that Your Eminence will clarify this issue and the consequent legal rulings, taking into consideration that I awfully regret what I have done and repent to Allah. Please, clarify this issue for me. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the reality is as you have mentioned in your question, and if the fetus was four months before it was miscarried, it should be washed, shrouded, and a Janazah (Funeral) Prayer should be offered over it because life was breathed into it at this period like any other creature.

Throwing the fetus in the drain of the bathroom is a gross mistake for which you have to perform Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and ask Allah for forgiveness. Moreover, you have to make sure of any religious matter by asking scholars.

Q 2: A woman miscarried while she was in her fourth or

A 2: If the fetus was miscarried after it was four months old or higher, it should be washed and shrouded, and the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer should be offered over it. It should also be buried because it was a living being at this period like any other creature according to the Hadith of Al-Mughirah ibn Shu`bah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Janazah Prayer should be offered over a miscarried fetus.\) (Related by Abu Dawud and Al-Tirmidhy). Q 2: I was pregnant but I miscarried in the second month. Is it Wajib (bligatory) on me to pay Sadaqah (voluntary charity) like clothes or food? Is it Wajib to give a miscarried fetus a name?

A 2: It is impermissible to abort a fetus intentionally even in the second month. Therefore, if you aborted the fetus on purpose, there would be no obligatory Kaffarah (expiation) upon you but you have to ask Allah for repentance and forgiveness and decide not to return to such a horrible mistake. If you miscarried naturally, there would be no sin on you. Moreover, you are not asked to pay Sadaqah for the fetus and it is also not Wajib to give it a name because life was not yet breathed into it. Nevertheless, if it had completed the fourth month or more and life was breathed into it, it should be washed, a Janazah (Funeral) Prayer should be offered for it, a name should be given to it, and an `Aqiqah (sacrifice for a newborn) should be offered for it.

Q 3: I have miscarried twice once in sixth month and the second in the second month. I miscarried both of them at home. Since I was alone, I buried them in a place near our house and that place was turned later into a graveyard. I never expected it to be like that, though the owners of the land did not know that there are children buried in this place. I do not know whether there is any sin on me. I hope Your Eminence will clarify this issue for me. May Allah reward you with the best!

A 3: If the miscarried fetus completed four months or more, it would be Wajib (obligatory) to wash, shroud, offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer for it and bury it in a grave. What you did with the six month miscarried fetus was a gross mistake. It should be disinterred if possible and its remains should be wrapped and moved to the public cemetery.

Q: A young woman from Yemen, said: "I accompanied my sister-in-law to the hospital. She was pregnant in its fourth month and was bleeding for two days. When we were admitted into the hospital, the specialist decided she should be hospitalized because she was very tired. She asked me to accompany her to the bathroom. As soon as she entered, the miscarried fetus fell directly into the drain of the toilet. She fainted immediately after that. I was terribly surprised and confused, and got scared not knowing what I should do, I hurried to the water hose and switched it on until it pushed the fetus into the drain. I took her back to her bed in the ward. I swear that I did not know whether it was alive or dead but to my best judgment it was dead. I have told my father and brother the whole story but they did not blame me, though I feel great remorse towards what I have done. What should I do to expiate for this unintentional incident because I am worried and confused? Guide me. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the aborted fetus did not complete the fourth month, there would be no

Q: Nine years ago, my wife was in her fifth month of pregnancy when she suffered bleeding that continued until the end of the sixth month. She was hospitalized since the beginning of bleeding but she miscarried a dead boy fetus in the sixth month. My wife asked them to deliver the child to me to bury it. However, they told her they would deliver it during the visiting break. At the time of visits, she asked about it again but they told her that they had sent it to Aseer Hospital for laboratory tests to pinpoint the causes of bleeding. After they told my wife about these tests I did not ask nor do I know the destiny of that miscarried child until now. I hopefully wish Your Eminence will clarify this issue for me.

A: If a miscarried fetus completed its fourth month, it would be Wajib (obligatory) to wash, shroud, offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer, and bury it in the public graveyard like any other dead person. Fatwa no. 21082

Q: I would like to ask Your Eminence about miscarried children in the morgue of Tarif hospital. There are twelve of them; the first has been there since 1406 A.H. and the last has been there since 1416 A.H. The dates of the admission of some of them are unknown. Moreover, there are separate limbs scattered like fingers, hands and the like. I asked the manager of the hospital to tell the governor that those children have been for a long period of time in the morgue of the hospital and their parents did not receive them and that there is no sufficient information to know the addresses of their parents and that there is someone who offers to take their bodies and perform the necessary procedures to bury them, they agreed that I can receive them and wash, shroud, pray for, and bury them. My question is:

1- Is it permissible for me to receive them without the knowledge of their parents taking into consideration that it is impossible to know their addresses because the available data of addresses are not enough and the cases have been in the hospital for a very long period of time?

2- As for the miscarried fetuses which completed four months; they should be washed, shrouded, offered Janazah (Funeral) Prayer for, and buried in the public graveyard of Muslims. What is the ruling if the miscarried fetus is under this age? Is it permissible to throw it in the dump or in the sewerage system?

3- The age of some of those children in the morgue cannot be distinguished as a result of the change of their bodies and colors and the complete atrophy of their bodies, how should we behave in this case?

4- Is it permissible to bury two or three of them in one grave, how should it be done?

5- What is the ruling on washing, shrouding, offering prayer, and burying the limbs?

A: 1- The manager of the hospital is responsible for taking the necessary procedures of delivering the miscarried fetuses to their parents immediately after miscarriage. It is impermissible to postpone this delivery without a legitimate excuse which entails this delay.

2- Those children whose parents' addresses are known must be delivered to them. Those whose parents' addresses are unknown, the management of the hospital or whoever donates to receive them from the morgue should adhere to the following:

A- If the miscarried fetus is less than four months of age, it should be wrapped in a piece of cloth and buried in any pit in the public cemetery without being washed or offered Janazah (Funeral) Prayer for, because life was not yet breathed in it.

B- If the miscarried fetus is four months of age or more, it is Wajib (obligatory) to wash, enshroud, offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer for, and bury it. If they are more than one, each should be buried alone in a separate grave like any other dead person.

3- As for the separate limbs which were cut off of the dead, they must be washed and inserted into his shroud. If the person whose limbs are separated from them is not present, the limb must be washed, shrouded, offered Janazah (Funeral) Prayer for, and buried in a single grave in the public cemetery because this was the behavior of the Sahabah (Companions) of the Prophet (may Allah be merciful to them all) towards the separate limbs of the dead. A limb which is amputated off from a live person should be buried in a pit in the public cemetery without being washed or offered prayer for.

Q 1: In hospitals, we receive people injured in accidents while they are in a state of Ihram (ritual state) for Hajj or `Umrah, who consequently die due to these accidents. The hospital's management keep them in the morgue or deliver their bodies to their families after wrapping them in bed sheets or a piece of cloth which also covers their faces and heads, is this a correct procedure? What is the valid procedure in such cases? Are men and women the same in this ruling? Some of the dead who are in a state of Ihram either for Hajj or for `Umrah die due to fire or being run over or the like which causes the deformation of their faces and skulls, this leads those in charge of the dead bodies to cover their faces and skulls, is this procedure correct, and what is the valid procedure in such cases?

A 1: It is not permissible to cover the head of a dead man in the state of Ihram, nor his face even if he is run over or burnt according to the general statement of the Prophet (peace be upon him) about the Muhrim (pilgrim in the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) whose camel broke his neck while he was staying in `Arafah : \(Wash him with water and Sidr \(lote tree\) and shroud him in his two pieces of cloth, and neither perfume him, nor cover his head, for he will be resurrected on the Day of Resurrection as pronouncing Talbiyah \(devotional expressions chanted at certain times during Hajj and `Umrah\).\) Unless it is needed to wrap his head because it is smashed into pieces, there would be no blame then to keep the damaged parts of the dead body together.

Women's faces and heads must be covered like the rest of her body, since it is only Niqab (face veil) which is not allowed in Hajj, but covering her face with any other thing is obligatory specifically in the presence of Ajnaby (man lawful for the woman to marry).

The second question of Fatwa no. 18556

Q 2: Is it permissible for anybody to request in his will to be shrouded in his Ihram (clothing worn during the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) whenever he dies? Is there any advantage in doing so?

A: We do not know of any evidence from the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) that supports the request of making the clothes of Ihram as a shroud. Such request was not reported to be done by the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) or the practices of the Salaf (righteous predecessors) of our Ummah (nation based on one creed).

Q: It was mentioned by Ibn `Abdul-Hady in his book "Mughni Dhwi Al-Afham" that the hands of the dead person should be put on his chest when shrouded, I have closely looked this issue up in more than twenty books but I had never found such an opinion, not even a reference to it. Moreover, I did not find it in the books of other Madhahib other than Hanbalis, that is why I hopefully wish your Eminence will clarify the validity of this opinion, and to show whether it is supported by verified legal evidence or is it just Ijtihad (juristic effort to infer expert legal rulings) of Ibn `Abdul-Hady (may Allah be merciful to him). May Allah safeguard you, and grant you good health! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

such as his hair or nails whose length deforms him, they are to be removed in the same way as it is permissible for the living, except for those who meet their death while in the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah). Fatwa no. 17385

Q: In the city of Riyadh, there are certain Masjids (mosques) where Janazah (Funeral) Prayers are often offered to the extent that these Masjids have become well-known for this, such as Masjid `Atiqah and Masjid Al-Rajhy in Rabwah. Many young men deliberately perform Salah (Prayer) in these Masjids in the hope that they may obtain the virtue of offering Janazah Prayer.

My question is: Is doing this permissible? Please give us a Fatwa, may Allah reward you!

A: Shari`ah (Islamic law) states the virtue of witnessing Janazah Prayer and the funeral procession, because it is part of Iman (belief). It was authentically narrated by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(He who accompanies the funeral procession of a Muslim out of Iman and Ihtisab \(confident anticipation of Allah's Recompense\) and remains with it till the Janazah Prayer is offered and the burial ceremonies are over, will return with (a reward of) two Qirats. Each Qirat is like the size of (Mount) Uhud. He who offers the Janazah Prayer only and returns before the burial, will return with (the reward of) one Qirat only.)

Imam Al-Bukhari, in his Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book), classified under the Book of "Al-Iman" the chapter entitled "Following Funeral Processions is Part of Iman." This indicates the virtue and desirability of attending Janazah Prayer and following the funeral procession.

Q: My grandfather died twenty-five years ago among such people who were so ignorant in the matters of their religion that they neither knew nor offered Janazah (Funeral) Prayer over him. Until today we have been living in doubt about this matter that we find to be hard on us and causes us pain. We feel that there is a responsibility laid on us in this regard. Thus, we hope that Your Eminence Shaykh will give us a Fatwa regarding what we should do now after this long period has passed. Should we offer Janazah Prayer over him now, give in Sadaqah (voluntary charity) on his behalf or what should we do?

A: It is too late to offer Janazah Prayer over your grandfather. You should supplicate Allah to forgive and have mercy on him. It is permissible for you to give in Sadaqah on his behalf according to your means, since the deceased benefits from Du`a' (supplication) made for them as well as Sadaqah given on their behalf. Fatwa no. 16727

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.
To proceed:

(Part No. 7; Page No. 255)

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the Fatwa request submitted to his Eminence the Grand Mufty. It was referred to the Committee by the Council of Senior Scholars no. (3560) dated 6/8/1414 A.H. In his inquiry for Fatwa, the brother asks what the Islamic view is regarding an old Masjid (mosque) in a graveyard in their neighboring country Al-Ahsa', which is designated for offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer. He also asks about the new Masjid they have begun to build in the graveyard for offering Janazah Prayer and performing Salah (Prayer) in general.

The request has been referred to His Eminence the Chief Justice of the Courts of Al-Ahsa' through letter no. (2384/2) dated 22/8/1414 A.H. to form a committee consisting of the court, emirate, the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV), and the municipality in order to inspect the graves and prepare a detailed report. The reply was received through letter no. (3309/1) dated 23/10/1414 A.H. attached with a report by the committee that inspected the grave site. Following is what was stated in this report:

We want to inform you that the site in question was inspected by us where we found that it lies within the graveyard, just one meter away from the eastern wall of its fence. It also lies about one hundred and twenty five meters away from the old building. Its length is 20 meters and its width is ten meters. It has an attached facility whose length is 15 meters and 5 meters in width. Construction is still underway and the land where it is being built is part of the graveyard; therefore, offering any other Salah than that of Janazah is not in accord with Shari`ah (Islamic law). It is located far away from the village, and there are neither buildings nor people living near it. We opine that if there is a piece of land owned by the municipality near the graveyard yet outside it where the Masjid can be built; this is best and preferable, especially if it is on the western side of the graveyard in order for it to be near the village. This is what must be presented for consideration. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

After studying the matter, the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' issued a Fatwa that the buildings, both the old and the new, should be removed since they are part of the land of the graveyard. It is not permissible to build a Masjid specified for offering Janazah Prayer or any other Salah within the graveyard. The municipality of the area should remove them both under the auspices of the committee by whom the report was prepared.

The first question of Fatwa no. 17625

Q 1: What is the ruling on offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer in a graveyard? If your reply is that this is not permissible, then how do we reconcile this with the Hadith of the Prophet (peace be upon him) wherein he offered Janazah Prayer in the graveyard over the woman who used to clean the Masjid (mosque)?

A: Anyone who misses offering the Janazah Prayer over a deceased, it is Mustahab (desirable) to offer it over their grave within the period of a month from the day of burial. The grave should be in a middle position between the praying person and the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer). It is narrated in a Sahih (authentic) Hadith on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him): «There was a black woman (or a man) who used to clean the Masjid (mosque). The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) once noticed that she was absent and asked about her, but he (peace be upon him) was told that she had died. He (peace be upon him) said, 'Why did you not inform me?' They responded in a way which conveyed that she was of little importance. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, 'Lead me to her grave.' They led him to it and he prayed over her. He (peace be upon him) said, 'These graves are full of darkness upon their occupants and Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) illuminates them by virtue of my prayer over them.'» Imam Ahmad said: "Who can doubt the validity of offering Janazah Prayer over a grave? The act is reported to be done by the Prophet (peace be upon him) through six lines of transmission all of which are Hasan (Hadith whose chain of narration contains a narrator with weak exactitude, but is free from eccentricity or blemish)."

The Hadiths stating that the Prophet (peace be upon him) offered Janazah Prayer over the grave of the deceased after burial are classified as Sahih and Mutawatir (a Hadith reported by a significant number of narrators throughout the chain of narration, whose agreement upon a lie is impossible). It was narrated by Ibn `Abbas, Abu Hurayrah, Anas ibn Malik, Yazid ibn Thabit, the brother of Zayd ibn Thabit, `Amir ibn Rabi`ah, Jabir ibn `Abdullah, Buraydah ibn Al-Hasib, Abu Sa`id Al-Khudry, and Abu Umamah ibn Sahl (may Allah be pleased with them)

Q: Is it permissible to offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer in congregation in the graveyard before performing the obligatory Salah (Prayer)?

A: The basic rule is that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to offer Janazah Prayer over a deceased Muslim in the graveyard or outside it.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 258)

Sometimes he (peace be upon him) would offer it in the Masjid (mosque). Both are permissible, that is, Janazah Prayer can be offered either before or after the obligatory Salah.

As for the obligatory Salah, it is not permissible to perform it in the graveyard since this was prohibited by the Prophet (peace be upon him). The same applies to Nafilah (supererogatory Salah), i.e. it is not permissible to perform it in the graveyard based on the purport of the statement of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(May Allah curse the Jews and the Christians, for they have taken the graves of their Prophets as places of worship.\) There are also other Sahih (authentic) Hadiths to the same effect.

Q: What is the ruling on performing Janazah (Funeral) Prayer over the deceased multiple times? In other words, if a person dies in the city of Al-Ta'if, for example, where Janazah Prayer is offered over him there; then the body is moved to some village outside the city for burial there, is it permissible that Janazah Prayer be offered over him again by the inhabitants of the village? Is it permissible for one who has already offered Janazah Prayer over the dead the first time to offer it again with those who have not performed it? Should the Janazah Prayer offered the second time be performed in the Masjid (mosque) of the village or outside it? With regard to a person who is killed in execution of a Had (ordained punishment for violating Allah's Law) or Ta'zir (discretionary punishment) or as a victim, should they be washed and shrouded or not?

A: There is no problem in offering Janazah Prayer over the deceased more than one time. For example, if Janazah Prayer is offered over them by a group of Muslims and then a second group comes, who has not offered the Janazah Prayer, they can offer Janazah Prayer over the deceased either in congregation or individually, either in the Masjid or the graveyard, and either before burial or over their grave after the burial within the period of one month. With regard to a person who is killed as a victim or in execution for a Had or Ta'zir, they should be washed, shrouded, Janazah Prayer offered over them, and buried in the graveyards of Muslims provided that they are a Muslim.

Q 2: Is it true that it is not valid to offer Salat-ul-Gha'ib (Funeral Prayer in absentia) and that the Messenger (peace be upon him) only offered Salat-ul-Gha'ib over Al-Najashy because Allah made Al-Najashy visible before him out of honor to the Messenger (peace be upon him)?

A: Offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer over an absent dead person is permissible, provided the deceased was a person who benefitted or rendered services to Islam, since this was done by the Prophet (peace be upon him) upon receiving the news of the death of Al-Najashy, the King of Abyssinia (Ethiopia), where he (peace be upon him) ordered his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet, may Allah be pleased with them) to form a row and led them in Janazah Prayer.

The basic ruling is that offering Salat-ul-Gha'ib is not just confined to Al-Najashy (may Allah be pleased with him). It is permissible to offer it over any prominent person in Islam. What was stated by your teacher that Al-Najashy was made visible before the Prophet (peace be upon him) is false and has no basis.

Q: My wife gave birth to a stillborn baby in his seventh month. He had been dead for fifteen days in the womb of his mother. Upon his stillbirth I took him to the graveyard, where I was told that the baby was not to be washed, since his body was saturated with blood and his flesh would melt. Therefore, if water were poured put on him, he would dissolve. Thus, the man shrouded him without washing him. Some of those who were with me said that Janazah (Funeral) Prayer should not be offered over him, which caused me to bury him without washing or offering Janazah Prayer over him. Was what I did correct? If it was obligatory to offer Janazah Prayer over him, is it permissible to offer it now, although he was buried three months ago?

A: Anyone who dies and is buried without offering Janazah Prayer over them, it is obligatory to offer Janazah Prayer over their grave, since offering Janazah Prayer over a deceased is a collective obligation which in your case was not performed. It is considered to be performed if just one person offers it, as stated by Muslim scholars regarding the ruling on the conditions for waiving a collective obligation. Accordingly, you should offer Janazah Prayer over the grave of your son, either by yourself or in congregation.

Q 1: A man who died after `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer, half an hour before Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer. Is it permissible to offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer over him (at this time)? What is the solution if he was buried without offering Janazah Prayer over him? This incident actually occurred recently, where a person was buried without offering Janazah Prayer over him, because someone said he had heard that offering Salah (Prayer) during this time is prohibited.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 262)

Thus, they buried the deceased without offering Janazah Prayer over him.

A: It is obligatory to offer Janazah Prayer over the deceased referred to. Burying him without offering Janazah Prayer over him was wrong, since the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) only forbade offering Janazah Prayer during the very brief period shortly before sunset, as authentically reported from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) from the Hadith narrated by `Uqbah ibn `Amir. It is obligatory to offer Janazah Prayer over the grave of the mentioned deceased within a month of his burial, since offering Janazah Prayer over the deceased is a collective obligation.

Q: A person died while being in debt to people. Those attending his funeral brought his bier near to the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) to lead Janazah (Funeral) Prayer over him. However, the Imam refused because the person died while in debt. Since none undertook to pay the debts on his behalf, they buried him without offering Janazah Prayer over him, because of the Hadith reported from the Messenger (peace be upon him) when he did not offer Janazah Prayer over an indebted deceased person and said: "Offer Salah (i.e. Janazah Prayer) for your companion." Should Janazah Prayer be offered over an indebted deceased person and what is the ruling on this?

A: It is obligatory to offer Janazah Prayer over a deceased Muslim, whether indebted or not. Withholding from offering Janazah Prayer over an indebted deceased person is specific to the Prophet (peace be upon him), since he (peace be upon him) said: \(Offer Salah \(i.e. Janazah Prayer\)

for your companion.) Withholding from offering Janazah Prayer over those indebted was done by the Prophet (peace be upon him) during the early days of Islam when he (peace be upon him) could not afford to pay the debts on behalf of the insolvent deceased. When Allah granted him the means, he (peace be upon him) would pay these debts on their behalf and offered Janazah Prayer over them. In conclusion, it is not permissible to refuse offering Janazah Prayer over a deceased Muslim because they are indebted. Rather, this was particular to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and in a specific case.

Q 1: What is the ruling on offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer over a deceased person in Riyadh and then moving him to his home town so that his family and relatives can offer Janazah Prayer over him, where some would repeat offering Janazah Prayer over him again?

A: With regard to moving the deceased from the place where he dies to be buried in some other place, this is permissible, particularly if there is a certain benefit. On the other hand, if there is no benefit in moving him, burying him in the place where he dies is to be given priority, provided there is no impediment in burying him there. This ensures hastening to prepare the deceased for burial as the Prophet (peace be upon him) commanded. There is no harm in repeating Janazah Prayer over him, particularly for those who have not performed it over him the first time.

such as wearing Mashlah (a Palestinian, simple, man's coat-like garment made from cotton and decorated with embroidery), which has grown to be a custom followed by some and has widely spread in society?

A: There is nothing wrong in wearing ornate garments by men offering Janazah Prayer over the deceased, provided that they do not believe that this is Mustahab (desirable) for Janazah Prayer in particular.

Q 3: What is the ruling on greeting the relatives of the deceased and offering them condolences in the Masjid (mosque), which creates a crowd in the Masjid?

A: There is no harm in offering condolences to the relatives of the deceased, whether in the Masjid or at any other place upon meeting them, since this is out of commiseration.

The second question of Fatwa no. 19627

Q 2: What is the ruling on offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer after burying a deceased after `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer? Is there any impediment to offering it after `Asr Prayer either before or after burying a deceased? We want to remove doubt from our hearts.

A: Whoever misses offering Janazah Prayer over the deceased, it is Mustahab (desirable) to offer Janazah Prayer for them over their grave. The grave should be in a middle position between them and the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer). It is permissible to offer it within the period of a month from their burial, according to the Hadith narrated by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: «A black woman who used to sweep the Masjid \(mosque\) died. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) inquired about her. The people told him that she had died. He \(peace be upon him\) said, 'Why did you not inform me?'

He (peace be upon him) then said, 'Lead me to her grave.' They led him to it and he (peace be upon him) prayed over her.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) It was also narrated by Sa`id ibn Al-Musayyib «that Um Sa`d died while the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) was not there. When he \(peace be upon him\) came, he prayed over her, and a month had gone by since that \(her death\).» (Related by Al-Tirmidhy; its narrators are Thiqah [trustworthy]) Imam Ahmad said: "The longest period during which it is permissible to offer Janazah Prayer is a month. There is nothing wrong in extending this period for one or two more days. Beyond this period, Janazah Prayer should not be offered over the deceased. Rather, one should supplicate Allah to have mercy on and forgive them."

The thirteenth question of Fatwa no. 18612

Q 13: Is it permissible to offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer over a boy who has not reached the age of puberty?

A: Janazah Prayer should be offered over any Muslim deceased, even over the young who have not reached the age of puberty. It is even prescribed to offer it over a stillborn fetus provided that the soul was breathed into it.

Q 1: What is the ruling on the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer over the deceased in a room behind the Masjid (mosque) while Muslims offer it in the Masjid, i.e. before the Imam while being led by him?

A: It is permissible to offer Janazah Prayer either in or outside the Masjid. However, just as any other Salah (Prayer), those offering it should stand behind the Imam leading them in it. In other words, it is not permissible for them to stand in front of him, as this contradicts the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet).

Q: If while performing 'Isha' (Night) Prayer in Ramadan a funeral is brought, should we first offer Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) or Janazah (Funeral) Prayer after 'Isha' Prayer? Which is preferred: to offer Janazah Prayer in Masjids (mosques) or outside, i.e. in a separate Musalla (place for Prayer) near the graveyard? May Allah protect and make you successful!

A: The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is to hasten to prepare the dead body for the Janazah Prayer and the burial

so that they may soon receive the good reward for their good deeds if they were pious or people will be quickly relieved of them if they were wicked. It was reported on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Make haste with the funeral; if the dead person was good, it is a good state to which you are sending him; but if they were otherwise it is an evil of which you are ridding yourselves.» (Related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad [Hadith compilation], Al-Bukhari and Muslim in the Two Sahih [authentic] Books of Hadith [i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim], and Ashab-ul-Sunan [authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes]) It was also related by Al-Tabarani with a Hasan Isnad (a Hadith whose Isnad contains a narrator with weak exactitude, but is free from eccentricity or blemish) on the authority of Ibn 'Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: «When one of you dies, do not withhold their corpse. Rather, make haste to bury them in their grave.» Hastening to bury a deceased is essential to prevent physical decay and the development of an unpleasant odor that offends people. Accordingly, Janazah Prayer should be given priority by offering it immediately after the 'Isha' Prayer and before Tarawih. As this is more consistent with the Sunnah, which urges to hasten the burial of the deceased. Moreover, Janazah Prayer takes a short time that neither results in delaying Tarawih Prayer nor causes any harm. As for the place where Janazah Prayer should be offered, the Sunnah of the Prophet states that he (peace be upon him) would often offer Janazah Prayer over the deceased outside the Masjid. He (peace be upon him) would offer it in the Musalla to facilitate those attending the Prayer to witness the burial and earn the reward of two Qirats; one Qirat for offering Janazah Prayer for the deceased, and another for witnessing its burial. This is based on what was narrated by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Anyone who offers Janazah Prayer will have one Qirat \(of reward\) and if they stay until the burial is done will have two Qirats; each Qirat is equal to \(the Mount\) Uhud.» (Related by Imam Muslim) The is because anyone who offers Janazah Prayer in the graveyard will take many more steps, which will increase their reward. On the other hand, offering Janazah Prayer in the Masjid makes it more likely that people will return to their homes and not witness the burial.

However, there is nothing wrong with offering Janazah Prayer in the Masjid, because it was proven that the Prophet (peace be upon him) did so. This is based on what was narrated by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) who said: \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) offered Janazah Prayer for Suhayl ibn Bayda' in the Masjid.\) (Related by Imams Muslim, Al-Tirmidhy and Abu Dawud)

Another narration reads: `Aishah ordered that the body of Sa`d ibn Abu Waqqas be brought past her in the Masjid so that she could offer Janazah Prayer for him. Some people disapproved of her doing that, so she said: \(How quickly people forget! The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) offered Janazah Prayer for Suhayl ibn Al-Bayda' in the Masjid.\)

It was authentically reported that Janazah Prayer was offered for both Abu Bakr and `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) in the Masjid. Yet none of the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) objected. Today people are accustomed to offering Janazah Prayer in the Masjid. Perhaps because this facilitates it for people and encourages many of them to offer the Salah for the deceased whose reward will accordingly increase. Perhaps this began as a result of people being too busy in this age and have become lazy to the extent that they neglect and have no zeal for the acts of Sunnah, except those whom Allah wills.

Accordingly, it is permissible to offer Janazah Prayer for a deceased in either the graveyard or the Masjid, since both matters were authentically reported to be one of the matters adopted by the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) and his Sahabah (may Allah be pleased with them).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 19999

Q: I hope that Your Eminence clarify the following matter mentioned in the sixth question of Fatwa no. 8382, which reads: Is it permissible to offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer in the place void of graves within the graveyard?

The answer was: This is permissible because the Prophet (peace be upon him) offered Janazah Prayer over a woman who used to clean the Masjid (mosque), when she died and was buried without him being informed of this. Upon learning this he said: Show me her grave, where he then went and offered Janazah Prayer there.

In Fatwa no. 9269, dated 23 / 12 / 1405 A.H., the second question read: One day a person met his death, and we accompanied the funeral to the graveyard. Upon offering Janazah Prayer over the deceased, the corpse was placed into the grave and the Adhan (call to Prayer) was announced by his head. Please, explain to us the ruling on this and what should be done in this regard?

The answer was: It is not permissible to announce the Adhan nor Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) at the grave, because this was neither reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) nor from his Companions. Rather, it is a Bid`ah (innovation in Islam), knowing that the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(Whoever performs an action which is not in accordance with this affair of ours \(Islam\) will have it rejected.\) .

My question is: How do we reconcile the Prophet's (peace be upon him) offering Janazah Prayer over the deceased at the grave, as is stated in the first Fatwa, and the ruling mentioned in the second Fatwa that it is not permissible? Could you please clarify this matter?

A: There is no such contradiction, as you assume, between what was stated in the first and the second Fatwas issued by the Permanent Committee, because the issues inquired about in both Fatwas are different. There is no doubt that it is permissible to offer Janazah Prayer over the deceased in the graveyard, since this was done by the Prophet (peace be upon him), as has been mentioned. Conversely, it is not permissible to announce the Adhan or the Iqamah at the head of the deceased after offering Janazah Prayer over and burying them in the grave. This is a Bid`ah that has no basis in Shari`ah (Islamic law), as it was never practiced by the Prophet (peace be upon him) or any of his Companions (may Allah be pleased with them), as is stated in the Fatwa. Thus, the ambiguity should be dispelled. Janazah Prayer should not be preceded by neither the Adhan nor the Iqamah.

Fatwa no. 21419

Q: I hereby send Your Eminence this letter wherein I mention that I often see a group of people who, due to following Janazah (Funeral) Prayer at a time when an obligatory Prayer is due, perform the latter Prayer in a place specialized for offering condolences, which lies in the middle of the graveyard of Azrinig, Al-Hufuf. On Wednesday corresponding to 13/2/1412 A.H., I went to the graveyard and entered the mentioned place, where I saw a carpet furnished at the entrance and followed with rows of the carpets of endowment, which meant that the place had been prepared for performing congregational Salah (Prayer). There are graves lying in the direction of the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer). I hope Your Eminence issue a Fatwa to forbid the Bid`ah (innovation in religion) of preparing the places of graveyards for performing Salah and to explain whether or not those who perform Salah there should make up for it. May Allah guide you and protect you in this world and in the Hereafter!

A: It is not permissible to allocate a certain place in the graveyard and mark it with a Mihrab (a niche in the wall that indicates the Qiblah), carpets or any other thing for offering Janazah Prayer, since this was not introduced in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet), and it is feared that people might head for it to perform the obligatory and supererogatory Salahs therein, which is absolutely forbidden based on what is stated in many Mutawatir Hadiths (Hadiths reported by a significant number of narrators throughout the chain of narration, whose agreement upon a lie is impossible) regarding forbidding performing Salah in the graveyard to avoid temptation, preserve Tawhid (belief in the Oneness of Allah) and block the means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). Accordingly, it is obligatory not to introduce such things in graveyards and to remove any such thing that exists there.

Q: We have a cemetery in Al-`Uyun, the governorate of Al-Ahsa', in which we established an awning attached to the cemetery's wall providing it with a Mihrab (a niche in the wall of a mosque that indicates the Qiblah). The awning was surrounded by a 30-cm-high block that was covered by sand. In addition, a place for Wudu' (ablution) was also established. We decided to submit this inquiry to Your Eminence to guard against any violation of pure monotheism; actually, we fear that the situation might get so aggravated in the future that it may be taken as a place of worship with the passage of time. To avoid this, we hope that Your Eminence take the necessary procedure in this regard, bearing in mind that responsible for this awning is the municipality of Al-`Uyun and it is funded by donations of Al-`Uyun charitable society with a charitable purpose In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

A: There is nothing wrong with offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer anywhere in the cemetery before burial in case it is not offered at the Masjid (mosque). After burial, Janazah Prayer may be offered over the grave. However, it is not permissible to specify a place in the cemetery for Janazah, for a place that is to be specified and provided with a Mihrab is only a Masjid in which the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers are performed. Moreover, it is a means to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) because laymen and ignorant people might take it as a place for offering obligatory and supererogatory Prayers, which is not permissible. Therefore, the municipality responsible for this cemetery should demolish the awning in order to avoid this.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20173

Q 1.: How should the imam stand in Janazah (Funeral) Prayer in case there are two male and one female dead persons?

A 1.: The two male corpses should be placed near the imam and the female corpse should be placed subsequent to them to the direction of the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer). This is indicated in the Hadith reported by Yahya ibn Subayh who said: I was told by `Ammar, the freed slave of Al-Harith ibn Naufal: \(that he attended the Janazah of Um Kulthum and her son. As the body of the boy was placed near the imam, I objected to it. Among the people there were Ibn `Abbas, Abu Sa`id Al-Khudry, Abu Qatadah and Abu Hurayrah \(may Allah be pleased with them all\). They said: This is the Sunnah \(action following the example of the Prophet\).\) (Related by Abu Dawud and Al-Nasa'y through an authentic Sanad (chain of narrators).)

In this respect, the imam should stand opposite to the heads of the two male corpses and to the waist of the female corpse. Thus, the waist of the female corpse should be opposite to the heads of the two male corpses. This is indicated in the Hadith related by Al-Tirmidhy in his "Al-Jami`" on the authority of Hammam, who reported Abu Ghalib as saying: \(I witnessed Anas Ibn Malik offering Janazah Prayer for a man, and he stood by his head. Thereafter, the dead body of a woman from Quraysh was brought. The people said: O Abu Hamzah! Offer Janazah Prayer for her. Offering Janazah Prayer for her, he stood opposite to her waist. Al-`Ala' ibn Ziyad said to him, "Is this how Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) used to stand, like you stood, with respect to the corpses of a man and a woman?" He replied, "Yes!" When he finished, Al-`Ala' said, "Keep this in mind!") Moreover, Abu Dawud and Ibn Majah reported a similar Hadith in their Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) and Al-Tirmidhy judged it as Hadith Hasan (good Hadith). The same notion is also indicated in the Hadith related by the Six Hadith Compilers (Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y, and Ibn Majah) on the authority of Samurah Ibn Jundub \(that when the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) offered Janazah Prayer for a woman, he stood opposite to the middle of her body.\) The Hadith is judged by Al-Tirmidhy as Hasan Sahih (a Hadith which according to Al-Tirmidhy stands at a higher level than a mere Hasan Hadith, but at a bit lower level than Sahih).

Fatwa no. 20156

Q: One of the customary practices in our community is to offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer after an obligatory Prayer, such as Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer or any other Salah (Prayer). Is it permissible for us to offer Janazah Prayer at times other than those of obligatory Prayers? If no, why should we offer Janazah only at the time of obligatory Prayers?

(Part No. 7; Page No. 275)

A: It is permissible to offer Janazah Prayer at any time, whether after an obligatory Prayer or otherwise. In fact, many people are used to offer Janazah Prayer after an obligatory Prayer as it is more likely to gather the greatest number of people and in order not to make it difficult for people to gather at a time other than that of obligatory Prayers. Q 3: What should Ma'mums (people being led by an imam in Prayer) do if the imam faints while offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer? What is the ruling if the imam's Wudu' (ablution) is invalidated (during Prayer)?

Q: What is the opinion of Your Eminence on offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer for a person who was known to be feeble minded? Though he would behave nearly naturally regarding daily life affairs, he was not dependable in many respects, as he could not count, especially money. Likewise, he could do some occupations, such as shepherding and going back home in a natural way along with a company, yet he was deficient in intelligence and lacked social skills. He would also defend himself and would not hurt nobody. However, he was easily deceived and cheated by others. Besides, he never thought of marriage or work till he died, when he was about 40 years old. On his death, the imam of the neighborhood Masjid declared that no Janazah Prayer should be offered for him and that he may not be buried in Muslim cemeteries on the pretext that he did not offer Salah (Prayer) or observe Sawm (Fast). Thus, the imam did not offer Janazah Prayer for him and his family took charge of burying him. What is the ruling on such a case? What is the ruling on offering Janazah Prayer for him and consoling his family?

Please, be informed that the imam who gave that Fatwa consoled his family. Since there are few similar cases, what is the opinion of Your Eminence on offering Janazah Prayer for them upon their death? Should they be buried in Muslim cemeteries? Should we console their families on their death or implore mercy for them? Please give us a Fatwa in this regard, may Allah reward you with the best.

A: An feeble-minded person living among Muslims is a Muslim. On their death, they should be washed, shrouded and buried in a Muslim cemetery and Janazah Prayer should be offered for them.

Moreover, their families should be consoled and mercy should be implored for him. Thus, they should be considered like any other Muslim. Moreover, they are pardoned and will not be held accountable for not performing Salah or observing Sawm, for they are not Mukallafs (persons meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions). As for the imam's Fatwa not to offer Janazah Prayer for them and not to bury them in a Muslim cemetery, it is considered an Ijtihad (juristic effort to infer expert legal rulings) which led to a wrong conclusion (we ask Allah to forgive him).

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

A 7: No, it is not permissible to draw lines with stucco or gypsum or the like in the graveyard to straighten the rows in Janazah Prayer. Rather, the imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) should draw the praying persons' attention to straighten and consolidate the lines.

Q 1: Many children of my father died at different ages, ranging between two and five years old, while some others were miscarried, and two others were aborted in the fourth and fifth months of pregnancy. Actually, my father buried them and did not offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer for them being ignorant in this respect. Is my father liable for anything? May Allah safeguard you.

A 1: Life is breathed into a fetus after one hundred and twenty days of pregnancy have passed. Thus, if a fetus was miscarried before life was breathed into it, it should not be washed and no Janazah Prayer should be offered for it. If it is miscarried after life was breathed into it, it should be given a name, washed and shrouded. Moreover, Janazah Prayer should be offered for it and it should be buried in a Muslim cemetery if it is born of two Muslim parents, or a Muslim father and a Kitabi (Jew or Christian) mother. In addition, two sheep in the case of a male and one sheep in the case of a female, meeting the requirement of an Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims), should be offered as `Aqiqah (sacrifice for a newborn) for it. The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) for `Aqiqah is to allocate one-third thereof for eating, one-third to be given as gifts and one-third to be given in charity to the poor. It should be slaughtered on the seventh, fourteenth or twenty-first day after childbirth or miscarriage, knowing that it may also be slaughtered on any other day thereafter. Based on the preceding facts, your father is not sinful for what he did regarding miscarriages in which life was not breathed into the embryos. However, he should repent of not washing, shrouding and offering Janazah Prayer for miscarriages in which life was breathed into the fetuses. Moreover, it is Mustahab (desirable) for him to give a name to and offer `Aqiqah for every miscarriage, whether male or female, in which life was breathed, as is stated earlier.

Q 2: My brother died, and when we were about to offer the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer on his behalf, one of the attendants asked me to lead the Janazah Prayer! What is your opinion on this, knowing that there were other attendants more qualified to lead the Prayer. Another two questions run as follows: Is it permissible to offer Janazah Prayer for the same deceased more than once? And is it permissible to offer Janazah Prayer for the deceased after burial?

A 2: First, it is permissible for you to lead the Janazah Prayer of your deceased brother, even if other more qualified people to lead the Prayer are there, except if your brother had left a will requesting that another person lead it.

Second, repeating the same Janazah Prayer by the person who offered it is impermissible, but if a person offers it and then enters another Masjid (mosque) or cemetery and finds a Janazah Prayer for the same deceased, they may pray it again to win more Thawab (reward from Allah) for themselves and for the deceased. However, if a person did not attend the Prayer, it is Mustahab (desirable) for them to offer it for the deceased, even if in the cemetery, whether before or after the burial. This ruling is supported by the Hadith related on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that [\(A black woman who used to care for the Masjid died, and people offered Janazah Prayer for her at night. However, the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) did not hear the news of her death, and later when he was informed of it he said: "Why did you not inform me of her death!" \(It seemed as if people \[Abu Hurayrah says\] had underestimated the matter\).](#)

Q 3: What is the ruling on washing, shrouding, offering the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer and burial of a woman who dies while married to a non-Muslim?

A 3: First: It is impermissible for a Muslim woman to marry a non-Muslim. In this regard, Allah (Exalted be He) stated: ﴿And give not \(your daughters\) in marriage to Al-Mushrikûn till they believe \(in Allâh Alone\)﴾ He (Glorified be He) also stated: ﴿then if you ascertain that they are true believers, send them not back to the disbelievers. They are not lawful \(wives\) for the disbelievers nor are the disbelievers lawful \(husbands\) for them.﴾ Moreover, a woman who embraces Islam while married to a non-Muslim has to immediately separate from him.

Second: A Muslim woman who dies while married to a non-Muslim must be washed and shrouded, Janazah Prayer must be offered for her, and she must be buried in a Muslim cemetery.

Fatwa no. 14292

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the prophets.
To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the question submitted to His Eminence, the Grand Mufty, by the Head of the High Court in Jeddah, and referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars. The question for His Eminence reads as follows:

Attached is the letter from the Assistant Deputy of Municipal Affairs in Jeddah, no. 406, dated 7/10/1411A.H., in which he inquires about the proper Shar`y (Islamically lawful) method of preparing for mass burial of the dead in cases of emergencies. Given that the matter is very important, I have sought the answer and guidance from Your Eminence. Kindly benefit us. We ask Allah to maintain the safety of our countries and of all Muslim countries. We also ask Allah to prolong your life, help you do righteous deeds, and grant you success. May Allah safeguard you.

Having studied the Fatwa request, the Committee answered that it is Mashru` (Islamically prescribed) that every dead person be buried in a hole, as is the Muslim practice, following the guidance of the Prophet (peace be upon him). However, in critical circumstances, such as during wartime or epidemics, or in situations where there is a huge death toll and it is difficult to dig a separate grave for each one of the dead, it is permissible to bury more than one person in one grave out of necessity. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) buried two or three of the people killed in the Battle of Uhud in one grave, placing the one who had memorized the greatest amount of Qur'an in the direction of Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer). It was reported in the Musnad (Hadith compilation) and Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) (that the Ansar (Helpers, inhabitants of Madinah who supported the Prophet, may Allah be pleased with them) came to the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) on the Day of Uhud and said: "We have been afflicted with wounds and fatigue. What do you command us to do?" He (peace be upon him) said: "Dig graves, make them wide, bury two or three in a single grave, and put first the one who learnt the Qur'an most".) Al-Tirmidhy said: "It is Hasan Sahih (a Hadith that stands at a higher level than a mere Hasan Hadith, but at a bit lower level than Sahih)."

Fatwa no. 17966

Q: On Friday, 15/3/1416 A.H., one of our relatives was buried in the cemetery of Al-Ta'if, which is adjacent to the Masjid (mosque) of Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him). We noticed that the graves there - 2 meters long, 70 centimeters wide, and 1.2 meters high - are hollows inside the earth and are built with bricks.

My question is: What is the opinion of Your Eminence concerning these graves, given that they do not have Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave toward the direction faced for Prayer)? The cemetery in question is small and very old. Wondering how such graves, which are relatively large, accommodate a large number of dead persons buried over many years, we have been informed by three workers there that approximately two years after a person is buried, their bones are collected and reburied in a hole in the same grave, which is leveled anew so that another dead person can be buried in it. The workers find this method much easier than digging anew and building with bricks.

A: It is obligatory to bury each dead person in a single grave with a Lahd, which is to be covered with a brick, or the like. It is not permissible to bury a group of dead persons in one grave unless it is too difficult to bury each person separately, due to having a huge number of deaths resulting from emergency circumstances, such as an epidemic, genocide, etc. In this case, two or three persons may be buried in one grave, with the more practicing Muslim of them being placed closest to the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer). This is what the Prophet (peace be upon him) did with the deaths of Uhud. As for exhuming graves sometime after the dead has been buried, collecting the remains in one side of the grave, and then using the grave to bury another dead person, this act is not permissible at all.

Q: Singapore is a small country with a very limited area that is used mostly for establishing buildings and factories. Therefore, the Singaporean government encourages citizens to burn the dead. However, this does not apply to Muslims since they must bury their dead.

The government is now reconsidering the limited area of the Muslim cemetery in Singapore in the long run. In this regard, the government would like to know more about the possibility of frequent use of the grounds for burial and about the traditions and Sunan (actions following the example of the Prophet) regarding the burial process.

A: According to the Shari`ah (Islamic law), the basic principle in this regard is that a Muslim should be buried in an independent grave if possible, in the sense that no one else who dies simultaneously or subsequently should be buried with them. Another basic principle is that it is impermissible to disinter the bodies from multiple graves to put them in a mass tomb.

If this is unfeasible due to limited space or to the considerable difficulty in burying each dead person independently, because of increasing death rates as a result of plagues, mass murders or the like, it is then permissible to bury more than one dead body in one grave.

Q 1: We live on agricultural land and when we dig even ten centimeters for a grave, the soil becomes clayey and wet. Then, when we dig deep, water comes out. Therefore, we decided to build graves above ground, place dead people therein and then seal them. And as more than one body are put into the grave, we put nothing over bodies already interred bodies. What is the ruling on this practice? Besides, at the time of building the graves we used to pray to the direction of the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer) based on our inference (to detect its direction). Later on, we used a compass to discover the right direction, and built a Masjid (mosque), but we found out that the graves are built to the direction of the Qiblah and when the deceased person was placed on their right side in the grave, their faces would not be set to the direction of the Qiblah. Rather, their faces are directed eastward, knowing that their faces can be turned to the direction of the Qiblah if we lay them on their backs with their heads slightly raised. What should we do? Also, it is worth mentioning that in this way the deceased will be interred with its legs being entered into the grave before the head. As such, what is the ruling on those who had been buried in the first manner?

A 1: It is obligatory regarding this matter is to place the deceased in secure graves (without degradation), and then cover them as best as possible. Here, it is only commendable to direct their bodies to the direction of the Qiblah; so, there is no problem if there is a slight deflection from it. Finally, the bodies of the deceased persons who had been buried with their faces turned aside from the exact direction of the Qiblah should not be shifted.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 20372

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has examined the Fatwa request submitted to His Eminence the General Mufti by His Excellency the Secretary of Riyadh. The request was referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 2280, dated 26/3/1419 A.H. His Excellency requested considering the suggestion submitted to him by Eng. A. A. S. to the effect of replacing sun-dried bricks put on the Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer) with earthen bricks that resist moisture and water so that the grave will not collapse over the dead due to rainfall. Following is a statement of this suggestion:

Your Excellency the Secretary of Riyadh, As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!) In reference to:1- The collapses that took place in Al-Nasim cemetery during the last rain season due to rainfall that continued for so long causing the cave-in of more than half of the new graves in the cemetery. This occurred in more than six thousand graves, which proves the impracticality of the recent burial method.2- In reference to Mr. M. R.'s statement on the issue of proposing suggestions to solve the problem, the following is my suggestion. Through examining the location at that time, it was found that the collapses were caused either by the moisture's access to the sun-dried bricks put on the side of graves, or by the collapse of both the sun-dried bricks and the Lahd simultaneously. As it is totally unacceptable to have graves collapse on the remains of relatives and loved ones, there are alternatives that may solve the problem and safeguard the honorable status of the dead. Earthen bricks, that are actually made of earth too will allow us to do without sun-dried bricks and make burial easier. In this regard, it should be born in mind that many areas contain noncohesive and sometimes completely sandy soil, which obliges people to build underground rooms. In fact, earthen bricks can meet these requirements. An earthen unit is quarter-cylinder shaped with a radius of 50 cm and is 2 cm thick surrounding the body from both sides and from above. Regarding sandy areas, an earthen unit should be half-cylinder with a radius of 60 cm surrounding the body from both sides and from above. (Please see the attached chart). Based on this design, earthen bricks have the following advantages:

1- They do not collapse if hit by moisture.

2- They protect the dead body against the collapse of the Lahd, as they encircle the body from above.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 289)

3- They protect the graves against being disinterred by wandering animals.

- 4- They allow widening the opening of the Lahd, which makes placing the body easier.
- 5- The grave will need no more than four units instead of the eight of currently used sun-dried bricks, and they do not require a great amount of mud to plug up openings and thus they make the burial faster.
- 6- They do not corrode regardless of the passing of time, which makes it possible to move the grave in future, if need be. If this meets your approval, could you please refer it to the respected scholars bearing in mind that we are ready to build actual samples. Best regards.

Having examined the Fatwa request, the Committee gave the answer that the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is to plug up the Lahd with sun-dried bricks made of strong pure clay. This has been the practice followed by Muslims since the generation of the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet; may Allah be pleased with them all) and subsequent Salaf (righteous predecessors) generations up till now. Moreover, the Sahabah (may Allah be pleased with them all) did the same with the grave of the Prophet (peace be upon him). To this effect, it is authentically narrated that they, out of unanimous agreement, made a Lahd for him and set up nine sun-dried bricks over it. Therefore, Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqas (may Allah be pleased with him) was reported to have said during his last illness: \(Make a Lahd for me in the side of the grave and set up bricks over me as was done with the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\).\) (Related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih [Authentic Hadith Book]). Therefore, Ibn Qudamah said in his book "Al-Mughny", "We have stated that (covering the Lahd with) sun-dried bricks or mat is Mustahab (desirable)". Moreover, Al-Khallal said,

"Abu `Abdullah, i.e. Imam Ahmad (may Allah be merciful to him), preferred using sun-dried bricks. In any case, he considered it Makruh (reprehensible) to use wood. In fact, most narrations from Abu `Abdullah recommend the use of sun-dried bricks giving it priority over wood based on the preceding quote from Sa`d. In addition, Ibrahim Al-Nakh`i said that they (the Salaf) preferred using sun-dried bricks. Accordingly, it is preferable to keep the Lahd plugged up with sun-dried bricks following the example of the Sahabah (may Allah be pleased with them all) and subsequent Salaf generations. Bearing in mind that the Sahabah did so with regard to the Prophet's grave, it goes without saying that Allah chooses for His Prophet only the best. Also, sun-dried bricks are cheaper, easily manufactured and available at all times. With regard to the fact that some graves collapsed, this was due to either the low level of the grave site and consequently bad flood drainage or to defects in the very soil from which the bricks were made. No doubt, if sun-dried bricks are made carefully of a fine, solid and pure clay (that does not contain sand), they will be highly resistant to soil erosion, especially if mixed with materials causing it to be stronger and cohesive, such as straw or the like. Muslims have continued to apply this method, and their graves have remained intact one century after another up till now. As for suggesting using earthen bricks to cover the Lahd, it runs counter to the Sunnah applied by the Sahabah and the practice followed by subsequent Salaf generations. Therefore, claiming that earthen bricks may not corrode should not be taken for granted. For, actual facts tell us that they easily break and split if exposed to heavy weight pressure. They are also different from sun-dried bricks in that they are costly and are at times not easily attainable.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18449

Q 2: In Al-Harth province, in Jizan area, we bury the dead by scattering earth directly over the body without making a barrier between the Lahd (crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction for Prayer) and the grave. Is this correct? We asked one of the people who lead Prayers and supervise burials, and he replied that these measures are correct. We are in dire need for the correct ruling. May Allah bless you!

A 2: It is impermissible to scatter dust over the body of a dead person without placing him in a Lahd and the like and sealing the body inside with bricks, stones and the like, except when necessary.

May Allah grant you success! May peace be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Q: Some of the residents of Al-Saqa` village in Biljirshy donated a sum of money for the building of graves, and they were thus built as follows: A big hole was dug in firm clayey soil which was then partitioned into several graves by erecting four walls of red bricks for each grave. After leveling the land, a casting of cement and iron was poured over them and an opening was made from the side where the body of a deceased was to be entered. Up until today, the graves are still unused. So, what is the ruling regarding them; is it permissible to bury the dead in these graves or are we to demolish them and restore them to their former state? Please note that we used to dig graves in that solid clayey soil and make Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for prayer), and cover it with bricks and mud and finally dust. We hope that you guide us to that you deem best.

A: If the case is indeed as is mentioned in the question; that the land is firm and valid for digging and burying with no need for building, then you must make the graves as you formerly used to do by digging individual graves with separate Lahds since this is what conforms to the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet).

May Allah grant you success! May peace be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 16386

Q 3: If I received a stranger in my house and he died therein, do I have to bury him?

A 3: It is obligatory for the Muslim to bury his Muslim fellow if the latter dies and there is none else to take care of his burial process from among his relatives, after washing him and putting him in the burial shroud, because this is a collective obligation.

Q 2: Are there certain times that are Mustahab (desirable) for burying the dead? Do these times correspond to the times of the daily prayers?

A 2: It is permissible to bury the dead at any time other than the three specific times during which burying is forbidden, which are: the time when the sun emerges and rises, when the sun is in the middle of the sky and until the afternoon, and just before the sun sets.

Q 3: Is it permissible that a Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer) be made from casting with steel, and is it permissible to use bricks?

A 3: It is permissible to fortify the Lahd with the usual building materials if it is feared that it may cave in over the deceased.

Fatwa no. 20158

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 295)

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the letter submitted to His Eminence the Grand Mufti by His Eminence the head of the Municipality of Turayf Governorate under no. 2669 on 23/11/1418 A.H. The letter has been submitted to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 7196 on 30/11/1418 A.H. The head of the Municipality asked for the legal ruling on using bitumen in building the Shaq (a rectangular hole in the bottom of a grave in which the body is buried); he namely said in his letter:

With reference to the note of His Eminence the Judge of Turayf Court no. 1235 dated 10/11/1418 A.H. which is based on our letter no. 2516 dated 04/11/1418 A.H. regarding the legal ruling on using bitumen in building the Shaq in graves. His Eminence has recommended that we ask the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' in Riyadh about this legal ruling.

Accordingly, we would like Your Eminence to give us a legal ruling on whether it is permissible to do this, as it is difficult in some places to make Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer) of mud bricks because of the non-coherence of mud. Due to mud's fast breakability, the difficulty of transferring it from one place to another and the impossibility of storing and protecting it from weather conditions gives us the problem.

The letter from the head of the Municipality has been referred to His Eminence the Judge of Turayf Court as per letter no. 5568/2 dated 01/12/1418 A.H. to form a committee consisting of members from the Court. The said governorate, the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV) will examine the said graves and prepare a detailed report about them. The answer was given as per letter no. 39 on 07/01/1419 A.H., attached with a report from the Committee which examined the site of the graveyard. The report states:

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets. On Wednesday, 03/01/1419 A.H., based on the letter sent by His Eminence the Judge of Turayf Court under no. 1420 on 22/12/1418 A.H. His letter is based on the letter sent by the Grand Mufti of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, the Chairman of Council of Senior Scholars and the Departments of Scholarly Research and Ifta' under no. 25568 on 01/12/1418 A. H. It concerns forming a Committee consisted of members from the governorate, the court, the CPVPV and the Municipality of Turayf to prepare a report clarifying the causes why it is not possible to make Lahds for some graves and why the mud bricks are not coherent, etc. A meeting was held by the said Committee which consists of:

- 1- Fahd ibn `Ashwy Al-`Anzy, the representative of the governorate.
- 2- Humaydan ibn `Aly Al-`Anzy, the representative of the Court.
- 3- Muhammad ibn Matar Al-Hazimy, the representative of CPVPV.
- 4- Jabir Al-Adham Al-Ruwayly, the representative of the Municipality.

The members of the Committee went to the graveyard located in the northern district of the governorate and the committee found the following:

First, we do not see a thing that prevents making Lahds.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 297)

Second, the non-coherence of mud bricks is attributed to two reasons, these are:

- 1- The little amount of straw in mud bricks;
2. The smallness of the brick blocks.

We recommend putting these two reasons into account on making mud bricks in the future.

Third, we see that in case of the incapability of making Lahds or using mud bricks in building in the future, it is permissible to use bitumen in building Shaq in graves.

Accordingly, the minutes of this meeting has been written down. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions.

After the [Permanent] Committee studied the question in hand, it issued this fatwa to the effect that so long as it is possible to make Lahds in graves according to what has been mentioned in the report above, they should be made, because this is the preferable in this concern. As for the breakage of mud bricks, this can be treated by choosing a good type of clay and mixing it and with straw so that the blocks will be strong and coherent. A solid land for burial should also be chosen to be used as a graveyard.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 17880

Q 4: How should the dead be buried: The Maliki scholars believe that the dead person should be led from the front after putting him on the dust of the Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer). They also believe it is permissible to lead him from any direction, whether from the front, right or left. On the other hand, the Hanbali scholars believe it impermissible to lead the dead person from any direction other than the right side because that was what the Prophet (peace be upon him) did.

Moreover, the Maliki scholars put the dust of the Lahd over the grave after filling it with dust, whereas the Hanbali scholars believe this to be a Bid`ah (innovation in religion).

The Maliki scholars also take three handfuls of dust from the front and put it in the grave while reciting certain Ayahs (Qur'anic verses), like Ayat-ul-Kursy (the Qur'anic Verse of Allah's Chair, Surah Al-Baqarah, 2:255), before putting the dust on the dead person. However, the Hanbali scholars believe this to be a Bid`ah.

In addition, the Maliki scholars make Du`a' (supplication) for the dead person while the callers are raising their hands. After leaving the grave, they make Du`a' for the dead again while raising their hands. The Hanbali scholars, however, see this as a Bid`ah.

On the seventh day, the Maliki scholars hold a gathering for the sake of the dead person to recite the Qur'an and give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) by the dead person's family. They believe this to be obligatory and they specify the seventh day for it, whereas the Hanbali scholars believe this to be a groundless Bid`ah.

A 4: The dead person should be led to his grave from any direction that is easy to lead him from. It is better to lead him from the front of the grave because of the Hadith that is mentioned in this regard. The corpse should be placed in the Lahd on his right side facing the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer). The Lahd should then be blocked with bricks or the like, and then the dust should be heaped on it and should be raised above the ground level by one hand span, as is reported in the Sunnah from the Prophet (peace be upon him). In this way, there will be a mark indicating the existence of a grave and thus it will not be treated improperly. Nothing of the Qur'an should be recited at the time of the dead person's burial as this is a Bid`ah, since it is not reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him).

It is Mustahab (desirable) to stand by the grave dead after their burial to make Du`a' for them and ask Allah to forgive them and make them firm. This is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). It is impermissible, however, to hold a gathering after one's death to recite the Qur'an and give Sadaqahs on behalf of the dead person. What is permissible is to make Du`a' for the dead person and give charity on their behalf without holding any gathering or specifying any time for this. For, this is considered a Bid`ah since nothing of the sort is reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). It is obligatory for the Muslims, in general, and the scholars, in particular, to derive the rulings from the Qur'an and the Sunnah, and not from the Madh-habs (School of Jurisprudence), because Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿But no, by your Lord, they can have no Faith, until they make you (O Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم) judge in all disputes between them, and find in themselves no resistance against your decisions, and accept (them) with full submission.﴾ Allah (Glorified be He) also says: ﴿And whatsoever the Messenger (Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم) gives you, take it; and whatsoever he forbids you, abstain (from it).﴾ Again, He (Exalted be He) says: ﴿(And) if you differ in anything amongst yourselves, refer it to Allâh and His Messenger (صلى الله عليه وسلم), if you believe in Allâh and in the Last Day. That is better and more suitable for final determination.﴾ As for common Muslims, they should ask scholars about what is difficult for them to understand, and scholars, in turn, should give them Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) according to the Qur'an and Sunnah, applying the previously mentioned Ayahs and the Hadiths where the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Whoever obeys me, obeys Allah, and whoever disobeys me, disobeys Allah ...﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) said as well: ﴿'My entire Ummah will enter Paradise except the one who refuses'. Then it was said, 'O Messenger of Allah, who will refuse?' He said, 'Whoever obeys me will enter Paradise, and whoever disobeys me is the one who refuses'﴾ There are many other Ayahs and Hadiths in this regard.

The first, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, eighth and twelfth questions of Fatwa no. 17883

Q 1: What is the ruling of the Shari`ah (Islamic law) on putting a dead person, after being shrouded, in a coffin and then in the grave?

A 1: The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is not to bury the dead person in a coffin, because neither the Prophet (peace be upon him) nor the Companions after him did that. However, what is prescribed is to wrap the dead person in three white garments and put him in a Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer) in his grave.

Q 3: What is the ruling of the Shari`ah on burying spouses in one grave if they died together?

A 3: Burying spouses in one grave is impermissible except when needed like in a case where there are many dead people because of a disease, battle or the like. In such a case, it is permissible to bury two, three or more in one pit as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did with those who were killed in the Battle of Uhud.

Q 4: What is the ruling of the Shari`ah on digging up the wife's grave to bury her husband beside her if he requested that in his will? What are the cases in which the Shari`ah permits digging out a grave?

A 4: It is impermissible to dig out the wife's grave for the sake of burying her beside her husband even if he requested that in his will.

Q 5: What is the evidence from the Qur'an and Sunnah that the dead hear the noise made by the shoes of those attending the funeral when walking away and that they can see those who visit them? If that is the case, what are the preferable times for visiting the graves, especially the times when the dead can see those who visit them?

A 5: It was authentically reported in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) that the dead person hears the noise made by the shoes of those attending his funeral after burying him when they are leaving. It was reported from Anas (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿When one is put in his grave and his friends leave him, and indeed he can hear the sound of their shoes when leaving, two angels come to him and sit him down. They say to him: "What did you used to say about that man \(Muhammad \(peace be upon him\)\)?" As for the believer, he will say: "I testify that he is the slave of Allah and His Messenger." It will be said to him: "Look at your seat in Hell-fire,

Allah has replaced it for you with a seat in Paradise and he will see both of them.﴾ Qatadah said: He mentioned that his grave is then widened for him, then he returned to the Hadith of Anas and said: ﴿Whereas the hypocrite and the disbeliever will be asked: "What did you used to say about this man?" He will reply: "I don't know; I used to say what the people used to say." So they will say to him: "Neither did you know nor did you take the guidance \(by reciting the Qur'an\)." Then he will be hit with iron hammers once, that he will send a cry so loud that everything near him will hear it, except the Jinn and human beings.)

There is no text in the Shari`ah indicating a specific time for visiting the dead. Rather, the Prophet's (peace be upon him) command of visiting the graves for the sake of remembering death and deriving a lesson is general. He (peace be upon him) said: ﴿I forbade you before from visiting the graves, but now you may visit them for they remind you of the Hereafter.﴾

As far as we know, there is no text reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) indicating that the dead can see those who visit them. This, in principle, does not exist since there is no supporting evidence. Moreover, the dead cannot hear what the living say in principle unless there is specific proof of that like the Hadith of Anas that was mentioned previously. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿but you cannot make hear those who are in graves.﴾ He (Glorified be He) also says: ﴿Verily, you cannot make the dead to hear \(i.e. benefit them and similarly the disbelievers\).﴾

Q 6: What is the evidence from Allah's Book and the Sunnah of His Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) regarding the permissibility of a husband washing the body of his deceased wife or vice versa?

A 6: It is permissible for each of the spouses to wash the body of the other upon his/her death.

This is based on the following: 1) It was recorded by Imam Malik in his Al-Mutta' that Abu Bakr (may Allah be pleased with him) made a will that upon his death he should be washed by his wife Asma'; 2) It was recorded by Imam Ahmad on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said: "If I had known beforehand about my affair what I found out later, none would have washed Allah's Messenger except his wives." 3) Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated that `Aly (may Allah be pleased with him) washed his wife Fatimah (may Allah be pleased with her); 4) Sa`id narrated that both Jabir and `Abdur-Rahman ibn Al-Aswad asked their wives to wash them upon their death; 5) The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said to `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her): "If you were to die before me, I would wash you..." (Recorded by Ahmad and Ibn Majah and was ranked as a Sahih (authentic) Hadith by Ibn Hibban.

Q 8: Upon leaving the body, does the soul of man ascend to heaven? In other words, where does the soul reside after leaving one's body?

Also, is it the soul that is punished alone, or is it to be returned to one's body so that a sinner may be punished both physically and spiritually?

Does the punishment in the grave continue until the Last Day, or is the punishment in the Barzakh (period between death and the Resurrection) temporary, thereafter the sinner is to be left without punishment until meeting his final reckoning on the Day of Resurrection? Is it that whenever Allah wills to punish him, He returns his soul into his body so that he is punished in his grave?

What are the type of sins for which one is punished in his grave? If one is punished in his grave for a certain sin one committed in the worldly life, will he be punished again on the Last Day for the same sin, or does the punishment he received in his grave lighten the punishment he deserves on the Last Day? Please explain the truth of these matters for us. May Allah grant you success!

In summary, my question centers on the abode of the soul after one's death? What is the place wherein the souls settle? What are the evidences from the Qur'an and the Sunnah proving that there is punishment in the grave and explaining its manner? Please explicate this matter for us in as much detail as possible, may Allah reward you. people are so anxious to know the answer of the question about one's resting in the grave and the settlement of the soul in the Barzakh.

They always wonder: Is it that once the soul leaves the body, one is subject to being questioned by the angels even if he is not buried in a grave, or does his questioning only commences after burial? I ask this question since one may die alone in a desert without there being anyone to shroud and bury him, or perhaps a person may fall a prey to wild animals like lions and tigers, etc, or one may drown in the sea and fall prey to the whales, or one may burn and become ashes? How are these people, who meet such a death, to be questioned and punished? Or are they neither questioned nor punished?

Many times, we hear that a light or fire came out from such-and-such grave. Sometimes some people say: We heard the person buried in such-and-such grave crying out due to the severity of his punishment. This is according to their interpretation of the incident. What is the reality of all this in the light of Shari`ah (Islamic law)? Please explain the truth of this matter for us. May Allah grant you success!

A 8: Upon leaving the body, the soul of a believer ascends to heaven and the most elect of each heaven will then see him to the next heaven, until the soul is brought to the seventh heaven, where Allah (Exalted be He) will command the angels: ("Send it back to earth, for I have created it from earth, and into it the soul shall be returned, and from the earth I shall bring out all souls once again." The soul will then be joined with its body, and two angels will come to man, sit him up and ask him: "Who is your Lord?" He will say: "Allah is my Lord." They will ask him: "What is your religion?" He will say: "My religion is Islam." They will ask him: "What do you say about this man (Prophet Muhammad) who was sent to you?" He will say: "He is the Messenger of Allah." They will ask him: "And what proof do you have for it?" He will say: "I read the Book of Allah (the Holy Qur'an), and had faith and belief in him." Then, a caller (in Allah's name) will herald from heaven: "My servant has said the truth. Therefore, furnish his grave from the furnishing of Paradise, and let him wear from (the clothes of) Paradise, and open a door for him to Paradise." So he is given from the tranquillity and fragrance of Paradise, and his grave will be expanded for him as far as his sight can reach.

Then, a man, with a handsome face and handsome clothes and whose scent is pleasant, will attend him, saying: "Rejoice in the glad tidings with that which pleases you. This is the Day which you were promised." The dead will then ask: "Who are you; for yours is the face that heralds the good news?" The visitor will reply: "I am your good deeds." He will say: "O Lord! Hasten with the commencement of the Hour, so I can return to my family and my wealth."

As for the disbeliever, his soul ascends to the heavens whose gates will be closed before it and it will be returned to the earth. His soul will be returned back to his body, and two angels will come to him, sit him up and ask him: "Who is your Lord?" He will say: "Oh, oh! I do not know." They will ask him: "What is your religion?" and he will say: "Oh, oh! I do not know." They will ask him: "What do you say about this man (Prophet Muhammad) who was sent to you?" He will say: "Oh, oh, I do not know!" A caller (in Allah's name) will herald from heaven: "My servant has lied, so furnish his grave with the furnishing of the Fire and open a door for him to the Fire." He will find its heat and fierce hot wind. And his grave will be tightened to him, until his bones crush each other. Then, a man with a dreadful face, wearing dreadful clothes and with a disgusting smell emitting from him will attend him, saying: "Receive the glad tidings with that which will displease you! This is the Day that you were promised." The dead will then ask: "And who are you, for yours is the face that brings about evil?" He will say: "I am your evil deeds." He will therefore cry out: "O, my Lord! Do not commence the Hour!" (Recorded by Imam Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'i as well as others).

It was authentically reported from the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) that the souls of the believers wander wherever they wish in Paradise in the form of birds that rest on the trees of Paradise until they return to their bodies on the Last Day. As for the souls of the martyrs, they live in the bodies of green birds who wander wherever they wish in Paradise and then return to their nests in chandeliers beneath the Throne.

With regard to the punishment and blessings in one's grave, this is true as proven by the Hadith mentioned above as well as other Sahih (authentic) Hadiths. About the people of Pharaoh, Allah (Most Exalted be He) says: ﴿The Fire, they are exposed to it, morning and afternoon. And on the Day when the Hour will be established \(it will be said to the angels\): "Cause Fir'aun's \(Pharaoh\) people to enter the severest torment!"﴾

The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) ordered that after Tashahhud (testification recited in the sitting position in the second/ last unit of Prayer) Muslims should seek Allah's refuge from the punishment in the grave, where he (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: ﴿When one of you utters tashahhud \(in prayer\) he should seek refuge with Allah from four \(trials\) and should thus implore Allah saying: "O Allah! I seek refuge with You from the torment of the Hell, from the torment of the grave, from the trial of life

and death and from the evil of the trial of Al-Masih-ul-Dajjal \(the Antichrist\).﴾ The punishment and blessings in the grave affect both the soul and body.

Q 12: Is it an act of Sunnah that the pubic hair of a deceased person should be removed, whether it is a man or a woman, and should the same thing be done with their armpit hair? Or is it not permissible to remove this hair, even if it might be thick and dense, and so it should be left. I ask this question since I heard that it is a custom to shave the hair existing in the mentioned places of the body of the deceased. Please explain the truth of this matter for us. May Allah grant you success!

A 12: It is obligatory to cover the `Awrah (private parts of the body that must be covered in public) of human beings, whether they are alive or dead, male or female. It is not permissible to shave the pubic hair of a deceased person, since this requires uncovering their `Awrah, with no need for this. It is also not permissible to pluck the hair of a deceased's armpit, since there is no proof on this.

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family and his Companions!

Q: It has become common in our country that upon the completion of the burial of a deceased person, people would not stand around the grave supplicating to Allah to keep him steadfast, as stated in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet). Rather, they supplicate to Allah for him while standing far away from the grave. What is the ruling of our wise Shari`ah (Islamic law) on this phenomenon?

Is it permissible to walk through the graves while wearing sandals or shoes, knowing that the graves are dug into the earth without a Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer)? Is it permissible to follow the funeral wherein people commit some Bid`ahs (innovations in religion), such as raising the grave three spans or more above the ground? If a fetus, who is about eight months old, dies in his mother's womb, should Janazah (Funeral) Prayer be offered over him, and should he be washed and have all the other ceremonies done for adult Muslims?

A: The Sunnah is that upon burying a Muslim deceased, Muslims should stand by his grave supplicating to Allah to forgive him and keep him steadfast when he is questioned, as recorded in the Sahih (authentic) Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him). It is not permissible to follow the funeral wherein people commit Bid`ahs unless one can remove or forbid the Munkar (that which is unacceptable or disapproved of by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect). As for a stillborn baby, if he has completed four months or more, he is to be washed, wrapped in a shroud, and buried in the graveyard.

Q 8: What is the ruling on burying the dead at nightfall?

A: It is not permissible to bury the dead at sunrise, sunset or when the sun reaches its meridian. `Uqbah ibn `Amir (may Allah be pleased with him) stated: \(There are three hours during which the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) forbade us to pray or bury our dead: When the sun begins to rise until it is fully up, when the sun is at its height at midday until it passes the meridian, and when the sun inclines to setting until

Q 1: In our country, graves are designed in such a way that their length, not width, is in the direction of the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer), meaning that when the deceased are placed in them, their feet are in the direction of the Qiblah. The people claim that when the dead are questioned, the two angels will sit them up, so that their faces will be in the direction of the Qiblah. Guide us, may Allah reward you with the best, whether this way of burying is correct or not, as it is in contradiction with the way followed in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. If this is not permissible, what should we do, as all graves are designed in this manner?

A: According to the Shari`ah (Islamic law), the deceased is to be placed in the grave on their right side and the head is in the direction of the Qiblah, for this is what was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). Therefore, whatever contradicts this way is not Mashru` (Islamically permissible) and hence should be given up.

Q: The municipality has resolved to replace the mud bricks of the graves with cement blocks, because they have been damaged by rain and sun and are spoiled while being transferred. As for cement, it is better and more useful. We hope you will guide us concerning the permissibility of using cement instead of mud bricks.

A: It is better to use mud bricks in building graves, for this is what was done by Muslims, as they hated using tiles and whatever is made by fire. Accordingly, it is better to continue using mud bricks and not to replace them with cement.

Q: Some Muslims are puzzled about using bricks of iron and cement to close a grave after burial. They see it reprehensible because these bricks are baked in kilns. I have searched in relevant books for evidence that supports this reprehensibility, but in vain. Therefore, I hope Your Eminence will tell us the ruling on the use of bricks of iron and cement in closing a grave, and whether it is permissible to keep on using it because it is easier for people or should they use adobes to close a grave instead? Take into account that this is the undertakers' business.

A: If there are available strong adobes, it will take priority over the cement bricks in closing a Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer). However, one may use cement bricks when adobes are unavailable or unaffordable because there is no proof that prohibits the use of cement bricks.

Q 1: A woman gave birth to baby who died when it was six months old. It was buried beside a farm under a sandy mountain, but two years later a flood swept him away; is she sinful for this?

A: It is obligatory to bury the dead in solid ground to avoid floods and preserve their remains. Loose land is an unsuitable place for burying the baby, as you make it liable to be swept away by floods. However, if you can find any of its bones and remains, they should be wrapped in a piece of cloth and buried in a public cemetery. The person who did this to the baby should repent to Allah (Glorified be He) for this action.

The father put the baby on the bed, covered him and left the hospital with the mother who was wailing miserably and mourning the death of her son. The father informed the hospital of the death of their son and the hospital said it would undertake burying him. Guide us, may Allah benefit you!

A: If the hospital fulfilled its promise and undertook washing, shrouding and burying the deceased baby, there is no harm in this. Otherwise, the father is sinful and has to repent to Allah (Glorified be He) from the evil act he committed.

Q 1: During their terminal illness, some people make their will to be buried in the city or village where they were brought up. What should the guardians do? Is it obligatory for them to execute this will, or is it only desirable? And if it is not permissible to execute it, is there a limited distance beyond which it is not permissible to move the deceased? Also, is it permissible for children to move their dead parents who gasped their last breath in their own towns over a distance of one hundred km, to be buried in the towns where their children live so that it is easier for them to visit and supplicate for their parents while standing before their grave?

A: Even if the deceased willed to be buried in a specific town, their will is not binding, as the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is to prepare the deceased for burial as soon as possible and then bury them in the public graveyard of the town in which they died. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(It is not advisable that the corpse of a Muslim should remain withheld among his family\) (Related by Abu Dawud in his Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes)) In another place he (peace be upon him) said: \(Make haste with the funeral; if the dead person was good, it is a good state to which you are sending him; but if they were otherwise it is an evil of which you are ridding yourselves.\) By and large, there are many pieces of evidence that urge Muslims to hasten to bury the dead people.

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has examined the question submitted to the General Mufty by the Judge of Mohail Asir Court that was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 6545 on 06/11/1419 A.H. Following is the wording of the questioner:

The police administration in our locality often sends inquiries relating to car accidents in which all the passengers die and their bodies get mutilated and mixed up with the car's debris. They apply to us for permission to bury the car with the torn off body pieces which the police fail to extract. They aim to preserve the sanctity of the deceased. Yet, these cars may be stolen and it is not known from whom they have been stolen or who is the stealer from among the victims and by burial of the car, the right of the owner will be wasted. We hope that Your Eminence could provide us with a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslims scholar) to guide the police either to bury or not to bury the mentioned stolen cars. May Allah safeguard you! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

After the Committee examined the Fatwa request, their answer was that it is obligatory to extract the torn off pieces of the dead victims from the wreckage of the car, collect and wrap them in pieces of cloth, offer Janazah (Funeral) Prayer for them and then bury them. This applies unless there are some torn off pieces that cannot be extracted due to their being mixed with the iron parts; the obligation is waived in this case because Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ As for the stolen car, it must be given back to its rightful owner.

Fatwa no. 21323

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.
To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' examined the question submitted to the General Mufty by the General Manager of the hospitals in light of the letter from the Director General of Health Affairs in Al-Qasim based on the letter of the General Supervisor of King Saud Hospital in `Unayzah that was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with the No. of 15 on 03/01/1421 A.H. Following is the wording of the questioner:

In reference to Fatwa no. 8099 dated 21/05/1405 A.H. issued by the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' regarding the disposal of surgically removed human parts which reads: We forward to you the question memorandum received from the Manager of the religious affairs branch in the western district no. 8 dated 11/01/1405 A.H. We hope that Your Eminence could inform us of the Shar`y (Islamic legal) ruling on this issue, because there are many hospitals under the Ministry of Defense and Aviation in which similar cases occur. They ask for a ruling on how to dispose of surgically removed human parts since the used disposal procedure is to burn these parts.

The inquired-about parts are usually the following:

1. Amputated limbs due to accidents.
2. Human body parts removed not because of a disease, but for hygienic reasons (the removed foreskin in male circumcision).
3. The placenta that is cut after delivery or any dead fetus or fetal remains from an abortion.
4. Pulled-out teeth and molars or the like in dental implants.

We hope that Your Eminence can tell us the Shar`y ruling to generalize it in all hospitals of the Ministry of Defense and Aviation. May Allah grant you success!

The Committee replied as follows: It is not permissible to burn these human body parts. It is obligatory to bury them in a pure place. Regarding a dead fetus, if it is after the soul has been breathed into it, i.e. when it is four months old, it must be washed, shrouded, Janazah (Funeral) Prayer offered for it and buried in a Muslim graveyard if it is born among Muslims or born to one or two Muslim parents. But, if the miscarried fetus belongs to non-Muslim parents, it does not need to be washed, and no Janazah Prayer should be offered for it. Rather, it can be buried in its clothes or a sheet in non-Muslims graveyard.

However, some inquires have been made as to the way of implementation:

1. What exactly is meant by "a pure place"? Must it be a graveyard or can it be at any other place? What is the responsible authority that should undertake the burial process?

2. Should the burial be carried out on a daily basis or can the remains be collected and kept in the morgue refrigerator, to be buried later?

(Part No. 7; Page No. 318)

3. Do dental wastes mean pulled-out teeth and molars and the like or something else?

We hope to receive answers to these inquiries. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

The Permanent Committee has examined the problems reported by the General Manager of the hospitals with the no. of 12507/6851/26 dated 29/12/1420 A.H. based on the letter of the Director General of health affairs in Al-Qasim with the no. of 121446 12 / 45 dated 01/12/1420 A.H. concerning Fatwa no.8099 issued on 21/02/1405 A.H. by the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta` in respect of the disposal of human remains and the answer was as follows:

First: The pure place meant is that which preserves these human body parts from violation and avoids causing harm because of their offensive smell. Therefore, they should be buried in a public graveyard, which is the best course of action, or in a distant yard away from public utilities. However, if the remains belong to a non-Muslim, they should be buried in non-Muslim graveyard.

Second: The burial can be carried out on daily basis or whenever an amount is collected; this is more convenient to the performers of this task.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 319)

Third: Pulled-out teeth and molars are not included among the human body parts that must be buried, because they fall under the ruling on parts separated from the body, and do not cause any harm if not buried.

Q 7: A Muslim man, who lived in a country where there were no graveyards for Muslims, died and was buried in front of or behind his house. This was done because Muslims did not want to bury him in the graveyard with non-Muslims. What is the ruling on this? Is it permissible to offer Salah in a Masjid (mosque) where there is a grave? A: First: The basic ruling in this regard is that a Muslim should be buried in the public graveyard of Muslims. However, there is nothing wrong with burying a Muslim in his house or his own land if there is no public graveyard for Muslims.

Second: It is impermissible to offer Salah in a Masjid includes a grave; regardless whether the grave is in front of, behind or beside worshipers. Offering Salah as such is a means to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). Moreover, the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade this and cursed those who do so. It is reported in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) that `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) said that Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) stated: \(Allah's curse be on the Jews and the Christians,

as they took the graves of their prophets as places of worship.\) It is also reported in the Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book) of Muslim that Jundub ibn `Abdullah (may Allah be pleased with him) said that the Prophet (may peace be upon him) stated: \(Those who came before you took the graves of their Prophets and righteous people as places of worship. Do not take graves as places of worship – I forbid you to do that.\)

Fatwa no. 19519

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has examined the Fatwa request submitted to His Eminence the General Mufti by the Chief Physician and Nephrology Consultant of the King Khalid Hospital in Jeddah. The request, no. 1478, dated 10/3/1418 AH was referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars. Following is a statement of the doctor's question:

Over the past few years, a large quantity of the patients' body organs, which were cut off in surgical operations, accumulated in the hospital. These organs consist of limbs and parts of bowels or muscles.

It is difficult in most cases to consult the organ owners as most of them are dead. However, we have thought of burying these organs in a courtyard surrounding the hospital, which most likely will not be used for the coming few years. And Allah knows best.

Kindly, examine the issue and give us a written Fatwa on the issue, so that we might take the right decision in accordance with the ordinances of Shari'ah (Islamic law).

Having examined the Fatwa request, the Committee gives the answer that it is obligatory to bury such human body organs of Muslims in a hole inside a grave and level its surface as done with other graves, so that it may not be disinterred.

Fatwa no. 20237

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets. To proceed, the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has considered the letter submitted to His Eminence, General Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions), from the Director of the Center of Da`wah and Guidance in Dammam which was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 121, dated Rabi` Al-Awwal 3, 1419 A.H. His Eminence submitted the following question:

I refer to Your Eminence the fax of the police chief of Al-Na'iriyah governorate, no. 21/34/7697, dated Dhul-Hijjah 25, 1418 A.H., concerning his inquiry about the ruling on the following question:

A human skeleton was found on Dhul-Hijjah 20, 1417 A.H., and the investigation showed that it might belong to a Hindi or Bangladeshi person. The authorities of the Eastern Region issued its approval to bury the skeleton. Since we know nothing about his religion and whether he should be buried in the graves of Muslims or not, we referred the matter to the judge who asked that a written Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) be sought in this regard. Therefore, I refer the matter to Your Eminence and I hope you will review the issue and provide us with a Fatwa as soon as possible. May Allah grant you good health, reward you with the best and help us and all Muslims benefit from your knowledge!

Having studied your question, the Committee answered that if the case is as you mentioned, this body should be buried alone in a desert where it will not be desecrated.

Q: Is it permissible to bury a Mus-haf (copy of the Qur'an) in the grave of the deceased? What is the Islamic ruling on this?

A: It is not permissible to bury a Mus-haf in the grave with the dead. This act has no basis in Shari`ah (Islamic law) and was not practiced by the Salaf (Righteous Predecessors).

The second Question of Fatwa no. 21893

Q 2: Does one who, while attending the funeral of a Muslim brother, loses their way to the graveyard deserve the reward of attending the funeral till the end?

A: One who intends to do an act of obedience to Allah and is hindered by circumstances will receive the reward of one who does it. The same applies to one who loses the way to the graveyard.

Fatwa no. 20130

Q: I hope that Your Eminence will explain the Hadith reported on the authority of Jabir ibn `Atik (may Allah be pleased with him) who reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(Let them cry as long as he \(the dead\) is still alive; when the divine decree is made, no woman should weep.\) (Related by Imams Malik, Al-Nasa'y and Al-Hakim) What is the meaning of this Hadith?

A: The Hadith reported on the authority of Jabir ibn `Atik (may Allah be pleased with him) as mentioned above is related by Malik in Al-Muwatta' no. 513, Abu Dawud no. 3111, Al-Nasa'y and Al-Hakim. It was ranked as Sahih (authentic) by Al-Dhahaby. The Hadith indicates that the Prophet (peace be upon him) prohibited crying out of grief upon the death of some person if it is accompanied by unlawful acts such as lamentation, wailing and invoking woe and destruction on oneself and so on. This is how the Hadith is explained by Hadith explainers, such as Al-Hafizh Ibn `Abdul-Bar in his book Al-Istidhkar (8/312) and Al-Shawkany in Nayl Al-Awtar (4/154) as well as others.

As for just crying in a low voice and shedding tears of sadness, it is permissible whether before or after death based on many authentically reported Hadiths.

Lawful and unlawful acts at graveyards and upon burial

The first question of Fatwa no. 16413

Q 1: What is the ruling on reminding the soul of the deceased to say: "La ilaha illa Allah (there is no deity but Allah)" after burying them? How high above ground level should a grave be?

A: Reminding the soul of the deceased to say: "La ilaha illa Allah" after burying them is a Bid'ah (innovation in Islam) and so is not permissible. Moreover, the Hadith reported in this regard is not authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) and so it is not permissible to act upon it. However, what is Mashru' (Islamically prescribed) after the burial is to stand by the grave and ask forgiveness for the deceased. The Prophet (peace be upon him) is authentically reported to have urged this in the Hadith that reads: ﴿Seek forgiveness for your brother, and beg steadfastness for him, for he will be questioned now.﴾ As for what is Mashru' regarding how high above ground level a grave should be, it should be approximately a hand-span.

Q: My uncle died and after we buried him, a person stood, delivered a short sermon and supplicated to Allah for him. Then, he advised that a relative of the deceased sit at the head of the grave and call him by name and saying: "O so-and-so son of so-and-so! Remember that you left this world witnessing that there is no deity except Allah." He claims that these words would be heard by the deceased. What is the opinion of

Your Eminence? Is it permissible to say this? What is the best Qur'an recitations, Du'a' (supplication), etc, to be said after burial? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: Acts authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) after burial include offering Du'a', asking for Allah Forgiveness, and begging steadfastness for the deceased. `Uthman ibn `Affan (may Allah be pleased with him) reported: \(Whenever Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) finished burying the deceased, he would stay with them \(i.e. by their graves\) and say: "Seek forgiveness for your brother and beg steadfastness for him, for he will be questioned now."\) (Related by Abu Dawud in his Sunan (Hadith compilation classified by jurisprudential themes) and by Al-Hakim, who ranked it as Sahih [authentic]) As for the question about reminding the deceased to say "La ilaha illa Allah (there is no deity but Allah)" after burial, it has no basis in either the Qur'an or the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet). It is a Bid`ah (innovation in Islam). Ibn Al-Qayyim (may Allah be merciful to him) said: "The Prophet (peace be upon him) would neither recite the Qur'an nor remind the deceased to say: "La ilaha illa Allah", while standing by their graves. Moreover, the Hadith regarding this act is not authentically reported."

Q 3: Is it permissible to recite Al-Fatihah (Opening Chapter of the Qur'an) or Ya-Sin over the deceased? Should the deceased male be given precedence over the deceased female if their funerals coincide?

A: It is not Mashru` (Islamically prescribed) to recite Al-Fatihah over the deceased, for there is no evidence that supports this.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 327)

As for reciting Ya-Sin, some scholars hold that it is Mustahab (desirable) to recite it for the dying person. It was reported: \(Recite it over your dead i.e. Ya-Sin\) (Related by Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Ibn Majah, and others) It was also reported on the authority of Ma`qil ibn Yasar (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(Recite Ya-Sin over your dying persons.\) This Hadith was ranked as Da`if (weak) by Al-Daraqutny (may Allah be merciful to him) who stated: "There is no Sahih (authentic) Hadith in this regard." This was reported by Ibn Hajar in his book Al-Talkhis Al-Habir. And Allah knows best!

As for reciting Qur'an at the funeral, this is Bid`ah (innovation in Islam) that is not permissible because there is no evidence for this. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who does something that we have not ordered \(in worship\) it will be rejected.\) There is no specific order with regard to the funeral procession of men and women. When offering the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer, deceased men are to be placed before deceased women; men should be placed directly in front of the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) and women should be after the men further towards the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer), with the middle of the woman next to the head of the man.

Q 1: Abu Muhammad reported that Abu Umamah Al-Bahily reported that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(When anyone of you dies and you have leveled the earth over them, let one of you stand at the head of their grave and then say, "O So-and-so, son of So-and-so [name of the mother]," for they will hear it even if they do not reply. Then let them say a second time, "O So-and-so, son of So-and-so [name of the mother]," whereupon the deceased will sit up (in their grave). Then let them say, "O So-and-so, son of So-and-so [name of the mother]!" Upon this, the deceased will say, "Instruct me, may Allah be merciful to you," although you cannot hear it. Then let them say, "Remember the state in which you left this world, which is your witnessing that there is no Ilah (god) except Allah, and that Muhammad is His Servant and Messenger; that you are pleased with Allah as your Lord, Islam as your religion, Muhammad as your Prophet, and the Qur'an as your guide. Upon this, Munkar and Nakir (the two angels who test the faith of the dead in their graves) will withdraw saying, "Let us go; there is no need for us to tarry here, for indeed they have been prompted to say their argument." Indeed Allah will Himself defend the deceased against the two of them (angels)." A man said, "O Messenger of Allah, what if their mother's name is not known?" He replied: "Then let them affiliate them (deceased) to their mother Hawwa' (Eve)."

A: The above Hadith which urges people to remind the soul of the deceased to say: "La ilaha illa Allah (there is no deity but Allah)" was not authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him), and thus it is not permissible to act in accordance to it. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) and his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) would stand by the grave after burying a deceased and he would say to them: \(Ask Allah to forgive your brother and supplicate for him to be steadfast, because he is now being questioned.\) Accordingly, it is Mashru' (Islamically prescribed) after burying a dead person to ask forgiveness, mercy and steadfastness for them acting in accordance with the Hadith mentioned above.

Q 2: It was reported on the authority of Ibn `Abbas that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿When one of you dies, let you wrap them in a good shroud, hasten to put their will into action, dig their grave quite deep, and do not bury them beside an evil person. It was said: "O Messenger of Allah! Does a righteous person benefit in the Hereafter?" He (peace be upon him) asked: "Do they benefit in this worldly life?" They (i.e. Companions) replied in the affirmative. Hence, he (peace be upon him) said: "Likewise, they do in the Hereafter."﴾ Should the deceased be buried with righteous people?

A: A Muslim deceased should be buried in the graves of Muslims, as it is not permissible to bury them with the Kafirs (non-Muslims). The Hadith quoted above is mentioned by Al-Suyuty in his book Al-La'ali' Al-Masnu'ah Fi Al-Ahadith Al-Mawdu'ah, which contains the Hadiths Mawdu' (fabricated Hadiths) that are falsely attributed to the Prophet (peace be upon him), (Vol. 2, P.439).

Q: Please give me your Fatwa regarding putting markers on graves; how many should we place on the graves of males and how many should we place on those of females? Should we put them on the graves of males or females? Are they a Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) or are they merely used to identify graves? May Allah reward you!

A: This practice is a Sunnah and its purpose is to prevent people from stepping on graves, and - being marked - they can be known and visited. The Prophet (peace be upon him) marked the grave of `Uthman ibn Mazh`oun with two stones; one at the head of the grave and the other at its foot. Grave markers must be either of stone or other similar material and nothing is to be written on them. Males and females are equal in this respect. Allah knows best.

Q 1: What is the ruling on placing grave markers more than a cubit high and is there a limit to their height? Grave markers are pebbles placed at the head and foot of a grave to mark it. Please tell us the ruling in this regard, may Allah reward you!

A 1: It is permissible to place grave markers and the like, whether at the head or foot of graves, so that they can be known and visited. It is reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) marked the grave of `Uthman ibn Mazh`oun with a stone. However, it is not from the Sunnah (acts, sayings, or approvals of the Prophet) to place markers at excessive heights. You must be careful regarding this matter.

Q: What is the ruling of Allah and His Prophet (peace be upon him) on the unlawful graves that are raised above the ground and which are built with red bricks and reinforced concrete? What is the ruling on burying the dead therein? These graves are raised two meters above ground level and the latest Bid`ah (innovation in religion) is building two level graves.

A: If the case is as mentioned, then these graves do not conform to the guidance of the noble Shari`ah (Islamic law). It is your duty to warn those who build such graves and advise them to remove the innovations they introduced into the graves of Muslims, such as those mentioned in the question and others like plastering or inscribing on them, and putting lights, pictures and flowers. They must adhere to what is Islamically lawful in this respect. If they comply with it, then praise be to Allah for that. Otherwise, do not bury your dead in these spots and you must look for other graves that are free of these innovations and prohibitions. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade plastering, sitting on, building over, and making engravings on graves.

Q 1: What is the ruling on building graves of cement and steel? Please note that the reinforced concrete covers the top of the grave only while the rest of the structure is made of cement.

A 1: The lawful manner in building graves is to dig a hole in the ground to a depth that protects the deceased and prevents the smell of decomposition from permeating through the ground. A Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer) or Shaq (a rectangular hole in the bottom of a grave in which the body is buried) is to be made and the corpse placed in it. The grave is then sealed with bricks or the like to prevent the earth from falling on the body of the deceased.

The deceased is buried with soil being scattered over its body in the way the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to bury the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) and in the way practiced by Muslims. If the soil is too loose, then there is no objection to making walls inside the grave using the usual building materials, without distinguishing a grave from another. However, building the graves from reinforced concrete is impermissible due to the Hadith authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) by Jabir ibn `Abdullah, may Allah be pleased with them both, who said: \(Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) forbade plastering graves, sitting on them or building structures over them.\) [Reported by Imam Muslim in his Sahih].

Q: A Muslim man passed away and his brother, being a Buddhist, cremated his body and buried the ashes in a Buddhist cemetery. Some scholars in Sri Lanka said that no funeral prayer is to be offered for a person who was not washed before burial. It has been six months since the death of this man and the funeral prayer has not been yet been offered for him. What are we to do? Please inform us with evidence.

A: A disbeliever is not legally responsible for a Muslim either, during the latter's lifetime or after their death. The funeral of a Muslim is to be undertaken by Muslims, and thus the funeral conducted for this Muslim man is unlawful because it is impermissible for the Muslims to allow that Buddhist to handle the funeral rites of the Muslim man. If it is possible, his remains are to be exhumed and moved to a Muslim cemetery. This is obligatory because it is impermissible to bury Muslims in a cemetery of disbelievers and vice-versa. If there is no cemetery for Muslims, then his remains are to be buried in any place where his grave cannot be tampered with. As for performing (funeral) prayer over him, the time has elapsed.

Praise be to Allah Alone and peace be upon the Seal of all prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the letter no. (A.M/2656), dated 19/3/1416 A.H. and sent to his Eminence, the General Mufti by His Royal Highness, deputy of the Emir of Makkah Al-Mukarramah, and which was referred to the Committee of the Council of Senior Scholars in letter no. (A.M. 1417), dated 24/3/1416. The letter of His Highness reads as follows:

We received letter no. (91/83/142/241/1), dated 21/1/1416, from the Ministry of Exterior Affairs, Jeddah branch, based on the letter no. (204) which they had received from the British Consulate in Jeddah on 19/1/1416, and which indicates that Mr. Mustafa Mehmet, of British nationality passed away in Makkah Al-Mukarramah after he performed Hajj for the year 1415 A.H., and was buried in there. His family informed the consulate that the deceased wished to be buried next to his family in North Cyprus and requested the consulate to notify the relevant authorities to issue instructions regarding transporting his body to North Cyprus where it will be reinterred. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs wants a report on this issue. His Royal Highness, the deputy of the Emir of Makkah al-Mukarramah wants to know the validity of these measures from the relevant authorities.

We hope that after due consideration of the matter, you may tell us how the deceased was buried without the permission of the British Consulate and name the official who authorized his burial without the consent of his next of kin or the consulate. We further supplied his Eminence, the General Mufti (Islamic scholar qualified to issue Fatwa) of the Kingdom and the Chairman of the Department of Scholarly Research and Ifta' with a copy of this letter so that he may tell us of the validity of exhuming the body and sending it to his country for burial. Kindest regards.

After careful consideration, the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' deem it impermissible to exhume the body of the deceased and transport it due to the lack of any legal justifications.

Q 2: What is the purpose of pouring water over a grave after leveling earth over it? Is there any evidence for this practice and who was the first person over whose grave water was poured ?

A 2: Water is sprinkled over a grave immediately after burial to allow the earth to become compact and solid. Al-Shafi'y mentioned in his Musnad, as did Sa'id ibn Mansur and Al-Bayhaqy in a Hadith Mursal (a Hadith with no Companion of the Prophet in the chain of narration) \(that the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) sprinkled water over the grave of his son Ibrahim and put pebbles on it.\) It was related by Sa'id ibn Mansur that sprinkling water over graves was practiced during the lifetime of Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him). As regards its permissibility, it was maintained by the three Imams (initiators of Schools of Jurisprudence), Abu Hanifah, Al-Shafi'y and Ahmad, and this is also the opinion of other scholars.

and slower than a jogging pace. It was reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: «Hasten to bury the deceased, for if they were righteous, you will be forwarding them toward goodness; and if otherwise, then you will throwing off an evil from your necks.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Moreover, Abu Dawud narrated in his Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) on the authority of Abu Bakrah that he said: «I witnessed it myself when we walked at a quick pace with the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) and we were pallbearers (carrying a dead person).»

Being a pallbearer at a funeral is of the Sunnah; it is following the example of the Prophet (peace be upon him). It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) was a pallbearer at the funeral of Sa'd ibn Mu'adh and the Companions also would do so. Thus, we should follow their example. Ibn Abu Shaybah narrated with a sound Sanad (chain of narrators) on the authority of Abu Al-Darda': «To realize the full reward of attending a Janazah (funeral), it should be accompanied by the relatives of the deceased who carry it by its four corners, and dust is put over the grave.» This is not a personal opinion; it is the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Q 2: Is it permissible to allow one of the dead person's relatives to go down into the grave to bury him?

A 2: In the case of burying a man, it is preferable to give priority to whoever is given priority in washing him if possible. The Prophet (peace be upon him) was buried by Al-`Abbas, `Aly and Usamah who were exactly the same people who washed him (peace be upon him) and because that is more likely to conceal the dead person's conditions.

`Aly (may Allah be pleased with him) said: "One's own family is worthier of burying him." In the case of burying a woman, priority should be given to her male Mahrams (unmarriageable relatives) and her husband if possible, because the woman's body is a `Awrah (private parts of the body that must be covered in public) and going down into the grave and burying her, necessitates touching her body from over the shroud. However, there is nothing wrong in allowing others to do that.

Q 3: Some people say that it is permissible for those who attend the funeral procession to participate in burying the dead person, even by throwing three handfuls of dust over the dead person's head. What is the ruling on that?

A 3: It is permissible for those who attend a funeral to participate in burying the dead person and to throw three handfuls of dust in the direction of their head. \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) offered the Janazah \(funeral\) Prayer then he went to the grave and stood at the head of the deceased and took three handfuls of dust and threw them into the grave.\) (Related by Ibn Majah). Moreover, `Amir ibn Rabi`ah narrated that [\(the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) offered the Janazah Prayer over `Uthman ibn Mazh`un then he made Takbir \(saying: "Allahu Akbar \[Allah is the Greatest\]\)" for him four times and went to his grave and threw three handfuls of dust while standing at his head.\)](#) (Related by Al-Daraqutny). This was also the practice of the Companions (may Allah be pleased with them) as it was authentically reported from Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) when he buried Zayd ibn Thabit that the former threw three handfuls of dust over the latter's grave and said: "Knowledge disappears this way." This was mentioned by Ibn Qudamah in his book Al-Mughny.

Q 4, 5: What is the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) regarding the Du`a' (supplication) for a dead person after burying him? People usually surround the grave after burying the dead person, so, should they be facing the Qiblah (Ka`bah-direction faced in Prayer) when making Du`a' for the dead or is nothing wrong with making Du`a' regardless of the direction that one is facing? Is there a specific Du`a' for such a situation? What is the ruling on staying after burying the dead person to receive consolations from the mourners who attended the funeral? If a bereaved family stand in a row to receive condolences after the burial of their dead member; should we offer them consolations or should we go and leave them?

A 4, 5: What was reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) is a general command to make Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) and Du`a' for the dead person. It was narrated on the authority of `Uthman (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: \(Whenever Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) finished burying the dead, he used to stay with him \(i.e. at his grave\) and say: "Seek forgiveness for your brother and steadfastness for him, for he is being questioned now."\) (Related by Abu Dawud and Al-Hakim, who considered it a Sahih [authentic] Hadith). Hence, one should say: O Allah, forgive him, keep him steadfast on the truth and keep him firm with the word that stands firm...etc. It is not a must to face the Qiblah when making Du`a' for the dead person after burying him, rather one can make Du`a' regardless of the direction he is facing.

Q 6: How can we console someone who lost a dear person: Should we go to their house or workplace because people now live far away from each other, especially as people do not see their relatives or acquaintances except in special occasions, including the event of death? Is it permissible for someone who lost a dear person to them to stay in his house to receive the people who want to console them? How and where can we console them?

(Part No. 7; Page No. 339)

A 6: The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is to console the bereaved family whether in the Masjid (mosque), in their house, office, in the market or at the graveyard if possible. However, if someone could not perform the Funeral Prayer over the dead in the Masjid, they can console the bereaved family by the phone or via correspondence.

Q 7: What are the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) words of consolation?

A 7: It is permissible to console a bereaved person by making Du`a' (supplication) for him and for the dead person. There is no specific formula regarding this, according to Shaykh-ul-Islam Ibn Taymiyyah. A mourner may console a bereaved person by saying: May Allah grant you a great reward, good consolation and may He forgive your dead. It was narrated by Imam (initiator of a Madh-hab) Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith compilation) that \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) offered condolences to a man saying: "May Allah be merciful to him and reward you."\) It was narrated that \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) offered condolences to a woman whose son had died saying: "Whatever Allah takes is for Him and whatever He gives, is for Him, and everything has a limited fixed term \(in this world\)." He (peace be upon him) ordered her to be patient and to hope for Allah's reward for real patience is that which is shown immediately after receiving a shock.) The person who receives consolation may reply by saying: May Allah answer your supplication and may He be merciful to you and us.

The first and second questions of Fatwa no. 19541

Q 1: My mother was sick and when she died, there was no place to wash the dead, hence, she was washed at home. I had no idea how the dead should be washed. After washing her, we applied some henna to her hands and kohl to her eyes for this was our tradition. I hope Your Eminence will inform us if this way of washing the dead is sound or not.

A 1: You did well by washing your dead mother. But applying henna to her hands and kohl to her eyes is baseless in the Shari'ah (Islamic law), hence, it is not permissible to do this. However, Allah will pardon you since you did that out of ignorance.

Q 2: Is it permissible for women to recite Al-Fatihah (Opening Chapter of the Qur'an) at home for the dead or is that absolutely impermissible?

A 2: It is impermissible to recite any of the Qur'an over a Janazah (funeral), whether it is Al-Fatihah or any other Surah (Qur'anic chapter) and this applies to both men and women. Such an act was not reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). Hence, it is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) and every Bid'ah is an error.

Q 9: When a person working in the American army dies,

a special ceremony is conducted for them which includes the following rites: Soldier formations, giving salute and playing music. Is it permissible to hold these rites for a Muslim? A 9: The funeral rituals mentioned in the question are innovations (in religion) and it is impermissible for Muslims to conduct or acknowledge them. Living persons must warn and forbid their next of kin against holding such innovations for them after their death to absolve themselves of any sins accrued either by their passive consent. We implore Allah to grant us safety.

Q: What is the ruling on relieving oneself from urine or stool in the graveyards; transporting the body of the dead to the burial place by cars and buses; and reciting surat (Qur'anic chapter)Yasin by the grave at the time of burial?

A: It is impermissible to relieve oneself from urine or stool in the graveyards, because it is an act of disrespect to the dead and causes harm to those attending the funeral. The graveyard is not a place to relieve oneself.

It is permissible to transport the dead body by car. As to the third question, the recitation of surat Yasin or any other surah by the grave was not indicated by the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) or the Salaf (righteous predecessors). It is therefore a Bid'ah (heresy in religion). The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: ﴿"Offer some of your prayers in

Fatwa no. 16722

Q: Muslims are buried wrapped in a simple shroud and then dust is scattered over them. Therefore, how can a Muslim be buried in North Canada (Eskimo areas) where there is no dust, but only frozen layers of ice which is as solid as stone. Moreover, if the body is buried there it will not disintegrate or decompose. After decades, or perhaps centuries, the body will still be in the same condition as that at the time of the burial. Weather conditions such as erosion and the melting of ice sometimes cause the corpse to surface above the ice after a few years. This actually happens and wild hungry animals scavenge the bodies for food. Is it permissible for Muslims in these lands to wash the dead, wrap it in a shroud and then cremating it in a coffin so that it turns to ashes? Your Eminence, I tried to explain the problem to you, and I hope you will tell us your opinion on the matter. Our situation is peculiar and does not resemble that of others living in the Middle East where the soil is suitable for burial and where it is possible to cover the body with dust. In Northern Canada there is no soil in the ground, even if were to dig tens of meters deep.

A: It is impermissible to cremate the body of a Muslim who dies in the Arctic regions such as the Eskimo area. Those in charge of disposing of the affairs of a Muslim must do their best to move the body to a non-frozen area where it will be possible to bury him. Alternatively, they must dig a grave in the frozen layers of ice and bury him like others in that area. This is due to the general meaning of the evidences that facilitate matters upon Muslims such as the Words of Allah: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) and: \(Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.\)

Q: I intend to cover a grave plot in my village with sand and pebbles to protect it from becoming muddy due to the rain. However, I read the following statement in your book "A miscellaneous Compilation of Fatwas and Articles", vol.1, p. 402, 2nd ed. 1411 A.H/ 1990 A.D: "It has been authentically attributed to the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) that he prohibited making inscriptions on graves as well as constructing buildings over them or adding earth that was not originally dug up from soil." As I do not want to do anything unlawful, I would like you to elicit this matter. Please note that

I intend to add a layer of sand and pebbles to the surface of the plot so that it would not become muddy due to the rain, making it difficult for visitors to enter the graveyard.

A: There is no objection as to adding a layer of earth to pathways between graves for the purpose of clearing mud, thus making it easy for visitors and others to easily move between the graves. But you are not to put anything on top of the graves that will raise them above the levels prescribed in the Shari'ah (Islamic law) which is one span.

Praise be to Allah, Alone, and Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon the Prophet after whom there is no other.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read letter no. (22/1/250) dated 19/2/1418 which was sent to His Eminence, the General Mufti from His Excellency, the Director of the Center for Islamic Call and Guidance in Dammam. Attached was a request for a Fatwa submitted by the official in charge of the facility for washing the deceased in Dammam, Muhammad Al-Kathiry. The request was referred to the Committee of the Council of Senior Scholars in letter no. (1237) dated 24/2/1418 and included the

the inquirer's question as follows:

As you know (may Allah keep you), people in this country, praise be to Allah, are keen to follow the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet Muhammad) and avoid all forms of Bid`ah (heresy in religion), following the example of the Salaf (righteous predecessors) of the Muslims Ummah. With this in mind, we receive an influx of inquiries on what occurs in the Dammam cemetery. After burials, a mobile platform is erected with steps for the consolors' when entering and exiting to offer their condolences to the family of the deceased. In this regard, we deemed it necessary to ask for a Fatwa. After burial, people in great number gather around the mobile platform, and this gave rise to some inappropriate personal behaviours from some individuals, with difference of opinions between those who support the erection of such platforms and those who do not.

Attached is a report by a member of the Guidance Center in Dammam, Sheikh `Aly ibn Hussayn Al-Bin'aliy, in which he stated the following:

In reference to your Eminence's instructions concerning the letter sent by the official in charge of the facility for washing the dead at Imam Faisal ibn Turk Mosque in Dammam, which referred to an inquiry about the permissibility of a mobile platform with steps for the purpose of receiving those who wish to offer their condolences to the families of the deceased following the burial and his request for a Fatwa on this issue, we wish to inform you that the above-mentioned platform has been in use for some years. It is a ten meter long and three meter wide, an iron structure mobilizes on wheels to facilitate its positioning near to the burial spot.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 347)

This platform is shaded with an iron canopy and surrounded on three sides with an iron railing to prevent anyone from falling over. The fourth side is completely sealed off and a long iron bench is placed against it for seating the consolors. The platform rises one meter above the ground with fitted steps at both ends with entrance and exit signs. It was basically erected in order to protect the people from the heat of the sun especially in summer. The bereaved relatives of the deceased line up on it and people enter to offer their condolences after burial. It is painted in green. These are the facts I gathered concerning this platform. Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions.

After the Fatwa Committee examined the matter, it concluded that his Eminence, the Mufty, Sheikh Muhammad ibn Ibrahim (may Allah have mercy upon him) has previously issued a fatwa on 16/5/1377 A.H. as did the Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' in Fatwa no. (4474) dated 23/3/1402 A.H. from the Council of Senior Scholars Assembly no. (684/2) on 8/3/1410 A.H. both of which maintained the banning of erecting a platform to receive condolences by the grave entrance since this will lead to other acts of corruption and because the Salaf were not known to have practiced this. Any canopies that have been erected in the old sites of the cemetery must be removed in order to block all means of deceptive arguments. Based on this, it is of greater priority to prohibit the mobile iron platform from the cemetery.

May Allah grant you success! May Peace and blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 20424

Praise be to Allah, Alone, Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon the Prophet Muhammad after whom there is no other prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read letter no. (1690/2/1) dated 15/5/1419 A.H. addressed to his Eminence, the General Mufti, and which sent from the governor of Al-Ta'if. It was referred to the Committee of the Council of Senior Scholars in letter no. (3133) on 18/5/1419 A.H. and includes a request to investigate the issue contained the letter submitted to him from the Director-General of Agriculture and Water Ministry at Al-Ta'if and which includes a request to investigate a claim submitted by the citizen whose initials are (H.A.A.T) about the presence of dense trees in a cemetery adjacent to his property at al-Shifa (Al-Talhat). In his letter, he complains of damages to his agricultural property caused by rocks falling from this graveyard. He requests permission to cut down these trees. However, he underlined that doing so may effect the stability of the ground of the cemetery and therefore the matter requires a legal Fatwa. Attached to his Eminence's letter is a report from the Inspection Committee concerning this cemetery. It includes the following:

Based on the request no. (539) dated 26/2/1419 A.H. which was supplemented with documents concerning the request of the citizen whose initials are (H.A.A.T) including information on the cemetery which is densely lined with trees and containing dilapidated graves, a date was set for a committee to inspect the site accompanied by the claimant on 28/3/1419 A.H. and the following was determined:

- 1- The presence of seven acacia trees.
- 2- The remains of three dilapidated graves.

Based on what the committee witnessed, a report was made by our delegate, an officer from al-Shifa police and the delegate of al-Shifa center.

And after careful examination, the Fatwa Committee determined that a fence be erected around the cemetery to protect it from debasement, prevent people from stepping over the graves and to prevent rocks from the cemetery to fall into the claimant's property and cause damage.

Moreover, the municipality must fence the cemetery and repair the dilapidated graves. There is no objection if the trees in the cemetery are cut down with manual tools, such as saws, and that the stems of the trees are to be cut down and leave the roots so as not to crack the graves. It is impermissible to dig out the trees or cut them down with heavy machinery since this will cause damage to the graves and desecrate the sanctity of the deceased. It must be noted that the sanctity of the dead is tantamount to the sanctity of the living.

Fatwa no. 19036

Q: We would like to inform your Eminence that a citizen named Ahmad Musa Kharmy submitted petition no. (2105) on 17/6/1417 A.H. to the municipality, in which he expressed his wish to volunteer to remove tree branches and ashes from the cemetery of Bish for the sake of Allah. In order to preserve the sanctity of the dead, we would like your Eminence to review the matter and guide us as to the legal course of action so that we may allow the above mentioned citizen to clear the branches and ashes from the cemetery and assist him in taking them outside the cemetery walls.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 351)

A: If the tree branches and ashes, which may contain thorns and the like, cause damage to the cemetery in any manner or pose any harm to people during the burial or during their visits, then there is no objection to removing them provided that this be conducted through the municipality or under its supervision using manual tools that do not cause any damage to the graves and which will preserve the sanctity of the dead.

May Allah grant you success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read letter no. (645) dated 22/2/1417 A.H. and which was submitted to his Eminence, the General Mufti from his Eminence the president of the court of Mahayel `Asir and which was supplemented with a request for a Fatwa from the mayor of Mahayel `Asir. It was referred to the Committee of the Council of Senior Scholars in letter no. (1238) dated 29/2/1417 A.H. and in which his Eminence asked the following question:

Attached is a request from a citizen whose initials are (H.A.SH) concerning the removal of the trees in the cemetery next to his stores and residential buildings at Mahayel. He states that the cemetery is full of dense trees which pose danger to the tenants of the area due to the great number of snakes living in the cemetery and has therefore become a source of anxiety and concern. The trees cover the lamp posts. The municipality wishes to clean all the cemeteries in the city. We therefore hope that you inform us of the legal opinion on the extent of the possibility of using heavy machinery in these sites due to the dense trees and the impracticability of manually removing them, both because of their denseness and to ensure the safety of the workers from the danger posed by snakes and the like. May Allah protect you!

A: The committee answered that there is no objection to cutting down the trees in the cemetery which are a source of danger provided that they be cut down using manual tools to preserve the sanctity of the dead. Moreover, heavy machinery is not to enter the cemetery since this is considered an insult to the dead.

Q 1: Is it permissible to cut down trees growing on graves or we should better leave them as they are?

A 1: There is no harm in cutting down trees growing on graves provided that the sanctity of the graves is preserved and no acts of debasement, works of digging or stepping on them are undertaken. The trees growing on graves must be cut down if it is feared that they will be used as objects of blessings and veneration, or if keeping them will cause damage to the graves or pose harm to those who come to visit their dead and supplicate for them. Heavy trees may also harbor harmful insects and venomous snakes, and so it is better to cut them down.

Q: A cemetery is bordered by Damad city from all sides. The south side of the cemetery is covered by a variety of acacia and arak trees to the degree that it has become full of large venomous snakes and many other pests such as scorpions. These creatures crawl up to the neighboring residential places, by day and night, and are therefore a source of anxiety and danger. This side of the cemetery which is covered in trees, and so causing great damages to the graves, had been there since the time of the Idrisi rule. As no one can enter the cemetery or pass by it, we first ask Allah and then you the following:

First, is it permissible to dig out these trees with tractors due to the harm they cause - and to the risk that may result should people remove them with their bare hands - or burn them after bespatter them with insecticides?

A: If the case is as mentioned, there is no harm in removing the trees from the cemetery by using manual tools only, in order to preserve the sanctity of the dead. The municipality in your town is to undertake this work.

Take off your shoes.﴾ Or as he (peace be upon him) said, or is this specific to the graves that take the form of Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer) like that of Al-Baqi`?

A 7: Based on the mentioned Hadith, it is Makruh (reprehensible) to walk while wearing shoes between the graves, unless there is a need for that, such as to avoid thorns or heat. However, one must avoid treading on the graves.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16326

Q 2: In the Muslims' cemeteries, we find signs with the name, age, date of birth and family name of the dead person written on it. What is the ruling of Islam on that?

A 2: It is impermissible to write on the graves, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade this and that writing on the graves could lead to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). This is because it may lead to glorifying them and exaggerating in this regard and coming to believe that they could bring benefit or harm instead of Allah.

Q 2: Is it permissible to write the words of the Testimony of Faith La ilaha illa Allah (there is no god but Allah) inside a grave and put the dead body on it? Could this be of any benefit to the dead person?

A 2: It is impermissible to write the words of the Testimony of Faith inside a grave and put the dead body on it, because this implies misuse of the Testimony of Faith. This is Bid`ah (innovation in religion). It was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that he said: \(Whoever introduces anything into this matter of ours \(Islam\) that is not part of it will have it rejected.\)

Fatwa no. 16732

Q: 1- Why was Prophet Muhammad's (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) grave built in its present form, when we know that there is a hadith forbidding Muslims to build structures on graves and decorate them?

2- We would like you to tell us the story and history behind the building of Prophet Muhammad's grave.

3- How were the graves of the members of Prophet Muhammad 's household and those of the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet Muhammad) built?

4- Are there any graves in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia over which are structures, or are there any decorated graves, especially those of important Saudi individuals?

5- Is there a law that bans people to build structures on graves in Saudi Arabia?

6- Your Eminence, what is your opinion on decorating graves as an expression of great love and respect for the dead?

A: 1: Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy was established by Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) on Taqwa (fear) of Allah, The Most Exalted and Glorified. The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) was not buried there after his death; he was buried in a grave in `Aishah's room (may Allah be pleased with her) outside the Masjid (mosque). When Abu Bakr died (may Allah be pleased with him), he was buried in the same room next to the spot of the Prophet. And when `Umar, (may Allah be pleased with him) died, he too was buried in a grave next to them in the room. `Aishah's room was formerly outside the Masjid to its left. When `Uthman (may Allah be pleased with him), expanded the Masjid, he did not incorporate the room to the prayer hall.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 357)

The room was later added to the Masjid after the era of the Rightly-Guided Caliphs during the reign of Al-Walid ibn `Abdul-Malik towards the end of the first Hijri century. This did not happen with the counsel of the people of knowledge.

As for the present structure on Prophet Muhammad's grave, it is a more recent addition. Perhaps it was intended to protect the Prophet's grave.

2: Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) gave commands to bury the dead of his Sahabah and members of his household in the grave of Al-Baqi` (Al-Baqi` cemetery). He used to level the graves and did not allow adding earth other than that which was dug up from it. He did not raise the grave above the ground more than a hand span nor did he decorate, plaster or build anything on them.

3: Praise be to Allah, there are no graves in Saudi Arabia with any structures built over them. Saudi scholars prohibit building on graves and command people to level them, following the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet Muhammad) of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). Furthermore, they command people not to raise the grave so that they are no more than one hand span above the ground. The Salaf (Righteous Predecessors) used to mention in their will that their graves be only one hand span high above the ground. On the authority of Abu Al-Hayyaj who said that `Aliy (may Allah be pleased with him) told him: "Should I not send you on the same mission as that on which the Messenger of Allah sent me?" He added: \(Spare no picture from being wiped out, and leave no high grave unleveled.\) Recorded by Imam Muslim. Muslim scholars also forbid writing on graves or decorating them because this leads to extreme veneration of the dead, which is among the means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). For this reason, the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) forbade plastering graves, sitting on them or building on them. Important individuals in Saudi Arabia do not have distinguished graves, but are buried in common Muslim cemeteries like the rest of the people.

4: In the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, there is no specific civil law for graves; only the Sunnah of Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) regarding graves is followed.

5: It is impermissible to decorate graves, build structures over them, plaster, color, inscribe or draw on them since these are all forbidden acts in Islam. What must be done for a Muslim who dies is to make Du`a' (supplication) for him, ask Allah to have mercy upon him, give out in charity and dedicate the reward to the dead and so forth.

May Allah grant you success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

Fatwa no. 16296

Praise be to Allah, Alone, and Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon Prophet Muhammad after whom there is no other.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has viewed the letter submitted to his Eminence, the General Mufti from the delegate of the department of Islamic Affairs and Endowments, in Sharjah the United Arab Emirates, and which was referred to the Committee of the Council of Senior Scholars in letter no. (1805) dated 17/4/1413 A.H. His Eminence asked the following question:

Attached is an alleged photograph of Prophet Muhammad's (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) grave which is widely distributed in the United Arab Emirates. We would appreciate it if you give us a Fatwa, message or advice which we can publish to raise public awareness on the consequences of this deception.

After examining the inquiries, the Committee answered as follows:

Having investigated the matter, the Committee decided to write to the official in charge of the Affairs of Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy Al-Sharif. We received letter no. (690/1) dated 18/6/1414 A.H. which stated that the Committee examined the attached photograph and compared it to the real site. Their report is as follows: Comparing the Prophetic room to the one in the photograph, we conclude that the photograph is not genuine and that it was originally hand painted. End of report.

Based on this, the photograph mentioned is fake and does not represent the true structure of the grave of the honored Prophet. Even if we assume that it matches the real grave of the Prophet, it is impermissible to circulate the photograph and revere it because it will lead to extremism and Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) and the various paths leading to it. For this reason, it is forbidden to draw the Prophet's grave, sell the drawings or acquire them. It has been authentically narrated that the Prophet Muhammad forbade this in order to block all avenues to Shirk and extremism.

May Allah grant you success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

Praise be to Allah, Alone, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon Prophet Muhammad after whom there is no other prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has viewed the inquiry submitted to his Eminence, the General Mufti and which includes the following:

Written on the graves in the graveyard of Al-Nasim in Riyadh are numbers that distinguish the graves from each other. Also, the walls have a list of these numbers. Is this permissible?

Letter no. (1094/2) dated 29/4/1413 A.H. was directed to his Eminence the general chairman of the local office of the Call and Guidance to send two officials from the office to find out the facts and the answer was sent in letter no. (814/9 d) dated 8/6/1413 A.H. Attached was a report compiled by the two officials, respected Shaykh Muhammad ibn Nafjan Al-Tuwijry and respected Shaykh Muhammad ibn Hamad Al-Mashuh. It stated the following:

Following the instructions of his Eminence, the general chairman, concerning what was mentioned to him about the graveyard of Al-Nasim and after inspecting the cemetery, we state the following:

- 1- There are rags of various colors tied to the grave stones.
- 2- Pipes, two panels, and steel bars are next to the grave stones.
- 3- The grave stones are painted in various colors.
- 4- The graves are painted in green stripes; the surface of some graves are painted with green paint.
- 5- There graves are numbered such as no. (5), (15) and (55). We found only one name, Musaid ibn Dalim, written on a grave.

A list with serial numbers was found on a plate nailed to the cemetery wall; between each two columns is a number written made by the municipality. Moreover, there is some graffiti of names and various numbers that seemed to have been made by youths.

After the committee has examined the marks on the graves which people had made and extensively added to them, it concluded that:

First: It was reported that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) gave orders to mark the grave of `Uthman ibn Mazh'oun with a stone. This was recorded by Abu Dawud in his Sunan in a Hadith Mursal (a hadith with no Companion of the Prophet in the chain of narration) from a narration by Al-Muttalib ibn `Abdullah, one of the Successors. The hadith was also recorded by Al-Bayhaqy and narrated by Ibn Sa`d and Ibn Abu Shaybah and Al-Hakim. In its chain of narrators, is Al-Waqidy, who is Matruk (a narrator whose hadith transmission was discarded due to unreliability). However, this hadith was recorded by Ibn

Majah in his Sunan from a report by Anas (may Allah be pleased with him) and was ranked as fair by the great scholar of hadith, Ibn Hajar in (Al-Talkhees Al-Khabeer) and Al-Buseiry in (Al-Zawa'id).

2: It is impermissible to mark a grave by writing on it, whether a name, number, the name of a tribe and the like. This is because of the general implication of the report of Jabir (may Allah be pleased with him) who said that the the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) forbade plastering graves, sitting on them or building structures on them [recorded by Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'y, Ibn Majah and Al-Hakim. It was first compiled in Sahih Muslim].

3: It is impermissible to mark graves by drawing the picture of the deceased on them. The reason for prohibiting writing on graves is due to the reasons mentioned above while the reason for prohibiting drawings is due to the sound hadiths that strongly forbid drawing pictures of people. Rather, the prohibition of this matter is even greater in lieu of writings and drawings on graves, as this may lead to a direct path for Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) and idol worship.

4: It is impermissible to mark graves with mortar, plaster, clay or the like because of the established prohibition of plastering graves in the hadith mentioned above, on the authority of Jabir, since clay and other materials fall under the same ruling.

5: Marking the graves with paint, green or otherwise, is the same as plastering. Therefore, it is impermissible to use it.

6: It is a form of extremism to mark graves with marble slabs, specifically made for this purpose. The Salaf (Righteous Predecessors) did not mark graves in this manner, therefore we should follow in their footsteps and abstain from doing so.

7: It is impermissible to mark graves with rags tied to the grave stones, a prevalent practice used for Tabarruk (seeking blessings).

May Allah grant you success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

Fatwa no. 18587

Praise be to Allah, Alone, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon Prophet Muhammad after whom there is no other prophet.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has viewed letter no. (53103) dated 25/7/1416 A.H. that his Eminence, the General Mufti received from his Highness, the prince of Riyadh. Enclosed was a suggestion proposed to his Eminence from the honored Shaykh `Abdullah ibn Salih Al-Qasir concerning marking graves etc... It was referred to the Committee of the Council of Senior Scholars in letter no. (3735) dated 1/8/1416 A.H. and included the following:

Lately, visitors to the graveyard have come to notice

a consistent practice by some Muslim foreign nationals in marking the graves of their dead, which may be due to the great number of incomers. Such practices have become so widely spread that we fear that many of them and other forms of Bid`ah (heresy in religion), which contravene Islamic law, may be passed on to people in this country. If your Highness, may Allah reward you, deems it appropriate, would you ask the concerned authorities to consider the numbering of all the rows of graves. In the event that you find this proposal favorable, the authority responsible for issuing Fatwa in this regard will be asked about the legal validity of extending it to all cemeteries. Perhaps it will satisfy the need of the relatives of the deceased and through it Allah will block the means to Bid`ah in this pure land.

After thorough investigation of the matter, the Committee for Fatwa answered that the Sunnah (acts, sayings, or approvals of the Prophet Muhammad) permits the relatives of the dead to mark their graves with stones or the like as mentioned in the Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) of Abu Dawud that Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) marked the grave of `Uthman ibn Mazh'oun with a stone and said: "I mark my brother's grave with this (stone)."

However, it is not permissible to put numbers on the graves because it is a way of writing on graves, which was a forbidden act by the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him), as well as a way of plastering and painting graves, building structures over them and so forth of other Bid`ahs. It has been related from the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) that he prohibited plastering graves, building over them or making engravement on them. This is because the relatives of deceased are expected only to make Du`a' (supplication) for their dead and ask Allah to have mercy upon them, whether or not they can recognize their graves.

May Allah grant you success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

Fatwa no. 20201

Q: Some people in Shaqra' Governorate intend to volunteer to make pathways from bricks and cement in the cemetery for people to walk on. Now, the question your Eminence is: Is this legally permissible, or they should better make the pathways without using cement or bricks, which may give rise for later generations to take it as a tradition make other additions, thus gradually introducing Bid`ahs (heresies in religion)? Please give us a Fatwa on this matter, may Allah reward you!

A: You should keep the cemetery as it is without any changes. Whoever seeks to find his way through it to visit a grave or to achieve any other permissible reason, may pass between the graves and avoid stepping on them. Making pathways in the manner described in the question may lead to other unlawful practices and also because they will narrow spaces between the graves and take up part of the graveyard. The clear spaces in the cemetery may later be needed for burials.

May Allah grant you success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

Q: Al-Birr charitable society in Al-Jouf has a plan to write the formula of bidding Salam (Islamic greeting of peace) to the dead on a large board and in clear inscription and post it at the entrance of the local cemetery. They do so to help remind the people to recite it during burials and during their visits to the dead. Therefore, we hope, your Eminence, that you give us the correct formula that we may write on the board.

A: Great priority should be given to teaching people during religious lessons, sermons and the like, the Du`a' (supplication) and etiquettes related to the rulings on entering cemeteries and the manner of sending Salam to the dead from among the Muslims. As for writing the formula of Salam on boards and putting them up on the walls of the cemetery, this act was not observed by the Salaf (righteous predecessors) so you must refrain from doing it.

Q: If a man is sitting in the public road and a funeral procession passes by him, should he stand up or remain seated?

A: If a funeral passes by someone who is sitting and he is not among those who are following it, then he has two options: either to stand until it goes past him, and in this case he will be rewarded for that, Allah willing; or he may remain seated. The matter is open to choice because it was authentically reported from the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) that he did both options. This is the opinion of Imam Ahmad, Is-haq, and Ibn Habib and Ibn Al-Majishun and these two latter scholars belong to the Maliki Madh-hab (School of Jurisprudence). This is also supported by what was recorded by Al-Bukhari, and Muslim on the authority of `Amir ibn Rabi`ah (may Allah be pleased with him) from the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) that he said: «Whenever you see a funeral procession, stand up until the procession goes past you.» In another narration by them on the authority of Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) from `Amir ibn Rabi`ah (may Allah be pleased with him) from the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) that he said: «If any of you sees a funeral procession and he is not following it, then he should stand up and remain standing until he goes past it, or it goes past him, or until the coffin is put down before it goes past him.» As for those who claim that the command to stand up is abrogated, like Imam Malik and Abu Hanifah, this was commented on by Al-Nawawy who said that abrogation exists only when there is a difficulty to combine both rulings. However, it is possible to combine them in this case. He added that the opinion he is inclined to is that it is Mustahab (desirable) to stand up.

In addition, there is no authentic evidence forbidding standing when there is a funeral procession passing by. Hence, the fact that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) sat down after his command for people to stand up in such a situation is proof of the permissibility of sitting.

Fatwa no. 20386

Q: It is my great pleasure to bring to your attention that your loyal son, his Excellency, the Minister of Rural Development in Malaysia, al-Hajj Anwar ibn Al-Hajj Musa agreed to allocate a sum of money for the erection of three boards in Islamic cemeteries, commencing with the cemetery that is in his constituency. These boards will contain the correct rulings concerning graveyards including what you mentioned in your Fatwa no. (19246) dated 17/11/1417 A.H. The second board will contain some statements of condolence in addition to explanation of the questions of Munkar and Nakir (the two angels who test the faith of the dead in their graves). The third board will expose the rulings concerning the general etiquettes of visiting the graves. This came as a response to a suggestion that I have recently made. The Minister entrusted me to select the Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) and the relevant statements that convey the above-mentioned expressions. But I feel it is a great responsibility and fear that I may fail to provide the correct information in this regard. So, first, I hope that Your Eminence would express your opinion on this project, and then write the rulings and etiquettes concerning the above, so that I could translate them into the Malaysian language (Malay) and then execute the project. Obviously, the boards, with the aid of Allah (Most Exalted be He), will be a means to help raise awareness of Muslims, reminding them of the Hereafter, and teaching them the correct manners, especially with regard to visiting the graves. Your work will, by the will of Allah, benefit us and all Muslims. May Allah reward you greatly!

(Part No. 7; Page No. 369)

A: First: Rulings concerning graves:

1- It is impermissible to build on graves, plaster them, use electricity to light the place and the like. This is because these matters may be a means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) by making Du`a' (supplication) to the dead and seeking their help instead of Allah.

2- It is impermissible to offer prayer or make Du`a' at graveyards, even if nothing is built on them, due to the words of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him): \("You must not take graves as mosques; I forbid you to do that"\).

3- It is also impermissible to raise the level of the graves above the ground more than a hand span because this is the description of the Prophet's grave and the graves of those of the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet). The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) told `Aly ibn Abu Talib (may Allah be pleased with him): \("Leave not a high grave unlevelled."\) A high grave is that which is raised above the ground and leveling it is to remove the projected part of the structure beyond the one hand-span height.

4- Do not disrespect graves by sitting or tread on them, throwing garbage on them, letting water flow over them or any other means of desecration. A wall must be built around the cemetery to preserve it from any such desecration. This is because it was authentically attributed to the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) that he forbade plastering graves, building over them, and sitting or writing on them.

5- After placing a dead Muslim in the grave, it is recommended for those attending the funeral to stand by the grave and make Du`a' and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) and ask that Allah make him steadfast when he is questioned by Munkar and Nakir in the grave. When the burial of a dead Muslim was concluded, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) \(would stand by the grave and say to his companions:

"Ask Allah to make your brother steadfast for he is now being questioned"\) .

6- If a Muslim passes by Muslim graves, it is recommended that he says: (Peace be upon you, inhabitants of the graves from among the believers. Verily we will, Allah willing, (surely) follow you. May Allah have mercy on those among us who have come first and those who are to come later. We ask Allah to give us and you well-being. O Allah! Do not deprive us of their reward, do not let us fall into Fitnah (temptation) after them and Forgive us and forgive them).

Second: Visiting graves:

1- It is recommended for Muslim men to visit the graves of Muslims to make Du`a' and Istighfar for them, ask Allah to have mercy on them, and to take heed and admonition from the dead.

2- It is impermissible for women to visit the graves because the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) cursed women who visit graves, those who take graves as mosques and those who light lamps over them. Women are emotionally weak, and their excessive grief may lead them to do what is impermissible.

3- It is not lawful to visit graves for the purpose of seeking help from the dead and invoke them besides Allah. Such visits are Bid`ah (heresy in religion) and Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity and worship) and men and women are not allowed to do these acts. What is lawful is that when a Muslim visits the grave of his acquaintances or relatives, he is to salute them, make Du`a' and Istighfar for them and then leave the graveyard.

Third: Offering consolations:

1- It is recommended to offer condolences to the family of the deceased by saying:

(May Allah perfect your consolation, compensate you for your loss and forgive the sins of your deceased).

2- It is recommended that enough food is prepared for the mourning family by relatives or neighbors. The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: \(Make food for the family of Ja`far, for there has come to them that which will keep them busy\) .

3- It is impermissible to hold ceremony after the funeral, gather people to attend it or for the family of the deceased to prepare food for consolers or disrupt their life. Jarir ibn `Abdullah (may Allah be pleased with him) said: "We used to prepare the gathering place for the family of the deceased and prepare food for them).

These rulings are to be translated into the languages used in your country, put in print and distributed so that people may benefit from them. They are not to be written on boards on the cemetery wall because this was not done by the Salaf (righteous predecessors).

May Allah grant you success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

The ninth question of Fatwa no. 20844

Q 9: What is the ruling on placing boards with guidelines and directions in the cemetery for visitors and those holding funerals? Basically, these boards are for the description of performing funeral prayer and for warning against some

Bid`ah (heresy in religion) and the like. Please give us a Fatwa on this matter may Allah reward you!

A 9: What is lawful is to teach people during sermons, religious lessons and other permissible means the rulings concerning the etiquettes of visiting graveyards. As for writing these instructions on boards and hanging them in cemeteries, this was not from among the practices of the Salaf (righteous predecessors). So, you are not to do it.

May Allah grant you success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

Q 2: There is an old cemetery which contains several graves. There is currently a plan to dig a trench for lavatories nearby this cemetery. The digging of this trench is likely to cause water leakage to these graves. Is this legally permissible?

A 2: It is impermissible to dig a trench next to an Islamic cemetery so as to protect it from damage. A wall is to be put around the cemetery if there isn't one already.

Q 8: What is the ruling on marking graves with paint, clay, wood, tiles or writing on them the name of the tribe of the dead, ...etc? How should we deal with these acts, if any of them already exist? Please give us a Fatwa, may Allah reward you!

A 8: Marking graves with a rock and similar things is permissible. The Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet Muhammad) includes evidence to prove the permissibility of this act. It was proven that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) gave orders to mark the grave of `Uthman Ibn Mazh`un with a rock. As for marking the grave with paint and other colored materials, or emblems of a certain tribe or communities, all these matters are Bid`ah (heresy in Islam), which is not permissible. What is Mashru` (permissible) in Islamic law is sufficient, praise be to Allah.

Q 10: What is the ruling on making numbers on the walls of the graveyard to identify the graves? It should be mentioned that these numbers are quiet useful; they are not fixed on the graves, but only on the wall of the graves. These numbers will allow us to dispense with many of the markings that are currently placed on the graves. Please give us a Fatwa, may Allah reward you!

A 10: It is not permissible to place numbers on graves or on the walls of graveyards, since this is emphatically indicated in the prohibition of writing over the graves and may be used as a pretext leading to this.

Q 3: What is the ruling on driving one's car inside the graveyard when following a funeral procession? It should be mentioned that sometimes there are old people who can only reach the grave of the deceased by car. Please give us a Fatwa, may Allah reward you!

A 3: There is no harm in cars entering the graveyard provided that the drivers are careful not drive over the graves or harm people.

Q 6: Is it permissible to illuminate the entrances to graveyards in order to light the road when there is a funeral at night, knowing that the lighting is not intended for the burial process, but only to enlight the pathway to grave? Please give us a Fatwa, may Allah reward you!

A 6: Permanent lighting of the pathways of and entrances to graveyards is not permissible. As for using some means of temporary lighting when there is a funeral procession at night, such as torches, there is nothing wrong with this.

Q 6: We carry the coffin of the deceased person from his home to the graveyard, walking on foot for half an hour. During this journey, when the deceased is an old person, we repeat the following celebration: "Glory is to Allah, praise is for Allah, and Allah is the Greatest." But, when the deceased is a young person, we repeat the saying: "la ilaha illa Allah Muhammad rasulullah (none has the right to be worshipped except Allah, and Muhammad is Allah's Messenger)". Yet, some contemporary scholars objected to this and said: "This is not permissible. Rather, those carrying the deceased and those following the funeral to the grave should keep quiet." Yet, keeping silent tempts people to indulge in idle talk about the matters of the worldly life, regarding selling, buying, ...etc, while following the funeral or during the burial of the deceased. What is the correct ruling on this matter?

A 6: Reciting Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) while carrying the deceased in the funeral procession is a Bid'ah (heresy in religion). Thus it is not permissible. It becomes most disapproved when it is done collectively.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 21264

Q 5: What is the view of Islam on making `Ataqah for the deceased. It is said that it protects the deceased from Hellfire. 'Ataqah consists of reciting Surah Al-Ikhlās and Al-Mu`awwidhatayn (Surahs Al-Falaq and Al-Nas) one hundred thousand times. Is this true that it shields the deceased from the Fire?

What is the view of religion on reciting the whole Noble Qur'an and dedicating the reward of the recitation to the soul of the deceased? Does the recitation of the complete Noble Qur'an and dedication of its reward for the deceased truly benefit him? In general, what can benefit deceased so that we may do it in his favor?

A 5: As for reciting the Noble Qur'an in full or in part and dedicating its reward for the deceased, there is no evidence to indicate its benefit to the deceased. Thus, this habit should be abandoned and what authentically was proven to have been done by the Prophet Muhammad, i.e., giving Sadaqah (voluntary charity) on behalf of the dead, supplicating to Allah for him, and performing Hajj (pilgrimage) and `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) on his behalf, would be observed.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

Fatwa no. 16401

Q: We, the residents of Badiyah al-Birak village, have a custom that if one of the villagers died, the neighbors and others would give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) for the grave diggers. This Sadaqah might be a sheep, dates, ...etc, and it is not spent out of the property of the deceased or from his heirs. If it is a goat, people would cook it nearby the grave in order for the diggers to eat of it. The intention behind spending out this charity is the seeking of Allah's Countenance through giving it to such people. Thus, what is the ruling on this practice, both on giving in charity and on cooking food within the grounds of the graveyard? Also what is the ruling on performing Salah (Prayer), whether it is the obligatory Salah or Janazah (Funeral) Prayer, nearby the graveyard?

A: Giving Sadaqah nearby the grave and in the manner mentioned in the question is certainly an act of Bid'ah (heresy in Islam) that should be condemned, since it lacks sound proof from the Qur'an or Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet Muhammad). It is one of the superstitious practices of ignorant people that contradicts Shari'ah (Islamic law). The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: "Anyone who does an action which is not in accordance with this matter of ours \(Islam\) will have it rejected." Rather, it is permissible to give Sadaqah on behalf of the deceased at any place other than the graveyard and at any time other than that of the burial. Nearby the grave, one is also allowed to supplicate Allah upon the burial asking Allah to forgive the sins of the deceased and keep him steadfast on the truth as commanded by the Messenger (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). As for offering Salah on the grounds of the graveyard, the only permissible Salah is that of Janazah Prayer. In other words, neither supererogatory nor obligatory Salah is permissible there, since the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) forbade us to take the graves as places of worship and forbade us from facing in their direction when performing Salah. It was authentically reported that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) offered Janazah Prayer for a dead nearby his grave when he missed to offer it in the Masjid.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and his Companions!

The first and third questions of Fatwa no. 18209

Q 1: What is the ruling on Du`a' (supplication) for a deceased person nearby his grave at the time of his burial, with those attending the funeral saying "Amen!" upon hearing the Du`a' said by one of them? What is the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) formula of Du`a' following his burial? Where should the person supplicating Allah for the deceased stand in relation to the grave?

(Part No. 7; Page No. 378)

A 1: It is recommended upon burying a deceased person to stand by his grave, implore Allah's Forgiveness for him, and ask Allah to make him steadfast when being questioned in the grave, since the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said to his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) upon burying some deceased people: \(Seek forgiveness for your dead brother, and implore Allah to grant him steadfastness, for he will now be questioned .\)

however, Du`a' should be said neither collectively nor with one saying it and the others saying "Amen!", since neither of them was reported from acts of the Prophet Muhammad. Rather, everyone should make Du`a' for the deceased individually. It does not matter whether they are standing to the right or to the left side of the grave, or even in front of it or behind it.

Q 3: When a dead person is put in their grave, would all or only some of the knots on their shrouds be untied? If it is some, which knots exactly are to be untied? Would their faces be disclosed on placing mudbricks on them, or would they be left covered?

A: Yes, the knots on the shroud are to be untied after putting the dead person in the grave, because there is no need for them anymore; and the face of the dead are not to be disclosed as there is no religious evidence indicating their uncovering on burial.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 19772

Q 4: Is it permissible to raise our hands after burying a dead person while reciting Al-Fatihah (Opening Chapter of the Qur'an), or is there a supplication from the Qur'an and the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet)? Please advise us.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 379)

May Allah reward you with the best.

A: After burying a dead person, it is Islamically prescribed to stand by the grave, supplicate to Allah to forgive them and grant them steadfastness. This is to be done individually and not collectively. As for reciting Al-Fatihah or other chapters of the Qur'an by the graves, this is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) that is unlawful to do, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who does an action which is not in accordance with this matter of ours \(Islam\) will have it rejected.\)

The third question of Fatwa no. 21121

Q 3: When a person dies, some people say about them: "So and so on whom mercy is bestowed died", "So and so who is forgiven [by Allah] died", and other similar phrases. Is this permissible? What is the ruling on this matter?

A: We should say on the deceased Muslim: "may Allah be merciful to them; and may Allah forgive them" as a way of supplication for them. Asking Allah to aid them is lawful. It should not be said: "So and so, on whom mercy is bestowed ..." or "So and so, who is forgiven [by Allah] ...", as such expressions indicate the speaker's being certain of bestowing mercy and forgiveness on the dead. Nobody is certain to have been granted mercy or forgiveness unless there is a proof from the Qur'an and Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet).

Fatwa no. 20739

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed letter no. 93035 dated 15/06/1419 A.H. submitted to His Eminence the Grand Mufti by His Eminence the President of the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV). The letter has been referred to the Permanent Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 3746 on 17/06/1419 A.H. The letter contains questions directed to the Presidency of CPVPV regarding preparing the dead for burial.

The questioner says: I have noted some matters contradictory to Shari`ah (Islamic Law) in some areas [regarding the washing and burial of the dead] and such matters maybe found also in the rest of the country. These are:

1- The persons who wash the dead are not comprehensively aware of how to wash, cleanse, and shroud the dead according to Shari`ah. Rather, they do this hastily to the extent that they start and finish the process of washing and preparing the dead person for burial between the Adhan (call to Prayer) and the Iqamah (call to start the Prayer), this is almost a period of only ten minutes.

2- During the funeral procession, the people loudly say some Adhkar (Remembrances and invocations) like:

Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest); Everlasting is Allah; and (Everyone shall taste death.) etc.

3- The dead person is placed in the grave as follows:

- The grave is made of bitumen (road surfacing material) in the form of crevice from 20-30 cm deep.

- The dead is situated on their right hand side; and, then cement slats are put directly on the corpse to cover the grave.

4- The head and face of a dead person who has been known for their piety are sometimes left uncovered after shrouding to enable the people to get a look at them as a way of showing reverence and respect.

5- After placing the dead in the grave, a person reminds the dead saying: "O so- and -so, when you are asked about your Lord, say: 'My Lord is Allah'", etc.; I have drawn their attention twice to this being wrong.

6- There is indifference as to whether the coffin is carried according to the direction of the procession with the head of the deceased heading toward the Masjid, or vice versa.

So, please, Your Eminence, give us your legal opinion on these points so that we can circulate this matter to benefit people.

After the (Permanent) Committee studied the questions in hand, they answered as follows:

First, the Sunnah (action following the teachings of the Prophet, peace be upon him) is to wash and prepare the deceased for burial quickly; so if it is possible to wash the corpse

according to Shari`ah within the period mentioned in the question, there is nothing wrong with this. But if quickness will result in not washing and preparing the deceased for burial in the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) way, this will be unlawful. The washer is to be honest in their job; so they are not permitted to show negligence in any part of it. The Islamically prescribed manner of washing the dead is that the washer has the intention of washing the dead and says "Bismillah Al-Rahman, Al-Rahim [In the Name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful]" when starting washing, wraps their hand with a wash cloth, washes the deceased's private parts without directly touching them with bare hands, washes the limbs which are washed in Wudu' (ablution) and then washes the head. If the deceased is a man, it is desirable to wash his beard with water and sidr (lote tree/ lotus jujube) or other cleaners such as soap and ushnan (a plant used as a cleaner of good smell). Also trim his moustache and clip his nails if they are long. Then the washer pours water on the deceased's right side and then on the left side. The corpse is to be washed in this way thrice. If three washes are not enough to cleanse the body properly, the washer may wash the corpse five or seven times. The washer is to consider washing as long as the case may need, not according to the washer own desire or quickness. Accordingly, if the corpse is washed properly by washing it once or twice like with living people, this is sufficient. But it is desirable to wash the dead thrice and that washing be stopped at an odd number of times. If three times are not enough, the corpse may be washed five or seven times. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) was authentically reported to have said to the female washers on washing his daughter: \(Wash her three, five or more times with water and Sidr and sprinkle camphor on her at the end.\) (Related by Al Bukhari and Muslim, and the above wording is of Al-Bukhari) If the deceased is a female, her hair should be braided in three plaits [after having loosened and washed it] and placed behind her back. It is desirable to apply perfume to the dead under the arm-pits, between the thighs and the limbs which they place on the ground on prostrating. Applying perfume to the whole body is also good. After washing the male corpse, the corpse is to be shrouded into three pieces of cloth, not including a shirt or turban. The dead is to be inserted into the shroud, then perfume is to be applied between the body and the shroud. But if he is shrouded into a shirt, Izar (garment worn below the waist) and a wrap or in one wrap only, this will be sufficient. The female corpse is to be shrouded into five pieces of cloth, Dir` (a long shirt covering to the feet), Khimar (veil covering to the waist), Izar, and two wraps. One wrap will also suffice in this respect.

If the washer and the person shrouding a dead person have done as said above or have done only what suffices in this regard within the period of time mentioned in the question, there is no problem with this. But the washer who prepares a deceased person for burial should do their job in the best way,

not concentrating only on what is obligatory in this regard. They are also prohibited to neglect what is obligatory on washing and shrouding the dead. Rather, they are to apply also what is most desirable in this respect. The washer ought to be trustworthy. This is indicated by what has been reported on the authority of `Abdullah ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) who said: \(Only trustworthy persons should wash your dead.) This is because untrustworthy persons are not trusted regarding washing the dead in the right way and may disclose bad things they might have seen regarding the corpse.

Second, raising the voice with Tahlil (saying: "La ilaha illa Allah [There is no god except Allah]") and Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) during the funeral procession is an abhorrent Bid`ah (innovation in religion) that has no grounds in the religion. The guidance of the Prophet (peace be upon him) in this regard is that the funeral procession produces no voice of Tahlil, reciting Qur'an, etc. nor did he (peace be upon him) instruct his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) to do so. Rather, he (peace be upon him) forbade wailing and carrying fire while walking in the funeral procession. Shaykh-ul-Islam Ibn Taymiyyah (may Allah be merciful to him) said: "It is not desirable to raise voices during funeral processions neither with recitation (of the Qur'an) nor with Dhikr etc. This is the legal opinion of the Four Imams (Abu Hanifah, Malik, Al-Shafi`y, and Ahmad) and the transmitted reports on the authority of the Salaf (righteous predecessors) from the Companions and Tabi`un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet). I know no person who has contradicted this opinion." Ibn Taymiyyah (may Allah be merciful to him) also said: "The knowledgeable scholars of Hadith and Athar (narrations from the Companions) agree that this [raising voices with Qur'an and Dhikr] has not been followed in the preferred generations."

So the people who carry the deceased to their grave and the procession following are to abide by the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and his Companions (may Allah be pleased with them). They are to follow the funeral in submission to Allah and remembrance of death and what follows after it, without innovating things in the religion that contradict what Allah and His Messenger (peace be upon him) have legislated.

Third, the Sunnah is to make Lahd (a crevice on the side of a grave facing the direction faced for Prayer) that is to be closed with mud bricks as did the Companions with the grave of the Prophet (peace be upon him). This tradition is followed by the Muslims from the era of the Companions (may Allah be pleased with them) and the Salaf who follow them up until today. As for the Shaq (a rectangular hole in the bottom of a grave in which the body is buried), it is Makruh (reprehensible), as the Prophet (peace be upon him) was reported to have said: \(The Lahd is for us and the Shaq is for others.\) (Related by Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'y, and Al-Tirmidhy) But if it is not possible to make Lahd because of the nature of the land, it is lawful to make Shaq, as Allah (Glorified be He) says: \(Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.\) And: \(and has not laid upon you in religion any hardship\)

It is also desirable that the grave be wide and deep

as much as equal to the height of the deceased, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Dig graves, make them wide and deep.\) (Related by Abu Dawud in his Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not specify a certain depth for that purpose, but there is flexibility concerning it, Praise be to Allah. On digging a grave, it is to be taken into account that it is deepened to the extent that prevents the stench of the corpse from fouling the atmosphere, and to save it from being eaten by beasts, etc.

Accordingly, building graves of bitumen that is mixed with cement and closing them with cement slats, contradicts the Sunnah. It is preferable to close the grave with mud bricks, based on the above, but if it is necessary to make Shaq due to the nature of the land, this is permissible.

As for making the grave of bitumen 20-30 cm in depth and covering the same with cement slats, which results in the people touching the corpse and pressing it, this is unlawful and it contradicts the Sunnah as referred to above. Besides, this involves disregard and disrespect of the deceased, while the inviolability of the human being after death is as the same as during their life. Also, digging the grave with such depth does not properly bury the corpse, nor protect it against floods or disclosure of the body.

Forth, the Sunnah is to cover the whole corpse of the human being after finishing their washing and shrouding, owing to the statement authentically reported to have been said by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her): \(When the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) died, he was covered with a Hibra Burd \(green square decorated garment\).\)

(Related by Imam Ahmad, Al-Bukhari, and Muslim) This was observed by the Companions (may Allah be pleased with them), based on what was followed during the lifetime of the Prophet (peace be upon him). This is indicated by the Hadith of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her), the wife of the Prophet (peace be upon him) about the death of the Prophet (peace be upon him): [\(Abu Bakr \(may Allah be pleased with him\) came riding his horse from his dwelling place in As-Sunh. He got down from it, entered the Mosque and did not speak with anybody till he came to me \(`Aishah, may Allah be pleased with her\), \[meaning her dwelling place\] and went direct to the Prophet, who was covered with Hibra Burd. Abu Bakr uncovered his face. He knelt down and kissed him and then started weeping and said, "My father and my mother be sacrificed for you, O Prophet of Allah, Allah will not combine two deaths on you. You have died the death which was written for you.\)](#) (Related by Al-Bukhari) Uncovering the face of the Prophet after his death while he was still at his dwelling place before the funeral Prayer had commenced indicates the lawfulness of covering the whole body of the dead person and concealing their corpse from the people. Al-Nawawy said in Sharh (Sahih) Muslim: "Covering the dead person is agreed upon consensually by scholars. The wisdom behind this is to conceal the dead body and screen their form that has been changed by death from the looking eyes."

Accordingly, uncovering the face of the dead person for a period of time to enable the people to look at the deceased as a way of showing reverence and respect, as mentioned in the question, is a Bid`ah that has no grounds in the religion and contradicts what has been consensually agreed upon by the Muslim (scholars). This may also lead to the forbidden exceeding of limits with regards to the dead person's rights or may lead to disclosing their faults if they are seen in a bad form after death. But if the family of the deceased desire to uncover the face of the deceased before or after washing the corpse to kiss or see them for a short while that does not result in delaying preparing the deceased for burial, there is no problem. This is on the condition that the deceased is not seen or kissed by an unmarriageable person of him or her. This is indicated by the above Hadith narrated on the authority of `Aishah and the Hadith of Jabir ibn `Abdullah (may Allah be pleased with him): \(When my father was martyred, I lifted the sheet from his face and wept and the Prophet did not forbid me.\) (Related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad [Hadith compilation]; Al-Bukhari who ranked it as Hadith Mu`allaq [a Hadith missing link in the chain of narration, reported directly from the Prophet], Muslim, Al-Nasa'y, Al-Bayhaqy, Ibn Hibban, and other scholars of Hadith) `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) said: \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) kissed `Uthman ibn Mazh`un when he died; until I saw tears coming down his cheeks.\) (Related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (vol. 6, p. 56), Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, and Ibn Majah)

Fifth, It is authentically proved according to the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him) that after burying the dead and closing their grave that the people ask Allah to forgive them and grant them steadfastness. This is indicated by the Hadith reported by `Uthman ibn `Affan (may Allah be pleased with him): \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\), after finishing the burial of a dead person, used to stand by their grave and say: Ask Allah to forgive your brother and grant them steadfastness, as they are now questioned.\) After finishing the supplication, seeking forgiveness for the deceased person and asking Allah to grant them steadfastness, the people leave. This is what is lawful and proved according to the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him). As for reminding the dead saying: "O so- and - so, when you are asked about your Lord, say: 'My Lord is Allah'", etc., and reminding them to say Shahadah (Testimony of Faith) after burial, this has no grounds in the religion. It was not done by the Prophet (peace be upon him) or his Companions (may Allah be pleased with them). Ibn Al-Qayyim (may Allah be merciful to him) said: "The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) would not recite (Qur'an) by graves, nor would he remind the dead to say 'la ilah illa Allah'. The Hadith related about reminding the dead person to say specific words is not authentic." Mentioning the good things and piety signs seen on a person after their death without exaggerating about their state and without saying this at a certain time or place is permissible. This is so that the people know about the deceased, supplicate to Allah and seek forgiveness for them and follow their examples with regards to good deeds. But this should not be done as a tradition to be followed on a person's death by standing by their grave to mention their good deeds and traits for the reasons mentioned above. In addition to this, exceeding limits in regards to the dead being taken as a source of blessing by the ignorant and lay-people, this may bring about un-praiseworthy consequences.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 389)

Sixth, as far as we know there is nothing related in Shari`ah regarding carrying the coffin according to the direction of the procession with the head of the deceased heading toward the Masjid, so there is flexibility about this matter.

What is easier in this regards to those who carry the coffin is given priority, whether to enter the Masjid with the head or the feet of the corpse directed toward the Masjid. Both directions are permissible so no person is to be criticized or blamed for choosing either direction.

Burying Muslims with Christians in the Same Graveyard

Fatwa no. 15267

Q: I am an Muslim immigrant in Canada. My country of origin is Algeria. My father lived in Algeria. He suffered from a chronic disease for a long time. He had to travel to France to get medical treatment. Yet, it was Allah's will that he died there and we buried him in a cemetery for Christians. I was still a young man when he died 26 years ago. Now that I grew up, became a man and a father, I want to relieve my conscience and fulfill my duty towards my father.

My question is: Is it permissible for me to exhume his body out of the cemetery of the Christians and rebury his remains in the graveyard of Muslims? Please give me a Fatwa in this regard, may Allah reward you greatly.

A: It is obligatory that his remains should be disinterred from the cemetery of the Christians and reburied in the graveyard where Muslims bury their dead.

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family, and his Companions!

Muslims? It is worth mentioning that before his death he instructed me to bury him in Algeria, but at that time I had no money nor could I devise any other plan to execute his will.

A: It is not permissible to bury a Muslim person in the cemetery of the Kafirs (disbelievers). But, if it so happened, his remains should, by any means, be exhumed and moved to the graveyard of Muslims, if they have one there. Else, he should be moved to any other place void of any grave of the disbelievers.

Q 5: Most of the immigrant Muslims who live here in Russia do not perform Salah (Prayer), due to the impress the Russians have had on them over the long years. Only the elders of them, aged seventy years or older, perform Salah. Thus, if any of the Muslim Arabs died here, should we bury him in the cemeteries of the Russians, or we should fly his body to his Muslim country?

A 5: Whoever died while deliberately abandoning Salah is not a Muslim and should not be buried in the graveyards of Muslims. The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: ﴿What makes one a disbeliever is the abandonment of prayers.﴾ (Recorded by Imam Muslim). Whoever died while testifying that there is no deity but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, regularly establishing Salah, and committing no sins that are on contradiction of Islam, must not be buried in the cemeteries of the Kafirs (disbelievers). Rather, he should be transferred to either to his Muslim country or to the nearest Muslim graveyard where he is to be buried.

Q: An Iraqi brother died in a car accident. I think he was a righteous person, and Allah is sufficient for him. I do not commend and praise anyone in front of Allah. He wrote a will that he should be buried in this land, i.e., in Germany. Actually, there is a Muslim graveyard beside those of the Christians but it is separate from them. Yet, there arose two problems concerning his burial:

1- The law of the land prescribes that the deceased is to be buried in the box, following all the terms as apply to Christians. A contract, which lasts for twenty years, beginning from the burial of the deceased, is signed between the family of the deceased and the German municipality responsible for the graveyards. According to this contract, the bereaved family of the deceased is to pay 500 German Marks, i.e., the equivalent of 2500 U.S. dollars in instalments until the end of the term, i.e. twenty years. At the end of this term, the family should renew the contract for another twenty years. In the case of non-renewal, the remains of the dead will be dug out, burnt, and the place will be cleaned for burying another dead according to the same conditions as before.

2 - If the deceased brother had made his will without knowing all these regulations, should we not abide by his will and fly his body to a Muslim country, by way of honoring him and saving his body from all this hassle?

3 - If we transfer his body to a Muslim country, it will be shipped in a tin box (a type of metal), according to the regulations followed in these countries (Europe) that ban shipping of corpses inside wood boxes. It should be known that the tin box is so firmly-secured in order to preserve the body from decomposition. If this box should be opened, it will result in health problems for those who will open it. This is what had already happened in some Arab countries, where the box was broken open resulting in the death of two people due to the bacteria coming out of it.

It is worth mentioning that the body of the deceased here is washed and shrouded, according to the rules of the Shari'ah, before being put in this box.

A: If the situation is as you have mentioned, the deceased should be washed, shrouded, and Janazah (Funeral) Prayer should be offered to him. There is no sin in putting him within the mentioned tin box after that. He should be moved to the graveyards of Muslims in any Muslim country. There is no sin in placing him in the mentioned tin box without opening it.

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family and his Companions!

Q 1: Is it permissible for a Muslim to follow the funeral procession of a deceased who is Christian?

A 1: It is not permissible for a Muslim to follow the funeral of a Christian or any other Kafirs (disbelievers). He is not also permitted to attend the burial of non-Muslims, because Allah forbade us to take the Kafirs as close friends. Allah (Glorified be He) said: ﴿O you who believe! Take not the Jews and the Christians as Auliya' \(friends, protectors, helpers\), they are but Auliya' of each other.﴾ And: ﴿And never \(O Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\) pray \(funeral prayer\) for any of them \(hypocrites\) who dies, nor stand at his grave. Certainly they disbelieved in Allâh and His Messenger, and died while they were Fâsiqûn \(rebellious, - disobedient to Allâh and His Messenger صلى الله عليه وسلم\).﴾ This proves that the ruling includes all the Kafirs: The Jews, the Christians, Magians, Idolaters and hypocrites. Following their funerals is part of following their ways.

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has examined the Fatwa request submitted to His Eminence, the General Chairman, from his Excellency, the General Manager of Obstetric and Pediatric Hospital in Jeddah, and referred to the Committee from the General Secretariat of Council of Senior Scholars under no. 2254, dated 11/5/1412 A.H. in which his Excellency asks:

We hope if Your Eminence could answer the following enquiry:

A child born to non-Muslim parents may die before delivery in the mother's womb or a few hours after birth. Are such children dealt with as Christians (like their parents) or as Muslims according to their Fitrah (innate pure nature)? Where should they be buried? May Allah reward you with the best!

After the Committee examined the Fatwa request that was submitted, it answered as follows: If the situation is as you have mentioned, those children are dealt with as non-Muslims and are not to be buried in the graveyards of Muslims.

May Allah grant us success! Peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

The second question of Fatwa no. 17940

Q: A group of Muslim immigrants

to non-Muslim countries collect contributions from among themselves, either monthly or annually, and dedicate these funds to sending back the corpse of any member of the group from the land of Kufr to their Islamic countries. But whoever leaves there and returns to his country alive can claim nothing of the money he has contributed? The reason behind sending back the bodies is the cost of the graves in these Western countries is so high that the immigrants can afford paying it. Even if one can pay the cost-policy conditioned by the government, unless the policy is renewed, the grave will be exhumed at the end of the term, where the remains of the corpse are burnt. Now my question is: what is the ruling of Islam on this? Is it permissible to join in the work of these groups? Is it obligatory to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on the money collected for this purpose?

A 2: There is no harm in collecting money and allocating it to sending back the bodies of the deceased Muslims to be buried in an Islamic cemetery, since moving them in the case as mentioned in the question is necessary. There is no Zakah due on the money collected for this purpose, since this money does not belong to a certain person and because it is gathered to spend on charity activities.

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Offering condolences to the bereaved family

Fatwa no. 14705

Q: We wrote to you two years ago about establishing a house for offering or receiving condolences in the south of Jeddah without recitation of the Glorious Qur'an in it. There is no house for this purpose, contrary to the north of Jeddah, in which a house for this purpose was built two years ago on the hand of Shaykh Muhammad `Awad ibn Ladin (may Allah have mercy upon all people). The reason behind building a house for offering or receiving condolences is that many families live in small flats of only two or three rooms. When a member of the family dies, the flats cannot accommodate those who come to offer condolences to their male or female relatives and neighbors besides the bereaved family. Thereupon, we thought that a house would serve this purpose as a pious act intended to please Allah. We referred this question to your honor to examine it and guide us to what is appropriate.

A: Every act done for the Sake of Allah (Exalted be He) should agree with what comes in the Book of Allah or the authentic sayings, acts or approvals of the Prophet (peace be upon him). A person is rewarded when offering condolences because he or she is soothing the pain and sorrow of the bereaved family and through supplicating for them. The etiquette of offering condolences to the bereaved family was authentically reported in the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet) of the Chosen Prophet (Muhammad, peace be upon him), the deeds of the Companions and the Four-Rightly Guided Caliphs (may Allah be pleased with them all). (It was reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) offered condolences to a daughter of his when her child died saying: "To Allah belongs what He took and to Him belongs what He gave. Every thing is recorded with Him for an appointed term." Also, he commanded her to show patience and Ihtisab (confident anticipation of Allah's Recompense).) It was related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. It is also permissible to supplicate by any other Mashru` (Islamically lawful) Dua` (supplication) reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) like: "May Allah soothe your grief, compensate your suffering and grant you a better substitute." This is based on what was reported on the authority of Umm Salamah who said: "I heard the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) saying: (Whomever is inflicted with misfortune and then says: 'Inna Lillahi wa Inna Ilaihi Raje'un [Truly to Allah we belong and truly, to Him we shall return] and then says: 'O Allah, reward me because of my misfortune, and bestow on me a better substitute,' then Allah will reward him because of his misfortune and will bestow on him a better substitute.'" Umm Salamah said: "When Abu Salamah died, I said what the Messenger (peace be upon him) ordered me, so Allah (Exalted be He) bestowed on me a better substitute; the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him)." (Related by Muslim) Condolences are offered to the deceased's guardian at home, in the street, in the market or at work.

It was not narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him), his revered Companions, the Four-Rightly Guided Caliphs or an Imam (an initiator of a school of jurisprudence) appointed a time or a place to receive condolences or gather people for this purpose. If doing this is a good deed, the Prophet (peace be upon him) would have necessarily done it. He (peace be upon him) did not appoint a place or a time to receive condolences about his uncle, Hamzah ibn `Abdul-Mutalib, and his cousin, Ja`far ibn Abu Talib, who were killed, or his children Ibrahim and Zaynab and other virtuous Companions who died in the era of the Prophet (peace be upon him). He himself died afterwards and despite the deep love for him in the hearts of the Muslims and the Companions in particular, they did not gather to receive condolences. If gathering for condolences had been

Mashru`, they would have gathered for this purpose. Also, Abu Bakr, `Umar, `Uthman and Aly as well as the Mothers of the Believers and other Companions died; however, it was not known that anyone appointed a place to gather the people in it to receive condolences. This proves that gathering for the purpose of receiving condolences, and preparing food and drink for the attendants is a baseless Bid`ah (innovation in religion) which should be fought and denied. Whoever does it incurs sins.

When this was done in the late generations, the revered Companion Jarir ibn `Abdullah Al-Bajaly commented: We (the Companions of the Prophet) considered gathering for the purpose of visiting the bereaved family and preparing food after burying the deceased, to be acts of wailing." It was related by Imam Ahmad through a good Isnad (chain of narrators).

We identify it as a Bid`ah when a place or time is specified for this purpose and also, when bringing lights, readers of the Qur'an, and food and drinks for the bereaved family. We come to say that it is not permissible to establish a house for the purpose of offering or receiving condolences whether it is paid for or free.

Fatwa no. 16552

Q: One of the matters that have been innovated in this age is the change that took place in the manner of offering condolences in the southern region. As you know, offering condolence is a common right among Muslims.

(Part No. 7; Page No. 401)

People have been discussing this issue and a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) was issued in this regard, yet it seems that the matter still needs further clarification and explanation, since the Fatwa that was conveyed to people was not detailed. Due to my keenness to handle the issue and touch people's hearts through a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) means that leaves nothing without sufficient detail, I want Your Eminence to examine the case and issue the proper Shar`y ruling that encompasses most of its aspects. May Allah grant you success.

Description of offering condolences now practiced in the southern region:

- 1- Upon hearing that someone has died, their relatives, sons, daughters, sisters, brothers-in-law, nephews and nieces, and members of the tribe gather.
- 2- The period of gathering extends for at least three days.
- 3- The neighboring villages and tribes come in groups to offer condolences; each group is about forty or thirty men. This requires the bereaved tribe to receive the mourners.
- 4- Food should be served for those who offer condolences in two ways:
 - a) Members of the deceased person's tribe themselves share the cost of the food, including lunch dinner and coffee, for three days;
 - b) Some relatives share, in turns, the cost during this period whether in participation or each paying the cost of a separate day.

- 5- A pavilion of tents is set up for the reception of those who come to offer condolences as well as those who are receiving them.
- 6- This happens when the deceased is a male. If a female dies, they do not gather to offer condolences; rather, they do so individually, whether on the part of her relatives or the people of other tribes.
- 7- With regard to the estate of the deceased, his children, and wife or wives, do not pay the cost except perhaps for the hire of the pavilion. They are served by the members of the tribe with regard to all the costs and requirements of offering condolences.

A: First, offering condolences to a bereaved family is permissible, since this is a form of showing sympathy to them. It should be through supplicating to Allah (Exalted be He) to have mercy on the deceased, and relieve the distress of family and friends of the deceased, and to command them to remain patient and expect Allah's reward. It has been authentically narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him) offered condolences to one of his daughters when her son died saying: "Whatever

Allah takes is for Him and whatever He gives, is for Him, and everything with Him has a limited fixed term (in this world)." He (peace be upon him) ordered her to be patient and to hope for Allah's reward.) (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). It is permissible to offer any Du`a' (supplication) for them, such as: "I offer you my condolences; may Allah relieve your distress with something better." This is based on a Hadith narrated by Umm Salamah (may Allah be pleased with her) who said: "I heard Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) saying: (If any Muslim who suffers a calamity says, what Allah has commanded him: "We belong to Allah and to Him shall we return; O Allah, reward me for my affliction and give me something better than it in exchange for it," Allah will give him something better than it in exchange." Umm Salamah added: "When Abu Salamah died I said these words as commanded by Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him), and Allah gave me Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) in exchange." (Related by Muslim).

Second, condolences can be offered at the Masjid (mosque), when offering Janazah (Funeral) Prayer, in the graveyard, in the street, in the market, at a house of the bereaved family, through phoning them, etc.

Third, offering people condolences for the death of their relative; male or female, should be the same. As mourners do not gather, go in groups and set up pavilions to offer condolences for the death of a woman, the same should be observed with men. It is not permissible to set up pavilions or to set certain days for receiving condolences. This act was not reported from Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him), his noble Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet), his Rightly-Guided Caliphs, or any of the scholars that they dedicated certain number of days, time or place for receiving condolence. Nor is it permissible to gather people for condolences. Had this been permissible, it would have been done by Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him). The paternal uncle of the Prophet (peace be upon him), Hamzah ibn `Abdul-Muttalib, was martyred; his cousin, Ja`far ibn Abu Talib was martyred too; his (peace be upon him) son, Ibrahim died; and his (peace be upon him) daughter, Zaynab died too; and many notable Sahabah died during his (peace be upon him) lifetime. The Prophet (peace be upon him) also died. He (peace be upon him) is most beloved by Muslims and was even much more loved by his Sahabah, yet no pavilion was set up for the people to offer or receive condolences for his death. Had gathering for condolences been permissible, they would have done it. Similarly, Abu Bakr, `Umar, `Uthman, `Aly, the Mothers of the Believers, i.e. the wives of the Messenger (peace be upon him) and all his Sahabah died. Yet it is well-known that no one established pavilions for receiving or offering condolences for their death, and people did not gather for this purpose. This proves that gathering for condolences and serving food to those who are attending is a rejected, baseless Bid`ah in religion. Rather, it should be denied and the person who helps in establishing it is sinful.

When the later generations innovated gathering for this purpose and serving food to the people attending to offer condolences, the venerable Companion Jarir Ibn `Abdullah Al-Bajaly said: "We, i.e. the Sahabah, used to count gathering at the bereaved family's house and serving food after burial among the (forbidden acts of) wailing. (Related by Imam Ahmad through a Hasan [good] Isnad [chain of narrators]). However, serving food to the family of the deceased by their neighbors or relatives is a Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet), based on what was narrated by Abu Dawud on the authority of `Abdullah ibn Ja`far who said: "When the news of the death of Ja`far (may Allah be pleased with him) came upon his death, Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: (Prepare food for the family of Ja`far for there came upon them an incident which has engaged them.) (Related by Imam Ahmad, Al-Tirmidhy and Ibn Majah, and it was ranked as a Hadith Hasan [good Hadith] by Al-Tirmidhy). Food should be served to the bereaved family at their house but not for those gathering in the pavilions or tents, since the purpose behind this is that the bereaved family is too busy with their sorrow to prepare food for themselves. Thus, they should be served with food.

Q 1: Both my father and my maternal grandmother died, may Allah bestow abundant mercy upon them both! One of the customs widespread among women in our country is that they would come to offer condolences and bring with them some coffee beans and money and offer them to the female relatives of the deceased. It happened that some women from nearby villages gave some coffee beans and money to my mother. This happened seven years ago. Yet now my mother, due to her old age, no longer knows who came to offer her condolences out of them, which makes her unable to give back the mentioned things to their owners. Now she wants to discharge her responsibility of the rights she owes to people, what should she do? Is this deed Shar`y (Islamically lawful) or is it a Bid`ah (innovation in religion)? Please give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar), may Allah reward you!

A: It is permissible to offer condolences through supplicating to Allah for the deceased and their family, commiserating with them, commending them to resort to patience and hope for Allah's reward, and serve them with food without extravagance or showing off. Accordingly, if what was brought by the mentioned women was offered as a gift and showing commiseration, there is nothing wrong with that.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q 1: It is a widespread practice in our country, especially in Sarhad region, Pakistan, that upon the death of anyone there, people as well as some scholars would come to offer condolences to the family of the deceased. Their manner in offering condolences is that they keep supplicating to Allah while raising their hands to heaven. They are so strictly committed to raising their hands in offering condolences that they condemn and blame whoever leaves this practice. They say about such a person that he belongs to the Wahhabis. They believe that condolences should be offered only by raising their hands and supplicating to Allah collectively.

Whoever offers condolences at the house of the bereaved family and supplicates to Allah for them without raising their hands is condemned by people and regarded as having not offered condolences at all. This is because Muslims and scholars in those areas believe that condolences must only be offered by raising the hands in Du`a' (supplication), otherwise it would not be counted as having been offered.

Some people bring a Qur'an reciter to the family of the deceased to recite some Surahs (Qur'anic chapters), and they all keep raising their hands and supplicating to Allah collectively.

If ten people, for example, come to offer condolences to the family of the deceased, one of them would say, "Raise your hands and supplicate to Allah," thereupon all the attendants would supplicate to Allah collectively, and then wipe their faces with their hands. Then another person of the ten would do the same thing just as has been done by the first one, and so forth until the last one of the ten.

We hope Your Eminence, may Allah safeguard you, may give us comprehensive answers with proofs regarding the following questions:

1- What are the forms of offering condolences that match with the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet) and the generations whom the Prophet (peace be upon him) witnessed to their goodness? What is the ruling on the above-mentioned practice of those people?

2- What are the rulings on offering condolences that match with Shari`ah (Islamic law)?

3- Mu'tadi's (those who introduce innovations in religion) claim that it was authentically reported in the Chapter on "Maghazy" in "Al-Jami` Al-Sahih" for Imam Al-Bukhari that one should raise their hands and supplicate to Allah for the deceased when offering condolences to the bereaved family at their house. Is this correct?

4- With regard to coming to the bereaved family and asking Allah to forgive the deceased and have mercy on them while raising their hands and supplicating in a collective way, is this regarded as following the Sunnah or following a Bid`ah?

A: It is Mustahab (desirable) to offer condolences to the bereaved family through supplicating to Allah for both the deceased and their family provided they are Muslims. The formula that one should say to the bereaved: "May Allah appreciate your patience, relieve your affliction, and forgive your deceased!" There is no need for raising one's hands. It is not obligatory to offer condolences at the house of the bereaved family. Rather, this can be done anywhere. Out of the forms of commiserating with the bereaved family is to prepare and serve them food according to their need, since they are busy with their affliction to prepare food for themselves. It was reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Prepare food for the family of Ja`far since they are too busy with their affliction.» Du`a' should not be collective because this manner is a Bid`ah. Rather it should be done individually. Among the ordained Du`a' for the deceased also is that upon finishing burial, one should stand by the grave and say: "O Allah, forgive them! O Allah, make them remain steadfast!" Upon burying a deceased, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Seek forgiveness for your brother and beg steadfastness for him, for he will be questioned now.»

Any saying or deed in offering condolences that has no authentic evidence from the Sunnah should be abandoned and warned against.

The second question of Fatwa no. 17458

Q 2: A few groups of scholars, who call themselves Ahl-ul-Sunnah (adherents to the Sunnah), have appeared in our country. They state the following claims: 1) Serving food in the deceased's house for three to seven days, during the special days, such as Thursdays and Fridays, and upon the passage of forty days is permissible and authentically recorded in the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him). 2) The deceased can hear and respond to Salam (Islamic greeting of peace) and can recognize those visiting them, in the same way that they can be recognized by those who are alive. 3) Asking the deceased to supplicate to Allah, plastering the graves and building domes over them, are all permissible. 4) Taking fees for reciting the Noble Qur'an in Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) or for the deceased in the form of food, clothes, or in cash is permissible. Are these claims true or contrary to the Qur'an and Sunnah?

A 2: It is Mashru` (Islamically permissible) to serve sufficient food for the deceased's family to satisfy their need, since they will be too busy with their calamity to prepare food for themselves. Thus this is a matter of sympathy with them. The Prophet (peace be upon him) commanded some of his family to serve food for Ja`far ibn Abu Talib's family (may Allah be pleased with him) upon receiving the news of his death in Al-Sham (the Levant), saying: «Prepare food for the family of Ja`far for there came upon them an incident which has engaged them.»

As for the family of the deceased serving food for people and holding ceremonies during certain days, this is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion). Jarir ibn `Abdullah (the companion of the Messenger of Allah, peace be upon him) said: "We used to consider gathering at the bereaved family's house and preparing food after burial among the (forbidden acts of) wailing." As for building domes and Masjids (mosques) over graves, the Prophet (peace be upon him) cursed whoever does that, because this is one of the means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) and one of the practices of the Jews and the Christians. The same applies to plastering graves, which was forbidden by the Messenger (peace be upon him), because this is one of the means leading to Shirk. It is narrated in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her), that she said: «When the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) was dying, he began pulling his Khamisah \(blanket\) over his face but when he felt suffocated by it, he removed it from his face and at that point he said: 'May the curse of Allah be upon the Jews and the Christians who took the graves of their Prophets as places of worship.'» There is another Hadith related on the authority of Jabir (may Allah be pleased with him), who said: «The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) forbade plastering graves, erecting structures over them,

and sitting on them.» (Related by Ahmad, Muslim and Al-Tirmidhy, and was ranked as Sahih (authentic) by Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah). With regard to hiring Qur'an reciters to recite for the soul of the deceased, this is a Bid`ah, and every Bid`ah is misguidance. Nothing should be demanded of the deceased, neither Du`a' (supplication) nor anything else, since they are able to do nothing. Rather, asking, seeking refuge or help with, or asking the dead to supplicate to Allah for someone, all these matters are from the types of major Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship that takes the Muslim out of Islam), since this is considered a kind of worshiping the dead.

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q1: Is it permissible to offer condolences to the bereaved family before burying the deceased? Please provide me with evidence.

A: It is permissible to offer condolences before or after the burial of the deceased as there is no proof that specifies an appointed time for offering condolences. Condolences are meant to soothe the pain and sorrow of the inflicted so they can be offered at any time. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(offered condolences to one of his daughters before the burial of her child who had died.\)

Q: I live in a rural area where there are Muslims and Christians. Whenever a Muslim dies, the Christians attend and follow his funeral and burial, and then offer condolences to the bereaved family. This made the mayor of the village suggests following the same practice when one of the Christians dies. He says that when a Christian dies, we should follow his funeral procession and offer condolences to the Christians. What is the ruling on this action? Please advise us, may Allah reward you!

A: It is not permissible for a Muslim to follow the funeral of a Kafir (non-Muslim) or to attend his burial, because Allah (Glorified be He) has forbidden us from supporting and befriending Kafirs. As for offering condolences to Kafirs, there is no harm in it, yet do not supplicate to Allah to forgive their deceased.

Q 3: With regard to women going to the family of the deceased to briefly offer condolences, is it considered Makruh (reprehensible) if they stay there for a long time?

A: If there is any feature of Bid`ah (innovation in religion) or forbidden acts, such as holding mourning ceremonies, wailing and other practices of Jahiliyyah (pre-Islamic time of ignorance), then it is neither permissible for men nor for women to attend. Only those who can condemn Munkar (that which is unacceptable or disapproved of by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect) can go to offer condolences. If it contains nothing of this, there is nothing wrong in going to offer condolences to the family of the deceased according to what agrees with the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet).

Q 1: Is it permissible to say to the family of the deceased: "May the rest be in your life"? What is the Islamic ruling regarding this?

A: This statement is frequently repeated by some people to convey their wishes that the addressee's life be long and full of goodness. However, the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet) is to offer condolences, and, supplicate for the deceased and his family in conformity with the way and words reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him). This benefits both the deceased and the living, as well as brings reward for the person offering condolences. It was narrated from Ibn Mas'ud (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who consoles a grief-stricken person will have a reward similar to his.\) (Related by Al-Tirmidhy and Ibn Majah)

Q: In the Civil Defense Center in Sharurah as well as in some other tribes, we are accustomed to slaughter an animal when a relative of a workmate dies and he returns to work after offering condolences as a way of commiserating with him.

What is the ruling on this slaughtered animal?

A: The Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet) is that the family of the deceased should be served food according to their need, since they are busy with their affliction. The Prophet (peace be upon him) commanded that the family of Ja`far should be served food when they received the news of his death. The served food should be according to what one can afford. The command mentioned above on the part of the Prophet (peace be upon him) is not obligatory. Rather, it is Mustahab (desirable), since it is classified under commiseration with others.

Q 1: There is a tradition that has long been practiced by people, that is, when a person dies, the people visit the grieving family for condolences. They take with them cooked meat of whole slaughtered animals. Each group of people bring one cooked slaughtered animal; so sometimes the number of the slaughtered animals, which are brought is about six. Most of this food is thrown away as it is excess, because the people who eat from it are only those who bring it and the grieving family. What is your legal opinion on this act? May Allah reward you with the best. We would like you to give advice on this matter. May Allah benefit the Muslims with it. Would you please also explain for us the Hadith: \(Prepare some food for the family of Ja`far ...\) as some people explain it in their own way, making food in excess as I clarified in the question?

A: It is desirable to send prepared food for the grieving family, as support and showing sympathy to them, as they may be preoccupied with their sorrow and the people visiting them for condolences, making no food for themselves. This is based on the Hadith related by Imam Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, and Ibn Majah through authentic Isnad (chain of narrators) on the authority of `Abdullah ibn Ja`far (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) who said: "When the death of Ja`far was known, the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings be upon him) said: \(Prepare some food for the family of Ja`far, for what has befallen them is keeping them preoccupied.\)

As for what you have mentioned in the question about each group of people bringing with them a cooked slaughtered animal to the extent that there may be an excess of several animals cooked at one day, this excess of food is an example of exceeding the proper limits of the desirable act which the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) instructed by his saying: \(Prepare some food for the family of Ja`far...\) Such acts of making excess food is categorized under the forbidden extravagance, according to Shari`ah (Islamic law); Allah (Glorified be He) says: \(O Children of Adam! Take your adornment \(by wearing your clean clothes\), while praying and going round \(the Tawaf of\) the Ka`bah, and eat and drink but waste not by extravagance, certainly He \(Allah\) likes not Al-Musrifun \(those who waste by extravagance\).\) And: \(But spend not wastefully \(your wealth\) in the manner of a spendthrift.\) \(Verily, the spendthrifts are brothers of the Shayâtin \(devils\), and the Shaitân \(Devil-Satan\) is ever ungrateful to his Lord.\) Ibn `Abbas said: "Eat, drink, and get dressed without wastefulness or showing off." (Related by Al-Bukhari as Hadith Mu`allaq [a Hadith missing link in the chain of narration, reported directly from the Prophet]).

This Hadith is also related by Imam Ahmad and Al-Nasa'y on the authority of `Amr ibn Shu`ayb who reported it on the authority of his grandfather as Hadith Marfu` (a Hadith narrated from the Prophet with a connected or disconnected chain of narration) that the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: \(Eat, drink, get dressed and offer Sadaqah \(voluntary charity\) without wastefulness or showing off. Verily, Allah loves to see the sign of His Bounties on His Servants.\) The relatives, friends, and neighbors of the grieving family are to agree amongst themselves on preparing sufficient food so that they do not fall into what is forbidden in this regard. Also that what they do for the grieving family would have a good influence on the latter who will make use of the food without throwing it away. Besides, bringing food in excess to the grieving family changes the situation from being a sympathetic and helping one to being a situation of showing off. It also preoccupies the grieving family with the task of how to distribute this food and find people to eat the food. With regard to the grieving family preparing food for the people who pay condolence visits to them whether this food has been paid for from the money of the heirs or from the third willed by the deceased of their property or by persons visiting them, all of this is unlawful as it contradicts the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet). Besides, it is an act similar to the acts of the Jahiliyyah (pre-Islamic time of ignorance), and it adds to the grief of the grieving family and further encumbers them unnecessarily. It is related by Imam Ahmad and Ibn Majah through good Isnad on the authority of Jarir ibn `Abdullah Al-Bajaly

Q: Some seekers of knowledge say that standing in a row on the part of the relatives of the deceased and extending their hands to shake hands with those passing by them to offer them condolences after finishing burial is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion). They deem this manner forbidden, since, according to them, it matches with what is practiced by the Christians. Not finding any Nas (Islamic text from the Qur'an or the Sunnah) that proves or negates this, I opined to write to Your Eminence to know the correct answer regarding this issue. May Allah guide you to what pleases Him! May Allah reward you with the best reward and benefit the Muslims through you! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: There is nothing wrong in receiving condolences on the part of the relatives of the deceased from people in the graveyard either before or after burial. If the former stand in a row either in the graveyard or elsewhere when receiving condolences to facilitate the mission of the latter, this implies nothing wrong. There is no prohibition regarding this as far as we know, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

Q: We are teachers working in Al-Ta'if. Allah has willed that a father of a colleague die. Some of us saw, as a kind of cooperation and offering condolences to the grieving family, according to the Hadith: \(Prepare some food for the family of Ja`far...\) that we prepare a meal for the grieving family. So we collected some money for this purpose. Some colleagues were assigned to prepare and take the food to the house of the grieving family, and serve it to them without encumbering the family with serving it or inviting persons from outside the family to it. After having this food with them, the colleagues collected the dishes and cleaned the dining tables, left the place, and gave the excess food in charity to the poor. On the following day, some other colleagues criticized this act as a part of wailing, based on the narration of Jabrir ibn `Abdullah Al-Bajaly (may Allah be pleased with him): "We used to count gathering with the family of the deceased and making food for them after the burial to be a kind of wailing." We argued with each other about this subject and agreed all to refer to the knowledgeable scholars to give us a legal ruling on this. Is this act considered wailing? Is our eating with the grieving family unlawful? Please give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on this, may Allah reward you with the best.

A: What you have done, i.e., preparing food for the grieving family is lawful and desirable. But the food should be enough to feed the deceased's family without extravagance in this regard, as the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: \(Prepare some food for the family of Ja`far, for what has befallen them is keeping them preoccupied.\) There is nothing wrong also with you joining the grieving family in eating the food you prepared and conveyed to them, without you doing this for the purpose of assembling at the grieving family's house. What is forbidden in this regard is to prepare food for the grieving family and to invite other people to assemble at their house for the purpose of eating from that food, as this is part of wailing. This is in accordance to the narration of Jarir ibn `Abdullah "We used to count gathering with the family of the deceased and making food for them after the burial to be a kind of wailing."

Q 1: We are a clan that consists of groups of families, like the family of Abu Kharim, the family of Matrud, the family of Budiya, etc. The family consists of about three hundred persons. When a person from one of these families dies, his cousins and relatives (from another family) go to the grieving family to give them condolences and say: "We will install a tent and bring food paid for by the cousins of the grieving family" without the grieving family paying anything from their own pocket. The cousin families install tents near to the grieving family's house and stay for three days. We advised them saying: It is not lawful to stay

by the house of the grieving family as this is a part of wailing. They said we want a fatwa from the (Permanent) Committee of Ifta' on this matter and whatever the Committee says we will apply. Please note also that sometimes, some of those do not live in the neighborhood, yet they buy a slaughtered animal and rice and bring them to cook at the house of the grieving family to serve it to those in the tents. Sometimes even the grieving family does not have any of this food due to the great number of the guests. So please, advise us in this regard and clarify the lawful way of offering condolences.

A: What is lawful in regards to offering condolences to a grieving family is to prepare enough food for them, as much as they may need and serve them it. The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said when Ja`far ibn Abu Talib (may Allah be pleased with him) was martyred: \(Prepare some food for the family of Ja`far, for what has befallen them is keeping them preoccupied.\) As for installing tents, preparing much food and assembling by the house of the grieving family, this contradicts the Sunnah (actions following the example of the Prophet). Jarir Ibn `Abdullah Al-Bajaly (may Allah be pleased with him) said: "We used to count gathering with the family of the deceased and making food for them after the burial to be a kind of wailing."

Q 1: What is the ruling on drinking coffee or eating something when visiting a sick person or offering condolences?

A: There is nothing wrong with eating something or drinking a cup of coffee when visiting a sick person, and this does not affect the reward of visiting the sick, provided that this does not cause embarrassment to the sick, and particularly if the sick wishes so. As for eating something or drinking coffee and the like when offering condolences to the family of the deceased, if the family of the deceased do this with the intention of giving a banquet for people, it is not permissible to eat any of it. This is because preparing food for the people offering condolences comes under the ruling of wailing, based on the Hadith reported on the authority of Jarir ibn `Abdullah Al-Bajaly: We used to consider sitting with the family of the deceased and making food for mourners after burial as a sort of wailing. [Related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith compilation), vol. 2, p. 204, and Ibn Majah in his Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes), Book on Funerals through authentic Isnad (chain of narrators)]. If the family of the deceased do not intend so, or if the food is prepared by other people, there is no harm in eating or drinking from it and this will not decrease the reward of condolences.

Q 2: When a person dies in our village, people collect one hundred riyals from each home and give it to the family of the deceased as a kind of condolence; is this permissible? Besides, the cousins or brothers of the deceased pay five hundred riyals or slaughter an animal instead of condolence; is this permissible?

A: It is not permissible to oblige a person to pay a certain amount of money for the family of the deceased; for this is considered a form of eating up one another's property unjustly. If a person wants to help the needy family of the deceased, this is good. But giving banquets and slaughtering cattle on the part of the family of the deceased in what they call condolence has no basis in Shari`ah (Islamic law); rather, this is considered a kind of obligation and burden which they assume. The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is for the relatives or neighbors of the deceased person to prepare food for the bereaved family according to their need, and serve it due to their being preoccupied with the disaster that befalls them to make food for themselves. It was reported that when the Prophet (peace be upon him) was informed of the death of Ja`far ibn Abu Talib (may Allah be pleased with him), he said to his family: «Make for the family of Ja`far food, for they are preoccupied with what befell them.» As for the bereaved family, they should not prepare food for people, for it was authentically reported that Jarir ibn `Abdullah (may Allah be pleased with him) said: We used to consider sitting with the family of the deceased and making food for mourners after burial as a sort of wailing. However, if they make some food as usual for themselves and for a guest that pays them a visit, there is no harm in this.

Q 2: In our country, there is a widely-spread practice that a funeral ceremony is held when someone dies.

The family of the dead person stand in the funeral pavilion to receive the people who come to give them solace. What is the ruling on such a practice? Also, what is the formula of condolences prescribed in the Sunnah? What is the ruling on hiring reciters to recite the Qur'an in such a pavilion? Is such a recitation of the Qur'an useful for the dead person? What is the ruling on the fees the reciter of the Qur'an gets from the dead person's family?

A 2: The practice of holding funeral ceremonies and pavilions as well as hiring reciters of the Qur'an when someone dies is a forbidden Bid'ah (innovation in religion). As for the prescribed formula of condolence, the consoler can say to the relatives of the dead person: "May Allah grant you solace, relieve your affliction and forgive your dead person," without holding funeral pavilions or spending money for no reason. It was authentically reported that Jarir ibn `Abdullah Al-Bajaly (may Allah be pleased with him) said: "We used to regard meeting with the dead person's family as a practice of forbidden mourning." Q: It can be noticed in Makkah Al-Mukarramah known as Allah's Sacred City, Al-Madinah Al-Nabawiyyah and Jeddah that when there is a funeral, lines of lamps are hung, chairs are brought and reciters of the Qur'an are hired to recite the Qur'an using loudspeakers. Then, a ceremonial dinner and a big banquet are provided. It is worth mentioning that this happens before the very eyes and ears of people. These things are done sometimes in the streets, sometimes in the houses and sometimes in places especially prepared for condolences, pursuant to an old Bid'ah (innovation in religion). There is no doubt that this question requires a Fatwa from Your Eminence that warns the people doing such things so that they may give up these practices, hoping that Your Eminence will give them a piece of advice on this question, may Allah safeguard you!

A: After the death of any person, the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is to give solace to the family of the deceased person and advise them to remain patient, sacrifice the dead person for Allah's Reward and invoke Allah for the deceased person. It is desirable for the relatives and neighbors of the family of the deceased to make food for the afflicted family. This is because the dead person's family are busy with their affliction. It was authentically reported that when the Prophet (peace be upon him) was informed of the death of Ja'far (may Allah be pleased with him), he said: (Make food for the family of Ja'far as they are busy with their affliction.) As for the other practices such as holding funeral ceremony, hanging lines of lamps, bringing chairs, hiring reciters of the Qur'an using loudspeakers, feeding people, etc., they are newly-invented practices in religion, which a Muslim is not permitted to do or approve of. Besides, it is obligatory upon Muslims to disapprove of such practices and advise one another to give up all these practices. It was authentically reported that Jarir ibn `Abdullah Al-Bajaly said: "We used to regard meeting with the dead person's family and preparing ceremonial banquets after the burial of the dead person as practices of forbidden mourning." Therefore, all good can be realized by means of following the Sunnah and giving up all newly-invented practices in religion.

Q2: We have a custom that whenever any distress like an accident or death befalls a person or any of his family, after a few days people, including the relatives of the one distressed, invite him saying: We owe you. If the distressed person accepts their invitation, he shall pay a visit to everyone of them where one or two sheep shall be slaughtered and offered to him along with the people of the village. This hospitality is offered by all those who invited him. Those who invited him regard it as a duty to entertain the distressed because of the calamity that has befallen him. Is it permissible to do so?

A2: If the invitation is not given on a certain number of days after someone's death: like twenty or forty days, and the intention is to act generously with him or her to relieve their distress, it is not forbidden. But, if it is a habit that is dated to occur twenty, thirty or forty days after the time of death, it is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion). Yet, providing food for the family of the deceased when they are preparing the funeral and are totally occupied with it is a Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) as the Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said: \(Prepare food for Al Ja`far \(the family of Ja`far\), as they are busy with their distress.\) The hadith is related by Ahmad, Al-Tirmidhy and Al-Hakim.

Q: Being the inhabitants of the region of Alma`, located in the southern region, our ancestors used to live relying on Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) and on the grains their farms produced and the meat, milk and butter they could get. Such a society was an example of social solidarity recommended by our great religion of Islam.

An example of such solidarity among the members of the society was that when a person died and that person was from a poor family who had no food due to being busy with the death and having no time to earn their living, this made them follow a particular method as a sort of solidarity with the bereaved family. The method was as follows: Whoever came to offer condolences to the bereaved family, would bring half a bushel of wheat, corn or barley, each according to their ability without forcing anyone to do that or being asked or begged to do that by the bereaved family, but it was done willingly by people to comfort the bereaved family and provide them with food without burdening them with any costs. It is worth mentioning that these grains were used for making food for the bereaved family and the relatives of the dead person who came from different places to receive those who come to offer their condolences. This practice went on for a long time.

Then, the sun of the Saudi State rose in the Arabian peninsula and welfare spread to all corners of the Arabian peninsula including our region. As a result, sources of income increased after they had been limited to farming and grazing. All people get their needs from the governmental sources; a job, a subsidy or any other means of lawful income.

Most foods are bought ready-made from places outside the house of the bereaved family, a matter that made people give up the practice of bringing half a bushel of grains and instead give a sum of money (50 Riyals) to the bereaved family. This aims to make the bereaved family feel that the society sympathizes with them, as the dead person may be the father or the supporter of the family, so this money can be used to cover the expenses of the family even for a short period of time until the family return to their normal life. Also, some of the money is used to buy food for the bereaved family and their relatives who come from different places to console the bereaved family and receive those offering their condolences to the bereaved family.

I would like to inform you that this sum of money is paid voluntarily, as no one is blamed for not paying it or going to the bereaved family. Besides, this sum of money is very easy to pay. When the bereaved family have such sums of money, this will help them with regard to many matters; for example, paying the debts of the dead person, as many people may die while being indebted to others. Therefore, such debts can be paid from the remainder of this gift. In addition, this money helps the bereaved family with their livelihood until the pressure of their affliction becomes alleviated.

In recent times, people have had long arguments about this question, taking into account that this has nothing to do with people's gathering at the house of the bereaved family. In most cases, the consoler goes to offer his condolences to the bereaved family. Then, he meets separately with the one who is most related by kinship to the dead person and gives him the sum of money or meets him in the graveyard, in the street or in the mosque, or sends the sum of money to the bereaved family without being begged or asked by the bereaved family to give this money.

For the things mentioned above and our desire to know the juristic ruling on this question as the truth is better to be followed, we would be grateful if Your Eminency could give us the juristic ruling on this question!

A: It is not permissible to take the practice of paying a sum of money by whoever goes to offer their condolences to the bereaved family as a regular practice, as this has no origin in the religion of Islam. If someone dies and leaves a poor family with no supporter or someone dies while being indebted to others and leaves nothing to pay such debts and whoever knows about this donates whatever money they can for the sake of paying this debt, this is a good practice as it is a sort of comforting the bereaved family or absolving the dead person from such debt. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Help you one another in Al-Birr and At-Taqwâ (virtue, righteousness and piety)﴾ .

Bid`ahs (rejected innovation in religion) of funerals

The Fatwa No. 18551

Q1: There is a habit that has recently appeared in our city that when a person dies, one of his neighbors stands right after the deceased is buried and announces: "I ask you by Allah to come to a Sadaqah (voluntary charity) I have intended to offer on the third day from the day of his death." Some may answer the invitation in response to the request by Allah (Exalted be He), and some others refuse believing that this act is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion). The Sadaqah is a number of sacrifices offered at the house of the deceased.

Also, some people, especially those who live next to the cemetery, prepare an offering after burying the deceased and ask by Allah those who have escorted the deceased to the grave and others whom they come across, to attend this banquet explaining that this is Sadaqah. Some of those people provide the family of the deceased with food and some do not.

A1: All that was mentioned in the question is Bid`ah, which is forbidden in Islam. Some scholars from the Salaf (righteous predecessors) counted it as an act of wailing over the deceased. So, you should advise those who practice this habit to give it up.

Q2: Some people regard the fall of rain, nice weather on the day of death, the smooth earth of the grave and the large number of those escorting the deceased to the grave and those mourning him or her as good omens for the deceased, and accordingly they say he has righteous deeds, and vice versa.

A2: There is no legal proof about these signs, and they are false. Yet, it is hopefully a good portent to have a large number of people escorting the deceased to the grave and beseeching Allah's Forgiveness and Mercy for him or her.

May Allah grant us success! May peace be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Q: What is the Islamic ruling on walking around the deceased at the time of escorting the funeral and walking through all the village streets until reaching the cemetery? Is the action and direction of walking motivated by the deceased or the ones escorting the deceased? If it is motivated by the deceased, what is the evidence on this from the Book of Allah and the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals) of His Messenger (peace be upon him), as some of the righteous deceased in our village have had their biers escorted through the ways of the village and the neighboring villages as well. This habit has appeared in the Sufi milieus, so what is the legal ruling concerning this practice from the Book and the Sunnah? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: The Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) is to hasten to bury the deceased after offering the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer on him or her, and they should take the shortest way to the cemetery. This is based on the Hadith narrated by Sa'id ibn Al-Musayyib on the authority of Abu Hurayrah

(may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \("Hurry up with the dead body for if it was righteous, you are forwarding it to welfare; and if it was otherwise, then you are removing an evil thing from your necks."\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). The wording of this Hadith is Al-Bukhari's (Volume 2, page 88)

Accompanying the funeral through all the ways and corners of the city has no origin from the Qur'an or the Sunnah of the Prophet (peace be upon him). Rather, it is one of the heresies innovated in religion. So, it is prohibited to do so even if the deceased has written it in his will before his or her death.

May Allah grant us success! May peace be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions!

Q: In our village there is a custom that whenever a relative dies, the neighbors hurry to serve food to the family of the deceased and to the consolers for three days. As you know, this custom overburdens the poor, so is it wrong to observe this custom? The family of the deceased also ask for a pavilion to be erected and hire someone to recite the Qur'an invoking Allah's Mercy on the soul of the deceased, and as you know these procedures are costly both to the poor and the rich. In addition, the shaykh takes money for his recitation. The question is: Is it wrong to observe these customs?

A: Death is inescapable as Allah (Exalted be He) says:

(Part No. 7; Page No. 431)

﴿Everyone shall taste death.﴾ He (Exalted be He) also says: ﴿Whatsoever is on it (the earth) will perish.﴾ The death of a Muslim or one's kin is an ordeal which must be faced with patience and Ihtisab (confident anticipation of Allah's recompense). Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿but give glad tidings to As-Sâbirûn (the patient).﴾ ﴿Who, when afflicted with calamity, say: "Truly! To Allâh we belong and truly, to Him we shall return."﴾ ﴿They are those on whom are the Salawât (i.e. who are blessed and will be forgiven) from their Lord, and (they are those who) receive His Mercy, and it is they who are the guided ones.﴾ Consoling the bereaved is prescribed in Islam, to help allay their grief and comfort them. A consoler may say: "May Allah give you the best consolation, compensate you for your loss and forgive your deceased relative". It is Mustahab (desirable) to prepare and serve food for the family of the deceased as much as they need, as they become so engrossed in their distress to prepare their food. As for what some people do of erecting pavilions to have a large gathering, hiring Qur'an reciters, preparing huge banquets, consuming a large sum of money and spending a long time which overburdens the family of the deceased, all these customs are Bid`ahs (innovations in religion) and burdens that have nothing to do with religion. Jarir ibn `Abdullah (may Allah be pleased with him) said: "We used to consider gathering at the bereaved family's house and preparing food after the burial a kind of wailing." Moreover, if the money consumed for this gathering is taken from the estate left by the deceased, it shall constitute transgression of the rights of the heirs especially if among them are orphans and minors, in which case it shall be unjust consumption of their property.

The third question of Fatwa no. 15393

Q 3: The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(When a person dies, their works \(righteous acts\) come to an end, except for three: Sadaqah Jariyah \(ongoing charity\), beneficial knowledge, or a pious child who supplicates for them.\)

Is it permissible to recite Al-Fatihah (Opening Chapter of the Qur'an) with the intention of invoking Allah's Mercy on my deceased uncle and his deceased son? If it is not permissible, what are the appropriate supplications in such situations?

A: It is not permissible to recite Al-Fatihah or any other portion of the Qur'an for the deceased, for lack of evidence on this issue. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who does an action which is not in accordance with this matter of ours \(Islam\) will have it rejected.\) (Related by Muslim)

Yet, you can give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) on their behalf and supplicate Allah (Exalted be He) to forgive and have mercy on them and admit them to Paradise and protect them from Hellfire. May Allah guide us and you to every good path.

Q: We have heard some people saying: If a person dies and the family of the deceased have fruit and tea during the first three days after the person's death, a member of the family or a relative will die one year after the death of such person.

A: This is not true. The claim that when a person dies and the family has fruit and tea, a member of the family will die some period of time after the death of the person is a superstition and a belief that belongs to Jahiliyyah (pre-Islamic time of ignorance). This is because the moment of the death of any person is all the Will of Allah (Glorified be He) to decide. In addition, both fruit and tea are absolutely lawful at all times.

Q: Some trustworthy people told me that they attended a funeral of a Muslim person; when the coffin was carried out of the house to the grave, it took a direction different from the direction of its carriers and stopped them many times.

A: What is mentioned by the questioner about the funeral has no origin in the religion of Islam. If such a thing actually happened, it might be the work of Satan to mislead people. This is because the deceased no longer has the ability to do anything.

These schemes are devised by Satan to mislead people and draw them away from the Way of Allah (Exalted be He) so that people may think of the deceased as having the power to benefit or harm them and consequently invoke him or her instead of Allah (Exalted be He), as is done by some people who invoke the dead instead of Allah and worship the graves. There is neither might nor power except with Allah! In a word, it is not permissible for a Muslim to believe in such devilish practices.

Q: In some of our villages when digging a grave, the diggers keep on repeating a particular word, which is "Muhammad, Muhammad," until they finish digging the grave. When we asked them about the reason for repeating such word when digging the grave, they replied that they seek help from "Muhammad". Also, on burying the dead person, they say in a collective loud voice: "O Merciful! Grant us mercy when we are between Your Hands as our return is to You!" What is the ruling on such words?

A: First, calling upon the Messenger (peace be upon him) when digging a grave through repeating the word: "Muhammad, Muhammad," is not permissible, as it is a form of seeking help from other than Allah, which constitutes major Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship that takes the Muslim out of Islam) if the person whose help is sought is dead or absent or is a solid body; for example, an idol, a tree or a stone. Allah (Glorified be He) instructs His Servants to seek help from Him Alone in His Saying: ﴿You \(Alone\) we worship, and You \(Alone\) we ask for help \(for each and everything\).﴾

It is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿If you seek help, seek it from Allah.﴾ It is obligatory for them to seek help from Allah Alone.

Second: Collective recitation of particular formulas of Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) in a loud voice when carrying the dead person during the funeral is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion). Therefore, it is not permissible to recite the statements mentioned above as this was not a practice of the Prophet (peace be upon him). It is authentically reported in the Hadith narrated by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Anyone who does an action which is not in accordance with this matter of ours \(Islam\) will have it rejected.﴾

Third: On burying the dead, it is prescribed to say: "In the Name of Allah and according to the religion of the Messenger of Allah." As for the practice of repeating the statement mentioned in the question, it is a Bid`ah.

Q 1: After burying the deceased, a lot of people put some new clothes and pieces of furniture on the graves and leave them there. What is the ruling on such practice? Is it permissible for a poor person to take these things and use them?

Or, it is permissible to collect such things and set fire to them so that people may give up this habit, particularly that they have been informed that these practices are not religiously permissible. I would be grateful if you could explain this question in detail supported with religious evidence.

A: This practice is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) that a Muslim is not permitted to do. Moreover, the authorities have to condemn this practice and remove the clothing and pieces of furniture and confiscate them. If the owners of these things pledge not to do it again, they are to be given back to them; otherwise, the authorities can use them for the public interests.

Q 6: When someone dies, people have certain practices that I am going to list, hoping that you will comment and show the juristic ruling on these practices:

- Some palm tree leaves are put on the coffin (the piece of wood on which the dead body is placed) and these leaves are then buried with the dead person.
- After the burial of the dead body, a shaykh stands at the grave delivering a sermon and then invokes Allah for the dead person while people keep saying "Amen!" in a loud voice.
- This shaykh then addresses the dead person saying three times: "O so-and-so, the child of Adam! Remember the pledge that you died adhering to that you testify that there is no god but

(Part No. 7; Page No. 437)

Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, may Allah make you steadfast (thrice)!

- After the burial of the dead body, both the bereaved family and the relatives stand up to receive condolences from people by shaking their hands and saying to them, "May Allah reward you with the best for your condolences and repay your efforts!"
- After people leave, the bereaved family and some relatives and friends of the dead person stand at the grave and recite Surah Yasin, either individually or collectively in a loud voice.
- Afterwards, the bereaved family gather in their divan or in a pavilion specially prepared for funerals for three days during which a shaykh is hired to recite the Qur'an from the morning until the evening, whereas the relatives of the dead person are obliged to make food during these three days.
- On the third day and after 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, the bereaved family make what is called "Circle of Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah) for the dead person" in which some shaykhs recite some Surahs (Qur'anic chapters) of the Qur'an alternately. Then, some dates or the like are distributed to the attendance.
- The male relatives of the dead person then go to offer condolences to the bereaved family including women with whom such relatives sit and shake hands, whether they are Mahrams (unmarriageable relatives) or non-Mahrams (marriageable relatives).

Are such practices permissible? I would be grateful if you could explain this point, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: All the practices referred to in the question mentioned above are newly-invented Bid'ahs (innovations in religion), except for the practice of offering condolences to the bereaved family which is a permissible practice for comforting the bereaved family. A consoler may say to the bereaved family, "May Allah grant you solace, relieve your affliction and forgive your deceased relative!" Also, it is desirable to prepare food for the bereaved family and offer such food to them according to their need, as they become engrossed in their affliction and have no time to prepare food themselves. Therefore, when the Prophet (peace be upon him) was informed of the death of Ja`far ibn Abu Talib (may Allah be pleased with him), he said: ﴿Make food for the family of Ja`far, for there has befallen them that which is preoccupying them.﴾ As for the practices done by people these days such as setting up pavilions and big tents for big gatherings, hiring reciters of the Qur'an, preparing big banquettes, spending a lot of money and time, all this costs the bereaved family and others a lot, these practices and others referred to in the question mentioned above are Bid`ahs for which Allah has sent down no authority. It was reported that Jarir ibn `Abdullah Al-Bajaly (may Allah be pleased with him) said: "We used to regard gathering at the bereaved family's house and making food after the burial a kind of wailing." If the money spent for such funeral gatherings are taken from the inheritance, it is a kind of injustice to the inheritors, particularly when there are minors and orphans among the inheritors, in which case it shall be unjust consumption of their property.

It is prescribed to give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) on behalf of the dead at any time, by distributing meat or any other kind of food to the needy people.

After advising them against this act, they claimed that they gave up this belief, but they should still slaughter an animal on the third day. What is the ruling on this?

A: Slaughtering an animal for the deceased in this way is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) that has no basis in Shari`ah (Islamic law) and every Bid`ah is misguidance. It is prescribed to give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and make Du`a' (supplication), Hajj or `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) on behalf of the deceased, as supported by reported evidence.

Visiting graves

The first question of Fatwa no. 14409

Q: What is the ruling on visiting graves on the days of `Eids (Festivals) and other days? What is the ruling on reciting the Qur'an for the deceased beside their graves? Does this avail the deceased or not? I am asking this because I live in a village where all the people go out to the graves on the first day of `Eid and eat, drink and play there, while the graves, as I hear, should be a reminder to people to return to Allah as everyone will leave this worldly life.

A: It is prescribed to visit graves for two purposes:

First, to remember the Hereafter as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(I forbade you to visit graves, but now you may visit them for they remind of the Hereafter.\)

Second, to supplicate to Allah for the deceased, as it is authentically reported that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) \(used to say when visiting the graves of Muslims in Baqi` \(the graveyard of Madinah, near the Prophet's Mosque\): Peace be upon you, O inhabitants of the abodes, believers and Muslims. Verily, we will, In sha'a-Allah \(if Allah wills\), join you. You have passed before us and we will follow you. We pray to Allah for our well-being and for yours. O Allah forgive them and grant them mercy.\)

As for sitting at the graves, eating, rejoicing and playing, this is not permissible. Similarly, it is not permissible to supplicate to the deceased as it is they who are most in need of supplicating to Allah for them.

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessing be upon the Last of the Prophets. To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has examined the letter His Eminence the General Chairman received from His Excellency the Deputy Minister of the Interior under no. 69199 dated 6/10/1411 A.H., which was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 4245 dated 20/10/1411 A.H. regarding which His Excellency asks for examining the petition submitted by the questioner M. A. A. Sh., for giving him permission to visit the grave of his daughter in Abu `Arish located in Jizan.

After the Committee examined the petition, it decided that it is not permissible for the questioner to travel to the KSA with the aim of visiting his dead daughter's grave located in the Kingdom. This is because it is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(No journey should be undertaken except to three Masjids \(mosques\): Al-Masjid Al-Haram \(the Sacred Mosque in Makkah\), Al-Masjid Al-Aqsa \(the Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem\) and this Masjid of mine \(the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah\).\)

It is sufficient for the questioner to invoke Allah for her while he is in his homeland.

Q: Is it permissible to visit the graves of non-Muslims, as Allah gave permission to His Prophet (peace be upon him) to visit the grave of his mother, after knowing that she was of the dwellers of Hellfire? How can we reconcile between this and the Prophet's saying: "When you pass by the dwellings of those being tormented, you should bow"?

A: Visiting the graves is absolutely Mashru' (Islamically permissible). Visiting the graves of Muslims should be to supplicate and seek Allah's Forgiveness for them, and, take admonition. It is authentically reported on the authority of Buraydah (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: «The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) used to teach them \(his Companions\) to recite the following when visiting the graves: Peace be upon you, inhabitants of the abodes, believers and Muslims. Verily, we will, In sha'a-Allah \(if Allah wills\), join you. We pray to Allah for well-being for ourselves and for you.»

As for visiting the graves of non-Muslims, this should be for receiving admonition and taking warning. Therefore, when the Prophet (peace be upon him) asked Allah to permit him to visit the grave of his mother, He gave him permission, but when he asked Him to seek forgiveness for her, he was forbidden to. (Related by Muslim in his Sahih)

As for the part of the Hadith mentioned in the question, the authentically reported text is found in the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) on the authority of Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) that when the Prophet (peace be upon him) passed by the dwellings of Thamud people, he (peace be upon him) said: «Do not enter to \(the dwellings of\) those who received punishment, unless you are weeping,

lest you be afflicted with what they were afflicted with.»

Entering the dwellings of people who received punishment is not absolutely prohibited; rather, what is meant is that it is prohibited to visit them while feeling relaxed and happy; as for visiting them weeping, seeking self-admonition, there is nothing wrong with this.

Q: I am an Egyptian person working in Qatar. I am religiously committed and I wish to visit the grave of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and I have been saving the necessary money for travel. However, my mother's sickness consumed all the money I saved. One day, I saw in a dream a man with a face full of light who was wearing a white Jilbab (loose outer garment with no front opening) and a white turban. He said to me: "I am the one who will intercede with your Lord on your behalf on the Day of Resurrection." What is the ruling on this?

A: It is not permissible to travel to Al-Madinah Al-Munawwarah for the purpose of visiting the grave of the Prophet (peace be upon him). Rather, it is prescribed to travel to visit Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy (the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah) to offer Salah (Prayer) in it. Anyone who visits Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy should greet the Prophet (peace be upon him) with Salam (Islamic greeting of peace). This dream of yours was from Satan who wants to frighten and mislead you from the Way of Allah. So you should not pay any attention to this dream or think about it.

If a person intends to visit Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy, it is not incumbent on them to visit it; they may cancel the travel and no compensation is required.

Q 8: Is visiting the graves of Awliya' (pious people) and reciting Qur'an or Al-Fatihah (Opening Chapter of the Qur'an) for them Halal (lawful) or Haram (prohibited)?

A: Visiting graves for the purposes of receiving admonition and supplicating to Allah for the deceased is Mashru' (Islamically permissible), as the Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered us to do so for these purposes. But visiting the graves for Tabarruk (seeking blessings), beseeching for help and supplicating to the deceased instead of Allah is Haram, as this involves major Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship that takes the Muslim out of Islam), may Allah save us!

As for reciting the Qur'an for the deceased people near their graves, this is not permissible just like offering Salah (Prayer) there.

Q 2: What is the ruling on visiting the graves on the thirteenth, fifteenth and fortieth days after the burial of the deceased? I must add that such habits are widespread in our country.

A: Visiting the graves is permissible for men if it is done for the purpose of taking warning and admonition, and invoking Allah (Exalted be He) for the deceased Muslims. It is worth mentioning that there is no fixed time for visiting the graves, so the practice of fixing a particular time for visiting the graves is a Bid`ah (innovation in religion) which Muslims are not permitted to do, as there is no evidence to support this.

Q 2: Is it permissible for women to visit the graves?

A: It is not permissible for women to visit the graves as the Prophet (peace be upon him) cursed the women who do this, for fear that Fitnah (temptation) may take place when women come to the graves grieving and wailing. On the other hand, it is Mustahab (desirable) for men to visit the graves if they are to follow the Mashru' (Islamically prescribed) way of sending Salam (Islamic greeting of peace), supplicating for the deceased and taking warning from their condition. However, visiting the graves for Tabarruk (seeking blessings) and supplicating to the deceased is Bid'ah Shirkiiyyah (innovation in religion tantamount to associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) that is not permissible either for men or women. Likewise, visiting the graves to supplicate and recite the Qur'an there is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) and a means leading to Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship).

What is the prescribed way of visiting the graves, may Allah reward you with the best.

A: Visiting the graves for sending peace, supplicating to Allah to have mercy on the deceased and taking warning from their condition is Mashru` (Islamically prescribed), as the Prophet (peace be upon him) did so and said: \(Visit the graves for they remind of the Hereafter.\) Accordingly, there is nothing wrong if you visit the grave of your father and supplicate to Allah for him, facing the Qiblah and having his grave in front of you. Fatwa no. 20261

Q: Recently, many people have been frequently visiting the grave of Aminah, mother of the Prophet (peace be upon him) in Al-Abwa', on the pretext that the Prophet (peace be upon him) visited it. Is it an act of Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) to visit her grave? Did the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) and Salaf (righteous predecessors) visit it? Did the Prophet (peace be upon him) visit it once or many times? We hope you will give us a satisfactory answer, as the matter is very problematic for it is surprising that some people frequently visit her grave. May Allah grant us success and help you benefit Islam and Muslims.

A: It is known that the Prophet (peace be upon him) visited the grave of his mother once and asked for Allah's Permission to seek His Forgiveness for her, but he was denied permission to do so. It was not reported that he (peace be upon him) ever visited his mother's grave again or that the Sahabah or the Salaf visited or traveled to her grave. Setting out on a journey to visit graves is prohibited as it is a means of Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship).

The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: Do not set out on a journey but to three Masjids \(mosques\)... It is not permissible to set out on a journey to visit the grave of the Prophet's mother or any other grave, based on the Hadith mentioned above. So it is worse to seek the help of the dead which is major Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship that takes the Muslim out of Islam). Accordingly, Muslims should adhere to the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) and keep away from Bid'ah (innovation in religion), Shirk and all the means that lead to it. May Allah grant us all success and guide us to beneficial knowledge and righteous deeds.

Q 2: A relative of mine that I loved and still love for Allah's Sake died. I visit his grave twice or three times a week, where I stand at the grave and invoke Allah for him. Then, I put some sweet basil on his grave. I do this because I heard that when one puts a green branch of a tree or any other green plant on a grave, the plant keeps on seeking Allah's Forgiveness for the person buried in that grave until it dries up. I would be grateful if you could explain this point, may Allah reward you with the best.

A: The practice of putting flowers, basil, green leaves of trees or other green plants on the grave, claiming that they seek Allah's Forgiveness for the person buried in that grave until they become dry is a newly-invented practice and a Bid'ah (innovation in religion) that has no origin in Allah's Purified Shar' (Law). The only permissible practice is to seek Allah's Forgiveness and invoke Allah for the deceased when visiting the grave or at any other place, as only this benefits the dead person. As for the Hadith adopted by some people as evidence on the permissibility of putting green palm tree leaves or other green leaves on the graves, which was narrated by Ibn Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) that: Once

The Prophet (peace be upon him) passed by two graves and said, 'They are being punished, but they are not being punished for anything that was difficult to avoid. One of them used not to take precautions to avoid getting soiled by urine when he urinated, and the other used to walk about spreading Namimah (tale-bearing).' Then he (peace be upon him) took a green palm-branch, which he split in two and planted a piece on each grave. They said, 'O Messenger of Allah, why did you do that?' He (peace be upon him) said, 'May their punishment be reduced so long as these do not dry out.' (Related by Al-Bukhari) It can be said that such a situation was particular to these two people whom Allah informed His Prophet (peace be upon him) that they were being tortured in their graves for a sin each had committed. This practice was exclusive to Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him), not to be taken as a regular practice by the Muslims with regard to their graves.

Rulings of Zakah

Fatwa no. 14061

Q: Is it permissible and acceptable to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) due on gold in banknotes that are common among people or is it necessary to pay it of gold in gold, such as golden pounds, gold bars, or women's jewelry? However, the payment of banknotes is more beneficial for the poor and easier for the one who pays Zakah. Please advise me in this regard as I am confused about this issue. May Allah safeguard and support you in this life and in the Hereafter. May Allah reward you the best on behalf of all Muslims and us.

A: The basic rule is that Zakah should be paid from the kind of wealth on which it is due. For example, the Zakah of money should be paid in the form of money, the Zakah of cattle should be of it, and the Zakah of a commercial commodity should be of it. However, when the interest for the poor is verified, it is permissible to pay Zakah in cash, such as paying the due Zakah on gold in cash after calculating its value at the end of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). The reason for this is that it is more beneficial to the poor and the Council has already issued a Fatwa to this effect, stating:

Decision no. 98, dated 6/11/1402 A.H.

"All Praise is due to Allah. May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The Council of Senior Scholars, during the twentieth session, held in the city of Al-Ta'if from 24/10/1402 A.H. to

(Part No. 8; Page No. 7)

7/11/1402 A.H., reviewed the letter of His Royal Highness, Deputy Prime Minister, no. 22848, dated 27/9/1402 A.H in which His Royal Highness asked about the legal ruling on the payment of Zakah due on grains and fruits in cash instead of paying it from the same kind of wealth on which Zakah is due. The Council also reviewed the letter sent by His Highness, the deputy Minister of Interior no. 42234, dated 22/9/1402 A.H. on the Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) of the judge of Al-Ghat stating the permissibility of paying (Zakah) in banknotes instead of grains and fruits. The Council also reviewed the letter of His Excellency, Minister of Justice, no. 258/1/F, dated 26/6/1402 A.H concerning the case referred to His Excellency from chief of Al-Qasim courts in this regard. The Council reviewed what we mentioned and consulted some statements of scholars, taking into consideration that the obligation of Zakah is enacted for many legal interests, such as supporting the poor, meeting their needs, and purifying the rich. Then, after elaborate consideration and counsel about the practice of the early Muslims during the lifetime of Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) and during the era of the Rightly-Guided Caliphs and their successors, we found that value was accepted in some cases when the due kind of Zakah was not available. Therefore the Council of Senior Scholars unanimously decides the following: The basic rule is that Zakah shall be paid from the same kind of wealth on which it is due. This is according to the textual evidence reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) concerning the details of the kinds of wealth on which Zakah is due and the clarification of the amount of Zakah that should be paid according to one's ability.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 8)

The Council also decides, by the agreement of the majority, that it is permissible to pay the value of the due amount of Zakah when it is difficult for the owner to pay Zakah of the same kind of money on which Zakah is due, provided that there will be no harm on the poor as a result of this treatment. For example, if someone pays Zakah due on camels but they only have sheep and it is hard for them to get the specified camel. Likewise, when it is beneficial for the poor to pay the value as when it is inconvenient for them to take Zakah in the same kind of wealth on which it is due [i.e. taking camels, sheep, or crops as they may not have a place/provision/means of transport, and so on,] such as being in a place where it is difficult for them to take it in kind. Similarly, a farmer may sell the whole harvest, thus, it will be permissible for him to pay Zakah from the price he received."

Fatwa no. 18648

Q: We deal in cars on the basis of installment sales and I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on 30/6/1416 A.H., i.e. by the end of Jumada Al-Thany of every year when the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) is complete. To my surprise, I was entrusted with the duty of paying Zakah on behalf of the other partners. Sometimes, I give some sporadic charities. Is it permissible to calculate these sporadic charities from the Zakah or not? Is it permissible to deduct them from the due Zakah? Am I considered of those in charge of Zakah, as I am responsible for paying it? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is obligatory upon you and all your partners to pay the due Zakah each year upon the end of the Hawl, if the money reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). You should pay the Zakah to the legal recipients and it is impermissible to spend of the money of Zakah on other matters. Similarly, you are not permitted to take any money in return for delivering the Zakah to the legal recipients, because you are not one of the officials appointed by the government to collect the Zakah. The Zakah officers are those appointed by the Imam (ruler) to collect the Zakah from those on whom the Zakah is due.

Fatwa no. 18342

Q: After traveling to Saudi Arabia to work in an organization, I began to send checks to my brother in Egypt continuously. After a short period and to my surprise, I found that he deposited all my money with a usurious bank and then I immediately asked him draw all my money from this bank, because it deals in usury and this is Haram (prohibited). He responded affirmatively and told me that he would withdraw the money from this bank. After a period, I returned to Egypt and he said to me: "I invested your money in a project," which was a furniture store. Since he invested my money in this enterprise, I became a partner with him together with a third person. He registered the partnership formally and made the necessary contracts and documents of partnership. Later, this was registered in a court of law. After eight months, they also terminated my contract and got me out of the partnership formally through a court. Since I left the partnership, I have not got my money until now. This money will help me in concluding my marriage, because I need this money for marriage.

In short, the money was deposited with a bank for period less than a year and then was invested in an enterprise for another period that is less than a year also. I left this business more than a year ago. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) obligatory on the money in these three cases and should I pay it? Is there something wrong in paying Zakah more than its due amount enacted by Shari`ah (Islamic law), or is it necessary to abide by the fixed time and the exact amount of money, which is 25 per 1000 riyals? Does the term "obligation of Zakah" mean the due Zakah on money, or Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast), or equally apply to them both? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: You should pay the Zakah due on your money after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) and on a yearly basis. You should thus calculate the years during which you did not pay the Zakah and pay 2.5% of the money for every year. It should be known that Zakat-ul-Fitr is different from that of money, because the former is due on people rather than on property while the Zakah of wealth is due on kinds of money.

Q: If the in-kind Zakah (obligatory charity) presented by a Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions), such as camels, cows or sheep, are lean and of poor use when slaughtered and the Mukallaf affirms that all of his cattle are the same, will it be permissible to take it as Zakah or should it be declined along with demanding better payment of Zakah?

A: The lean animal should not be accepted as Zakah unless all the cattle on which the Zakah is due are the same, because Zakah is a form of sympathy and empathy, so a Mukallaf is not obliged to give but what he owns, for the Hadith reported by Abu Bakr (may Allah be pleased with him) and cited in the Sahih Book of Hadith: «Neither an old, a one-eyed animal, nor a male-goat may be taken as Zakah \(obligatory charity\) except if the Zakah collector wishes \(to take it.\)»

Q 2: Is it permissible to take the male (animal) instead of the female when the male is more beneficial and valuable?

A 2: The male is not accepted in the Zakah (obligatory charity) unless the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) consists of males only. However, if the numbers of animals forming the Nisab have males and females, only a female should be taken according to the fixed amount of Zakah on the whole group including males and females.

Q 3: Should the Luqatah (a lost item found by someone else) be added to the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due)?

A: The Luqatah is not calculated with the Nisab unless the one who finds it seeks the original owner thereof by means of making public announcements about it for one year and fails to find him. Thus, it becomes a part of his property if it is of a sheep but if it is a camel or a cow, these two kinds of cattle are not owned after making public announcements about them and failing to find their owner for a year.

and would Zakah (obligatory charity) be due on them? Or is it necessary for the newborn cattle to pass the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) before Zakah becomes due on them?

A 4: Newborn and young cattle must be added to the old cattle to complete the Nisab and the Zakah is due on them all after the passing of a full Hawl from the time the Nisab condition is fulfilled. The fixed Zakah paid on all the cattle should be of the mature cattle as legally fixed.

Q 5: If the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) is reached through a purchase, a gift or inheritance, is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the completion as a part of the Nisab, or does the passage of Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) remain a condition?

A: There is no Zakah due on a beast that is owned through buying, a gift or inheritance unless one lunar year has passed from the day the amount reaching the Nisab was owned. Therefore, if the Nisab is reached and a full lunar year has passed, Zakah becomes due.

Q 6: Knowing that the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on less than twenty five camels is one sheep per each five camels, are sheep and goats equal in this regard? If it is permissible to pay goats as Zakah in kind, is it permissible alternatively to pay their value in cash, i.e. as money, bearing in mind that goats always equal less than sheep?

A: The Zakah due on less than twenty five camels is one sheep per each five thereof that is equal regarding high, medium or low quality to camels. The word sheep here includes male and female sheep and female goats only. Therefore, due on each five camels is one Jadh`ah (a six-month-old sheep) or one Thaniyyah (a one-year-old goat) provided that they are equal in quality to camels and that goats are of equal value to sheep. However, if they are not of equal value, the average is to be taken into consideration. Moreover, it is permissible to pay Zakah in cash as an alternative for sheep in case it is unfeasible to pay Zakah in kind. Actually, this is easier for both parties, i.e., Zakah payers and recipients, and causes no disadvantage to the poor.

Q 7: If a person has ewes and rams, which - separately - do not complete the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), is it permissible to calculate the number of both of them to complete it?

A: A person should calculate the number of ewes with the number of rams to complete the Nisab, and Zakah (obligatory charity) is to be paid from any of them according to their own value. In this regard, Al-Muwaffaq, in his book entitled Al-Mughny, and others say: "There is no dispute among scholars over joining various kinds of species together in Zakah." So, it is permissible to give Zakah from any of the two kinds on the basis of their own value.

Q 8: What are the conditions of the livestock jointly owned by more than one Mukallaf (a person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions)?

A: The conditions by which the mixed wealth of many persons become one property are as follows:

1- The two partners should belong to the category of people subject to the obligation of Zakah (obligatory charity). In other words, if either of them does not belong to those who are supposed to pay Zakah, i.e., a Kafir (non-Muslim), then the mixture becomes invalid.

2- The mixed livestock should reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due); otherwise, no Zakah is due.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 14)

3- The mixture should last for a complete Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). The Ijma' (consensus of scholars) is that the mixture is not to have any effect before the completion of one Hawl.

4- The mixed livestock should share the same resting-place, barn, drinking fountain, milking place, and one bull with whom all of them should be copulated, as well as pasture, both in terms of time and location.

The evidence for the validity of these conditions upon which the mixture is based is inherent in the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): «Those which are in separate flocks are not to be brought together and those which are in one flock are not to be separated for fear of Sadaqah \(voluntary charity\). Regarding that which belongs to two partners, they can make claims for restitution from each other with equity.» (Related by Al-Bukhari, Al-Tirmidhy, Abu Dawud, and Ibn Majah, and Al-Tirmidhy said: "Hadith Hasan (a Hadith whose chain of narration contains a narrator with weak exactitude, but is free from eccentricity or blemish).")

Q 9: Fuqaha' (Muslim jurists) have stated that Zakat-ul-Ghanam (obligatory charity paid when the minimum amount of sheep is due) is to pay Jadh'ah (a one-year-old sheep) and Thanny (a two-year-old she-goat). Is this a determination of the acceptable age that cannot be exceeded, or is it permissible to take older ones, especially if they are more beneficial and more valuable?

A: The evidence for determining the amount of Zakat-ul-Ghanam by Fuqaha', i.e., Jadh'ah and Thanny, is inherent in the Hadith narrated by Suwayd ibn Ghafilah (may Allah be pleased with him), who said: One of the Sahabah \(Sahabah \(Companions of the Prophet\) came to us, saying:

'We are ordered to take Jadh'ah and Thanny.' (Related by Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'y and Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith compilation), Al-Daraqutny, and Al-Bayhaqy) This is because they are considered the minimum acceptable age for Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims). Therefore it is impermissible to take older ones from their owners without their consent.

Q 10: If a Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) states that his cattle do not graze freely and that he provides them with feed throughout most of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) and that the competent authority stated that no Zakah is due in such a case, should Zakah be taken from him in case he wishes to be on the safe side or to make use of the Zakah document in other purposes?

A: No Zakah is due on cattle that are fed throughout the whole or most of the Hawl. However, it is permissible to accept it from him as a donation, unless it becomes known that he pays it for illicit purposes aiming at worldly gains. In this case, taking it from him involves cooperation in sin and transgression. However, if a sheep owner intends to trade them, Zakah on a commercial commodity should be applicable, in the sense that they should be evaluated after the Hawl has passed and 2.5 % of their value becomes payable.

Q : Some Mukallafs (persons meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) ask about the Zakah due (obligatory charity) on male camels; should they be included in the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due)?

A : The Zakah due on cattle, including males and females, is to give a female animal that is legally specified according to the value of the entire herd, as stated by the scholars.

Q 2 : How can the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on camels prepared for racing be calculated? Is the Zakah on them to be calculated as other livestock, as a commercial commodity or in another manner?

A 2 : There is no due Zakah on the camels prepared for racing, since they are prepared for use and they are fed with fodder and are not Salimah, i.e. cattle that are left to graze freely without giving them fodder. However, when the owner of these camels wins prizes from racing and they reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a full lunar year has passed since owning this money, Zakah becomes due on that money.

Q 3 : When a Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) does not give the due Zakah (obligatory charity) for the past year and now wants to pay it in cash along with the Zakah of the current year; should they calculate the Zakah according to the prices of the previous or the current year? It should be noted that prices usually differ from one year to another.

A : It is obligatory to give out the legally-specified object for Zakah, but if the collector of Zakah demands it, it should be estimated according to the legal manner.

Q 4 : A Mukallaf came to the Zakah officers to pay the due Zakah on his cattle that are located in another area. Should the Zakah be estimated according to the prices of the area where his Zakah is due, or according to the prices of the area where he works if estimates differ from one area to another?

A : When the prices differ from one area to another, the value of the price of the area where the livestock on which Zakah is due should be considered, because Zakah becomes Wajib (obligatory) on them at that very area.

A : The Zakah is Wajib (obligatory) on the actual property even if the owner is a debtor, because the Prophet (may Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon him) commanded the Zakah officers to take the Zakah and did not order them to question people whether they owed something to others or not.

Q 6 : A Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) says that he failed to reach the Zakah officers last year and then he paid his Zakah, which was an ewe, to a charitable organization. Those in charge of the organization ordered him to slaughter the female sheep for distribution to the needy. He now asks if this was correct and acceptable? It should be noted that the charitable organizations take the Zakah and distribute it to the needy .

(Part No. 8; Page No. 18)

Should he repay the Zakah to the Zakah officers and consider what he gave to the charitable organization as Sadaqah (voluntary charity)?

A : The owner of cattle must pay the Zakah to the Zakah officers who are appointed by the Imam (ruler) and it is impermissible for him to pay it to others. If the time, when the Zakah officers collect Zakah, passes and it is not possible to deliver Zakah to them, it is permissible to pay it to its beneficiaries.

Q : I am the deputy chief of the tribe of Al Zabanah Al Hayan. When taking the Zakah-tenth from the third center of Zakah collectors in Tihamah Qahtan, they gave me sheep including my own sheep that I delivered to them as the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on my sheep. Is it permissible for me to take my sheep that I paid to them as Zakah in the Zakah-tenth given to me from the entire amount of Zakah?

A : When they give your allocated Zakah-tenth and your sheep that you delivered as Zakah included therein, it is impermissible for you to take it, because the Prophet (may Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon him) forbade 'Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) from returning a horse that was given as Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and said: \(Do not buy it from him even if he sells it to you for a dirham\) Therefore, if this is the case with what a person may return through purchase, it is more fitting to be applied to what is taken for free [if buying the Sadaqah that a person gave is forbidden, then taking it back for free is also forbidden].

Q : First: I have an orchard where I cultivate mango, guava, fig, and palm trees. I earn a great yearly income from this orchard but I do not count it, as it comes at intervals and I spend it on the orchard buying fertilizers and agrochemicals and paying electricity bills and workers' wages.

Second: I have a grocery store that produces a monthly income.

Third: I combine what remains from my salaries, grocery store profits, and orchard income and pay the annual Zakah (obligatory charity) as 2.5% in the month of Ramadan. Is this correct? Should I pay the due Zakah on the orchard separately, and that on the store profits separately, and what remains from my income separately?

What is the due Zakah on the annual income of the orchard: 2.5%, or 5%, or 10%? Please, advise. May Allah make your a source of benefit for the whole Muslim Ummah (nation based on one creed)?

A : First: There is no due Zakah on the vegetables. Only when you sell some vegetables and receive cash and a full lunar year passes after earning this money, you should then pay the due Zakah if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) separately or when added to other money earned by the same owner.

Second: As for the palm trees, when the harvest reaches the Nisab, which is 300 Sa` according to the Prophet's Sa` that is equal to approximately 3 kilograms , you must pay 10% thereof if irrigation is natural and incurs no cost ; however, when irrigation is mechanical and incurs costs, then only 5% should be paid. If you sell the harvest, you should give the value of the amount mentioned, which is 5% or 10%.

Third: The commodities sold at the grocery store should be estimated after a full lunar year passes from the time of buying them, then only the commodities prepared for sale should be evaluated according to their price at the end of the year and 2.5% of their value should be given as Zakah.

Fourth: Only 2.5% should be paid as the Zakah on the money saved from salaries and the store value after a lunar year passes while they are a Nisab [or more].

Fatwa : 19665

Q : Should the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) for the Zakah (obligatory charity) on money and commercial commodities be considered according to the Hijri (lunar) year or the Gregorian solar year, as there is a difference of 11 days between both? If the calculation of Zakah is made according to the Hijri year, what is the solution for organizations that issue their budgets and calculate their Zakah depending according to the solar year. Is it permissible to delay paying the due Zakah on commercial commodities beyond the Hijri year, as several contracting organizations delay the issuance of budgets six months after the passing of the year of Zakah?

A : Zakah is due on property after the passing of 12 months according to the Hijri calendar. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿They ask you (O Muhammad ﷺ) about the new moons. Say: These are signs to mark fixed periods of time for mankind and for the pilgrimage.﴾ It is impermissible to delay the payment of Zakah beyond the fixed time unless a legal excuse preventing the payment is verified. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿pay the due thereof (its Zakât, according to Allâh's Orders 1/10th or 1/20th) on the day of its harvest﴾ Allah (Exalted be He) also says: ﴿and perform As-Salât (Iqâmat-as-Salât), and give Zakât.﴾ This command indicates immediate response.

First question of Fatwa number: 20977

Q : I have heard that Zakah (obligatory charity) is due on debts after the passing of Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) when the money owed reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), and both the debtor and the creditor should pay the due Zakah. If this is correct, what is the evidence in support of this ruling?

A 1 : It is Wajib (obligatory) upon the Muslim, whether a debtor or a creditor, to pay the due Zakah on their money and property when it reaches the Nisab and a Hawl passes. This is true regardless of having the money in hand or as debts due to other people unless the person himself is insolvent or the debtor is delaying payment and the creditor does not know if he will have his money or not. In this case, the creditor is permitted to delay the payment of Zakah due on this money until he gets it from the debtor. However, as soon as the money is received, they must pay the due Zakah for only one year if a Hawl has passed. The same is true when many years have passed: only the Zakah due for one year should be paid according to the preponderant juristic view, because before withholding this money, they were unable to benefit from it and thus no Zakah is due. In support of this opinion, Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(and give Zakât.\) The Prophet (may Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon him) also stated: \(No Zakah is due on wealth till the Hawl passes\)

Q 1: Is it permissible for a Zakah (obligatory charity) officer sent by the Zakah authority to evaluate the Zakah due on farms and palm trees according to the information reported by the Mu`arrif (overseer of a people/tribe/town that observes and records their actions and helps authorities to enforce the law properly) or according to previous documents of Zakah without actually looking over the farms or the palm trees? Should he examine the money on which Zakah is due directly to ensure that it has reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due)? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A 1 : It is incumbent upon the Zakah officer entrusted by the government to estimate the crops and fruits himself and look over the harvest of farms and palm trees to be assured of their evaluation and whether Zakah is due on it or not; and if it is due, what the exact amount of Zakah is?

Q : My father gave me a sum of money that belongs to the orphans of my brother in order to invest it for six years. I bought several cars and sold them in monthly installments over a period of two years. This was the fixed system to be followed during the agreed upon time of six years. Now that a year has passed, is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the money of these orphans? If so, how should the Zakah be calculated under the installment sales system?

As soon as I receive the installments of two months, I buy a new car. There is another sum owned by the orphans that my father reserves for their expenses, is Zakah due on it? Advise us. May Allah reward you with the best!

A : The Zakah is due on the money mentioned, and the fact that the money belongs to the orphans makes no difference. Therefore, when a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes, the Zakah becomes due on the cash, debts due on other people as installments for the cars sold, and the cars for sale that are still in their hands.

Q : A person owns a store that produces 20 million and a farm with a profit of 2 million. He also has a car on which he still owes 33 million centimes. His family is comprised of 15 members on whom he spends from the profits of his store; thus, he uses the profits he gets from the shop to meet the expenses of his home and supply the shop with the rest. As for the farm, he has 8 million centimes from annual income which he uses to maintain it and the rest is used on stock needed for the store. Should he pay Zakah (obligatory charity) or not?

A : The Zakah is due on money including banknotes, coins, commercial commodities, and the like when it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) independently; or when other parts of property on which Zakah is due is added after the passing of a Hawl. The debt does not prevent the obligation of Zakah.

Fatwa number: 14456

Q : I have been working in Saudi Arabia since 1983. No one told us about the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on money. I started to save of my salary in the bank until I now have USD 9000 that equals 20000 Egyptian pounds. This sum of money is for providing for the marriage of my three daughters. My wife used to pay Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) along with some other money that she used to give to the poor yearly, according to her knowledge. This year, I have paid Zakah due on this sum, but what is incumbent upon me as for the past years from 1984 to 1989 to clear myself in the presence of Allah and earn Allah's Pleasure and Forgiveness for my mistake? Please, be informed that I want to pay the required sum, if any, in installments, due to my current circumstances. My current salary is 1980 Saudi Riyals. This year, I have paid 8000 Egyptian pounds as the cost of a surgery for my daughter. I am waiting for your response to free myself. May Allah grant us success! As-salamu `alaykum (May Allah's Peace be upon you!)

A : Zakah is Wajib (obligatory) on the entire amount saved when it reaches a Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes. It is to be paid yearly. You should calculate the money you have at the end of every year and give out 2.5% as Zakah to the beneficiaries among the poor, the needy and other categories that Allah specified in the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) on the Zakah recipients, which is Ayah number 60 of the Surah (Qur'anic Chapter) of Al-Tawbah.

Zakah on racing camels

Fatwa no. 21468

Q: Please, provide us with a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) regarding the camels intended for racing and commerce. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on them? Are these camels regarded as commercial commodities or is Zakah due on their value when they are sold and the paid price completes a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)?

Please advise, may Allah reward you with the best reward in this life and in the Hereafter. Amen!

A: If the camels are bred for racing in order to receive prizes awarded to the owners of the winning camels and they are not for sale, then no Zakah is due on the animals themselves. Zakah is only due on the money gained as a prize for winning a race after the passing of a Hawl since obtaining it and it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). The due Zakah on it is 2.5%, namely, two Riyals and a half per hundred Riyals.

Questions 8, 9, and 10 of fatwa number: 21545 Q8: The court issues a list for the cattle prices in every area according to the circumstances verified and many Mukallafs (persons meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) ask Zakah officers to pay the Zakah due on their camels, which are more than 25 camels, in the form of sheep in kind that are equal in value to the Zakah due on the camels. For example, a person who has 35 camels should pay Bint Makhad (a one-year-old she-camel) or 800 Saudi Riyals according to the governmental tariff of prices. The owner may want to pay two ewes each equaling 300 Saudi Riyals. Thus, he pays only 600 Riyals and adds a she-goat that equals 200 Riyals to give the equivalent of Bint Makhad.

A 8: The Zakah due on each type of money should be given. The Zakah due on camels should be camels, the Zakah due on sheep should be sheep, and no category should ever be paid instead of the other. The Prophet (may Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon him) specified exact Zakah amount in this way.

Q 9: Should lost camels be included in the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of Zakah (obligatory charity) though sometimes these lost camels affect the amount on which Zakah is due? For example, if a person has 34 camels and two other lost camels and then we calculate the two lost camels with the available number of 34, the due Zakah will be Bint Labun (a two-year-old she-camel) but if they are not added, only Bint Makhad (a one-year-old she-camel) will be due.

A 9: There is no due Zakah on the lost camels until the owner finds them and it is impermissible to add them to the existent camels. Rather, the due Zakah on the existent camels should be given when they reach the Nisab separately without adding the lost camels.

Q 10: Is it a condition for the cattle that are fed most of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) to be confined in a corral, that is, they do not graze except for a short period of the Hawl. Sometimes, they graze and the owner feeds them during the whole year. What is the legal standard for this case and how should the Zakah (obligatory charity) be calculated?

A 10: When the owner of cattle feeds it most of the year, no Zakah is due on them, because they are not Sa'imah, that is the cattle left to graze freely without giving them fodder. Cattle are Sa'imah only when they graze during the whole year, or most of it.

Q: Is it permissible for a cattle owner who has 165 cows to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the cattle from the cows of another person if they do not wish to pay Zakah from their own cows?

A: Cows of the age required for Zakah can be paid from the cows of another person on condition that the cows to be given as Zakah are of the same age and quality or better than the owner's cows. However, it does not discharge the obligation to buy inferior cows and pay them as Zakah.

Q: If someone has 166 cows, we know, according to our understanding, that they should pay the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on them, which is four Musinnahs (a Musinnah is a two-year-old cow). Is it permissible for them to pay Zakah in the form of meat? Is it permissible for the owner of the cattle to buy four Musinnah from another person and give them to the Zakah officer for the Zakah due on him? Please advice us. May Allah reward you. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you.) May peace be upon all those who follow right guidance, i.e. Islam.

A: The Zakah due on 166 cows is four Musinnahs and it is not permissible to pay meat instead of the Zakah. He should pay the due Zakah alive to the Zakah officer or to the poor without slaughtering the animals. This is admittedly true regardless of whether he pays the Zakah of the cattle he owns or buys from others.

Q: If someone owns two hundred and forty-nine cows, how many must be given as Zakah (obligatory charity)? Is it correct that the Zakah due on them is six Musinnaḥs (two year-old cows) or eight Tabi`s or Tabi`ahs (one year-old cows)? May Allah reward you with the best and grant us all success. Amen! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you.)

(Part No. 8; Page No. 32)

A: For cows that graze all or most of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), you must give a Tabi` or Tabi`ah, if they reach thirty in number; and a Musinnah if they reach forty. For the number of cows you mentioned in the question, you should give six Musinnaḥs or eight Tabi`s or Tabi`ahs. It is reported in Musnad (Hadith compilation) of Imam Ahmad and the four Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) that Mu`adh (may Allah be pleased with him) said: \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) sent me to collect Zakah from the people of Yemen, and ordered me to take a Tabi` for every thirty cows and a Musinnah for every forty.\) In the same Hadith Mu`adh said: \(He \(peace be upon him\) ordered me not to take additional Zakah on what is between these two numbers.\)

Is it permissible for a husband to give Zakah on his and his wife's cows together, if the share of each of them is not sufficient?

A: Zakah is not obligatory on the cows that are raised for milk and reproduction unless they reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), which is thirty cows or more. The cows of two persons are not to be gathered to complete the Nisab, unless

(Part No. 8; Page No. 33)

A man had owned goats for fifteen years; however, he has not paid Zakah on them. The number of goats on average was forty, but at times they reached one hundred. Afraid of being sinful for not paying Zakah he wants to know the ruling on this, and the amount due if any? Note that he did give a four-year-old goat as Zakah for one of those years. Since that time, the goats have all died and now he has no livestock. Provide us with an answer! May Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) to pay Zakah for sheep, if they are Sa'imah (are not fed, but are put out to pasture/pasturing) most of the year, their number reaches forty, and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed. This can be done every year. So, it is Wajib for the person in question to pay Zakah for the past years, for which he paid no Zakah, Q 2: If a man owns sheep or other livestock, and it is known nowadays that livestock owners buy barely, fodder and water; nevertheless, they graze on the nearby pastures. Should their owner pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on them or not?

A: If one owns sheep, camels, or cows that graze on pasture all or most of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), Zakah on grazing livestock is due on them, even if the owner sometimes have to pay for fodder and water supply for the animals. If they do not graze on pasture all or most of the Hawl, there is no Zakah due on them. However, if these sheep, camels or cows are intended for trade, by raising and selling them for profit, they are to be considered as commercial commodities, and when a Hawl elapses, they should be evaluated and 2.5 % of their estimated value should be paid. If the owner sells any of them, he should pay its Zakah, i.e. 2.5 % of its value if one Hawl has passed while they are in his possession.

Q: I have flocks of sheep which contain small rams which do not graze like the adult ones. I provide them with fodder and barley. They may remain so until the season of rain when I leave them to graze and pay their Zakath whenever the collectors come. But if collectors of Zakah come while those rams are still stall-feeding, I do not pay their Zakah since they do not graze from the pasture. May you kindly clarify the issue for me, may Allah reward you with the best. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: If the sheep which are stall-fed most of the year are raised for trade and profit, it is obligatory to pay their Zakah as a commercial commodity according to its value at the completion of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). The start of a Hawl is from the time of their purchase if they were purchased in credit. If the sheep was in cash, the beginning of the Hawl starts from the time of the possession of that money with which the sheep was bought. If the sheep was appointed for personal possession and not for trade, Zakah would not be obligatory on them since Zakah is only obligatory on the public pasture-grazing cattle which graze freely from the pasture all year round or most of it.

First question of Fatwa no. 18806

Q 1: I have a Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of sheep or more than the Nisab, they are about sixty sheep. After the completion of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), I appointed a ram as Zakah, but one day someone asked me to sell him that appointed ram and I did that for 400 Riyals. No one knew that I had appointed this ram as Zakah. I distributed the price of this ram among four poor families. Did the distribution of the value of this sheep discharge my responsibility or would it be better to pay a sheep instead? I hopefully wish your Eminence would clarify the issue for me, May Allah grant you success.

A 1: The obligatory amount of Zakah on every sixty sheep is only one sheep, chosen from the average, if they are free pasture grazing, which graze freely all year round or most of it and were raised for producing milk and breeding. If this Nisab consists of sheep and goats, Zakah can be given from either kind from the average. If the payer gives the best and the most expensive, it would be better, though he is not allowed to pay it from the worst since Zakah should be taken from the average. There is no harm in your distribution of the price of the ram if it is the amount of your Zakah. Otherwise, you have to complete your Zakah.

First question of Fatwa no. 18514

Q 1: I have 34 sheep, 12 suckling rams, 22 goats and 18 suckling and non-suckling kids. I paid some goats as Zakah (obligatory charity) on my Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), which was 350 goats and 400 sheep. After Zakah collectors had taken the goats, they told me that goats do not discharge the responsibility of Zakah on sheep taking into consideration that at the time of collecting the number of goats was more than that of sheep according to what I have illustrated in numbers above. I hopefully wish that Your Eminence will clarify the issue for me. Should I pay the full Nisab of sheep or only part thereof?

A 1: It is Wajib (obligatory) on you to pay one average goat or one average sheep according to its value. Moreover, you are not allowed to pay the worst one out of them. You are not entitled to pay from the best, though if you do, it will be better.

Q 3: All praise be to Allah, I have some sheep which I stall-feed every morning by supplying barley and fodder and then the shepherd takes them to graze in the mountains until late afternoon when he comes back home. This has been our habit for years. What kind of sheep are ours, pasture grazing or not? Is there any Zakah (obligatory charity) on these sheep or not?

A: If the reality is as you mentioned that they graze freely all day during the whole year or most of it, it will be considered as pasture grazing cattle on which there is Zakah.

Q: The first issue: Three friends, who are not relatives, are partners in the ownership of sheep; they have 20 sheep each. They agreed to gather their sheep in one barn with one shepherd. They are equal in everything.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 42)

None of the individual shares has reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), so is Zakah due on these partners since the individual shares do not reach the Nisab but the total number of the three shares does?

The second issue is the same as the first one with one exception only, which is that the partners are a husband, his wife and their son. The separate share of each does not reach the Nisab, how should Zakah be assessed in this case? I wish your Eminence would clarify the answer to both cases.

A: Mixing the sheep between the partners as you mentioned in your question renders Zakah obligatory on these sheep if their total number reaches the Nisab and they graze all or most of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). Each partner has to pay according to his share of the total number of sheep. If one partner has only one sheep and the other has thirty-nine sheep, the owner of the one sheep is to give 2.5% of the sheep required as Zakah and the rest (97.5%) of the sheep is due on the owner of the thirty-nine sheep. This is according to the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): Neither the separate \(flocks\) may be brought together nor the joint \(flocks\) may be split so as to avoid Zakah. Regarding that which belongs to two partners, they can make claims for restitution from each other fairly \(according to their shares\). (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [Authentic Hadith Book] on the authority of Anas [may Allah be pleased with him])

Zakah on measurable and storable crops

Q: What is the ruling on the money collected from selling crops; for example, I sell the yield of my land for 1000 Saudi Riyals and pay 100 Riyals as their Zakah (obligatory charity). Some people told me that the Zakah on 1000 Riyals is only 25 Riyals and not 100. I calculate the Zakah on money as 2.5% and the Zakah on the yield of the land as 10%, not 2.5%. I hope that Your Eminence would clarify the previous issue for me. Should I pay 2.5% or 10% as Zakah?

A: The basic ruling is that if crops are measurable, weighable and storable and reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), which is five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa`s = 180 kg. approx.), one tenth of the produce must be paid as Zakah if the crops are watered naturally (by rain, springs or the like), and one twentieth if they are watered artificially (by waterwheels, pumps or the like).

If they were not measurable or storable, such as fruits and the like, and are dealt in through buying and selling, their Zakah would be the same as that of commercial commodities. If their value reaches the Nisab by itself or when added to other items on which Zakah is also due and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes, in this case, one has to pay 2.5%.

Q: I am a Saudi national. I have a farm of about 100 hectares in size where I grow wheat. Am I obliged to pay Zakah of the value of the 20 tons which I store for seeds taking into consideration that they are stored for only six months?

The third question of Fatwa no. 20173

Q 3: What is the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of grains and fruits. What are the conditions of the obligation of Zakah (obligatory charity) on grains?

A 3: Zakah is Wajib (obligator)y on all grains like wheat, barley, rice, lentil, chick-peas and other sorts of grains if they are not used as staple food. Zakah is Wajib on all kinds of measurable, weighable and storable dates. Zakah is due on grains and fruits under the following conditions:

1- They must complete the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa`s = 130,320 kg) that are 300 Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) that equal five and one third Iraqi pounds. This is supported by what has been narrated by Abu Sa`id Al-Khudry (may Allah be pleased with him) from the Prophet (be upon him) that he said: \(No Zakah is due on less than five Wasqs.\) (Related by the Six Hadith Compilers (Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y, and Ibn Majah)).

2- Nisab should be in the possession of the payer at the time of paying Zakah. The amount of Zakah on both grains and fruits is one tenth of what has been irrigated without any effort and one-twentieth of what has been irrigated by machines, and three quarters of one tenth, if they were irrigated by both means equally, if there is a difference in the means of irrigation, the one used most will be the criteria. The passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) is not a condition of the obligation of Zakah on both grains and fruits. However, the time of their Zakah is whenever they began to ripen according to what Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(pay the due thereof \(its Zakât, according to Allâh's Orders 1/10th or 1/20th\) on the day of its harvest\)

Is there any sin on me for cutting these crops before they ripen? Do I have to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on these untimely harvested plants to be made into fodder? May Allah grant you success.

A 1: If plants are cut before becoming ripe, there is no Zakah on them because they are harvested before the time when Zakah becomes due. There is no sin in cutting them before they are ripe to be fodder for animals.

These crops may grow weak and as it is impractical to harvest them, we sell them to sheep breeders who make use thereof as they like. How should we pay Zakah (obligatory charity) of those crops? The second and third questions of Fatwa no. 20451

Q 2: A person has ten sacks of rice or corn, each 75kg. He was indebted with four sacks of them, so only six sacks are kept for him. Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) due on those six sacks. If so, how and when should he pay it: before or after paying his debt?

A 2: First: You have to pay Zakah of rice or corn if it completes the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). The Nisab equals five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa's =130,320 kg) as per that of the Prophet (peace be upon him) and a Sa' equals four moderately filled handfuls.

Second: The amount which should be given is one tenth on what is irrigated by rain, rivers and the like and one-twentieth on what is irrigated by machines, waterwheels and the like. Zakah must be given only once from the average of the crops at the time of harvest .

(Part No. 8; Page No. 48)

What has been said is about rice and corn if they are agricultural crops and not commercial commodities. If they are commercial commodities they must be evaluated at the completion of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) and 2.5% of their value must be given. If the rice or corn you bought is for eating and storing, there would be no Zakah due on them regardless of their quantity or the period may be.

Third: Zakah has to be paid before paying the debts since it becomes due only at the time of harvest.

A 3: Each one of them has to pay his Zakah regardless of the amount of his partner, so if his share completes the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) according to what has been said in the answer of the second question, he would be obliged to pay his Zakah, if it does not complete the Nisab, he would not be obliged to pay Zakah.

The second and third question of Fatwa no. 15928

Q 2: Is it permissible to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on wheat or barley in money instead of giving wheat or barley?

A: Zakah on wheat and barley must be paid of their kind unless the owner sells the land along with its produce before the time of harvest and after the crops have ripened. The seventh question of Fatwa no. 18083

Q 7: A) a farmer sold some of the wheat produced by his farm to pay for some needs, is he obliged to pay Zakah on what he sold? Will Zakah be on the quantity of the grains or on the value of their price? What is the ruling on buying and selling in such cases?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 50)

B) A farmer sold some of the produced wheat of his farm to other farmers as seeds; some of this quantity is sold in cash and some in credit until they get paid from the mills, is he obliged to pay Zakah in any of these cases?

C) Someone took seeds of wheat from the yield of his farm to be used for the next season and sold the rest to the mills. When he began to take the price of his wheat, the state took Zakah on all his crops, is he obliged to pay Zakah on the seeds he took ?

A 7: Zakah will be obligatory on the total sum of any plant which has ripened. The owner has to pay one tenth if his plants were irrigated for free and one twentieth if they were irrigated by machines according to what Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(pay the due thereof \(its Zakât, according to Allâh's Orders 1/10th or 1/20th\) on the day of its harvest\) and according to what the Prophet (peace be upon him) says: \(On a land watered by rain water or by natural water channels, or if the land is wet due to a nearby water channel, 'Ushr \(one-tenth\) is compulsory \(as Zakat\); and on irrigated land, half of the 'Ushr \(one-twentieth\) is compulsory \(as Zakat on the yield of the land\).\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

Accordingly, you have to pay Zakah on the seeds you kept for the next season.

Q 1: I have an olive farm that is watered by rain. It is known that the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on it is one tenth, but the plowing, fertilizing, harvesting, etc. costs nearly a quarter of the farm's production. Should Zakah be paid on the total output or should the costs be deducted from the production and then Zakah be paid?

A: The obligation of Zakah on olive is a controversial issue among scholars. To be on the safe side, it is better to give Zakah on it when the olive fruits reach the Nisab, which is five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa`s = 180 kg. approx.), according to the Sa` of the Prophet (peace be upon him) [i.e. 1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.]. The amount of Zakah due is one tenth of the production. The costs should not be deducted from the production; rather, you should pay Zakah on all the output.

Q: A landlord has agricultural land and made a contract of Muzara`ah (giving land for cultivation in return for a specified portion of the harvest) by virtue of which the person who cultivates it will take half of the harvest. At the end of the harvest, each of their portions, namely the landlord and the sharecropper, was more than five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa`s = 180 kg. approx.). Thus, Zakah (obligatory charity) was due on them both. Praise be to Allah, I know this. However, I would like to know the amount due as Zakah on the landlord; should he pay 5% or 10%? It should be considered that all the costs of cultivation such as workers' wages, plowing, seeds, irrigation, fertilizers, and other requirements are all afforded by the partner; sharecropper. The landlord usually takes his share of the crops with no participation in the costs of cultivation. What is the legal ruling if the landlord contributes to the sharecropper's necessary costs? If the sharecropper pays for the entire costs of cultivation, should he pay 10% of his portion of the production as Zakah, or only 5% of his portion after deducting the costs, or should he pay the Zakah on the full portion of production without deducting the costs of cultivation? If the landlord cultivates his land, should he pay the Zakah after deducting the costs, or how should he calculate the Zakah?

A: The Zakah is due on both the landlord and the sharecropper; each should pay on his portion of the production when it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), which is five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa`s = 180 kg. approx.). Each of them should pay 5% of his share; because the irrigation is cost-incurring. This is true even if the costs and expenses of cultivation are assumed by the sharecropper.

Is this way of allocating certain palm trees for certain persons acceptable as Zakah, or should it be done another way? Please advise us in detail, for so many other similar examples are found in the villages.

The first question of Fatwa no. 16696

Q 1: Here in Senegal, there are farmers who cultivate peanuts and do not pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on them, although they produce oil. Is Zakah due on them?

A: Zakah is due on the peanuts when the crop reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) or more. This is due to the general Command that Allah (Exalted be He) gives in the Qur'an: ﴿O you who believe! Spend of the good things which you have \(legally\) earned, and of that which We have produced from the earth for you﴾ The amount of Zakah is 5% of the production if it is irrigated by machinery and 10% if it is naturally irrigated with no cost incurred, e.g. by rain or rivers like other kinds of crops.

Q: Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on peas other than the Egyptian pea? We often grow sesame but do not pay Zakah on it; is Zakah due on it? If so, should we pay the Zakah on its oil or what should we do? What is the legal textual evidence from the Book (the Qur'an) and the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet) in support of this ruling?

A: Zakah is obligatory on the harvest of peanuts and sesame, because they are measured and saved items, provided that they reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) which is 300 Sa`'s according to the Sa`' of the Prophet (peace be upon him), which is equal to 3 kilograms approximately, due to the general meaning of the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) where Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿O you who believe! Spend of the good things which you have (legally) earned, and of that which We have produced from the earth for you﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: ﴿No Zakah is due on less than five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa`'s = 180 kg. approx.).﴾ (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) The amount of Zakah is 10% on the land that is naturally irrigated by rain and rivers. However, the due Zakah is only 5% on the land irrigated by machinery that incurs costs, such as irrigation from artesian wells.

Q: We live in a country that depends on the annual crop of grapes. I would like to know:

First: What is the Zakah (obligatory charity) on crops? During the harvest, some villagers come to us from the village and from outside; they are called beggars. They take their share and we even carry some other portions to some people in their homes. Is it permissible to calculate this charity from the due Zakah?

Second: Upon harvesting the grapes and receiving its price, I found that the debts consumed all the production. Is there Zakah due in this case?

A: The grapes are one of the crops that are measured and saved, so Zakah is due on it when it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), which is five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa`s = 180 kg. approx.) that is equal to 300 Sa`s (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) using the Sa` of the Prophet (peace be upon him). Thus, grapes should be estimated when they show signs of ripening like the estimate on palm trees; and the Zakah should be given from raisins in the same manner it is given from dry dates in the case of palm trees. The amount of Zakah is 10% on the land that is naturally irrigated without incurring any costs, and only 5% on the land irrigated by machinery that incurs costs. But if the land is irrigated by both manners equally, then the Zakah is 7.5% of the production; and if the ways of irrigation differs from each other, then consideration will be given to the prevailing case, i.e. if mostly irrigated by machinery, only 5% is due; otherwise, 10% is due.

As for what you give of the fruits to people who ask for it, or to those in their homes during the harvest, it is acceptable as Zakah on two conditions: First: the recipients are poor. Second: you give it to them intending it as Zakah and knowing its amount. If these two conditions are fulfilled, it may be calculated in the Zakah.

However, if the people who receive the grapes are not of the legal recipients specified or if you give them with no intention to be part of the due Zakah, it is a form of Sadaqah (voluntary charity) that is rewarded, in sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

The debt due on you that surpasses the price of the harvest does not prevent the obligation of Zakah that is due on you, for the generality of the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) where Allah (Glorified be Allah) states: \(pay the due thereof \(its Zakât, according to Allâh's Orders 1/10th or 1/20th\) on the day of its harvest\) Allah (Exalted be He) also states: \(O you who believe! Spend of the good things which you have \(legally\) earned, and of that which We have produced from the earth for you\) And: \(And perform As-Salât \(Iqâmat-as-Salât\), and give Zakât and obey the Messenger \(Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\) that you may receive mercy \(from Allâh\).\)

Q: I want to inform Your Eminence that we have noticed that many wheat farmers do not pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on the value of the quantities delivered to the grain silos due to a belief that what the officials subtract from the crops is enough Zakah on the wheat harvest. However, what the silo officials subtract from the crops is Zakah on the crops themselves, not on their monetary value.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 58)

The money for the crops remains with the authorities in charge of the silos for seven or more months. After receiving the money for the crops, a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) may be completed while holding such money. Moreover, one Hawl may pass before receiving such money from the authorities in charge of silos. Some farmers do not pay Zakah on this money, which is the value of the crops, thinking that what is deducted by silo officials is enough and acceptable as Zakah on the price of the wheat. It is evident to us that what the silos deduct is only 5%, which is the due Zakah of wheat, but the Zakah on the price of the wheat should be given as well, regardless of whether a full Hawl passes while it is in the possession of the authorities in charge of silos, or with the farmers. Most people make this mistake, so I thought it proper to present the case to you to rule on and write to us in this regard. May Allah make it beneficial. May He bless you and grant you the best end. As-salamu `alaykum (May Allah's Peace be upon you).

A: What the silos subtract, which is 5%, is the due Zakah on wheat. As for the price of the wheat, farmers should start counting a new Hawl from the date they receive it. Thus, after the passing of a Hawl and if the money reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) from the time of receipt, Zakah becomes due on it. The amount of the due Zakah is 2.5%.

Fatwa no. 15658

Q: Two parties formed a partnership agreement between them on an agricultural project.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 59)

They agreed to rent a piece of agricultural land that is irrigated by ground-water. The items of the partnership agreement are as follows:

- 1. The first party shall bear all the costs of rent, seeds, fertilizers, fuels, etc.
- 2. The second party, that is the cultivating partner, shall cultivate the land, irrigate it, and undertake all the manual labor required for it.

The profits shall be divided according to a 1:2 ratio, namely, two shares are due to the first party and only one share is due to the second party. During the harvest, they made an agreement with a company that owns combines to harvest the crop for them, on condition that it takes 6% of the aggregate crops. After harvest, they found that their harvest was 160.000 kilograms approximately (one hundred and sixty thousand kilograms), which is the total production of the annual crops. The question is as follows:

- 1. Should each party give the Zakah due on his own share only? In other words, will the party who pays Zakah be free from blame if the other party falls short? This is because the second party insists not to deduct the Zakah from his share and wants to dispose of it independently, as his Madh-hab (School of Jurisprudence) differs from that of the first party.
- 2. What about the amount given to the combining company, which is 6% as previously mentioned?

Should this amount be deducted before calculating the Zakah or should Zakah be due on it also?

- 3. If each party is responsible for the Zakah payable on his portion, what is the ruling on the first party that spent a sum of 400.000, which is the capital of the company?

Please, clarify these questions.

A : 1. The Zakah on crops is due when the grains are dry and it should be paid on the entire harvest. Each partner should be responsible to pay the Zakah due on his share and if one of them makes a condition that the other must pay all the Zakah from his share, the condition will be effective and valid, because Zakah allows deputization.

2. The mentioned wage, which is 6% of the harvest, is not included in Zakah and should be deducted from the harvest before the payment of Zakah, because the reaping process is a means of sifting and preparing the harvest for use.

3. What the first party spent, e.g. the sum mentioned above, is of his own money and should not be deducted before the payment of Zakah; rather the Zakah should be on the whole of his portion of the harvest.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 18584

Q 1: A man died and left a farm to his children and wife.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 61)

This farm continued to be theirs jointly as they did not divide it. How should they pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on its harvest? What are the necessary conditions for Zakah to be due in case of partnership?

A: Zakah should be paid on the crops of the farm if they are weighed and saved such as grains including wheat, barley, corn, millet, rice, chickpea, lentil, and beans. Zakah is also due on fruits such as dates, raisins, almond, peanut, nuts, olive, and grapes because the fruits of these plants after drying can be measured and stored. However, there is no Zakah on vegetables and similar fruits. The textual evidence in support of the obligation of Zakah upon the production of cultivation is Allah's Statement: ﴿O you who believe! Spend of the good things which you have (legally) earned, and of that which We have produced from the earth for you﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: ﴿On that which is watered by rain or springs (i.e. by natural means), `Ushr (one-tenth) is due (as Zakah); and on that which is irrigated by carrying water on camels (i.e. by artificial means), half of the `Ushr (one-twentieth) is due (as Zakah on the yield of the land).﴾ (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih)

It is not a condition for Zakah on cultivation that a year passes; rather, whenever the plants grow fully and their color turns red or yellow, and grain, grapes, and olives ripen, the Zakah is due. Allah (Glorified be He) states: ﴿pay the due thereof (its Zakât, according to Allâh's Orders 1/10th or 1/20th) on the day of its harvest﴾

The Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of Zakah is five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa`s = 180 kg. approx.), which are equal to 300 Sa`s (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) according to the Sa` of the Prophet (peace be upon him). Thus, when the harvest equals this amount, Zakah becomes due.

The due Zakah is 10% on land irrigated by rains, springs and the like, and only 5% on the land irrigated by machinery. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: ﴿On that which is watered by rain or springs or draws water through its roots, `Ushr (one-tenth) is due (as Zakah); and on that which is irrigated by carrying water on camels, half of the `Ushr (one-twentieth) is due (as Zakah on the yield of the land).﴾ (Related by Al-Bukhari)

Since the production of the farm is owned jointly, the Zakah is due on all of you for the crops of the farm, provided that they are of the crops on which Zakah is due as mentioned above.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 15901

Q 5: Is it obligatory on the farmer to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) upon harvesting the crops or after the threshing process (separating the grain from the straw)?

A: Zakah is due on the farmer when the grains harden and ripen, after separating the grains and seeds from the straw and flailing them. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) states: \(pay the due thereof \(its Zakât, according to Allâh's Orders 1/10th or 1/20th\) on the day of its harvest\)

The first question of Fatwa no. 16654

Q 1: What is your opinion on a woman who helps her husband work on the farm while observing the Hijab (veil); is this permissible or not? Is he sinful although he did not entrust her with this work as she did it willingly. Is there any Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the gain shared by the two spouses? Some people claim that there is no Zakah in this case, due to the fact that the wife helped her husband.

A: There is nothing wrong with a wife working on a farm, as long as she observes Hijab in the presence of foreign men who are non-Mahram (not a spouse or an unmarriageable relative). However, Zakah is due on the harvest of the farm, if it is of the grains that are stored such as dates, grapes, wheat, barley, etc. The due Zakah is 5% of the produce from land irrigated by machinery and the like, and 10% from land irrigated by rains, rivers, and the like.

Q: I have an apiary with a large number of beehives, which I purchased and developed. I hired workers to take care of it and they move it from one town to another in pursuit of rainfall. When flowers are scarce during some seasons, they feed the bees sugar to keep them alive. The bees multiply yearly and I sell some of them and their honey. I then pay worker's salaries, transportation costs, and the costs of drugs, sugar, and the beehives that are made in special workshops. Sometimes, I profit and at other times I lose. Please advise me regarding the following: Should I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on the bees that I sell or on what remains as assets to be grown and to sell of their production the next year? Is there due Zakah on the amount of honey collected? If Zakah is due, how should we calculate it? Please be informed that I fix a specific time yearly for all sources of my income to pay the Zakah due on all of my property, whether a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes or not.

A: If the case is as mentioned, no Zakah is due on the honey produced by the bees. Zakah is only due on the value (price) of the honey, after being prepared for sale and the money reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), and a Hawl elapses from the time the intention of sale is resolved.

The amount of Zakah is 2.5% of the value. As for the bees, what is prepared for sale is regarded as a commercial commodity and its Hawl starts from the time the intention of sale is resolved. Thus, when a full Hawl passes, the owner should estimate it according to its value on the date Zakah becomes due, and pay 2.5% of the value as Zakah. The Hawl of the sold bees begins at the time the intention of sale is resolved. Thus, after the passing of a full Hawl from the time of intending the sale, the owner should pay 2.5% of the price of the sold bees.

Commercial commodities

Q: I have a truck for carrying vegetables that I sell in markets; should I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on this truck?

A: Zakah is not due on the truck that is used for transporting commodities. Q 4: Is it obligatory to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on cars and how should it be paid?

A: If the car is for use, there is no Zakah due on it; but if it is prepared for trade, then it is considered a commercial commodity, and so should be evaluated by the end of a complete Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) and 2.5 % of its value should be given as Zakah.

Q: Two years ago, I gave some money to a company in Mudarabah (speculative partnership, giving an amount of money to trade with in return for a share in the profit). The owner of the company showed me no official accounts and I know nothing about the profit or loss of the company.

Do I have to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on this money, which would have been subject to Zakah if it were in my possession?

A: Zakah is obligatory on the money you have invested in Mudarabah. If this money brought in a profit, then the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) of its profit is the same as that of its capital; and its Zakah should be paid with that of its capital. This is so provided that the money paid in Mudarabah reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) has passed on it.

Q: Some of my friends do business in religious books and school equipments, and they wanted me to ask you about the permissibility of paying Zakah (obligatory charity) from the goods (i.e. the books and school equipment) to poor students and knowledge seekers who can not afford them, because of the lack of currency in such bookshops and the accumulation of these goods for a year or more. Please provide me with the answer to this question. May Allah safeguard you!

(Part No. 8; Page No. 68)

A: It is permissible to pay the Zakah of trade goods from them depending on their value. This is in agreement with the more correct of the two scholarly opinions and the general evidence in this regard. In addition, Zakah is a means of support from the rich to the poor, so they do not have to give support with what they do not have.

Q: My goods amount to nearly 50,000 riyals, but I owe more than 100,000 riyals in debt. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) still incumbent on my merchandise, even though my debts are double that amount?

A: Debt does not annul the obligation of Zakah. Thus, you have to pay Zakah and Allah (Exalted be He) will bless your money and purify it when doing so. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Take Sadaqah \(alms\) from their wealth in order to purify them and sanctify them with it﴾ Imam Muslim reported on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said:

Q: Now, my father has received compensation for his land which was expropriated by the government more than fifteen years ago. However, we did not hear about the compensation except about two years ago, and received it a few days ago. Is it Wajib (obligatory) upon my father to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) for this compensation, or should he give some of it in Sadaqah (voluntary charity), or in any of the charitable ways of disposition? If it is obligatory to do so, what is the best filed to give to?

A: No Zakah is to be paid by your father for the value of this compensation until he receives it, and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes since the time of receipt. This is due to the fact that your father was unable to take it when he wished in the past and has just been compensated.

Q: I have a grocery store with a capital of 2500 Egyptian Pounds. I have a partner in this store. Later, I took 600 Egyptian pounds from my share, so my share of the capital is only 650 Egyptian Pounds. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this share? My profit from this partnership is 100 Egyptian Pounds; is Zakah due on this profit? I must say that this profit only covers the needs of my family.

A: Zakah is obligatory on commercial stores. It should be paid on the commercial commodities displayed for sale every year. By the end of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), the commodities should be estimated and their value should be added to the cash available in the store and the debts due on customers. 2.5% should be paid as the due Zakah from the whole sum. The fact that the storeowner owes debts does not prevent the obligation of Zakah.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 71)

As for the money he spent on his household out of the profits of the store before the completion of the Hawl, there is no Zakah due on it. Likewise, the debts he repays before the Hawl.

Q: A man who has a sum of money that has already reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) pays the due Zakah (obligatory charity) thereon. However, before the end of the next Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), the sum increased and then I invested this increase with a partner setting out a project for printing one of the Islamic books. The next Hawl came to its end while this sum was still with my partner. How should I pay the due Zakah on this part of the money? Should I pay the Zakah on the original capital given to the partner or should I wait until the completion of the project to identify the profit/loss and then determine the due Zakah? It should be noted that my partner does not have the whole capital of the project; he rather takes the necessary requirements and substances for the project by paying a portion of the payable sum and the remaining part is to be paid later after a certain period of time, during which the book is expected to be distributed. The same kind of treatment is also adopted with regard to the printing press, binding, and similar affairs. In other words, the project costs a certain sum of money but starts with only a portion of the sum and the remaining portion is a debt due to the relevant parties.

A: You should pay the Zakah due on the original capital and the profit thereof whenever the Hawl is complete and it should be evident that the Hawl of the profits is the same Hawl specified for the original capital.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16415

Q 2: I have a store that I opened in 11/4. After the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) on the evening of 11/4, I started an inventory of the commodities found in the store, warehouses, and the cash capital with me or deposited in the bank. After calculating the due Zakah (obligatory charity), I set it aside and stop using it, even when I need money I take a loan but will not use the money of Zakah. Then, during the month of Ramadan, I distributed it. As for the way of paying Zakah on commodities, I take some foodstuffs from my store for the same price they are sold and give them to the poor or the charitable organizations of Ha'il. However, some people say that the Zakah must be paid at the time when it is due. But I can not identify the proper legal recipient who deserves it except in Ramadan when there are plenty of them. Am I blamed for that?

A: The Zakah should be paid at the time when it is due upon the completion of the Hawl of the money on which Zakah is due. It is impermissible to delay the payment of Zakah. It must be paid to the poor or to a trustworthy person who undertakes the distribution of it on your behalf. It is not acceptable to pay it to the charitable societies unless they are trusted and give pledge to deliver the Zakah to the legal recipients. The legal rule states that the Zakah of dirhams i.e. money, and commercial commodities should be of dirhams, i.e., cash money and it is not permissible to pay it of the commercial commodities such as rice and the like unless a preponderant interest is verified. For example, when it is better for the poor, it is then acceptable according to the sound juristic view.

A: There is no due Zakah on the pigeons bred for production and sale. However, when a sum of money is saved with you from the price of selling the squabs and the sum reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), then Zakah is due after a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes. 2.5% should be paid as the due Zakah on that.

Q 1: Praise be to Allah, I have an exhibition where I sell ready-made clothes at retail. I also have workshops for women where men also work. I used to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on these workshops to the Zakah authority upon the completion of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). The last Zakah I paid was for the Zakah year 1/5/1410-30/4/1411 A.H. After this date, I started new enterprises with an exhibition for the ready-made clothes and another for fabrics spending the whole sum I have to establish these two enterprises. During this year, I did not pay the due Zakah on the old exhibition and the workshops. I was determined to pay the Zakah due on them whenever I had enough money for that. However, I was out of luck with the new exhibitions, so I sold them a year and a half later. Now, we approach the end of the last quarter of the year 1416 A.H., and live this honorable month, may Allah grant us and all our Muslim brothers success to do what pleases Him of good deeds during this year and every year! It is now five years since I closed the old activity in the old exhibition and the women's workshops, on which I did not pay the Zakah.

1. What is your opinion about the last years during which no Zakah was paid? However, it should be noted that a yearly inventory was already made for the exhibition. Is it permissible to pay the due Zakah on the exhibition of the clothes and other items sold or must it be in cash?

2. What about the Zakah due on the women's workshops; should the Zakah be paid upon the whole store or on the total income of the workshop by the end of the Hawl?

3. When there are sums of money in the banks, which are the income from workshops and exhibitions, and a full Hawl passes, should Zakah be paid on these sums? Is it sufficient to use the sum drawn from them to pay the Zakah due on the exhibition and the workshops?

A: The Zakah should be paid after the passing of a full Hawl on a yearly basis. The commodities prepared for sale should be calculated and an inventory should be made for all the existent commodities. After determining the value of all the commodities, 2.5% of that value should be paid as Zakah. As for the money found in cash, they should be added to the commodities' value and Zakah should be paid upon all of them including cash money, balances in banks, and debts owed to you by people you are sure will repay their debts. The Zakah should be paid upon all of these capitals upon the passing of the full Hawl. As for the past years when you did not pay the Zakah, you should pay the due Zakah calculated on all of your money and commercial commodities during all these years, as this is a debt you owe to Allah and you must pay it. It is better to undertake the task of distributing your Zakah yourself or through your agent. If the government demanded the Zakah, you must pay it to it and clear yourself. As for the workshops, the Zakah is only due on items prepared for sale. There is no Zakah due on items prepared for personal use and the profits take the same ruling as the capital concerning all things prepared for sale.

Fatwa no. 19118

Q 1: I own clothes and fragrance stores. I make a yearly inventory of these stores and estimate their value according to the wholesale prices of the market at the time of estimation. Then, I pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on these stores on the basis of the estimation that I made. It should be noted that I asked some students of knowledge about the way of estimation that I adopt and they expressed different views about it. Some affirmed the validity of my way while others said that the way of estimation should consist of the current wholesale price and the expected profit upon sale. The difference was about the expected profit. The advocates of the first view said that certain ownership is a condition for the obligation of Zakah and this expected profit is still uncertain and not yet owned. Also, no profit may come at all thereof. Please, guide me to the proper way of estimation and calculation of the due Zakah in detail.

A: It is obligatory to estimate the items prepared for sale at the rate of the current prices upon the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due); whether the estimation equals or is more or less than the original capitals by which you purchased them.

Q 2: I own a gold store. By the end of every year, I make an itemized list of the objects in it. It includes golden currencies, broken gold, and new gold. How should I calculate the value of Zakah (obligatory charity)?

A: All the gold you possess in the store, including the new, the old and the broken gold, should be estimated and the cash you have should be added to the value, then Zakah should be paid upon the whole sum, if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes. The amount of Zakah is 2.5% of the value. This is equally applied to the gold and what stands for it such as the banknotes and the circulated paper currencies.

Q 1: I have a share in a commercial store with my partner where we sell construction materials. Each of us has a share of the capital. Praise be to Allah. On 30/12 of every year, I make an inventory of the items of the store and pay the due Zakah on my portion of the capital including the liquid money, commercial goods, and debts due to the store. However, when calculating the debts, I find, for instance, that my share of the debts is four thousand, then I pay the Zakah due on only 3 thousands and consider the fourth thousand as an unpayable debt.

A: What you do yearly of making an inventory of your commercial store and the payment of the Zakah due on your portion of the capital is the duty incumbent upon you. As for the debts that other people owe to you, if the debtors are solvent and you can collect from them upon demand, then you must pay the Zakah of these debts on a yearly basis after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). However, if the debtors are insolvent and you fear lest they will not repay the debts, you should pay the due Zakah on these debts only after receiving them and a full Hawl passes.

Q 2: I rented, out of the returns of this store, a piece of land on yearly rent basis for each acre. We cultivate this piece of land. I asked some scholars and they said that if I added the profits of agriculture to the capital and profits of the store, then Zakah is only due upon the store with both of its agricultural and commercial contents.

However, I did not abide by this view, because the due Zakah on agricultural production is 10%, as my land is irrigated by rain. However, it is argued that I undertake the processes of plowing the land, growing the crops, and using the agrochemicals and these costs were not existent in the past times and the past agriculture.

Dear Shaykh, since the beginning of practicing agricultural activity I only deduct the rent of the land and then pay the Zakah due on the remaining production, which is 10%. It should be evident, sir, that I sell the production, as no one accepts the Zakah as wheat because there is a plenty of flour available at the market. I then pay it in cash, because the poor do not have money. For example, the cost of the rent is 2000 Dinars, the agricultural costs are 2000 Dinars, and the net profit is 2000 Dinars. I then pay the Zakah on 4000 Dinars, which is 10%. Please advise. May Allah reward you!

A: Zakah is due upon the harvest of the land when the grains start to become dry and the fruits become ripe, if the harvest reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), which is 300 Sa`'s (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) according to the Sa` of the Prophet (peace be upon him). The harvest should not be added to the commodities sold in the store. The amount of Zakah is 10% when the land is irrigated by rain or rivers and the other costs that you mentioned is overlooked, because of the textual evidence of the Hadith: \(One-tenth is due on that which is watered naturally \(by rainwater and the like\).\) May Allah guide us to the Straight Path!

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 20079

Q 1: I have more than three hundred Islamic tapes; should I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on them?

A: If these tapes are for sale and their content is free from anything that may contradict Allah's Purified Shar` (Law), they are considered commercial commodities on which Zakah is due, when their value reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and then a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes. The due Zakah is 2.5 % of their value at the time when Zakah is due which is after the passage of one Hawl.

Q 1: I own an organization for selling secondary spare parts of cars, which are unoriginal. The price of these articles is about 600 000 Saudi riyals. However, some of them are spoiled and out-of-date. Some are sold slowly. At the same time, I owe a debt, which is about (400 000 Saudi riyals) to the owners of these spare parts. I am unable to repay the debts, due to the slack sale. Now, the production of my sale only meets the needs of my family, which consists of 22 members; 16 females and 6 males.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 82)

Should I then pay the due Zakah on the full capital of the trade? Know that I pay the yearly Zakah due on only 100 000 riyals while I am unable to pay the Zakah on the remaining sum, which is a debt due on me, in addition to the value of the spoiled parts and those that are out-of-date. Or should I pay the Zakah on the debts that I owe to others and the outmoded articles or it is enough to pay the Zakah due on the 100 000, which I pay?

A: After the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) on all the articles displayed for sale which you have or the money you paid as a price for them; you should estimate the value of these articles and pay the due Zakah on the value, which is 2.5% of the estimated value.

Q 2: I have five orphans to whom I owe 100,000 Riyals, which I took to invest for them in sales of machines and batteries. However, it may happen that a week passes while I sell no machine. Some days the gross sales may be 300-500 Riyals. Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the value of these machines that belong to the underage orphans? Is it permissible to spend Zakah on them?

A: You should pay the Zakah due on the money of the minors who are in your custody as you are the guardian over it and you set it for investment. Therefore, Zakah is due whenever a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes. That is because the case you mentioned is regarded as commercial commodities and, thus, you should pay the Zakah due on the money that you have for them upon the completion of the Hawl. It is not permissible that the Zakah due on their money be given to them. May Allah help you discharge your responsibility and grant us all success.

Q: The charity warehouse which is subsidiary to the charity project of assisting youth to get married in Jeddah receives material aid, like new furniture from one of the commercial institutions, as Zakah. This takes place every year. We give them a receipt that we have taken the furniture according to their market price, taking into consideration that the real value of this furniture is much less than the market price. We hopefully wish that Your Eminence will clarify this issue for us and direct us to what is Islamically correct. May Allah safeguard you and grant you success!

A: It is permissible to pay commercial commodities instead of Zakah of money, whenever it would be better for the poor, these commodities must be given according to their current price in the market at the time when Zakah is due.

The third and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 19722

3: I have more than 300 000 Riyals due on the clients of installment, they pay about 35 000 Riyals each month which we use in buying new goods to be sold in the same way, how should I pay my Zakah in such a case? Taking into consideration that I am still paying back a loan from which there still remains 110 000 Riyals to be repaid.

A 3: Zakah on commercial commodities should be given if a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes, Zakah will be on the value with which it was first bought. Zakah of such commodities should be evaluated after completing a Hawl depending on its price of purchase and 2.5% should be paid as Zakah.

Whatever has been sold in credit, 2.5% is obligatory on this deferred price, as Zakah, if the debtor is solvent. May Allah grant us success! Peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad and upon his family and Companions!

Q 4: Many Hadiths of the Prophet (peace be upon him) that exhort people to spend in the Way of Allah point out that whoever does so will be rewarded in this life by having their wealth blessed and multiplied in reward by Allah in addition to the reward they will receive in the Hereafter. Does the one who gives intending to receive both the rewards of this life and the Hereafter miss the reward of the Hereafter? What should one's intention be in this case? I ask Allah to increase you in knowledge and help you do perform righteous deeds.

A: If a person spends in the Way of Allah intending to get the rewards of this life and the Hereafter which Allah promised, there is no harm in this. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says : ﴿Our Lord! Q 2: What is the ruling on a person who inherited some precious silverware a few years ago but he did not know the amount of their Zakah since he did not pay their Zakah before, what is the percentage of Zakah of Silver? Should he pay Zakah for the previous years in which he did not pay?

A 2: Zakah is not obligatory on utensils unless they are commercial commodities in such a case Zakah will be obligatory on its value. If utensils are made of gold or silver, Zakah will be obligatory on them if they complete the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) or more. 2.5% would be obligatory on its weight annually or the value of 2.5% taking into consideration that it is Islamically prohibited to possess eating utensils made of gold or silver. Their owner has to pay the Zakah of

Q: I am a merchant. My merchandise consists of items of varied prices. When a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes, I evaluate the present goods, price according to the current market price and pay their Zakah (obligatory charity). Sometimes, I evaluate the merchandise as more than its value. One of the learners told me that paying more is like paying less. Let me explain to Your Eminence some of my behavior. For example, I buy five hundred items, the price of each is 120 Riyals and sell them at varied prices, sometimes for 150, 170, 200 and at times 450 Riyals. It may take me from one to ten years to sell these items. Every year, I take stock of the goods and pay Zakah. My question is, on what value should I pay Zakah, taking into consideration that if I collect all my goods at one time and try to sell it, it would not even get the real price of purchase, and I am a salesperson not a merchant. At times I do not find any cash and my goods do not sell well, what is the solution?

A: Your evaluation of your goods when a Hawl passes is the Wajib (obligatory) on you as a Muslim. You have to evaluate your goods at the completion of the Hawl regardless of the price of purchase and pay 2.5% of its current market value at the time of payment. What you pay above this amount will be regarded as Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and you will be rewarded for it. If you do not pay that extra amount, there will be no sin on you.

Q: There is a company specialized in shrimp breeding. This company bought a plot of one million square meters, built 80 aquariums, and installed electricity, fans and other equipment necessary for that purpose. It started to buy small shrimps and put them in the aquariums. It commissioned some workers to supervise the same and provide them with the necessary food and medicine. After a few months we sell those fully grown shrimps and buy small ones again and again. The total cost of building the aquariums along with the price of the land was 13 million Riyals. The cost of buying small shrimps and breeding them during in the first year was 5 million Riyals including workers' salaries, managerial expenses and the like. The losses of the company after the first year were 2 million Riyals. Is there any Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this company? If so, how much is it?

A: If a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes since you first started practicing this trade, you have to take stock of the shrimps you have prepared for sale and pay its Zakah, that is 2.5% of value, according to the rules of commercial commodities taking into consideration their value at the time when Zakah is due, which is after the completion of one Hawl whether this price is the same as that of purchase, or less or more. As for the farm land and the equipment, there is no Zakah on them since they are meant for use and not for sale.

Q: I built a villa as a personal residence using a loan from the Real Estate Fund. However, circumstances prevented me from occupying it. I offered it for sale for some years later and it was finally sold. I hope Your Eminence will clarify for me whether there is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this villa during the period it was up for sale, taking into consideration that it was built to be occupied, as I just mentioned, and there had never been any intention of selling it? How should we pay its Zakah if there is any?

A: Zakah becomes due on this villa from the very moment of intending to sell it and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes. Zakah then is due on its value. It has to be evaluated when a full Hawl passes and 2.5% of this value must be paid as Zakah for the first year, and the same is to be observed with regard to every other year prior to sale; estimation is to be made according to its value on the date Zakah became due every year, then Zakah is to be paid.

Q: I own three pieces of land in Makkah Al-Mukarramah and Riyadh. Two of them were obtained as a grant from the state and I bought the third one twelve years ago. I intended to sell the latter in the future in case of need, or to build on it in if I were to have the necessary funds. However, I neither sold nor built on it. I intended to leave the other two pieces, which I got from the municipality, for my children to build a house on them and live there or to sell them after my death. This is because at the moment I do not own a house that my children can live in after me.

Is there any Zakah (obligatory charity) due on these pieces of land? If yes, how much should I pay? Please advise me on this matter. May Allah reward you with the best! As-salam `alaykumwarahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: It is obligatory to pay Zakah of the land which you earmarked for trade if its value increases. Once a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed, you should pay 2.5% of its current value at that time. Q: I bought a flat from the state (through a loan) in the city of Jeddah. It cost two hundred and fifty thousand riyals. This was in Sha`ban 1411 A.H. The loan should be paid back by instalments over a period of 25 years. I used to give out my Zakah (obligatory charity) in Ramadan, and my question is: if the land and entire money I have equals the same value of the debt of the above mentioned flat, should Zakah be waived in this case by this debt?

A: Zakah is Wajib (obligatory) on land that is intended for sale. If your savings reach Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed, Zakah becomes mandatory on them as well. Q: I have a piece of land which I am not intending to sell, but

- Glorified be Allah! - if I need it, is this permissible to sell it?

A: Zakah (obligatory charity) is not Wajib (obligatory) on the piece of land which is intended for building and taking it as private house or to renting it out. Rather, Zakah is Wajib on the yielded rent if it reaches Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has elapsed while it is in the possession of the owner. However, Zakah is obligatory if a person intends to sell the piece of land, Hawl has passed since the time he made the intention, and it reaches the amount of Nisab in itself or in combination with other items liable to Zakah, such as cash or commercial commodities.

Q: A man prepared a piece of land for trade and it remained in his possession for more than a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) before selling it. How should he calculate the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on this land? Should he estimate it yearly and pay the Zakah due even if he does not sell it? If he sells it after several years, would it be necessary to pay the Zakah due on it during all the past years? Or, should he only pay the due Zakah on it for one year after selling it? If the Zakah is due for each year but he has no money to pay it, will he be exempted from this obligation or will it be a debt due on him?

As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you.)

A: Zakah is due on land prepared for sale and it must be paid yearly after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) when it reaches a Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) independently or after being added to other kinds of money on which Zakah is due such as the gold, silver, and commercial commodities. Zakah should be calculated on the value of these items of wealth at the end of the Hawl. If a person does not find money to pay the due Zakah, it will be a debt due on him until he pays it to the poor.

Fatwa no. 14531

Q: I have a piece of land that I will take from the Real Estate Development Fund. I intend to sell it and buy another plot when possible. Must I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on it?

A: Zakah is due on the value of this piece of land after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) from the time you intended to sell it, if it equals a Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due).

May Allah grant us success. May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon Prophet Muhammad and upon his family and Companions.

Fatwa no. 15939

Q: I would like to inform you that my two brothers and I have bought a plot of land measuring 2400 square meters in the area of Al-Khamis. We intended to invest it in the construction of housing units or in another project. At this time in 1408 A.H, we decided to establish a filling station. However, until the date of this letter sent to you, we have not got the license required for this enterprise. Now, we would like to ask about the following:

1. We have paid the annual Zakah (obligatory) since 1409 A.H. except for the last year.
2. We did not pay the Zakah of the last year 1412 A.H., because one of the partners became indebted and thus, he called the office of Da`wah nearby his residence to consult them about the case and they told him that there is no Zakah due on him until the business starts. Upon this, I felt doubtful about this Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar), as the land is prepared for investment. Hence, I paid the Zakah due on the value of my part (i.e. one third) of the land, which equals 900,000 riyals but my brothers refused to pay the Zakah due on their shares depending on the mentioned Fatwa.

Should the Zakah be due yearly on the value of this land or is no Zakah due until investment takes place? Please send me your Fatwa in a written form.

A: There is no Zakah on the land prepared for investment (for rent) but the Zakah should be on the rent collected when it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) independently or after being added to other kinds of money and a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes.

May Allah grant us success. May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon Prophet Muhammad and upon his family and Companions.

Q: I own many plots of land. Some of them have been in my possession for ten years now while other plots have only been a year or two. I do not pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on these plots until I sell them. I calculate the Zakah on the value of the land at the time of sale. Is this method, which I use, right? What should I do if this method is wrong? What about the Zakah of the past years? Please, advise me. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: A person who owns a commercial commodity that equals the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes from the time when he owns it for trade, he should evaluate it by the end of the Hawl. If it equals the Nisab, he must pay 2.5% of its value as due Zakah. Thus, you must pay the Zakah due on the land in your possession on this basis. The Zakah paid every year should be calculated upon the value of the land of this very year.

Q: I bought a piece of land for construction and investment, as this was my intention. Later, after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), my intention changed and I made up my mind upon selling it. I put it up for sale but it was not sold. Now, I do not have enough money to pay the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on it, based on the value of the selling price. However, I am not sure of preserving the original capital or of having profits gained. How should I calculate the Zakah? If I delay the due Zakah until I have the financial means for the required sum or until sale takes place, will this delay be permissible? Should I pay the Zakah due for one year after selling it or for all the past years? Should the Zakah be paid when profits are made and when loss takes place?

A: The Zakah is due on the land prepared for sale after the passage of a full Hawl from the time when the intention for sale was determined, because it is a kind of commercial commodity. Thus, the owner should evaluate it upon the end of the Hawl and pay the due Zakah, which is 2.5% of the price of evaluation at the time when Zakah is due. This is admittedly true whether the value of the land is more or less than the price of purchase. If someone does not have enough money to pay the due Zakah in time, it will remain a debt on them until they have the means and pay it.

Q: I have two houses and a piece of land. I use one of the two houses for living during some days of feasts and holidays while the other house is rented for 200 riyals a month and sometimes it may remain vacant. As for the piece of land, I bought it for 7000 riyals and if a client comes to buy any of these, I will sell them. Please, clarify the way of calculating Zakah (obligatory charity) due on them.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 98)

A 1: The real property that you determined to sell, such as houses or plots of land, should be evaluated after the passage of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) and the Zakah should be paid on it. As for the rent you collected, you should pay the Zakah due on it after the passage of a Hawl from the time the contract comes to effect.

Q 2: I have sums of money owed to me by some people, but I am not sure if I will get these sums back, for some of them are insolvent, and others are procrastinating. Moreover, there are others whom I do not know their circumstances. Should Zakah (obligatory charity) be paid on these sums and how should I calculate it?

A: The debts due on solvent people that you can receive upon demand, Zakah is due on them every year after the elapse of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) just like the money that you are in full possession of. As for the debts due on insolvent people, who are more than likely going to be unable to pay back the debt, no Zakah will be due on them until the debt is repaid. Thus, upon receiving it, the person should pay Zakah due on it after the passing of a Hawl from the time of receipt, according to the correct scholarly opinion.

Q: My father (may Allah be merciful with him) died in Rabi` Al-Awwal, last year. He left sons and daughters. Praise be to Allah, they are all adults. They entrusted me with the management of the inheritance of my father. My father's property includes stores and buildings. We, the heirs, determined to sell some of them and build a Masjid (mosque) as charity for my father, deducted from a fifth of the inheritance according to his bequest, if it covers that. But if the building of the Masjid takes more than one fifth of the legacy, the heirs will contribute to it with the rest. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the plots of land and the buildings? If it is due, how should we calculate it? What is the due time of the payment of Zakah? What are the conditions and other legal measures relevant to it? Am I to blame if I pay the Zakah on behalf of the heirs?

Should the Zakah due on rent be paid in advance upon receiving the rent or after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) from receipt while it is in my possession?

May Allah reward you the best!

Please, advise and guide me to the best management of my father's legacy to avail myself, my brothers and sisters, and my kinfolk. What is the way you see to calculate the fifth bequeathed by my father? Should it be taken from the sales of any piece of the inheritance or how should we calculate it?

A: If the buildings and plots of land mentioned are made for sale, Zakah will be due on them after the passage of a Hawl. Therefore, they should be estimated and 2.5% of the calculated value should be paid as Zakah. However, if the land and the buildings are not intended for sale, Zakah will be due only on the rent after the passage of a Hawl from the time of contract. As for parts allocated for charity, they are exempted from Zakah, so no Zakah is required on them or on their rent. You should care for and reform the property of the living people under your charge and the bequest of the dead.

Q: I own the following properties:

A. A building (housing units) prepared for rent.

B. Six plots of land prepared for sale but the market price fell, so I retained them until the market price improves.

C. I have a share in a piece of land prepared for sale with another partner but the sale is suspended due to the decrease of land prices.

Is the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on all these properties after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)? Should the land be considered as commercial commodity? How should I calculate the Zakah and pay it? Please outline the case and present an example for practical application.

A: A. There is no Zakah due on the building prepared for rent, but Zakah is due on the rent thereof. Thus, after the passing of a Hawl from the time when the lease contract takes effect, 2.5% of the rent should be paid as the due Zakah. May Allah grant us success.

B. The Zakah due on the plots of land is due on them every year. You should calculate the value of these plots by the end of the Hawl and pay 2.5% from the estimated value as Zakah.

C. Zakah is due on your share of the land prepared for sale. You should estimate the value of the land and pay 2.5% of the value of your share.

Fatwa no. 19260

Q: Six years ago, there was a boom in the sale, purchase and shareholding of large plots of land in the city of Riyadh. Some people purchased the land for themselves and others purchased the land and put it to shareholding in return for a commission from the shareholders. The price of land was running high continuously. However, soon the curve of prices began to decrease and there was stagnation.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 102)

The land then became like frozen assets in the hands of their owners, because of the absence of purchasers except for rare cases when the price offered scarcely equals half the price of the land before the depression. These lands, therefore, remained for years in the possession of their owners. Processes of large sales took place in a few cases and for low prices. The owners are waiting for economic recovery and price increases while those who want to buy are skeptic of the future of the real estate, especially in areas where no public utilities are available. It should be noted that most of the lands are large plots and are outside the urban boundary and lack public services. People used to deal in these lands only for the purpose of trade. These lands exceed the needs of housing for many years. Now, if each owner wants to sell his land, the supply will surpass the demand, because there are no buyers. It is evident then that the purchaser who buys for trade fears the future of real estate and will not risk buying at the time of depression unless the prices are very cheap and attractive.

Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on these lands in the light of such circumstances? How should the prices be calculated? It should be noted that this case is common among all people who entered into this business in the city of Riyadh.

A: Zakah is due on land put up for sale after the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) every year, because it is a commercial commodity. The value should be calculated by the end of the year and 2.5% should be paid as Zakah from the estimated value. This is admittedly true regardless of whether the land business is salable or unmarketable, based on the general evidence on the obligation of Zakah regarding things prepared for sale and trade.

fatwa no. 19525

Q: A person owns some villas and buildings that he built on a plot of land which he purchased. He now rents them and pays the Zakah (obligatory charity) on the rent after the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). However, when a suitable price is offered, he intends to sell. I would like you to clarify the following points: Is Zakah only due on the rent or is it necessary to evaluate each of these properties after the passing of a Hawl and to pay Zakah on their values in addition to Zakah due on the rent? What is the resolution if the Zakah is due on these villas and buildings during the past years and we did not pay Zakah on them?

Is Zakah due on the villa in which a person dwells, when evaluated after the passing of a Hawl? This is especially significant when the owner intends to sell it when he finds a suitable price and to move to another house.

Also, a person acts as a guardian for his insane brother and invests and develops his money. Finally, he found it appropriate to buy a villa that yields revenues and he would pay the Zakah due on the rent. Is Zakah due on the villa after the passing of a Hawl and estimating its price, especially when he intends to sell this villa if a good price is offered that is more than that of purchase in order to buy another better property and so on.

These are the questions I wanted to submit.

A: If the property is prepared for sale or the owner intends to sell it when a good price is offered, it will be a commercial commodity and at the end of a Hawl, it should be evaluated and 2.5% of the value should be paid as Zakah.

Zakah is due on the rent gained from the property, after the passing of a full Hawl from the lease contract date. Similarly, Zakah should be paid from the price of the property, when sold, after the passing of a full Hawl. The Zakah is 2.5%. The legal ruling is the same whether the building is under the control of the owner or under the control of his guardian.

Fatwa no. 19924

Q: I have a villa under construction on a plot of land, which is mine. I intend to sell it. It should be noted that the period of construction may take two years. How should I calculate the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on it? Is Zakah due during the first year of construction or after the completion of construction after two or more years?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 105)

A: No Zakah is due on the villa you are building during the period of construction even if it takes two or more years unless you intend to sell it before completing the construction under any accidental occasion or need. If there is an intention to sell it, Zakah will be due after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) from the time when the intention of sale takes place when the villa is still unsold. Thus, it should be evaluated by the end of the Hawl according to the spot price and 2.5% of its value should be paid as due Zakah. Similarly, if you continue the construction until the villa is ready for residence and then you intend to put it up for sale, Zakah will be due after the passing of one Hawl from the time you intended to sell it. That is because the villa in this case and the previous one becomes a commercial commodity, for it is put up for sale. It should be evaluated by the end of the Hawl and the Zakah should be 2.5% of its value. The ruling is applicable on a yearly basis; whenever the Hawl passes, it should be evaluated and 2.5% should be paid as Zakah as long as it is not sold.

First question of fatwa no. 19711

Q 1: I reclaimed a piece of land and prepared it for construction a long time ago. After I prepared it according to the Islamic law, I intended to establish a house for me and my children owing to my urgent need for it. Note that upon preparing it for construction, I had no intention to put it up for sale or trade. Later, after a period of time, it appeared to me that the piece of land was too small and did not provide enough room for the house and the relevant utilities that I wanted to build. I then thought to build a house on another land and I did. Then, I had no need to retain the land that I previously prepared for construction and I put it up for sale due to my urgent need of its price. That is because I was indebted. It remained three years on sale and then a person offered to buy it for 30,000 riyals but I did not accept his offer. Another three years passed while the land was still put up for sale. Finally, a person offered to buy it and I sold it to him for 35,000 riyals. In short, my question is:

(Part No. 8; Page No. 106)

Is there any Zakah due on me? What about the period of six years during which the land was put up for sale? Note that the land is located in a distant area. If Zakah is due on me, what is the amount of it per year over the past six years?

A 1: This land, which you chose to sell instead of build a house on, has the ruling of commercial commodity. You should evaluate it from the time you intended to sell and Zakah should be paid upon the end of every Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) according to its value at the time of evaluation after the passing of a Hawl. The amount of 2.5% should be paid as the due Zakah of the value of the land per year. Similarly, if a full Hawl passes from the time when you received the price of the land and the price is still in your possession, it should be added to the money that you own and 2.5% should be paid from the total sum as a yearly Zakah.

Second question of fatwa no. 19842

Q 2: I purchased a fenced plot of land for 190,000 riyals about three years ago. Half of this sum was the price of a car I bought for monthly installments from a company working in this field of business. The period of installments are four years, ending in the fourth month of 1419 A.H. by the leave of Allah (Glorified be He). The value of installment is 2,560 riyals per month. I then completed some units and facilities in the land to be a proper residence that I sometimes rent. Note that the process of completing the building was made by loans and most of this money has not been repaid. About two years ago, I decided to sell this place and repay my debts. However, I have not succeeded to sell it until now.

My question: Is there any Zakah (obligatory charity) due on it? Please, clarify this point. How much is the amount of Zakah per year? May Allah reward you with the best!

A 2: This residence that you intended to sell has the same ruling of commercial commodity from the time when you intended to sell it. Since you made up your mind to sell it two years ago,

you should pay the Zakah due on it for the last two years. You should evaluate it after the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) and pay the due Zakah according to its value at the time of evaluation. This process is repeated on a yearly basis and the value estimated should be added to the money that you have and you should pay 2.5% of the total sum as due Zakah to be given to the poor and the needy.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: I have a poultry farm, its description is as follows:

I made an agreement with one of the big national company, for which there are no competitors in this field. This company provides us with one-day old chicks and our workers raise them. The company also supplies the poultry feed required during the rearing period but we have no choice to choose the time of receiving the chicks or the poultry feed. Rather, the national company sets the system of work. The period of raising ranges between 40 and 50 days. Then, the company buys the suitable chickens of proper weight and distributes them to retailers.

A- We buy the young chicks from the company.

B- We buy the poultry feed from the company.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 109)

C- The company buys the production of chicken from our farm.

We have no choice to negotiate the price of chicks, the price of poultry feed, or the price of the chickens. Approximately after a month from the end of the raising period, a statement of account is sent to us stating the prices of chicks, feed, transportation, and chickens. A check is then received with the sum of money after offsetting the debts.

The costs of labor, chick mortalities during the raising period and feed are all counted on us. This system is followed in almost all the poultry farms working with this company.

Dear Shaykh, my question: Is there any Zakah (obligatory charity) due on these farms or on each period of raising separately or on the profits achieved after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)? If Zakah is due, please clarify this issue in detail and how should the Zakah be calculated?

A: You should count the chicks you have after the passing of every Hawl and also count the money you have, which is the capital, and the profits and pay 2.5% of the total sum as Zakah, because this is a case of commercial commodity.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

(Part No. 8; Page No. 110)

the construction takes two years, will the Zakah (obligatory charity) be due on him during these two years ? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A 3: For the period of building, construction and preparation, no Zakah is due on the mentioned land until the construction is finished and the building becomes ready for sale. Only then does the Zakah become due for each year that passes while it is offered for sale. It should be evaluated by the end of every year and 2.5% from its value should be paid as the due Zakah.

Q: My father took a piece of residential land as a grant from the state in one of the cities of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia in 1407 A.H. He left this land untouched and did not pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) on it until he died in 1409 A.H. The land remained without being divided among the heirs. In 1414 A.H., all the heirs decided on selling it and the sale actually took place for 135,000 riyals. Since some heirs are still minors, the permit of the legal court was required to conclude the sale. We took a sum of 10,000 riyals from the purchaser to be kept in the notary office until the permit was given. The request for this permit took a full year and after this year, the purchaser paid the full sum of the price and received the land. Is Zakah due on the value of this land for this mentioned year? Should the Zakah be due on the purchaser or on the heirs? Is there Zakah due on us for the last years when no Zakah was paid on the land? Please, advise us. May Allah reward you with the best, bless your knowledge and make you a source of benefit to all Muslims!

A: There is no Zakah on you concerning the land mentioned during the past period, because your father did not intend to sell it before his death. You also did not intend to sell it except in 1414 A.H., and because you did not hold the price but after a year from the date of sale.

As for the Zakah due after receiving the price, it is due on each of you according to his share; if the share reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) from the possession of this money.

Q: I have a residential land, which is a grant from the ruler (may Allah safeguard him). your Eminence to advise me in this regard: Is the Zakah due on it yearly, or only if we decide to sell it and gain from it. Give us your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar). May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If you do not want to sell it and intend to build on it, then no Zakah is due. The ruling is the same if you are undecided whether to sell or retain it. However, if you intend decisively to sell it, you should count the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) from the time when your intention to do so.

After the passing of the Hawl from this time, you should pay the due Zakah according to the value estimated upon the completion of the Hawl every year.

Q 1: I have a diamond set that I have displayed for sale for four months. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on it?

A: If a year has passed and this diamond set is still on display for sale and has not been sold, Zakah is due on it, because it is considered a commercial commodity. Thus, it should be evaluated after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). If the value equals the Nisab or more at the time of evaluation, then 2.5% should be paid of its estimated current value. Similarly, if another Hawl passes while it is displayed for sale, it should be evaluated upon the completion of the Hawl and 2.5% of its estimated current value should be paid as the due Zakah.

Q 2: Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the money deposited in a bank? It should be known that some of the money has not completed a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), since every month I add a sum of money.

A: It is obligatory to pay Zakah on the money deposited in a bank when it reaches Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl has passed on it, where one should give 2.5% of it as Zakah. If you add a sum of money every month to the original sum, Zakah becomes due on the new sum when a Hawl passes on depositing it, and you should then pay Zakah on the total sum of both the original sum and the new one. If you cannot calculate this exactly, then to be on the safe side, Zakah should be paid on all the money that you deposited, earlier or later, in the bank, in order to discharge your responsibility. You should also appoint a certain time for paying the Zakah due on you, such as the month of Ramadan, lest you should be confused regarding the completion of the Hawl on the money deposited at different times.

Q 3: Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the diamond that one wears constantly?

A: There is no Zakah due on diamond, since it is neither gold nor silver. Thus it is obligatory to pay Zakah on it only if it is displayed for trade. In other words, if it is displayed for selling and buying, it becomes a commercial commodity. In this case, it is obligatory to pay Zakah on it when a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes since offering it for trade. It should be evaluated every Hawl. If its value reaches Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) or more, then 2.5% of its value should be given as Zakah upon evaluating it.

Fatwa no. 20046

Q: A twenty-nine years old young man has been working in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia for nearly six years. He has left his country in pursuit of both lawful living in the vast land of Allah as well as lawful marriage. Allah endowed him with an amount of money he saved from his monthly salary during the previous years of his work in Saudi Arabia. This money is intended for his marriage, furnishing the flat wherein he will live, buying furniture, paying the expenses of the wedding ceremony, etc. This is all the money he has. In order for him to keep away from the doubt of either consuming Riba (usury) or contributing to it, he refused to deposit this amount in any of the banks in his country. Rather, he bought a plot of land to preserve this amount until he becomes completely ready for marriage, and then he will sell it and take its price. He bought this piece of land about twenty-seven months ago.

My question now is:

- 1- Should he give out Zakah (obligatory charity) for the piece of land he bought to preserve (the value of) his money until he prepares himself for marriage through paying it later?
- 2- If he should give Zakah for this piece of land he bought, should he count Zakah according to its purchase price, that of his selling it, or to its market value at the time?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 115)

- 3- And if he has no income other than his salary, is he still required to give Zakah for it (the piece of land)?
- 4- If this young man remained jobless in his country and receiving no salary for one or more years after his purchasing this land, is it obligatory to pay Zakah on this land for that year too?
- 5- Is it permissible for him to give the due Zakah to one of his brothers as a subsidy for him to marry?
- 6- Finally, is it permissible to give Zakah in the form of either money or goods to aid people, such as food, clothes, blankets, etc., or not?

A: This piece of land you bought and intend to sell when you determine to marry is classified under commercial commodities, since you intend to sell it when Allah facilitates for you the matter of marriage. Thus, you should estimate its value upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) since you bought and intended to sell it. Whatever price (equal to or more than Nisab; the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) it reaches at the time of this estimation, you should pay 2.5% of it as Zakah. Whenever another Hawl passes without you selling it, it should be evaluated and 2.5% of its estimated price should be given out as Zakah. It does not matter whether its current price is less or more than what you paid for purchasing it. The Zakah due on it should be given out in the same currency used in its estimation or in gold or silver. This is in order for you to discharge your responsibility and to be on the safe side and be more precise in estimating its value.

Your possessing no other resource for income than your salary, or your remaining jobless for a period of time, has nothing to do with the obligation of Zakah on you. In other words, this is not a justification for exempting you from paying Zakah, since the Zakah here has to do with the land you intended for sale.

It is permissible for you to give the Zakah to one of your brothers provided he deserves it, i.e. being a poor person. In this case, you can give him out of this Zakah due to his poverty and need. There is nothing wrong with this. Rather, giving it to a needy relative is to be given priority and preference. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Your charity to the poor is regarded as one good deed, but paying charity to your relatives is both charity and maintenance of ties of kinship.\) (Narrated by Al-Tirmidhy, Imam Ahmad and Al-Nasa'y) This is the wording recorded by Al-Tirmidhy who said: It is a Hasan, Sahih Hadith (a Hadith which according to Al-Tirmidhy stands at a higher level than a mere Hasan Hadith, but at a bit lower level than Sahih).

Q: I have a farm that became land for building. Regarding its Zakah (obligatory charity), whenever I sell a piece of this land, I pay the Zakah due on the sold piece of land. I would like Your Eminence to explain the Zakah due on the pieces of land I sell in monthly installments and the pieces I have not sold yet. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, Zakah is due on the land after the elapse of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) calculated from the time the owner intended to sell it. With regard to the pieces of land that have been sold, the due Zakah is paid from the price. As for the land that has not yet been sold, its value has to be estimated in cooperation with some experts who have the ability to estimate the value of such land at the time when Zakah is due; that is, when a Hawl elapses. Zakah is paid according to the estimated value of the land.

Q2: I sold a piece of land and received its price. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the land paid according to its present value? Please give us the ruling on this question. May Allah reward you with the best and benefit Islam and Muslims with your knowledge.

A2: The Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) that makes Zakah due on the land referred to above begins from the time you intended to sell it. If a Hawl that is calculated from the time you intended to sell the land elapses, Zakah is due on the land as long as it is still under your control. You have to estimate the value of the land after the elapse of a Hawl and then pay the Zakah due on it, that is, 2.5% of the estimated price. If the land has been sold, you can give the due Zakah as 2.5% of the price.

Q2: Two people possess a piece of land in a region of the Kingdom. The land is shared equally by the two partners, that is, it is a commonage. However, one of the partners cannot pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the land because of his poverty and insolvency. What is the ruling on that?

A2: If the land in commonage is prepared for trade, Zakah is due on it, each partner according to his share. If a partner has no money at the present time to pay the due Zakah, it is regarded as a debt which he has to pay whenever he can. If the land is not prepared for trade, no Zakah is due on it.

Q:

1- We, as well as some other partners, own a piece of land which was offered for sale and therefore Zakah (obligatory charity) was paid for it throughout the previous years; each of the partners would pay the Zakah due on his share from his own money.

2- A year ago, we concluded an agreement with another party to build on this piece of land. This partner would finance all the construction works. The project has already begun; the land was dug and some other construction works were done. Due to the delay of the second party with regard to the timetable of the construction, the contract was cancelled and the other party was compensated for the construction works he had done.

3- The land is still on sale and there are only two options:

A- The first is to sell the land as it is after it has been dug and prepared.

B- The second is to build a block of apartments or a hotel on this land to realize one of the following three things:

- * The whole building is made for rent.
- * The whole building is used as a hotel.
- * The whole project is prepared for sale.

Moreover, we own another piece of land that is now being prepared: breaking the rocks, and so on. It is worth mentioning that preparing such land will cost nearly half the value of the land. Our intention with regard to this land is the same as the first piece of land. In a word, the purpose of purchasing these two pieces of land is to make a suitable profit, whether through selling them for a good price or building on them and therefore investing them by renting or selling.

We would be grateful if Your Eminence could guide us to the correct way to pay the Zakah due on these two pieces of land.

A: As long as you are hesitant about these two pieces of land, whether to sell them or build on them, there is no Zakah due on them. This is because Zakah is due on the land that is prepared for sale.

Fatwa no. 20817

Q: Twenty years ago my father bought a piece of land without having a purchase deed. He did not offer it for sale. When my father died, I depended on this piece of land for my living and obtained a deed for it two years ago. I sold the land for 45,000 Riyals. I want to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this land, taking into account that when my father died, the heirs offered all his property for sale. Do I have to pay Zakah for this land from the time I obtained the deed? Or how should I pay Zakah for it?

A: As long as you do not know the intention of your father with regard to the abovementioned land, there is no Zakah due on it for the period during your father's lifetime. After his death, the land passed to the heirs; as long as you sold it for the sum of money mentioned above, each of the heirs has to pay the due Zakah from his share if one Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes and the money is in their possession.

Q 2 : I own a small piece of land which I bought with the intention of using it as a commercial commodity. Now, it is being farmed by orphans whom I do not charge for cultivating it. Am I obliged to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) for my land? Moreover, is the value of the Zakah estimated according to the time when the land is bought or according to the due time of paying the Zakah each year? Does the ruling change if I decide to build a house on the land instead of using it as a commercial commodity?

A : If you intend to use this land for business, then it is considered as a commercial commodity and Zakah is due on it. You must calculate the revenues of your land when a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which the Zakah is due) passes and is in your possession as the owner, then pay a Zakah of 2.5% of the amount of your calculated revenues if your land has reached its Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). If you change your mind and decide to build a house on your land, then no Zakah is due, as it is no longer a commercial commodity in this case.

Q 2: A man bought a piece of land with the intention of using a part of it for building his place of residence and renting the other part or selling it for a price higher than that he bought it for and buying another piece of land. Must he pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on this land?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 122)

May Allah reward you with the best.

A: No Zakah is due on a land intended for building a personal residence; it is due on a land offered for sale when a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes while it is still up for sale, as it becomes, in this case, a commercial commodity. The value of such land is estimated according to its current price at the completion of a full Hawl and 2.5% of the estimated value of the land at that time is paid as Zakah.

However, if the owner intends only to rent it or is undecided regarding renting or selling it, then no Zakah is due, as long as the owner is hesitant and has not resolved to sell it. If they intend to rent it, Zakah, in this case, is not due on the asset itself rather on the rent, if it reaches the Nisab and a full Hawl elapses from the time of concluding the lease contract.

Zakah of Al Naqdayn (Gold and Silver)

The first question of Fatwa no. 14679

Q 1 : I have some coins, the value of which has not reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah [obligatory charity] is due). I also lent some coins to some brothers. If I add the coins that I have to those which I lent, they would reach the Nisab. However, I do not know exactly whether they will pay me back in two, three or four years. Is this considered a Nisab or does the Nisab only relate to that which I actually have? If it is considered a Nisab, must I pay Zakah for the money I lent to the brothers or just the money that I actually have in hand? Kindly note that I am a worker and not a businessman. I seek your assistance, may Allah benefit us all!

A : The Zakah is due upon any currency when a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes while it is in possession of the owner, reaches its Nisab, or added to any property liable to Zakah, like the money one may lend to an able and fit person. If the debtor is unable to pay back his debt and the money in your possession has not reached the Nisab, then Zakah is not due.

Q: I received from the Sawami` (wheat foundation that collects wheat from farmers), during the year 1411 A.H., a sum of money which was a debt they owed me. I paid Zakah for it in the month of Ramadan of the year 1411 A.H. I sold, on credit, from the amount that remained, four hundred thousand riyals worth of vehicles in the month of Dhul-Hijjah of the year 1411 A.H. and five thousand boxes of soap, also one thousand five hundred boxes in the month of Rabi` Al-Awwal of the year 1412 A.H., in addition to four thousand nine hundred and ninety three boxes. This contains all that I sold on credit. I ask Allah, and then Your Eminence to clarify the amount of Zakah due upon me; must Zakah be paid for the profit that has not been collected yet or only for the capital at the time of paying Zakah during Ramadan? Kindly note that the value of sales on credit given out will not be collected before one or two years or even more, and the profit can never be known before hand, whether it is plus or minus. I ask Your Eminence to clarify what should be done.

A: You must pay Zakah (obligatory charity) for your capital and its profit whenever a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes and the Hawl of the profit follows the Hawl of its capital.

Q 1: Is it obligatory upon the creditor to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) for the debt he lend if the debt remains with the debtor for a year or two or more, and part of the debt is paid and part of it is not? How does one estimate the Zakah in such a case?

A: If the debt is given to an insolvent person and the creditor does not know whether he will get his money back or not, then the creditor is not obliged to pay Zakah until he redeems his money and a year passes after he is paid back. However, if the debt is given to a solvent person who can repay the creditor whenever he demands payment, then the creditor is obliged to pay Zakah for this debt as long as a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes while the money is in the possession of its owner.

Q: We represent a corporation that offers installment sales. Mostly, our sales are divided on monthly installments for three years. It is subject to a certain amount of interest agreed upon at the time of endorsing the contract. The monthly installments the corporation recovers are reinvested in buying new commodities and offering them, again, in installment sales.

We kindly request that you inform us of the method by which the Zakah (obligatory charity) is calculated in this activity. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: Zakah is due upon a certain amount of money when the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes with that amount being in the possession of its owner. The same applies on money that is lend to or borrowed by able non-procrastinating people, whether this debt is going to be paid as one payment or in installments. Zakah is also due upon any sale commodities if a Hawl passes and the value they were sold for is still in the possession of the owner.

Q 1: I am the trustee of some inheritors who inherited a huge amount of money. However, there was a dispute over the money with the partner in the heritage. The dispute continued for more than ten years because of the procrastination of the partner who happens to be the uncle. The latter delivered the money after that period in installments.

What is the situation of the inheritors concerning paying Zakah (obligatory charity) for that money for the time prior to receiving it? Must they pay Zakah for all the years that passed in dispute or just one year, or is the Zakah not due except after a new Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes?

A: If there is tardiness in payment for a certain amount of money due to the stalling of the person who should pay the money, then the Zakah is only due upon that money after a Hawl passes and the money is in the possession of its lawful owner; this is according to the correct opinion maintained by scholars.

Q 2: The inheritors have asked me to request a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) about the real estate that is not being offered for sale by real estate agents or at national newspapers: what is the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on such real state if a buyer comes and offers a reasonable price for them and they are sold? Is Zakah due upon such properties or is it not due until they are sold and the value is received? Must Zakah be paid for all the years in which the properties remained without being sold or just for one year?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 128)

A: The Zakah is due upon any real estate offered for sale if a Hawl (one lunar year calculated after the property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes and it is still in the possession of its owner. Its value is to be calculated at the due time of Zakah and 2.5% of the calculated value should be paid, even if it is not offered for sale by real estate agents.

Q 3: If one has shares in a company and is not a hundred percent certain that the company pays Zakah (obligatory charity) on those shares, but he is only informed that the company does so, and as Your Eminence knows, this information may be true or false, what is the ruling on that?

A: You have to ask the company that has your shares whether it pays full Zakah on them or not. If the company pays Zakah as it is authorized by shareholders to do so, the shareholders are discharged of responsibility. If the company pays only part of the Zakah, then the shareholder is bound to pay what remains. If the company does not pay any Zakah on the shares, then the shareholder must pay full Zakah on his shares.

You should take into consideration that Zakah is due on the shares that are allocated for trading and are offered for sale. However, fixed shares that are not offered for sale and are just for investment, Zakah is due on their revenues if they reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) by themselves or when added to other properties and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes while they are in the possession of their owner.

Q 4: I lent some of my relatives an amount of money as a sort of loan. Their straightened conditions hindered them from paying me back; this has gone on for more than two years. Is it allowed that those who benefit from that money pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due upon it or must I do so, or am I exempted from paying Zakah for that amount until I retrieve it?

A: You must pay Zakah every year for the amounts of money you lent people unless the debtors were unable to pay you back and you do not know whether you will retrieve your money or not. In that case, you are not obliged to pay Zakah for it till you retrieve it and a Hawl (a lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes while it is in your possession.

Q: There is a query posed by some foreign workers in the governorate of Damad: They work for their sponsors for three years. During that period the sponsor gives the worker some money from his salary to meet the basic needs of living and he deducts it from the total sum of the worker's payment. When the worker finishes working for the time that was agreed upon and wants to return to his country, he calculates the total amount of money the sponsor gave him during that period, deducts it from his salary and takes what is left of the salary from the sponsor. Is the worker obliged to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on his salary? Kindly provide us with advice so that we can guide them.

A: If a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes upon the salary which the workers deserves after finishing the period of work agreed upon; meaning that whenever he demands it from his sponsor, he will give it to him without any stalling or refusal, this salary takes the ruling of the money in his hands, upon which Zakah is due at the end of every Hawl from the time his payment was due to him.

However, if the sponsor procrastinates or becomes insolvent, and the worker cannot obtain his payment whenever he asks for it, then his payment is considered a debt given to an unable person and Zakah is not due upon it as long as it is in the hands of the sponsor. When the worker gets his payment, he is to wait for a new Hawl to pass before paying Zakah on it.

Q 5: I lent a sum of twenty thousand riyals to one of my relatives. Ten years have passed now and he has not paid back his debt to me. Kindly note that his debt was originally thirty thousand riyals and I pardoned him making it ten thousand riyals. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due upon the twenty thousand riyals for the past ten years? If so, how much must I pay?

A: If the mentioned debt is given to a solvent debtor whom you trust will pay you back, then Zakah is due upon that money for every year. However, if the debtor is unable to pay you back and you are not certain whether you will get your money back, then you are not obliged to pay Zakah, unless you redeem your money and a year passes after receiving it.

Q: I am the manager of an industrial company that manufactures pharmaceutical products and provides them to a number of clients in both the public and private sector. The outstanding debts due to us for the Hijri (lunar) years: 1413,1414,1415, and1416 are several hundred million Riyals. The company exerted strenuous efforts in following up and claiming these debts and it took all possible measures in this respect. However, a long time has passed and the company is still unable to collect the debts, which has made the company unable to redeem and manage its money for the sake of exploring further opportunities and realizing profits. Out of the company's concern to pay full Zakah (obligatory charity) to the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of its shareholders' money, it presents to Your Eminences this query regarding paying Zakah on its overdue debts, in terms of possessions, growth and the passing of Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches its minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) on them, having been unable to collect them from the debtors; and how is Zakah calculated after redeeming the debts partially or totally.

Is the company obliged to pay Zakah for the entire amount of overdue debt which it was denied from redeeming despite claiming it from the debtor?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 134)

Is Zakah only due on the redeemed amount of the debt after a Hawl passes while it is in the possession of the company?

We seek your advice concerning paying Zakah on these debts, and as such we appeal to your knowledge of the methods of the Salaf (righteous predecessors) and the opinions of the Four Imams (Abu Hanifa, Malik, Al-Shafi` and Ahmad) that is related on the authority of the Jumah (dominant majority of scholars).

A: If the debt is with an insolvent person, or an able but procrastinating debtor from whom the creditor finds himself unable to redeem his money, then the latter is not obliged to pay Zakah until the money is received and a Hawl passes while it is in one's possession. However, if the debtor is able to pay and the creditor is likely to receive his money, then, the creditor is obliged to pay Zakah for that debt as long as a Hawl passes and the debt reaches the Nisab, by itself or by being added to some other money or property of the creditor.

Q: My wife is an employee, and she lent me a large sum of money amounting to over fifty thousand riyals in order to build a house for us. I have finished building most of it and she still lends me money every now and then till we finish the building. Is my wife obliged to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on this money when she has not received any payment from me, yet? Kindly note that I will not be able to pay her back before I finish the building and pay my former debts.

Also, please take into consideration that my salary just exceeds five thousand riyals, all praise be to Allah, but I will not be able to pay back my wife except in installments.

My question is: Is my wife obliged to pay Zakah? When should she do so? How is she to pay Zakah if I pay her back in installments? Kindly guide me, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: Your wife must pay Zakah for this debt she lent you after the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), while it is in your possession, if you are able to pay it back. If you are unable to pay and cannot be sure whether you will or not, then she is to pay Zakah of one year after she receives the money.

Fatwa no. 14421

My husband built a house for us seven years ago. I used to help him with my entire salary and I did not intend it to be a debt at all. However, he recorded all the amounts of money he took from me and intended to pay me back when his situation improves better because he fears Allah, but I had no idea about his intention. Five years ago, he told me that he intended to return the money to me, thus, I considered it to be a debt since then only. Now, he returned almost all the money back.

When do I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) and how and for how many years? Do I estimate its value ever since I started giving him the money, knowing that I did not consider it to be a debt since seven years but only since two years?

A: You must pay Zakah for all the years that passed, as your husband did not accept your money as a sort of help or grant, but considered it a loan. Thus, you are obliged to pay Zakah as long as he intends to pay the debt. You must pay 2.5% of the amount of the debt for every year for the Zakah is Tazkiyah (purification of the heart and soul) for both the money and the payer of Zakah. Allah (Exalted be He) states: \(Take Sadaqah \(alms\) from their wealth in order to purify them and sanctify them with it\)

Q: I borrowed a sum of money from a person and I used it in some trading business. A Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) or more passed and that money is still in my possession. Is it permissible that I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) for that money from my own money, as I am the one benefiting from it? Kindly advise me.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 137)

A: Zakah is due upon the person who lent you if the money he lent you reaches its Nisab (minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) on its own or by adding it to other sums of money or commercial commodities. However, it is permissible for you to pay your creditor back more than what he lent you, unconditionally, and that is out of being a good debtor. It has been authentically reported on the authority of Abu Rafi' (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: «The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) borrowed a young camel \(under six years\), then the camels of charity were brought to him. He ordered me to return to the man the young camel \(as a return of the loan\). I said: 'I did not find among them but better camels above the age of six.' He said: 'Give that to him for the best people are those who are best in paying off their debts.'» This was narrated by Muslim, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y, and Ibn Majah.

Q: I borrowed a sum of one hundred thousand riyals from my father three years ago. Throughout that period, I paid Zakah (obligatory charity) for my father's money from my own money. The mentioned amount remained as it is and my father approved of what I did. Kindly advise me, may Allah reward you with the best! Did I commit a sin by paying Zakah for that money on behalf of my father?

A: This is not permissible, as it is considered a loan that has brought interest, and any loan that brings interest is considered Riba (usury/interest) by Ijma' (consensus of scholars). Your father bears the obligation of

Is the Zakah (obligatory charity) for that money obligatory on me or on my brother who benefits from it? Kindly note that I pay Zakah for it from my own money while it is in my brother's possession.

A: The owner of the money is obliged to pay Zakah for his capital, and he is not absolved of this obligation except by doing so. As for the mentioned debtor, he is obliged to pay Zakah for his debt together with its profits, like the rest of his money that is liable to Zakah.

there are minors in the family, is Zakah due upon that money? Kindly note that the family receives from the government a monthly salary of no less than four thousand riyals. Kindly advise us regarding whether or not Zakah is due upon the money in this case?

A: Zakah is due upon the money you inherited from your son if a Hawl (a lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes while it is in your possession. Zakah is also due upon the inheritance of the minors if the share of each minor reaches its Nisab (the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) or more and a Hawl passes. Fatwa no. 15762

Q: A joint-stock company was established to buy vehicles and sell them on installments. The par value of the share is (40.000) forty thousand Riyals: twenty thousand paid in advance and twenty thousand by monthly installments, each installment being a thousand Riyals. The company started its activity in Shawwal in 1412 A.H. with an amount of (940.000) nine hundred and forty thousand Riyals by buying vehicles and selling them by deferred payments on installments that reach up to thirty six months. The company's financial statement in Dhul-Qa`dah of in 1413 A.H. is as follows:

(Part No. 8; Page No. 140)

The paid capital:

1.551.000 (one million five hundred and fifty one thousand Riyals.)

Purchases throughout the year:

2.308.050 (two millions three hundred and eight thousand and fifty Riyals.)

Sales throughout the year:

2.861.508 (two millions eight hundred and sixty-one thousand five hundred and eight Riyals.)

Total profit from operations:

553.458 (five hundred fifty-three thousand and four hundred and fifty-eight Riyals).

Total expenditures:

29.477 (twenty nine thousands four hundred and seventy-seven Riyals.)

We ask about the assigned Shar`y (Islamically lawful) Zakah (obligatory charity): Is it calculated according to the net profit after deducting the expenditures, or the total profit, or the capital, or the sales? Note that the profits do not presently exist, as buying and selling take place at the end of every month, and the vehicles are sold to new buyers after other debtors pay their installments. We hope you will advise us as to the method of calculating the Shar`y Zakah of the company. As-salamu `alaykum (may Allah's peace be upon you).

(Part No. 8; Page No. 141)

A: If the case is as you have mentioned then Zakah must be calculated according to the company's capital and the total profits after the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) while being in the company's possession, even if the profits are in the form of unpaid debts.

Q: We are a group of partners sharing the same capital. We deal in buying vehicles and selling them on installments. The partners authorized me to buy and sell on their behalf. We have been partners for a year during which it was time for paying Zakah (obligatory charity). Do I pay Zakah for all of the original capital or for just the unpaid debt, which is the rest of the value of the vehicles remaining with debtors? May All reward you with the best!

A: First: Each partner must pay Zakah for his capital and profits after the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), whether the money was present at the time or deferred.

Secondly: If your partners authorized you to pay Zakah on their behalf you are allowed to do so and you may distribute it among the categories of Zakah recipients.

Q1: My father died and left a sum of money of which I inherited a share as one of the heirs. I was given the authority to keep all the money until it is divided among the heirs. Now the question is: is there any Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money, even without permission of the rest of the inheritors? Or, must I hold on to the entire money until each heir receives his due share?

A: Zakah is due upon the estate of the deceased, if the share of each one of the heirs reaches the Nisab (minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) or more. Each heir is bound to pay Zakah for that amount as long as they are adult and sane. It is also permissible if the heirs authorize one among them to pay Zakah on their behalf, and represent them in this respect. If there are underage heirs, then their legal guardian must pay Zakah on their behalf.

Q: My husband died and left behind a sum of three million riyals. I am the legal guardian of my four underage children. However, due to some dispute over the inheritance with heirs from another wife, there was a delay in the distribution of this money among the heirs for about two and a half years, after which time each heir has received their due share. My question is: Is Zakah (obligatory chaity) due on this money, or are they considered frozen funds? If Zakah is due on this money, must it be paid for each of the two years of delay or just one year? May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the case is as you have mentioned, that there was a dispute among the heirs over the inheritance, which caused a delay in its distribution for two years, then the Zakah is due on each heir according to his share of heritage, either on its own or by adding it to his personal wealth, be it cash or goods. This applies to the share of a minor or an adult, and the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) begins from the time of the death of the legator.

Q: Our father died and left a wife and six children: two boys and four girls. He left behind a sum of money in the bank and a piece of land. We distributed the cash among us according to the Shari'ah (Islamic law), praise be to Allah. The male's share is twice as that of the female's. However, we did not sell the land because we were not offered the price that we asked for. Thus, we preferred to leave it until its value goes up then we would sell it and distribute the price between us according to Shari'ah. Two years or more have passed and the value has not risen. So, I informed my brothers and sisters that Zakah (obligatory charity) is due on the piece of land because we intended to sell it and we were waiting for its value to rise. But my sisters, may Allah guide them to what is right, did not approve of this. They believe that no Zakah is due on the land, because it is property of inheritance. Now, the question is: which view of ours is the correct one, theirs or mine? Kindly explain the issue to us, may Allah bless you for your efforts!

A: If the case is as you have mentioned, then Zakah is due on the share of each heir if the value of this share reaches the Nisab (minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) as long as they had the intention to sell the land. The amount of the due Zakah must be calculated after the elapse of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). Thus, whenever a Hawl passes from the time they intended to sell it, Zakah must be calculated and each heir must pay Zakah on their share, if it reaches the Nisab either on its own or by adding the share to his personal wealth, be it cash or or goods. If some of the heirs intended to offer their share in the land for sale while the rest did not, then the ruling applies only to those who intended to sell.

Q: My sister passed away on 9/5/1399 A.H. and left behind some gold which was inherited by her two adult daughters. After some time, the daughters began selling the gold as follows:

On 8/4/1412 A.H., they sold some gold worth 2310 riyals.

On 25/10/1412 A.H., they sold another quantity of gold worth 2300 riyals.

On 22/7/1413 A.H., they sold some more gold worth 3680 riyals.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 145)

On 25/12/1413 A.H., they sold some more gold worth 10,000 riyals.

If they want to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on that gold, how much must they pay, bearing in mind that they do not exactly remember how much the gold weighed? Kindly provide us with a Fatwa on this matter, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the share of each one of the heirs reached the Nisab (minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) on its own or combined with her personal wealth, be it cash or goods, bearing in mind that the Nisab of gold on which Zakah is payable is equal to ninety two (92) grams. If the possessed gold reaches that Nisab then the Zakah due on it is 2.50% of its total value per each year that has passed while in the possession of its owner. This is because Zakah is jointly inseparable from Salah (Prayer) in the Holy Qur'an. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And those who hoard up gold and silver [Al-Kanz: the money, the Zakat of which has not been paid], and spend it not in the Way of Allah,﴾ meaning: those who do not pay Zakah for their possessions of gold and silver, ﴿announce unto them a painful torment.﴾ ﴿On the Day when that (Al-Kanz: money, gold and silver the Zakât of which has not been paid) will be heated in the Fire of Hell and with it will be branded their foreheads, their flanks, and their backs, (and it will be said unto them): "This is the treasure which you hoarded for yourselves. Now taste of what you used to hoard."﴾

Q: We appeal to you in the name of our corporation (N.G.S.R) that possesses a series of companies that work in the industry of vehicles and their services. We send to you this message requesting your legal opinion concerning the most sound method in assessing the legal Zakah (obligatory charity) due on us. In the following, we will provide you with a summary of the corporation's activities, which are as follows:

Firstly: Renting cars: The capital in this activity is represented in the following items:

- 1- The cash existing in the corporation's fund and in bank accounts. Obviously, the amount of this cash is variable, fluctuating up and down during the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) while they are in the corporation's possession.
- 2- The debts due upon the leaseholders on account of not paying the rental charges of their cars in full.
- 3- The loans that are given out to the employees of the corporation and which are paid back in the form of monthly instalments deducted from their salaries.
- 4- Amounts of cash paid out for investing in national joint stock companies.
- 5- Land purchased for the purpose of investment in establishing future projects or for selling and making profit.
- 6- Real estate, constructions, equipments, machineries, office-equipments, furnishings and so on.
- 7- Vehicles owned by the corporation, which form the main source of its income.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 147)

Some of these cars are old and a Hawl had passed while they were in the corporation's possession, some cars have been bought, either in cash or on installments, and a Hawl has not passed since they were purchased by the corporation. Other cars are transferred from the different branches in the Kingdom for repair in the corporation's service center.

8- Concerning the vehicles that are transferred to and from our branches within the Kingdom during the period of a Hawl, whose value may add to the capital of one branch and decrease the capital of another, how can the total capital of each branch be calculated? Originally, these branches are subject to one financial administration. And although one branch may be the creditor or the debtor of another branch when counting the total value of the vehicles transferred to it, they virtually pay nothing to each other as all branches belong to the same corporation. Now, the question is: how can we calculate Zakah due upon each branch, individually?

9- There are also financial exigencies due upon the corporation to cover the cost of buying vehicles on installments as well as the accrued expenses that have to be paid annually, such as offices' rent and the housing of the employees of the corporation and other variant expenses.

10- Finally, there is the principal capital and the retained profits from previous years and the achieved profits after the passing of a Hawl, putting into consideration that the capital of items 9 and 10 are equal in their worth to the rest of the items previously mentioned in the budget of the corporation.

Secondly: The activity of buying and selling cars: the capital of the car agency we run consists of the same previously mentioned items, with some differences in the following points:

1- Concerning the vehicles that are in the showroom, and here I mean vehicles which are owned by the showroom: some of them have been in the showroom and a Hawl has passed and they have not been sold (stagnant capital); other vehicles were bought a few months before the passing of the Hawl; and some others have been recently purchased.

2- 75% of the capital of the agency is used in selling vehicles on installments; this in itself voids the capital, as the entire capital of the showroom consists of debts due upon the clients of the showroom. The money collected from these debts is invested in buying more vehicles on installments as well. In this way, the capital sores up year after another, but is not liquidated. How can Zakah be evaluated in this case?

Thirdly: The activity of vehicles quick service center. The center's capital is represented in the same previously mentioned items, differing only in the following:

1- The principal income yields from the charges of the service, such as oil changing, fixing punched tyres, and other related services.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 149)

2- An extra income is achieved from the profits of selling new tyres, oil, spare parts, and other services.

Fourth: Is it permissible to distribute part of the collected funds of Zakah among the workers in the corporation?

May Allah bless you for your efforts and guide you and us to the right path!

A: 1- Zakah is due upon the cash in the fund of the corporation when a Hawl has passed while it is in the possession of the corporation, even if it was subject to increase or decrease.

2- Zakah is due on the debts due to the corporation payable by leaseholders and employees if a Hawl passes while they are in the possession of the corporation, as long as the debtors are able and do not stall in paying it back.

3- Zakah is due upon the sums of invested money and their profits if a Hawl passes and it is still in the corporation's possession.

4- Zakah is due on the land bought for the purpose of investment. Zakah is now assessed in accordance with the estimated value of the land at the time of the passing of the Hawl, whether this value was equal to, greater or less than the value of the original price.

5- Zakah is not due upon things that are meant to be put in use, such as buildings, constructions, furnishings and so on.

6- Concerning used cars that are bought in order to be operated to yield an income, Zakah is due on the total sum of its returns: all the returns of the different branches of the corporation must be collected and Zakah should be calculated according to that sum, provided that a Hawl has passed.

7- The corporation's debts and obligations do not excuse it from paying Zakah due on its commercial transactions.

8- Zakah is due upon the vehicles that are bought for the purpose of selling them and making profit, according to its original value at the time of the passing of a Hawl. The profits are also liable to Zakah if a Hawl passes while they are in the possession of the owner.

9- It is permissible to give part of the Zakah to deserving workers in your corporation, if their salaries are not sufficient to sustain them, as long as the corporation does not reap any benefit from giving them this Zakah; like giving Zakah to the person who is already indebted to the corporation. In that case it is not permitted to give him a share of Zakah funds. The same applies if the Zakah is given to make him more enthusiastic in doing his job or encourage him to stay in.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Fatwa no. 20994

Praise be to Allah alone, and peace and blessings of Allah be upon the last of the Prophets!

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has scrutinised what was submitted to the Grand Muftý (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) by His Excellency the assigned Director of the Center of Da`wah (calling to Islam) and Guidance of Jeddah Province which was referred to the committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with the No. of 430/9/20G dated on 4/6/1420 A.H. Following are the questions he asked:

We were approached by some of the Du`ah (callers to Islam) brothers who work in the communities' advice bureaus in the governorate of the Jeddah Province where they mentioned that one of the most disputable Fatwas (legal opinions) that causes serious controversy and severe difference of opinions among Du`ahs, especially the Du`ahs in the Indian Peninsula, is that Zakah (obligatory charity) on gold and silver is to be paid once in a life time, and that there are no valid legal proofs that obligate its payment every year. The proponents of this view argued that Shar`y (Islamic legal) evidence supports giving out Zakah and warns against any negligence in that aspect. However, there is no direct order to pay it every passing Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). This issue has caused huge dispute among a magnitude of people who are in need of a written decisive Fatwa from Your Eminence as a reference in order to put an end to the dispute between them In sha`a Allah (if Allah wills). Thus, we hope that Your Eminence may look into the matter and issue a Fatwa that expresses the most correct ruling established by the Shari'ah.

After having thoroughly scrutinized the presented case, the committee issued the following Fatwa: Zakah is payable on gold and silver if they reach the Nisab (minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) at the passing of every Hawl while they are in the possession of their owner. Allah the Almighty says: ﴿And those who hoard up gold and silver [Al-Kanz: the money, the Zakât of which has not been paid] and spend them not in the Way of Allâh, announce unto them a painful torment.﴾

Also it is reported in the Sahih (Authentic collection of Hadith) of Imam Muslim that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: ﴿No owner of a treasure who does not pay its due Zakah (obligatory charity) (would be spared) but it (his hoards) would be heated in Hellfire and would be made into plates and with it, his sides and forehead would be cauterized until Allah pronounces judgment among His Servants during a day the extent of which would be fifty thousand years. He would then see his path, leading either to Jannah (Paradise) or to the Hellfire.﴾

Scholars have unanimously agreed that the word "Al Kanz" (hoard) mentioned in Holy Qur'an and Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet Muhammad) means any wealth the due Zakah on which has not been paid.

Also, it is reported on the authority of `Aly ibn Abu Talib (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: \(When you possess two hundred dirhams and one year passes on them, five dirhams are payable on them. Nothing is incumbent on you, that is, on your wealth of gold, until it reaches twenty dinars. When you possess twenty dinars \(of gold\) and one year has passed on them, half a dinar is payable.\) (Recorded by Abu Dawud)

As for saying that Zakah for gold and silver is to be paid once in a life time, there is no proof in Allah's purified Shar` (law) in its favour; on the contrary, there is clear evidence that paying Zakah was repeated with the start of every Hawl. The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) used to send his agents who were in charge of collecting Zakah to collect it from people every year, and his Caliphs followed his example. Explaining the method the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) had adopted in collecting Zakah and the wisdom of having to pay it every year, Ibn Al Qayyim (may Allah have mercy upon him) said: (The diligent method he had adopted in handling Zakah is the most perfect in aspects of its timing, amount, threshold (Nisab), who is obliged to pay it, and its expenditures. He considered in Zakah the best interest of both the possessors of the wealth and the needy. Allah (Most Glorified and Exalted be He) rendered Zakah a means of purifying the wealth as well as the soul of the payer and He related between the sustainability of His Blessings on the rich to their payment of Zakah due on their wealth; for Zakah preserves and increases the wealth and wards off any hazard that may occur to it. He also made Zakah due on four categories of wealth, which people need most and are most common in their dealings:

The first kind is: crops and fruits.

The second: Livestock animals: Camels, cows and sheep.

The third: The two metals which are the basis of people's transactions: Gold and silver.

The fourth: Different kinds of merchandise.

The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) obligated paying Zakah for such kinds of possessions every year, and he considered the Hawl for crops and fruits at the time of its full ripeness. There could be no fairer method in that aspect, as imposing it every month or every week harms wealth owners while imposing it once in a life time harms the poor. That is why it was best to prescribe Zakah once every year.)

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Fatwa No. 14048

Q: The General Mail Department awarded our firm a contract of a project for transporting ground and air mail. This project needed 400 cars, which we bought on deferred payment from Al Hamrani company and Al `Isa Foundation. The value of our debts is 16,000,000 riyals (sixteen million riyals). We paid back 8,000,000 riyals (eight million riyals) on installments, and the remaining amount is 8,000,000 riyals (eight million riyals).

We included those debts in the balance sheet we referred to the Department of Zakah (obligatory charity) and Income, as every year we are asked to present a certificate from the Department of Zakah and Income. To obtain such a certificate we must present the firm's balance sheet for the accounts of the year. On demanding that certificate from the Department of Zakah and Income, we were surprised to find that the Department rendered the value of the debts we owe to the foundations of Al Hamrani and Al `Isa as well as other debts liable to Zakah. Kindly, provide us with a written Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified Muslim scholar): Are we obliged to pay Zakah for the debts we owe to those firms and foundations or not? May Allah reward you with the best! May peace and blessings of Allah be with you!

A: If the matter is as you have explained in your question, the remaining amount of debts you owe, which is 8,000,000 riyals, is not liable to Zakah.

Fatwa No. 17852

Q: I have an account in the Islamic Investment Company of the Gulf, belonging to His Highness Prince Muhammad Al-Faysal's offices that works in the field of industrial speculation. The company uses the money it collects from the depositors in either building factories in Muslim countries or buying existing factories or contributing in factories that actually provide services to the Muslims. The company gives us annual profits from the profits of those factories.

The question is: Am I obliged to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) every year for the capital that I paid to the company or for the profits that I receive annually and what is the value of Zakah due upon me? I am ready to abide by the rules of the Shari`ah (Islamic law) whatever they may be, seeking Allah's Pleasure (Exalted and Glorified be He) and seeking salvation from His Wrath on the Day of Resurrection. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: You are obliged to pay Zakah on the profits of the mentioned shares if they reach the Nisab (minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes while it is in the possession of its owner. What you spent before the passage of a Hawl is not liable to Zakah. No Zakah is due, neither, on the capital shares, which became among the fixed properties of the company in the mentioned factories that will be circulated and used, not sold.

Q 1: We are a group of doctors. We bought a scanner machine used in the medical field. We paid for it through loans from the bank, and are to repay this debt (which amounts to 500 million Moroccan Riyals) over a specified period of 5 years. Not only can we repay these amounts to the bank, but we can also get more money than that fulfilling the conditions of Zakah (obligatory charity) (i.e. Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time the property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)). Should we pay Zakah on the gross profit? It should be known that the machine we have bought is the only machine available in the south of Morocco, which includes more than five cities. Please guide us in this matter. May Allah reward you with the best.

A 1: It is obligatory to pay Zakah on the yields of the mentioned machine that you save provided a Hawl has passed while it is in your possession and the share of each of the participants reaches the Nisab. It is permissible for the partners to authorize just one person to pay Zakah on behalf of them all, and this person represents them in giving it to the categories of Zakah recipients.

Q 2: A businessman who has a medium-sized company is inquiring about the manner he should pay Zakah (obligatory charity). Should he pay Zakah on the capital of commercial commodities or on the profits, particularly the commercial and industrial companies? Please advise us. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: There are four rulings on the company's funds with regard to Zakah:

1- Commercial commodities: These are to be estimated at the time when Zakah (obligatory charity) becomes due i.e. upon the completion of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). It makes no difference whether their estimated value is equal, more or less than their value at the time of purchase.

2- Factory equipment: This includes machines, vehicles and such things that are intended for use but not for sale. No Zakah is due on them.

3- Profits: Zakah is due on profit provided that a Hawl has passed and the share of every partner reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due).

4- Share capital: If this is intended for trade and achieving profits, Zakah becomes due on the yield that reaches the Nisab when they are received. If the shares are offered for sale and trade, Zakah becomes due on the shares by estimating their value upon the completion of a Hawl.

Fatwa no. 17718

Q: We ask Your Eminence about Islamic Mudarabah (speculation) of on-hire purchase carried out by the Islamic Investment Company of the Gulf, wherein I have an account. They, as clarified in the attached bulletin, exploit the money of depositors in purchasing medical instruments, cars and real estate, where the company leases them to citizens and gives us profits from such rental money. In other words, our money is invested by the company in these things that are rented for the citizens.

Should we pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on our (original) money or just on the profits we receive for the rental of these things?

A: As for that which was intended for rental, whether real estate, equipment, and so on, it is Wajib (obligatory) to pay Zakah on the rental that remains in one's possession for a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) from the date of the contract provided the rental reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). The due amount of Zakah is 2.5%.

Zakah is not due on the rental money spent before the Hawl or the original assets intended for rental.

Fatwa no. 17996

Q: We have a joint liability company whose capital is five hundred thousand Riyals (500,000). It bought a farm for about twelve million Riyals (12,000,000) on credit. The debt was recorded in the year 1413 A.H. balance sheet. In the same year, the other businesses of the company generated a net profit of (300,000) Riyals.

Do we have to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) despite the fact that the value of the farm is still debited at the end of the year or should Zakah be paid on net profit? It should be known that the current value of the farm is less than it was upon purchase. We hope to be informed of the answer.

A: The said company should pay 2.5% as Zakah upon the passage of each year on all the dirhams it has collected, whether profits or otherwise. The debts does not exempt it from the obligation of paying the Zakah due on the dirhams that remained for one Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) in its possession. The same applies to the goods intended for sale, i.e., they must be evaluated in dirhams and Zakah must be paid on it. As for the farm, it is not Wajib (obligatory) to pay Zakah on its value if it is not intended for sale.

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family and Companions!

Q: My father died leaving, for me, a legacy in the form of: 1) a leased real estate; 2) cash money; and 3) shares in a company. Kindly explain the amount of Zakah (obligatory charity) due on me as well as its due time. The details of my case are as follows:

1 - As for the cash, I have spent most of it on my needs and that of my family. A Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on only a quarter of it. Thus what is the ruling?

2 - As for the leased real estate; part of it was sold, whereas another part of it remained for investment. The money we received in return for the sold part, more than half of it was spent, and a Hawl passed on less than half of it. Thus what is the ruling?

3 - As for the shares in the company; some of them were sold and the price was spent immediately. We still have the remaining shares whose market price wavers in a steady decline until they reached half the value that they originally were. What is the ruling on each of the mentioned parts? It is worth mentioning that the company gave me 5% of the value of my shares as profits. Is Zakah due on these profits? Please relieve me with your answer, so that I can fulfill what is due on me In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). May Allah reward you with the best.

A: As for the cash money, the amount on which a Hawl has passed, if it has reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) or more, Zakah becomes due on it. The rate of Zakah that must be paid is 2.5%. It should be known that you should pay Zakah on the profits when one Hawl has passed for the capital.

As for the leased real estate, there is no Zakah due on the real estate itself. Rather, there is Zakah due on its lease provided it reaches a Nisab by itself or through joining it to your other profits and a Hawl passes on it, beginning from the date of the contract.

With regard to the commercial commodities one either sells or buys, Zakah becomes due on them provided they reach the Nisab and a Hawl passes on them. Zakah should be paid on their profits along with them. The Hawl of the profits is that which passes on their original money.

As for the fixed stock intended for investment but not for sale, such as real estate, factories and so on, Zakah becomes due on their yield upon the passage of a Hawl since receiving them, provided they hit the Nisab.

Fatwa no. 18778

Q: After the death of our father - may Allah forgive him, amen - there were expropriated agricultural and housing plots for the benefit of the state, in return for sums of money that were received and divided among us, the male and female inheritors of the deceased, except for one of his sons who had been absent for a period of more than twenty years, i.e., before the death of our father. We have the sum that is due for the absentee, but we know nothing about him at all. We do not know whether he is still alive or has met his death. The sum that is due for him is with me. Asking the scholars we know whether Zakah (obligatory charity) is due on this money, some of them give us the answer that Zakah is due on it, whereas other scholars state that Zakah is not due on it. It should be known that the sum was received by me a long period after his absence while we know nothing about him. Now I am confused about this matter. Since it is stated in Allah's (Glorified be He) Book to ask scholars about matters unknown to us, I refer the matter to Your Eminence to give me a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) in this regard. Is Zakah due on this sum? I fear that this sum might all be spent by being paid in Zakah without its owner coming to receive it.

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, the case of this person should be referred to the Shar`y Court to apply the procedures of a missing person.

As for the money allocated to him from the estate of his father, there is no Zakah due on it until its owner knows about it. To put it in plain words, a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) of Zakah due on it begins when its owner both knows about it and has the ability to possess it.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 18487

Q: I present to Your Eminence the following issue: My father (may Allah be merciful to him) died on 24 Dhul-Hijjah, 1415 A.H., i.e. six days before a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) had passed on his property. There is disagreement among the inheritors; some of them say that it is obligatory to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on his wealth, since it is purer for the money; whereas others hold the opinion that Zakah is not due on this money. We hope that Your Eminence would inform us about whether Zakah is due or not in this case. It should be known that the Zakah due on it for the year 1414 A.H. was paid in full.

A: If the reality is as you mentioned in the question, which is that your father died before the elapse of a Hawl, there is no Zakah due on him, since he died before the elapse of a full Hawl on his property. Each heir should pay the Zakah due on their share of the inheritance if it reaches the Nisab or more, whether by itself or when added to other money or commercial commodities and a Hawl passes since the death of the testator. The rate of Zakah that must be paid is 2.5%.

Fatwa no. 18499

Q: About fifteen years ago, my father (may Allah be merciful to him) bought a plot of land on which he later built a one-floor house for our residence. After his death, my mother exploited the little sum of money she had at that time in building part of the second floor. Then after that we moved to another place to continue our life and education, where we rented a house to live in since we were young. After our graduation from university, none of us thought to go there to complete the construction of the house and live there. The reason behind this was that none of us could afford the price the other inheritors' shares in inheritance, particularly the married sisters. Accordingly, this gave way to the decision to sell the house as it was, in order to give each one his or her share of inheritance according to Shari'ah (Islamic law). Yet when we decided to sell, the price offered was little, and we were not in dire need of money. This took place almost five years ago, when my mother said that we could postpone the sale for sometime so that its price might increase, or it might happen that one or some of the brothers can afford the shares the other siblings had in inheritance and move to live there. The situation continued until the house was sold a month ago at almost twice the price that was offered in the past five years.

Now my question is: Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this? If so, is it due on the previous or the latter price?

A: If the mentioned house was put up for sale during this period, Zakah becomes due on its price for each year. The Zakah is due on the inheritors, each according to his share of the amount, if the share hits the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) or more. On the other hand, there is no Zakah due on the inheritor whose share is less than a Nisab. If there was hesitation regarding whether to sell the house or keep it as property for the inheritors, there is no Zakah due on it unless it is rented. In this case, each inheritor should pay the Zakah due on his or her share of the rent if it reaches a Nisab and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes on it.

The third question of Fatwa no. 18494

Q 3: Companies are registered in the Commercial Registrar of the State by the body concerned, where both their capital and the amount of total shares are determined and well known. They pay Zakah (obligatory charity) to the State and distribute to the shareholders the rest of the profits, each according to his shares. Is the owner of shares obligated to pay Zakah, whether he was a shareholder or a buyer of shares? Should he pay Zakah on the capital of his shares according to their market value during or upon the end of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)? It is worth mentioning that the number of his shares increases and decreases as a result of speculation, since he sells when the price of a share increases and buys when it decreases.

A 3: If the company pays all the Zakah due on the profits, there is no Zakah due on the shareholders regarding the rest of the dividends they receive from the company, provided they have authorized the company to pay Zakah on their behalf. On the other hand, if the company does not give Zakah in full, it is Wajib (obligatory) on the shareholders to pay the rest of the Zakah due on them out of the dividends they receive. The shareholders should also pay Zakah on the shares if they are intended for sale, since, in this case, they are considered commercial commodity.

The second and third questions of Fatwa no. 18690

Q 2: If I have shares in a joint stock company outside the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, for example, in America, is it Wajib (obligatory) on me to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on just the profits or on both the dividends and the capital?

A 2: Zakah of shares intended for trade is due on both the capital and dividends upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). The Hawl for the dividends is the same as the Hawl for the original capital. On the other hand, if the shares are intended for use but are not for sale, Zakah becomes due on just the profits.

Q 3: When giving Zakah, I try my best to be as accurate as possible in calculating it. Yet perhaps there occurs an unintentional lack in Zakah. Does the Sadaqah (voluntary charity) that I give, apart from Zakah, cover the deficiency in Zakah, if any?

A 3: It is Wajib on every Muslim to be as accurate as possible in calculating and giving Zakah whose amounts, praise be to Allah, are fixedly defined. Yet if unintentional deficiency occurs in giving Zakah after sparing no effort in this regard, the Sadaqah you give voluntarily makes up for the deficiency in the obligatory Zakah, as indicated by the Sunnah (whatever is reported from Allah's Messenger, peace be upon him).

Fatwa no. 19382

Q: I have an account at Al Barakah Investment and Development (one of Dallah Al Barakah Group companies). This company deals in Islamic investments (Mudarabah (speculation), lease, Murabahah (sale with an agreed profit margin), etc.), whereby it collects money and invests it in business, real estate, industrial or agricultural projects within the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia or in Muslim countries, in order to serve Islam and Muslims. We receive annual profits in return.

Should I pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) on my wealth annually on the capital I paid to this company, or on the profits I receive annually? What is the rate of Zakah that I have to pay?

A: With regard to the Mudarabah and Murabahah shares, you are to pay Zakah on both the capital and the profits when one Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on the capital. With regard to the shares which are held in agricultural, real estate and industrial companies, Zakah is due on the profits if they reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) on their own or when added to others, and a Hawl passes. The rate of Zakah is two point five percent (2.5 %). With regard to the assets, Zakah is not due on them if they are not intended for sale. Otherwise, Zakah must be paid on them and their profits when a Hawl passes as it is the case with all other commercial commodities. If the agricultural companies produce grains, dates or grapes, then the prescribed Zakah must be paid on them if the amount of each of them reaches five Wasqs (1 Wasq = 60 Sa`s = 130,320 kg) or more.

Q 2: A man died leaving behind: 1) a sum that has remained in the bank for four years without paying the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on it; 2) a plot of land that is leased, where the lease remained in the Real Estate office for four years; and 3) a sum of money owed to him by the State, without paying the Zakah due on it. I am the Wakil (legally accountable person who acts on behalf of another for a specific permissible matter) for the estate to collect the sums and distribute them among the heirs. Should the Zakah due on these sums be paid before distributing them or should each inheritor be informed of the amount of Zakah due on his share of inheritance to undertake it?

A 2: Each one of the inheritors should pay the Zakah due on his or her share for the past years since the death of the inherited person; each one of them should give 2.5% of his or her share for each year that passed on it. As for the money owed to them by the State, each one of them should give the Zakah due on his share after receiving it.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 169)

and when a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed since receiving it, provided the share reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due).

The first, second, fifth, and sixth questions of Fatwa no. 19643

Q 1: My company prepares an annual budget that reflects its financial position. It includes its assets and payables as of a certain date. Should Zakah (obligatory charity) be calculated on the company's properties that exist at the end of the year or on those which existed at the beginning of the year and for which a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed? How can a Hawl be calculated given that the balances that existed at the beginning of the year change as a result of the business results of the company?

A: A: The answer to this question needs to be explained through the following rulings:

1- As for the company's properties intended for sale, Zakah of 2.5% becomes due on them as per their value at the completion of a Hawl.

2- As for the company's properties intended for lease, there is no Zakah due on these properties themselves.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 170)

However, Zakah of 2.5% becomes due on any rent received from them if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), either by itself or by adding the same to other returns, upon the passage of a Hawl from the time of the contract.

3- There is no Zakah due on the company's properties not intended for trade, i.e., not intended for sale or lease, but for only acquisition and use, such as the company's headquarters, warehouses, showrooms, factories, machines, equipment, and tools designed to operate it, and the like that are necessary the company to carry out its activities.

4- As for the company's balances of gold, silver, and other coins and notes such as Saudi Riyals, Zakah of 2.5% becomes due on them if they reach the Nisab and a Hawl has passed on them. The Zakah due on their profits should be paid upon paying the Zakah due on their asset, even if a Hawl has not yet passed on the profits, since the Hawl for the profits is the same as the Hawl for the original asset.

There are two ways to determine the completion of a Hawl on the balances:

First: The earnings of the company should be dated, and the Zakah due on each sum should be paid upon the passage of a Hawl from the date it is received.

Second: The company can appoint a certain time for paying the Zakah, such as Ramadan, provided that the Zakah due on a sum is not delayed once the related Hawl has been completed to preserve the rights of the poor and the other categories of Zakah recipients and discharge one's responsibility by fulfilling this great Rukn (integral pillar) of Islam.

5- Any payables of the company do not render it exempt from paying the Zakah due on the properties in its possession.

6- Zakah becomes due on the receivables of the company whatever their terms may be upon the passage of a Hawl if they are due on a solvent and non-procrastinating debtor and the creditor is able to get their money back. However, if the debt is due on an insolvent debtor where its owner does not know whether they will get their money or not, or if it is due on a solvent debtor who is a procrastinator from whom the creditor cannot get their money back either because they do not have what proves their right before the judge or because they have such proof but the ruler does not assist them in obtaining it - such as the case in some countries that do not advocate people in obtaining their rights - Zakah is not Wajib (obligatory) on the creditor unless they take possession of their money at which point Zakah becomes due on it upon the passage of a Hawl.

The General Presidency of Scholarly Research and Ifta'. All Rights Reserved.

Q 2: Verily, the goods of the company consist of items most of which their value decreases with the passage of time, such as cars. Previously, all these goods were re-valuated at the end of each year for the purpose of calculating the Zakah (obligatory charity), through adding 5% to their cost price. It should be known that we used to put aside sums of their profits, each year, to cover their declined value.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 172)

Should these goods be evaluated according to the prevailing market price at the closing date of the accounts? Should the reserve that has been spared of the profits, which accordingly reduced the profits, be returned to the profits for the purpose of calculating Zakah, or not?

A 2: What is Wajib (obligatory) is to evaluate these goods upon the completion of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) according to the market price, whether it increases or decreases. This is the justice that neither harms the owner nor affects the right of the poor and others of the categories of Zakah recipients. There is no need to add the percentage of 5%, or to spare any of the profits for the expected decrease in their value.

Q 3: The company possesses a group of stocks and shares in other companies, some of which are local companies that are subject to Zakah (obligatory charity) according to the regulations of the Kingdom (of Saudi Arabia), whereas the other companies are outside the Kingdom and are not subject to Zakah, but may be subject to taxes. These are long-term investments, i.e. their acquisition is not for the purpose of using them in trade, and it is not the intention of the company to sell them in the foreseeable future. Is it the investments inside or outside the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia or both of them that should be calculated in Zakah? Should Zakah be paid on both these investments along with their dividends or only on their dividends? With regard to the dividends, should their Zakah be paid upon receiving them, or upon the passage of a complete Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) from the date of receiving the profits?

A 3: Shares are of two types. First, commercial shares whose owner wants to offer them for buying and selling. As for this type of shares, Zakah is due on both the shares and their dividends, according to the market price upon the completion of one Hawl. The Hawl for the dividends is the same as the Hawl for the original capital. The amount of Zakah due on the total is 2.5%.

Second, fixed shares whose owner wants to invest but not to put them up for sale in the market. As for these shares, Zakah is due on their profits upon the passage of a Hawl from receiving them. There is no Zakah due on the origin of the shares. The amount of the due Zakah is 2.5%.

Q 4: Our company has surplus sums of Zakah (obligatory charity) that have not fully paid during the year and another Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on them. It is to be noted that these amounts are not frozen, but invested with the other funds of the company. How should we deal with this surplus? Should the principal of the surplus money alone be paid as Zakah, or should it be given in Zakah along with its profits?

A: Zakah should be paid once it is due. It is impermissible to postpone paying it to its Shar`y (Islamically lawful) recipients, whether for the purpose of increasing it for its recipients or out of negligence because any such delay makes it lose the condition of being paid immediately in addition to making it miss many of its Maslahahs (public interests), such as satisfying the needs of the poor, helping them pay their debts, and other purposes for which Zakah was ordained. With regard to the profits of the amount of Zakah you delayed paying, only 2.5% of the profits must be paid as Zakah.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 174)

In other words, you should not pay the entire profits in Zakah because the Zakah money remains the possession of its owner until they hand it to its recipients or to their delegate.

Fatwa no. 19758

Q: I would like Your Eminence to issue me a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) regarding the following incident: Out of Allah's vast grace I own several commercial enterprises (commercial commodities) in different parts of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. The revenues and losses of these companies vary from one year to another as some realize profits while others lose. I do not know how to calculate the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on these companies.

Is it Haram (prohibited) to add up the profits and subtract the losses of these companies and pay Zakah on the total sum? Or is it Wajib (obligatory) on me to keep these sums separate, in the sense that I should pay the Zakah due on each company funds separately? Please give me a Fatwa, may Allah reward you with the best reward.

A: You should pay the Zakah on the total income of all your companies, i.e., you should add up their profits and pay 2.5% of the total upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). You should also evaluate the commercial commodities in your possession upon the completion of a Hawl since their purchase and pay Zakah of 2.5% of their estimated current value.

Q: A family possesses some shares that earn them a yearly income for their living expenses. This is the only source of income for them. How can Zakah (obligatory charity) due on these shares and their proceeds be calculated? It should be known that the real value of these shares decreases every year due to the drop in the market value of shares, which sometimes forces the family to sell part of the shares to meet their expenses. May Allah reward you with the best of rewards.

A: If these are fixed shares in an electricity or transportation company or the like, Zakah becomes due on the yields of these shares once they reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes on them. On the other hand, if these shares are used in speculative transactions to gain profit, Zakah becomes due on both the capital along with its profits upon the passage of a Hawl. The Hawl for the dividends is the same as the Hawl for the original capital.

Q: I have an investment account at the Islamic Gulf Investment Company according to the contract of Dar Al-Maal Al-Islami Trust (DMI) belonging to the private offices of His Royal Highness Prince Muhammad Al-Faysal. The company deposits the profits to my account each year.

Should I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on the principal amount I deposited in my account? Or should I pay Zakah on the annual profits, without the principal, upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)? Or should I pay Zakah from the deposited money, the principal and the profits added to the principal upon the passage of a Hawl? It is to be noted that the officials in the abovementioned companies told me that Zakah should be paid on the annual profits without the principal. I would like Your Eminence to give me a clear and comprehensive answer. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) on you to pay Zakah for both the principal and its profits upon the completion of a Hawl on the first. The Hawl for the profits is the same as the Hawl for the principal.

Q: After the death of our father we received a sum of money from the state as compensation for our agricultural lands through which a public road passed. At that time we were still young, i.e., we had not yet reached puberty. The sum was deposited for us at the bank by our paternal uncle who was our legal guardian. Upon reaching the age of puberty we asked him for our money whereupon he brought it to us. We embarked on building a house to live in. However, some of our relatives told us that there is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money and that our uncle did not pay the Zakah due on it during the whole period it was kept at the bank.

A - Should Zakah be paid on this money for all the past years or does Zakah become Wajib (obligatory) on us only after we received it, which was a year ago? The sum is only 114,740 Saudi Rials.

B - If it is Wajib on us to pay Zakah for this money for the past years, should we pay it in annual installments? It is to be noted that the money belongs to me, my mother, and my sister, that we do not have a fixed income and that both my sister and I are still school students and we live with my mother and her husband.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 178)

A: If the reality is as mentioned, it is Wajib on each one of you to pay the Zakah due on his share of this money for each of the years that passed without paying such due Zakah. The rate of Zakah that must be paid is 2.5%, i.e., two Riyals and a half for each one hundred Riyals.

The third and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 20453

Q 3: My father (may Allah be merciful to him) has a balance in a bank. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this balance, which should be paid by the inheritors after his death? This matter resulted in delaying the procedures of distributing the inheritance.

A 3: All the money and real estate left by the deceased, their ownership shall be transferred to his heirs upon his death. All the rulings pertaining to this property, whether those of Zakah or any other rulings, become the responsibility of the inheritors, not the deceased. Accordingly, upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) on the estate from the time the inheritors managed to divide it among themselves, it becomes Wajib (obligatory) on each inheritor to give the Zakah due on his or her share if it reaches a Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). If you are quite sure that your father did not give the Zakah due on his property, Zakah due on him for the year(s) he did not pay it should be given on his behalf before distributing the estate, so as to discharge his obligation.

Q 4: My father (may Allah be merciful to him) left us two houses that are rented for a monthly sum of money. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this sum that is given to the minors? I hope Your Eminence will clarify what should be done regarding the two houses. May Allah reward you with the best!

A 4: If the rent of the two houses reaches a Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on it from the time of the lease contract, 2.5% of it should be given in Zakah by the minors' guardian. On the other hand, if the rent is spent for fulfilling the needs of the minors before a Hawl has passed on it, there is no Zakah due on it.

Fatwa no. 20362

Q: My father (may Allah be merciful to him) died leaving behind an estate that included some cash at banks. It took more than two year to divide this cash among the heirs for reasons beyond our control and because some heirs were abroad and they were delayed in engaging an attorney to refer to the court and the related banks regarding the division of the estate.

1 - The Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the abovementioned cash has not been paid since the death of our father (may Allah be merciful to him) and more than two Hawls (two lunar years calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) have passed on them. Should the Zakah be paid on the shares of the heirs as a whole, or on each separate share? What is the due amount of Zakah?

2- What is the ruling if one of the heirs delays or refuses to pay the Zakah? Will our late father be held accountable for this?

3- The estate includes some receivables and we know that some debtors do not have the ability to repay their debts at the present time. Is it permissible for the heirs to waive these debts and consider them as part of the Zakah due on their money?

4- What is the ruling on using the Zakah to buy a real estate that generates an annual rent to be paid to the poor and needy?

I request Your Eminence to provide us with a written answer to the abovementioned questions so that we can put it before the heirs.

A: 1- If the reality is as you mentioned, there is no Zakah due on the money of your late father for the two years during which the estate remained undivided because each heir was unable to gain possession of their share of the inheritance due to reasons beyond their control as well as the absence of some of them. This resulted in delaying the division of the estate as has been mentioned. Therefore, the share of each heir takes the same ruling as the property that one does not own with full control. Full control is one of the conditions required for Zakah to be Wajib (obligatory). When each heir possesses their share of the estate, Zakah becomes due on the share that reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), at which point the heir should pay 2.5% as Zakah upon the passage of a Hawl.

2- It is Haram (prohibited) on whoever Zakah becomes to delay or procrastinate paying thereof. Rather, they should hasten to pay it to its due recipients, since this is the only way for them to be discharged of this obligation. If the heirs had been able to divide the estate without facing hindrances beyond their control but delayed in dividing it out of laziness or negligence, then Zakah would have become due on each heir whose share reached the Nisab upon the completion of a Hawl from the time of their ability to divide the estate. It is Haram to delay paying it beyond its due time. There is no sin on the part of your late father if all or some of the heirs delay paying the Zakah due on their shares, provided he had already paid the Zakah due on his properties during his lifetime. This is because all the money, property, etc. left by the deceased is transferred to the heirs upon his death; all the rulings pertaining to this property, i.e., Zakah and so on, become the responsibility of the heirs and not the deceased.

3- As for the debts owed to your late father by other people, if the debtors are too insolvent to repay the debts, the heirs should pay Zakah for this money for one year if they get them to be on the safe side. It is impermissible for the heirs to waive the debts and consider them a part of the Zakah money. The wisdom behind this is to protect their money by means of their money and because Zakah involves giving and taking. On the other hand, if the debtors are among Zakah recipients, it is permissible for the heirs to give them money from the Sadaqahs (voluntary charities) and Zakah due on their property to help them pay off their debts.

They should expect good reward from Allah (Exalted be He) for doing this.

4- As for purchasing a real estate and the like from the Zakah money in order to spend its rent on the poor and the needy, this is impermissible because the Zakah due on one's property is a right due to the poor, the needy, and the like. Zakah payers should pay it to them immediately as commanded by Allah and His Messenger (peace be upon him). Buying a real estate and the like from the Zakah money is impermissible because: 1) they are prevented from getting their right at its due time; 2) the Maslahah (public interest) and the wisdom behind Zakah is missed; 3) this was not done by the Messenger (peace be upon him) nor his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet), and it does not have a basis in Shari`ah (Islamic law). Therefore, every Muslim man and woman should follow what Allah and His Messenger commanded, since this implies all goodness, and no one should introduce any Bid`ah (innovation) in Allah's religion.

Q: Is it Wajib (obligatory) on each heir to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on their share upon receiving it, for the six years? Or should the due Zakah be paid out of the total property before it is divided among the heirs? We request that Your Eminence will answer this issue in detail.

A: It is Wajib on each heir to pay the Zakah due on their share of the inheritance if it reaches a Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) or more, either by itself or through being added to one's other properties or commercial commodities. Fatwa no. 13909

Q: As you know - may Allah bless you - there are many car accidents that result in people's deaths. In such accidents the driver may survive while some passengers may meet their death. The driver remains imprisoned till the Diyahs (blood moneys) for the murdered persons are paid in the Shar`y court of this country. The collection of Diyah or Diyahs may take a long time, which results in the driver remaining in jail for a long period of time. As a solution to this problem, our tribe decided to initiate a fund confined to car accidents that take place unintentionally. The money of the fund is collected from every person in the tribe who is able to drive his own car and earn his living. Each one of these persons pays one thousand riyals, which is kept by the secretary of the fund. In the case of an accident, Allah forbid, the closest relatives of the driver approach the secretary of the fund to borrow from him the required Diyah to pay to the concerned body who then releases the imprisoned driver. The driver then starts to collect the Diyah from Al-`Aqilah (the paternal relatives of the unintentional killer who has to pay blood money), as stated by the Shari`ah (Islamic law). Upon collecting the Diyah, he repays to the fund the sum borrowed on his behalf by his closest relatives. This money remains as the capital of the fund. The fund is neither established for the purpose of trade nor is its capital involved in any kind of trade, i.e. its balance is fixed with no increase or decrease except when new members join it or old ones leave it.

My question is: Is it Wajib (obligatory) on this fund to pay Zakah (obligatory charity)? It is worth mentioning that every one thousand riyals of the capital of the fund belongs to a separate person. I trust Your Eminence to kindly answer this question. If paraphrasing the question in the answer will render the meaning clearer, this will be more convincing In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: For the person who intends to get back his contribution at some point, he should join this thousand riyals to his other money and pay the due Zakah on it every year until he gets it back from the fund or cedes it. On the other hand, for the person who does not intend to get it back, there is no zakat due from him on this sum.

Fatwa no. 14627

My fellow citizens of Al-Bahah set up a charitable co-operation fund about twenty years ago. The contributors of the fund included my tribe's male persons who reached fourteen years of age. Every participant pays an annual subscription specified by the notables of the tribe and deposited with the fund's secretary. It is worth mentioning that the objectives of this fund are charitable, including helping any of the tribe's members who may encounter any accident or disaster. We carry out some charitable projects that benefit the people and the youth of the village; such as road lighting, forums, gatherings, fencing the fields of physical exercise and graves, asphaltting roads, etc, which benefit the public, the village and its people.

By the virtue of our status among the people of the tribe and their trust in us, praise be to Allah, they entrusted us with the fund's secretarial duties. We have been receiving the annual contributions and registering them in an account on behalf of the fund, and then we deposit the sum in our own account. My brothers and I want to add a percentage of our own Zakah (obligatory charity) to the fund in order to increase its cash liquidity. Yet some people of the tribe have come to the opinion that this is not permissible, and that adding a specific percentage to the fund counts as Riba (usury). As we keen to follow the noble Shari`ah (Islamic law), we trust Your Eminence to issue us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on the following:

- 1- Is there Zakah due on the money of the fund on which several years have passed and it has exceeded the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) since its first year?
- 2- Is it permissible for me and my siblings to allocate an annual percentage of our Zakah to this fund?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 187)

- 3- Is it Haram (prohibited) and Riba to allocate an annual percentage to the fund even from our own Zakah or from our money, and sometimes the rate is fixed at 10%?

We are waiting for your Fatwa to work accordingly and to inform it to the people of the village. May Allah reward you with the best, bless your life and grant you well-being. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you.)

A: First, the ruling on the obligation of Zakah on the money of the donation fund varies according to the intention of the donors. We have already issued a Fatwa on this. The Fatwa reads: If the reality is as you mentioned and the donated sums will not return to the donors and will be spent on other charitable channels if the project fails, then there is no Zakah due on them. On the other hand, if they are intended to be returned to their owners in case the project fails, Zakah becomes Wajib (obligatory) on the share of each person upon the completion of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due).

Second, it is not permissible to pay Zakah to this fund.

Third, it is not permissible for you to dispose of the money of the fund, since it is a trust in your charge. Thus you must preserve it. If it is possible to give part of the money to someone to invest in return for a certain percentage of the profits, such as one half or suchlike, there is nothing wrong in this.

As for donating from your money to the fund, there is nothing wrong in this. Donation has nothing to do with Riba.

Fatwa no. 17850

Q: We want Your Eminence, may Allah reward you with the best, to issue us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) regarding the following matters:

1- Some of my brothers and I have founded a charitable association with the purpose of helping each other. On 30/3/1415 A.H., we agreed to put a sum of one hundred and ten thousand (110,000) riyals as capital into the association. The sum was to be exploited by the members and non-members in buying and selling their requirements. The capital was further boosted by monthly installments for ten months, where each member paid five hundred (500) riyals per month. The last installment was paid at the end of the month of Dhul-Hijjah, 1415 A.H. when the total sum reached one hundred and sixty-five thousand (165,000) riyals.

2 - From 30/5/1415 to 30/2/1416 A.H. we have purchased five cars, with their total profits during that period hitting 69,885 riyals. It should be known that these are the profits of the cars sold in installments, and that the last installment of the sold cars is due at the end of 12/1418 A.H.

3- The business of buying and selling is continuant and will not stop at this extent.

4- When we reviewed our records and made an inventory of what we owned and what we owed, we wanted to know the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money. Thus we want Your Eminence to issue us a Fatwa on how can we calculate the Zakah due on this money and the time we should pay it? If we want to pay the Zakah in Ramadan 1416 A.H., as a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on the paid capital (110,000 riyals) on 30/3/1416 A.H., what is obligatory on us to do, as we delayed its payment from 30/3/1416 A.H. until the blessed Ramadan of 1416 A.H.? Is it permissible for us to pay the Zakah due on all the money at once (the capital along with the profits)?

Notice: According to our records, the activity of the association until 30/2/1416 A.H. reached 234,885 riyals. This sum is a debt due on some members of the association, i.e. monthly installments the last of which is due on 30/2 1416 A.H. As for the cash, I have only 25,731 riyals.

Please advise us, may Allah reward you with the best.

A: Zakah is Wajib (obligatory) on both the capital and its fixed profits whether those received or those yet to be received after the passage of a Hawl from the date of possessing the money. It is not permissible to delay the payment of Zakah beyond its due time. Rather, it must be paid in its due time.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family,

The second question of Fatwa no. 18805

Q 2: I am participating in a cooperative fund that extends for twelve months. The total sum owed to me was ninety thousand Yemeni riyals, which I received in three installments:

I: A sum of 36 thousand YR.

II: A sum of 36 thousand YR.

III: A sum of 18 thousand YR.

Is Zakah (obligatory charity) Wajib (obligatory) on the above-mentioned sums? If so, how much is due?

A: It is Wajib on you to pay Zakah on the money you have if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed since then. Whether the money is at your disposal or a share in a cooperative, you should pay the Zakah on both it and its profits. The Hawl of the profits is that which passes on their original capital.

Fatwa no. 15981

Q: We are a group of ten young people who have established a cooperative fund. Each one pays an amount of 100 Riyals per month. The objective of this cooperative fund is to exploit it in the coming days, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), in trade and investments that earn us lawful profits. Another objective of this fund is to offer loans to its members only.

Is it obligatory to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on the money collected in this fund? How can we calculate Zakah due on it? When should we pay the due Zakah? Please explain this issue for us in detail.

A: It is obligatory to pay Zakah on the money of the aforementioned fund upon the elapse of every Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) through evaluating the commodities in its possession that are offered for sale according to their current market price at the completion of a Hawl, in addition to the cash amounts that are in the fund, which are added to the estimated value of the commodities and 2.5% is paid of the total as Zakah, i.e. two and a half Riyals for every hundred Riyals.

Q 2: Our family formed a cooperative society based on a certain amount of capital. After the passage of Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), is Zakah due on this capital? May Allah safeguard you.

A: If this society is based on investment, Zakah will be due on its capital if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and the Hawl has passed. The same applies to profits. However, if it is a non-profit-making society whose profits are not earned by shareholders and will be given in charity if the project incurs a loss, no Zakah will be due on it.

We, 14 persons, agreed to establish a society which we called 'Cooperation Fund'. The idea is that each of us pays 500 Riyals as the fund's capital. Later, each person should pay 100 Riyals per month. This began in 4/1420 AH and continues up till now without anyone having withdrawn. However, we agreed on a provision permitting others to join provided that they pay a sum of money equal to that paid by each of us in order to have a total of equal balances so that accounting might be easier. Our objective is to collect money in order to lend to those in need to. The loan will be repaid in monthly installments by virtue of a guarantor, necessary documentation and so on. This means that the fund capital is circulated out of and back to the fund through loans given and paid off. Moreover, any person has the right to withdraw freely after the passage of one year. Furthermore, expenditure is restricted to the fund's expenses pursuant to documented bonds. In fact, we are still confused regarding Zakah (obligatory charity): should we pay it out of the fund's capital? How should this take place? Or, should it be paid in proportion to the amount paid by each person, i.e. be paid individually out of their shares in the fund? I hope that you will instruct us on the right position and tell us how much we should pay and in what manner. Is Zakah due after the passage of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) on the sum of money in the fund, or on the whole capital consisting of money in the fund and loans? Please, answer us, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: Each person should pay Zakah due on his share of the fund once the Hawl has passed. This is regardless whether their share is still in the fund or a receivable. However, it is unobjectionable for all of you to authorize one of you to pay Zakah when due on your behalf.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 18425

Q5: I have a sum of money collected from the tribesmen and put in my possession to invest it. This money is also used to pay for any tribe owing us blood money or for assistance to other tribes. It is similarly used as a grant given for marriage or for a person who owes someone blood money or such things. So, the money in my possession is used in these areas. After one year of having this money in my possession I gave the Zakah (obligatory Charity) due on it, but some of the tribesmen said that Zakah is not due on this sort of money on the pretext that the money we grant to someone getting married or to someone owing blood money constitutes Zakah for that money. Is it obligatory to give Zakah on this money after one year of having it in my possession, or is it sufficient to use it in the aforementioned areas? Please provide us with your counsel. May Allah reward you!

A: Zakah is not due on the money collected for the purpose of aiding the needy, as this money is no longer in its owners' possession, but it has been dedicated for donation, Sadaqah (voluntary charity), or solving problems.

May Allah grant us all success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: Some tribes or clans impose fifty Riyals on each and every individual and they deposit such money in a money box for the vicissitudes of time, namely accidents and blood money.

What is the ruling on giving Zakah (obligatory charity) on this reserved money, and the ruling on forcing the tribe to pay blood money even though the Shari`ah (Islamic law) has enjoined that it be taken from Al-`Aqilah (the paternal relatives of the killer who has to pay blood money). I ask Allah (Exalted be He) to bless your efforts and prolong your life in obedience to Him.

A: Zakah is not due on money collected for the purpose of aiding the poor, as those granting this money no longer own it, and its recipients are among those to whom Zakah is given; namely the needy and those in debt.

Furthermore, it is impermissible to force anyone to pay a given amount of money monthly or even annually, but it can only be paid voluntarily, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The property of a Muslim is unlawful \(to take\), unless \(he gives it\) willingly.\)

Fatwa No. 20085

All praise be to Allah alone, and may peace and blessings be upon the last of the Prophets, to proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the question submitted to the Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from the head of the Saudi Red Crescent

(Part No. 8; Page No. 196)

Friend Committee in Najran. The question has been referred to the committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with number (7204) and date (30/11/1418 AH), and reads as follows:

According to the directives of His Royal Highness, Prince of Najran, the Saudi Red Crescent Friend's Committee has been formed in Najran, and accordingly an account for donations has been opened in the Bank of Riyadh for the benefit of this committee. The committee, in turn, manages the process of financing the projects and goals of the society in the city. Among the functions of the Saudi Red Crescent is to provide emergency medical services for the patient and those injured in traffic accidents inside or outside cities and take them to the nearest health center or hospital. The society also shoulders the responsibility of enlightening and training the common people how to give first aid and how to rescue those in health crises.

This being said, we would like to know the ruling on accepting Zakah (obligatory charity) for this non-profit organization.

After the committee has reviewed the question, they answered that it is impermissible to give Zakah except to its legal recipients that Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) has named in the Qur'an: (As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.)

(Part No. 8; Page No. 197)

Therefore, it is impermissible to pay Zakah money for these medical services or for any other non-profit organization. These projects can be financed from donations and Sadaqah (voluntary charity).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q1: Would you please inform us about the ruling on a non-profit organization which has raised financial contributions with the purpose of aiding the poor the fatherless who are also poor and have none to provide for them. This money has not yet been used up. It has reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and has been in our possession for one year. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money, given that it is not possessed by one individual and each individual's share of this money does not reach the Nisab? We hope to receive a conclusive answer. May Allah bless your efforts!

A1: Zakah is not due on the money of non-profit organizations which has been raised with the purpose of giving it out to the poor, as its purpose is charitable, being given out to a category of Zakah recipients, and it does not have one particular owner.

Q 1: Firstly: we have a government-run clinic which has a committee taking care of its needs. The members of the committee collected from their own money Sadaqah (voluntary charity) for the sake of covering the shortages in the requirements of the clinic. A whole year has elapsed now and Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passed over some of the saved money. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) Wajib (obligatory) on it? What is the ruling on this?

Secondly: there is a sum of donations similar to the aforementioned sum of money, and it is in the possession of the committee of a Masjid (mosque). It is a charitable committee whose efforts are dedicated to carrying out repair works in the Masjid and to look after it. A year has elapsed now while some of such money is in possession. What is the ruling concerning it? Is Zakah Wajib on it? Please advise on this matter. May Allah reward you with the best!

Thirdly: there is a sum of money issued by the Ministry of Endowments for the purpose of providing the district mosque with lights and water. A year has elapsed now while part of this money is in possession. What is the ruling of Zakah on this some of money?

A 1: If these funds, which were collected from people as donations to supply some of the clinic's provisions and to undertake repair works at the Masjid, will not be returned to their donors, Zakah is not Wajib on them even if Hawl passes. This is because they become no more the ownership of the donors once donated for such facilities.

Similarly, there is no Zakah on the issued money from the Ministry of Endowments for the purpose of providing the district Masjid with lights and water, even if Hawl passes. Rather, it should be spent in the intended purpose of issuing.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Q: The Charitable Organization for Teaching the Noble Qur'an at Abha has in its possession the funds of Zakah (obligatory charity) and Sadaqahs (voluntary charity) collected from some benevolent people. Some of these funds have been transferred to us this year 1413 A.H. Others were transferred the last years. We want to fulfil our obligations that may be due on these amounts of money. So, we want to ask: Is there Zakah Wajib (obligatory) due on them? If yes, what is its percentage, especially those amounts which many Hawls (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) had passed on them while they are in our possession?

A: There is no Zakah due on the donations of benevolent people which are in the possession of the Charitable Organization, even if Hawl passes on them. These amounts of money are intended to support the needy and they have no specific owner. Zakah is Wajib on the money which has a certain owner. It should be known that it is impermissible to delay the paying of sums of Zakah

First and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 17071

Q 1: Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the deceased's designated third of his or her estate for a certain purpose?

A 1: If this third is designated for a philanthropic institution, then there is no Zakah due on it because it is spent in one of the channels of righteousness and has no specific owner. However, if this third is designated for a person or a group of people as a private ownership, then Zakah becomes Wajib (obligatory) on the beneficiary once the conditions of Zakah are met and its impediments are absent.

Q 4: My late father had a small house which is rented out to a person. For four years now, I have not received the rent. Whenever I demand the rent, the tenant keeps procrastinating on account of his alleged poverty. When I told some benevolent people about this man's conditions, they gave me Zakah (obligatory charity) of their wealth to give it to him. Someone told me not to give the tenant this money and to regard it part of the due rent.

I should mention that other inheritors who have a share in the property keep asking me to collect the rent so that they can get their due dividends. Is it permissible to take the money of Zakah and regard it as a part of the demanded rent without telling the tenant? Is it permissible for me to file a complaint against him to evict him from the property?

A 4: You must give the Zakah to the poor person as you were asked to do. It is not permissible for you to keep it without his knowledge. However, if he willingly hands in the Zakah funds to you as a rent after receiving it, then there is no sin on you.

Q: A man died and left a will stating that one-third of his estate should go to benevolent purposes. I was appointed by the High Court in Jeddah as a liquidator for his estate due to some conflicts among the heirs who submitted a lawsuit against the inheritance administrator. As a liquidator, my responsibilities include collecting money and other revenues relevant to the estate and keeping one-third to be spent on benevolent projects.

As a result, between 16 Jumada Al-Awwal, 1418 A.H. and 4 Safar, 1421 A.H. amounts of money were accumulated under the category of the designated one-third for benevolent purposes. My question is:

- 1- Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the one-third specified for benevolent purposes? If yes, from which date should it be calculated?
- 2- Is it permissible to give from this one-third, or the Zakah due on it, some funds for some of the inheritors who fall under one or more of the eight categories of Zakah beneficiaries?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 202)

3- Should I pay this Zakah in my capacity as a liquidator for the estate? It should be known that some inheritors do not have trust in the inheriting administrator due to some reservations of other inheritors about him?

May Allah reward you with the best! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

The questioner also asks:

A man died and left a will assigning one-third of his estate for benevolent purposes. I was appointed by the High Court in Jeddah as a liquidator for his estate due to some conflicts among the inheritors who submitted lawsuits against each other. As a liquidator, my responsibilities include collecting money and revenues relevant to the estate and keeping one-third to be spent in benevolent projects. As a result, between 23 Shawwal, 1416 A.H. and 4 Safar, 1421 A.H. some funds were accumulated under the category of the designated one-third for benevolent purposes. My question is:

- 1- Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the one-third assigned for benevolent purposes? If yes, from which date should it be calculated?
- 2- Should I pay this Zakah in my capacity as a liquidator for the estate? It should be known that all inheritors do not have trust in one other.

May Allah reward you with the best! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: Zakah is not Wajib (obligatory) on the assigned one-third of the estate for benevolent purposes in both questions because it is earmarked for charitable projects and is not owned by a specific person before its distribution. It should be spent in the channels specified by the testator. The stated conditions in the will must be fulfilled. This should occur after consulting the Shari`ah court on this matter.

Q: Since the foundation of the Charitable Institution for Teaching the Noble Qur'an in `Asir, it deposits its funds in Al Rajhi Bank. These funds are raised by a group of charitable people, in the form of Zakah (obligatory charity) and Sadaqah (voluntary charity). Please advise us in detail regarding any Zakah due on these funds. May Allah reward you with the best!

Second question: The Institution owns a piece of land which was bought ten years ago for the purpose of an investment project. Due to their inability to bear the costs of such a project, the land was sold this year to finance the building of their headquarter on a piece of land which was secured from the state. Was Zakah due on the land concerning the past years, or is Zakah due on the price after the passage of Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) if the money is not spent? Is there Zakah on the deposited funds of the Institution at Al Rajhi Bank for the past years? If yes, what is the ruling concerning the years in which Zakah was not paid? May Allah grant you success! May peace and blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad!

A: There is no Zakah due on the funds of the Institution of Teaching the Noble Qur'an because they are specified for benevolent purposes and are spent on charitable projects. However, teachers at the Institution should not be paid from Zakah funds unless they are poor. Their salaries should be paid from the voluntary Sadaqah.

Q: My mother (may Allah be merciful to her) died and left a sum of money. All the inheritors, who are adults, have relinquished their shares in the estate and decided to donate it to charitable projects for the sake of our late mother (may Allah be merciful to her). She used to pay annual Zakah (obligatory charity) of this estate which was collected throughout her life. However, we - the children - have some doubts concerning the paid percentage of Zakah she used to give, whether it was exactly 2.5% or a roughly estimated percentage. How should we pay Zakah of the money which we now possess? How many years should we pay Zakah on her behalf before we spend the estate on charitable projects?

A: If the case is as you have mentioned, that all of you as inheritors are adults and there is no one of minor age among you, and you have agreed to spend the estate of your mother on benevolent projects, then, there is no Zakah due on it. Regarding the doubt on the mother's payment of Zakah in her life, there is no basis for this doubt and you need not to take any further action regarding it.

Q: I sold to my brother my share of the inheritance from my late father in return for one hundred thousand riyals. I received ten thousand riyals on the spot with the rest to be received on annual instalments as ten thousand riyals per year for nine years. So far, I have received due of the instalments of six years, which equals sixty thousand riyals. He still owes me thirty thousand riyals. Should I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money for the past and present years? What should I do, considering that I have not paid Zakah on this money at all. I would like to refer my question to one of the concerned scholars so that I can discharge my obligation to any duties. I fear Allah's Punishment. May Allah grant you a long life!

A: You need not pay Zakah on the installments which you received upon selling your share, if you spent the money before the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). You should annually pay Zakah of the other deferred installments which is 2.5%.

Q 1: What is the Zakah (obligatory charity) on precious raw metals such as gold and silver? Is the Zakah due on them based on the completion of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) or after refining them like crops? Please advise us on this matter. Thank you!

A 1: If gold and silver are kept as property, then, Zakah is due on them if they reach Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) elapses while they are in possession. The Nisab of gold is twenty Mithqals (1 Mithqal = 4.25 grams) while the silver Nisab is one hundred and forty Mithqals. If they are used for articles of merchandise, then Zakah is due on them if they reach Nisab and a Hawl elapses.

Will our father be held accountable before Allah because of his failure to pay Zakah on it?

A: If the case is as you have mentioned and that one Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on this money while your father was alive, then Zakah is Wajib (obligatory) on it. So, it must be paid because his illness during the last part of the year does not exempt him from the obligation of Zakah.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

The first, and second questions of Fatwa no. 14422

Q 1: We live at Al `Abadil in the city of Jizan where we have farms of Qat (Khat: leaves and buds that are habituating stimulants when chewed or used as a tea). However, the government ordered that the Qat be cut, but offered fifty (50) Riyals for cutting every seedling. I obeyed the orders and cut the Qat, so I received a large sum of money, more than twenty thousand (20.000) Riyals.

1- Is it Wajib (obligatory) for me to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on this money?

2- If it is Wajib, should it be paid upon receipt, or after the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due [in case the money is still in one's possession])?

3- In addition, if it is Wajib to pay Zakah, what is the due amount: is it one tenth, half of that, or a quarter?

A 1: If you have already received this money from the State, and a Hawl passed, it is Wajib (obligatory) to pay Zakah, and the amount due here is 2.5 %.

Q 2: Someone long ago defaulted on paying his Zakah (obligatory charity) estimated as 5000 riyals, according to him, on the pretext of being extremely poor. To justify, he said he defaulted as he did not know whether there is Zakah due on his money at that time. Is he still liable to pay it? If so, how should he do so when he is poor?

A: He will remain liable for paying Zakah he owes and will have to pay it once it is possible to do so as the debt of Zakah will never be waived.

The first question of Fatwa no. 14737

Q 1: I own a certain amount of gold only for personal use, not for trade. Should I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) for them? If so, please take into consideration that I am in a dire need of it as I am so poor that I cannot pay Zakah and thus default on Zakah one year after the passage of Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). What should I do, Your Eminence Shaykh? Can the Zakah be waived?

A: Zakah is due on the amount of gold once it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) whether you are in need of it or not.

The third Question of Fatwa no. 20598

Q 3: A retired man defers receiving his monthly salary for three or four months from the Arab Bank to receive them in total and deposit them in the National Commercial Bank. By the time he deposits the money in the bank, the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) will have passed. Is it right to do so? What should such a person do to discharge the Zakah (obligatory charity) obligation in the correct Shar`y (Islamically lawful) manner? I hope that Your Eminence will answer our questions and send it to us so that we might be able to convince him of the same. May Allah guide you to that which is good and preserve you!

A: A Hawl is calculated from the time money is owned, whether possessed immediately or kept in a bank for a period of time and then transferred to another bank. This is because Zakah payability is conditional on actual ownership of money.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16061

Q 2: What is the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of money in Saudi Riyals, if an amount of money completes a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)? What is the amount of money payable in Zakah (obligatory charity)?

A: The Nisab of Zakah in Saudi Riyals is fifty-six silver Riyals, or their equivalent in banknotes. As for the payable amount, it is 2.5%.

The third question of Fatwa no. 21488

Q 3: I have eighty thousand (80.000) Riyals. I use this money in buying and selling cars in installments. Whenever I receive the money of the installments, I buy or sell cars in the same way, but the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes and I have nothing (of the money).

A 3: The Hawl for this money starts from the time of owning it. Therefore, at the end of the Hawl, it is Wajib (obligatory) to pay Zakah (obligatory charity). However, selling or buying these cars does not stop the Hawl (for the capital). Thus, the criterion for the Hawl is the capital (mentioned in the question). In addition, if there is profit from this sale, it is included in the Hawl of the capital as a subsidiary, in which Zakah will also be due on it at the end of every Hawl. Moreover, it is Wajib (obligatory) to pay Zakah for these cars which are on sale by estimating the value of the capital at the end of the Hawl. However, Zakah should also be paid on the money people owe you, as mentioned above, and any money you got, if any, from selling or buying by the sum of money mentioned in the question.

Fatwa no. 20938

The Saudi Automotive Services Co. (SASCO) is a joint-stock company that offers a variety of services to Saudi citizens all over the Kingdom based on certain criteria and often location as specified by the Ministry of Transportation. The government of His Majesty the Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques has granted us state aid. Being completely keen to pay our dues to the Department of Zakah and Income Tax, we pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the government-granted aid after the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes and when we possess it. Please, be informed that this aid is different from aid received by Electricity Company. For example, the aid given to this company is a form of subsidy paid by the government to reduce the cost of producing goods and lower prices. As for the aid given to us, it is a reward for our commitment to offer services to citizens for a relatively narrow profit margin as a result of our abidance by certain state-specified locations and criteria. Your Eminence Shaykh, we would like you to issue us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on the following:

Is the Zakah paid on this aid conditional upon the passage of a Hawl after possessing and receiving it from the state?

A: Zakah is due on an amount of money given as a gift provided that it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and the Hawl passes after it is possessed.

The fifth Question of Fatwa no. 20920

Q 5: A man did not pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on his money for many years, although it had reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). However, the money this man owns now is less than the Nisab. What should he do?

A: Zakah is due on an amount of money which reaches the Nisab if the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed after the money is owned. However, the one who did not pay the Zakah due on the amount of money that reached the Nisab for years is liable for the Zakah due on previous years. The fact that he recently has less than the Nisab does not discharge him from paying the Zakah due on previous years during which his money had reached the Nisab.

Q: My hobby is collecting old and modern coins and currencies. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on these currencies that I have collected? Please, bear in mind that it is merely a hobby and I do not profit from them. Kindly, reply.

A: Zakah is due on currency that is in general use and is not waived if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) on its own, or other money and commercial commodities once the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed after owning them. The amount of Zakah in such case is 2.5%.

However, there are two probabilities regarding obsolete currencies that has phased out. First: if it is of gold or silver, Zakah due on gold or silver (not as currency) will be payable if it reaches the Nisab and the Hawl has passed. Second: if it is not of gold or silver, there is no Zakah due on it, unless it is for trade and reaches the Nisab; in which case the Zakah due on commercial commodity is payable.

Fatwa no. 18073

Q: Recently, there has been difference of opinion over the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) ruling on using banknotes. Some argue that banknotes do not take the same rulings of gold and silver, namely no Zakah (obligatory charity) is due on banknotes. Moreover, they cite some views in Shafi`, Malikiy, and Hanabaly Madh-habs (Schools of Jurisprudence) which are to this effect, and some proofs are in the attached paper. However, it is known that Zakah is one of the five Pillars of Islam, so please give us the Shar`y ruling on this issue in detail!

I hope you will send me the answer by mail because I am now in the USA.

A: Earlier, the Council of Senior Scholars at the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia studied this issue, and issued decision No. 10. Here is the summary:

Before giving the ruling, some points must be taken into consideration; A- Naqd (monetary unit) means every object which is used customarily between people as a monetary medium of exchange. This is clear by what Shaykh-ul-Islam ibn Taymyah said: "As for dirhams and dinars, i.e. Naqd, they are not known to have specific definitions in Shari`ah (Islamic law) as the definition is left to `Urf (custom). Moreover, they are not intended for themselves, thus the aim is to be a medium of exchange.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 215)

[any object can be considered a monetary unit as long as people use it customarily between them]. That is why they are regarded as Athman (being used as a price)..." Finally, ibn Taymyah adds that it is known that the means which is free from a purpose (i.e. pure) can suffice the purpose." (Majmu` Al-Fatawa, Vol. 29, P. 251)

Imam Malik also mentions something similar in his book "Al-Mudawanah", in the chapter on Sarf in which he writes: "If people agree to adopt leather as a monetary unit by making a (minting) die and a specie from it, I would dislike it to be exchanged for gold or notes with delay of payment!"

B- Banknotes have become widely circulated, and acceptable; moreover, they have the characteristics of priced objects in that they can be exchanged for goods. In addition, it has become evident from the discussion with His Eminence, the Governor (of the bank) that their feature of being promissory notes is not particularly meant; the present situation testifies to this fact. In addition, it is not necessary that the backing of currencies covers all banknotes, since some authorities observe the custom of leaving a part of their paper currencies without backing. Besides, the backing need not be of gold; it may be of other reserves, like strong banknotes. Silver also is no longer considered a partial or complete backing for any currency in the world.

Moreover, it has become clear that the strength or weakness of banknotes is determined according to the status of the economy of the government. Local raw materials such as petroleum, cotton, and wool have not been yet adopted by any issuing authority as backing reserves for banknotes. c- The view that is most proven, and closer to the objectives of Shari`ah on the reason behind gold and silver being subject to Riba (usury/interest) is that they are Athman, a view which is also held by Malik, Abu Hanifah, and Ahmad in one narration for them. Abu Bakr said: "A group of scholars narrated this view from Ahmad, and it is also the view of some leading scholars like Shaykh Al-Islam ibn Taymyah, his student ibn ibn Al-Qayyim, and others."

D- Thamaniyah (being used as a price) is clearly found in banknotes. Based on the above considerations, the Council of Senior Scholars, in its majority, has decided that banknotes are considered a monetary unit like gold and silver, and other types of Athman; they are also of various types according to their concerned issuing authorities. In other words, the Saudi banknotes, [for instance,] is a type by itself, and so is the case with the U.S.A banknotes, etc. Consequently, the following Shar`y rulings are to be applied to them (banknotes):

First: Banknotes are subject to Riba with its both types, as is the case with gold and silver and other monetary units of account. This entails the following:

1- It is absolutely impermissible to sell some banknotes for others of the same type, or for other monetary units of account, gold, silver, etc., with delay of payment [Nasi'ah].

(Part No. 8; Page No. 217)

For example, it is impermissible to exchange a U.S. dollar for five Saudi Riyals or more or less "with delay of payment".

2- It is impermissible to sell some banknotes for others of the same type in excess, whether it is done with delay of payment or on the spot [Riba Al-Fadl (usury of excess, selling an item for another of the same type, on the spot, but in excess)]. For instance, it is impermissible to exchange ten Saudi Riyals (banknotes) for eleven Saudi Riyals (banknotes) in this way.

3- It is generally lawful to sell some banknotes for others of a different type if this is done on the spot. For example, it is permissible to sell one Syrian or Lebanese Lira for one Saudi Riyal, whether in banknotes or silver; less, or more (if this is done on the spot). Likewise, it is lawful to exchange a U.S. dollar for three Saudi Riyals (banknotes) or more or less, if this is done immediately. Similarly, it is permissible in Shari`ah to sell one silver Saudi Riyal for three Saudi banknotes, more or less, if this is done immediately. This is considered an exchange of one type for another type; sharing the name here has no effect, since they are different in reality.

Second: It is Wajib (obligatory) for one who meets the conditions of Zakah (obligatory charity) to pay it for banknotes they possess if they reach Nisab Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of gold or silver, or if they are completed with other Athman (priced units of account), or with commercial commodities prepared for trade

(Part No. 8; Page No. 218)

Third: It is permissible to use banknotes as capital in Salam sales (sale with advance payment), and in partnerships.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first Question of Fatwa no. 18148

Q 1: 1- What does the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) equal in US dollars? It is stated in the book of Fiqh Al-Sunnah that the Nisab for gold is twenty dinars. However, we do not know what a dinar equals in Nigeria. However, we can know what a dinar equals in Nigerian Naira if we can know how much it equals in US dollars.

2- How will a person whose money has never reached the Nisab and thus has never paid Zakah (obligatory charity) be judged on the Day of Judgment in this respect?

3- A man owns the Nisab but he spends most, or all, of it before the passage of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). This happens every year, and thus the Hawl never passes after owning the Nisab - Allah knows best. Does he be exempted from Zakah?

4- A man is never expected to own the Nisab unless Allah so wills. However, once he owns even a paltry sum of money, even if five Saudi Riyals or US dollars only, he pays 2.5% of it intending Zakah. Is there something wrong with doing so?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 219)

5- There are eight categories of Zakah recipients. Suppose that one belonging to any category receives as much Zakah money as may reach the Nisab, is such a person liable for Zakah after the passage of Hawl?

A: The Nisab for gold is twenty Mithqals (1 Mithqal = 4.25 grams) which equal twenty Islamic Dinars. Moreover, the Nisab for silver is 140 Mithqals which equals 200 Islamic Dirhams or any equal amount of banknotes, such as US Dollar, Saudi Riyals or any other currency. As for one who has never owned the Nisab, he is not liable for Zakah. Likewise, one who owns a Nisab and spends it before the passage of Hawl is not liable for Zakah. Furthermore, a poor person who collects as much Zakah money as may reach the Nisab is liable for Zakah after the passage of Hawl.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The second question of Fatwa no. (19078)

Q 2: There remains a value of fifty thousand that I owe to a man of the value of the house that he sold me. Having completed the fifty thousand remaining on me for him, he asked me to endorse a check for him with the sum, since I have been depositing it in the bank for less than a year. He said to me:

(Part No. 8; Page No. 220)

I will free myself a bit and take the money. Since the money has remained in the bank for more than a year, my question is: Is the Zakah (obligatory charity) on this money due on me or on the (past) owner of the house? This is what I need to know. As-salamu `alaykum (May Allah's Peace be upon you!)

A 2: If you transferred the sum for the creditor before a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) had passed with the money in your possession, there is no Zakah due on you, since one condition for Zakah to be due is the passage of a Hawl. Yet the money was transferred from your possession before this.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. (18776)

Q 4: How should we pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on the dollars we have? In other words, what is the amount on which we should pay Zakah? It should be known that, here, we often pay (5) Uqiyyahs (40 Dirhams of silver = 119 grams) as Zakah for each (200) Uqiyyahs we have, knowing that the amount of (200) Uqiyyahs is less than (2) dollars.

May Allah accept from us and you our good deeds! May He grant us success to what pleases Him!

A 4: If a person has such an amount of dollars that reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed while it is in one's possession, it is obligatory upon him to pay 2.50% as Zakah on it i.e. he should pay two dollars and a half for each one hundred dollars he has (beyond the Nisab).

Q 1: The details of this question are: A person resigned from his government job on 1/5/1412 A.H. He chose to postpone receiving his due compensation until 1/2/1413 A.H. During this period he was searching for a business in which to invest this money. On 1/3/1413 A.H. he invested this money in a project. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money from the date of his dismissal or that of his beginning the project?

A: The Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) of Zakah is considered to begin from the time a person is entitled to the money and has the ability to take it into his possession. Thus, after a year of being both entitled to the money and having the ability to take it into his possession, Zakah becomes due on it. Beginning a project is irrelevant in this regard. As for the money he spent preparing the place of the project before the completion of the Hawl from the time he was both entitled to the money and had the ability to take it into his possession, there is no Zakah due on it, provided the place is intended not for sale but for use.

May Allah grant us success! May Allah's peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family and Companions!

Q: Please determine the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of Zakah in hard currency -the French franc- for the year 1415 A.H. corresponding to 1994 A.C.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 222)

A: The Nisab of money, other than gold, on which Zakah should be paid is the equivalent of the value of one hundred and forty grams of silver or more of any currency.

Thus if the money reaches the value of this amount or more, it is obligatory to pay Zakah on this amount upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). There is no Zakah due on any amount less than the Nisab unless it is joined to other money or trade offers whereby it reaches the Nisab and thus Zakah should be paid on the total sum.

Q: There is a widow who has several children. She receives financial aid from her family and relatives so periodically and continually that she saved an amount of (40. 000) forty thousand Saudi Riyals. Does she have to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) if a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes on this amount? It is worth mentioning that she does not have a home to live in. Rather, she rents one. She does not have a car either.

A: Zakah is due on the money she collected since it reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). Zakah should be paid upon the passage of every Hawl of which the first is to be counted from the money reaching the Nisab, and so forth. As for the justifications you mentioned, they do not prevent the obligation of paying Zakah.

Q: I have a neighbor who tried to travel to any Arab country and failed. He traveled to Israel with the help of his maternal uncle and stayed there one year and a half. During this period, he spent only one Ramadan where he could not fast the generous and noble month, because his employers in Israel did not want him to fast. Thus he wants to ask Your Eminence:

First: What should he do regarding his negligence in fasting during the noble month, noting that it was Ramadan of 1416 A.H. and he did not fast?

Second: Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the money he earned out of his work there? It is worth mentioning that he was working in a restaurant. If Zakah is due on him: What is the rate he should pay? Should he calculate Zakah on all the money he saved, or should he first pay off the debts he had before his travel, then calculate Zakah on the rest?

A: If this money reaches Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and one Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on it, Zakah becomes Wajib (obligatory) on the money. The due rate of Zakah is 2.5%. If he owes some debt, this does not waive Zakah. If he paid the debt before the completion of a Hawl, he should pay Zakah from the rest of the money upon the completion of a Hawl, provided that the money hits or exceeds the Nisab. If the money was less than the Nisab, there is no Zakah due from it. As for the Sawm (Fast) of Ramadan he missed, he should both make up for it and repent to Allah (Glorified be He) of this.

Fatwa no. 17434

Q: Last year I possessed money that reached Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on it this year. Last year it was about one thousand dinars. Yet before the completion of the Hawl, the sum increased at several times. For example, once it increased 300 dinars, then it increased to 500 dinars several months later, according to the way the money was invested.

My question is: Does Zakah (obligatory charity) become due on the money I earned a month or more before the completion of a Hawl on the principal which was one thousand dinars? Or is it due on the current sum which has reached two thousand dinars? To simplify things, on 3/1/1994 the sum was 1,000 dinars; on 1/8/1994 it reached 1,500 dinars; and on 1/2/1995 it became 2,000 dinars. How can I calculate the due Zakah? It should be known that I have nothing other than this sum and that I am a young man with no house or land. I am renting a farm to cultivate. As for the mentioned sum, I am saving it for building a house or for marriage, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

(Part No. 8; Page No. 225)

If there is Zakah due on me, is it permissible for me to pay it to building a Masjid (mosque) or an Islamic centre? Is it permissible for me to delay my Zakah and pay it next Ramadan for two years together?

A: Zakah becomes due from the money on which a Hawl has passed. Zakah also becomes due on the profits since the Hawl for the dividends is the same as the Hawl for the main capital. If it is intended for marriage, this does not waive the Zakah due on it.

It is not permissible to pay Zakah to build Masjids or Islamic centers; because Allah defined eight categories of Zakah recipients (not including the building of Masjids). Allah says: \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât\) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\)\) [Surah Al-Tawbah 9:60]. However, it may be permissible to pay Zakah to entrusted Islamic centers if they give it to the poor. In such a case, there is no impediment.

It is not permissible to delay it beyond its due time (the completion of a Hawl). Rather, it should be paid immediately.

May Allah grant us success. May Allah's peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family and Companions.

The eighth question of Fatwa no. 20628

Q 8: A man has (30000) thirty thousand

riyals as savings, of which he withdraws at intervals. After a year of saving this sum, he found that the remaining balance is (5000) five thousand riyals. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this sum?

A 8: Yes, Zakah is due on this money, if a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed while it is in your possession, since it reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) that renders Zakah obligatory on the money. The percentage of Zakah that must be paid out is one quarter of one tenth, i.e., 2.5%.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20900

Q 1: If a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes on the money saved by a person to perform Hajj, before he could save the required sum, is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the money?

A 1: If this money reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl has passed on it, then Zakah becomes due on it. Its being saved up to be used in performing Hajj does not change the fact that Zakah is due on it.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 20940

Q 1: I hunted a falcon and sold it for a moderate sum. What is Wajib (obligatory) on me in this regard?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 227)

Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the money I received for the falcon if a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on it? Or should I pay one fifth of its price as Zakah, considering it to have the same ruling as Kanz (treasure trove)?

A 1: If you have a sum that reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), whether out of the price of the falcon alone or added to any other property you have, and a Hawl has passed on it from the time you possessed it, Zakah becomes Wajib on it. The amount of Zakah is one quarter of one tenth, i.e. 2.50%. The price of the falcon is not considered to be Rikaz (buried treasure).

Q: I am a Saudi physician who owns a comprehensive family clinic. I want to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on my property to the Department of Zakah in Makkah al-Mukarramah. Since my capital is about (150,000) one hundred and fifty thousand riyals, the amount of the Zakah due on my capital is (3,750) three thousand, seven hundred and fifty riyals. Is there any other Zakah due from me? It is worth mentioning that my income from the clinic is spent on myself and my family, and nothing of it remains for a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) to pass on it.

Please clarify what Zakah is due from me according to Shari`ah (Islamic law) to be paid to the Department of Zakah.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 228)

May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If you have a sum from the revenue of this clinic, that reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) by itself or when added to other money, and a Hawl has passed on it since the time you received it, it is Wajib (obligatory) on you to pay Zakah on it.

Q: I ask Your Eminence to be kind enough to answer the following two questions:

First: I am investing in a dairy business. Do I have to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on the cows owned by this business, or on the net profits that result from it, as is the case with investments in real estates and cars?

Second: How can we calculate the Zakah due on the agricultural corporations that produce agricultural and dairy products, knowing that their shares are traded on the market?

May Allah guide and reward you!

A: Zakah is Wajib (obligatory) on the monetary profits of the business, if they reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed since the time the money was obtained. The rate of Zakah is one-quarter of one-tenth, i.e. 2.5%. If they are purely for investment, Zakah is also due on the profits of the shares in agricultural and dairy businesses and the like, if they reach the Nisab and one Hawl has passed on them. However, if these shares are intended for sale, the Zakah becomes due on both them and on their profits.

Fatwa no. 20149

Q: We are a medical center for treating eye diseases. We have liquid cash both in our safe and in the bank, from which we spend on our needs, including the expansion of the center, and purchase of medical devices. These sums are so variable that it is impossible to determine the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) on them in order for us to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity). For example, the funds for the last year are as follows:

The first month was 740,000 SR

The second month was 730,000 SR

The third month was 675,000 SR

The fourth month was 615,000 SR

The fifth month was 605,000 SR

The sixth month was 130,000 SR

(Part No. 8; Page No. 230)

The seventh month was 265,000 SR

The eighth month was 270,000 SR

The ninth month was 125,000 SR

The tenth month was 7,000 SR

The eleventh month was 40,000 SR

The twelfth month was 105,000 SR

We trust that Your Eminence - may Allah reward you with the best! - will explain to us the proper way for calculating this Zakah.

A: If the reality is as you have just mentioned i.e. you obtain subsequent sums from your work in the center, which makes it difficult for you to determine the Hawl of each sum separately, it is preferable and easier for you to calculate the money within your possession and pay Zakah upon the passage of a Hawl from the time of this calculation. The rate of Zakah that must be paid is one-quarter of one-tenth, i.e., 2.5%.

money are either the Zakah (obligatory charity) of some benevolent people, Sadaqah (voluntary charity), or what she is given by her grandson, i.e. my friend. She is an old woman who has no one to provide for her except this her grandson and these benevolent people. Is Zakah due on the money she has accumulated, given that it is beyond our capacity to know exactly how many years have passed since she received it? Since she has no dependents, she saves most of this money. She lives alone with a few sheep she raises, whose number is less than five. You should also be aware that she gave her grandson money to buy a car, since he has no income except social security and money he inherited from his father (may Allah be merciful to him), which is less than fifty thousand riyals. He now lives with his mother, who has remarried. Our intention is for the sake of Allah. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: Zakah is due on the money of both the grandmother and her grandson for each of the past years. It is Wajib (obligatory) to pay one-quarter of one-tenth for each year, as well as to repent to Allah (Glorified be He) for the delay in paying the Zakah.

Fatwa no. 18397

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 232)

To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has studied the letter sent to His Eminence the Grand Mufty by His Highness: the Director of the House of Social Welfare in Makkah al-Mukarramah. This letter was sent to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under number 4147 and dated 19/8/1416 A.H. In this letter His Highness inquired about the following question:

I want to put before Your Eminence the following: I am Hussayn Muhammad Sajiny, the Director of the House of Social Welfare in Makkah al-Mukarramah, subordinate to the Agency of Social Affairs of the Ministry of Labor, which is dedicated to receiving the elderly who have no supporters.

There are about one hundred and fifty cases, in both the male and female departments of this house, who have issues that we cannot but refer to Your Eminence to answer, since they are under our responsibility due to their varied conditions:

1- How should they perform Salah (Prayer)? They are divided into two groups: (a) psychiatric patients; and (b) elderly people who suffer memory loss and some of whom are paralyzed.

Those residents each receive a monthly pension of 150 riyals. Most of them do not use their pensions, which are consequently deposited for them in the bank. Upon the death of any of them, their money goes to Bayt-ul-Mal (Muslim treasury). On the other hand, there are some others who spend their pensions on their personal needs. Our question is: Before these sums are transferred into Bayt-ul-Mal, is it permissible to spend from these sums on charitable works within their area according to the instructions of trustworthy, competent specialists? As for those among them who are alive, is it permissible to take some of their money to spend on philanthropic and charitable works? It is worth mentioning that most of them lack the faculties of understanding, speaking, and moving, and they have no heirs.

3- How should they fast Ramadan? How should we feed the poor as a Kaffarah (expiation) on behalf of those who cannot fast? What about those of them who have no money?

4- Some of the elderly men and women have large sums of money that they are not aware of; does Zakah (obligatory charity) become Wajib (obligatory) on these sums? These sums have accumulated from their receipt of a monthly pension of 150 SAR. Please advise us, may Allah reward you with the best.

After examining the Fatwa request, the Committee answered:

First, Salah (Prayer) is Wajib on whoever is sane among them, and they should perform it according to what they are able to do. So they should pray standing up if they are able; if they are unable to do that, then they should pray sitting; if they are unable to do that, then they should pray lying on their side; and if they are unable to do that, then they should pray while lying on their back, where they should first have the intention and make a gesture in place of Ruku` (bowing) and Sujud (Prostration). The evidence for this is the Hadith that was authentically reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) on the authority of `Imran Ibn Husayn (may Allah be pleased with him and his father).

Second, as for the pensions drawn by the residents of the house, they are their personal possessions, and it is permissible to dispose of them only after asking their permission. With regard to those of them who are insane, the house should undertake the responsibility of spending on their needs out of their money, and saving what remains for their benefit. If they die and leave behind any money, it takes the ruling of an estate that should be divided among the inheritors according to Shari`ah (Islamic law). The sums should be transferred into Bayt-ul-Mal only if they have no heirs.

Third, fasting Ramadan becomes Wajib on whoever is able to fast among them. Those who are unable to fast have a Rukhsah (concession) not to fast; if anyone in this category is able to make up for missed days, this becomes Wajib on them and if any of them are unable, they are permitted to feed, as a Kaffarah for each day they miss, a poor person with the local staple food, e.g. about a kilo and a half of rice. This obligation is waived for those who cannot afford this due to poverty, and there is no sin on them.

Fourth, Those residents should be informed that they have accumulated funds, and that Zakah becomes Wajib on the money of each person if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on it. As for those of them who are insane, it becomes Wajib on those responsible for their money to pay the Zakah due on this money according to Shari`ah.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18401

Q 2: I keep a trust, which is a sum of money, that belongs to some of my relatives

whom I have become their guardian after the death of their father. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money or not? Am I obliged to invest it? If I cannot invest it due to an illness or being too busy with my formal job, how can I then invest it for the benefit of these inheritors? Is Zakah due on it or not, whether or not I manage to invest it? Please accept my best regards to Your Eminence.

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) on you to pay the Zakah due on this money if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on it while it is in your possession. The requirements of the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) guardianship include the investment of the wealth of those under guardianship so that it is not consumed through Zakah. Your reference in all this is the Shar`y court. Thus you should consult it in order to examine the matter according to Shari`ah (Islamic law).

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

The second question of Fatwa no. 20887

Q 2: I have a building that two years ago I offered for sale, but not with a view of trade. I actually live in it and lease part of it. The reason why I am offering it for sale is that if I get a good price for it, I will sell it, otherwise I will invest it through leasing some of its flats plus my living in it. Yet eight months ago, I decided to sell it and now it is sold. My question is: Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on its price now or upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) from the time of its selling?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 236)

A: With regard to building offered for sale, Zakah becomes due on it upon the completion of a Hawl from the time of the intention to sell it. It must be evaluated upon the passage of the Hawl and one quarter of one tenth of its value should be paid as Zakah.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Q 2: Some brothers and I combined to buy a piece of land divided into 6 plots. My intention when buying this plot was to build a house on it for myself, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). Yet when we negotiated the matter of the distribution of these plots, we disagreed regarding the method of distribution. To avoid the failure of the purchase, we all opined that the share of each one of us should be common, and after our selling it, we can divide its price each according to his share. It should be known that I now intend to hold my share of the land until it has increased in value and then sell it. Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) due on my share of the value of the land?

I have a piece of land I bought in 1413 AH, which I applied to the Real Estate Fund to obtain. My intention is to sell this plot and buy another one after the announcement of my name by the Fund. Is there Zakah due on this land?

I have a piece of land that was given to me by the municipality in 1408 AH. I have kept it since that time in the hope that its value may increase, so that I can sell it and buy another plot to build a house for myself at my present residence. Is there Zakah due on this land?

A: If you all intended to sell the mentioned plot, and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed since you intended to sell it, it becomes Wajib (obligatory) on each one of you to pay the Zakah due on his share if its value reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). Each one should estimate the value of his share upon the passage of a Hawl and pay one-quarter of one-tenth of it as Zakah. The beginning of the Hawl should be counted from the time you intended to sell the plot. Zakah is Wajib only on those who intended to sell their share of the plot, not on those who intended to keep it. The same ruling applies to the other land you own, i.e. if you intended it for sale, Zakah becomes due on it in the same manner mentioned above. It makes no difference whether it came into your possession as a gift or by any other means.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 21061

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the last Prophet. To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has examined the letter sent to

(Part No. 8; Page No. 238)

His Eminence the Grand Mufti by His Highness the Director General of the Department of Missions Affairs, subordinate to the Ministry of Higher Education. The letter was sent under number B4/12452, and dated 24/6/1420 A.H. It was transmitted to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under number 3378 and dated 26/6/1420. His Highness has asked the following question:

We want to put before the reverent Committee that the Ministry of Higher Education is responsible for supervising disabled students in sanatoriums outside the Kingdom. These students receive monthly allowances that have accumulated into large sums with the passage of years, which now amount to more than one million Saudi riyals. As some of these sums are invested in Islamic banks, this led to the accumulation of their annual revenues. These funds are still in the banks after the completion of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), which makes Zakah (obligatory charity) due on them. Since the Zakah cannot be returned to the Ministry, it has been suggested that it should either be spent on children of Saudi parents residing in that country who are stranded and have no financial resources, or be transferred to philanthropic associations in the Kingdom to disperse to recipients deserving of Zakah. Please provide us with the opinion of the Committee regarding the two opinions mentioned above, or advise if there is a preferable third opinion.

We then contacted the hospital to get more details about the question. His Highness the Director General of the Department of Missions Affairs replied with the following letter, number B4/14213, and dated 16/7/1420 A.H.:

(Part No. 8; Page No. 239)

We sent letter number 12452, dated 24/6/1420 A.H., enquiring about the opinion of the Permanent Committee regarding the Zakah due on the money of disabled students residing outside the Kingdom. The reverent Committee asked for some information from the representative of the Ministry, Dr. Sulayman ibn `Abdur-Rahman Al-`Anqary, the former cultural attaché in the Arab Republic of Egypt, when he met His Eminence the Grand Mufti of the Kingdom and their Highnesses the members of the Permanent Committee on Tuesday, 10/07/1420 AH, at the headquarter of the Permanent Committee in the General Presidency of the Departments of Scholarly research and 'Ifta'. Thus it is our pleasure to report the following:

1- A monthly allowance is given to each disabled student from the budget of the Ministry, and is deposited into the bank account of the cultural attaché.

2- The funds referred to here - which remained after the completion of several Hawls - belong to mentally retarded persons who cannot dispose of the scholarship money allocated to them. Moreover, the parents of many of them do not want to draw on these balances, and other parents have no contact with the cultural attaché.

By virtue of his work, the cultural attaché is the person who receives this allowance money and deposits it into his bank account, where he spends from it on the needs of each disabled person and invests the rest for their benefit.

We hope that this meets all requirements and that the reverent Committee will provide us with the opinion of their Eminence the Shaykhs.

After studying the Fatwa request, the Committee answered that the issue covers the following cases:

The first case: The disabled person can be of legal age and have sound mind. Those in this category should be informed of the amount of Zakah due from them upon the completion of a Hawl. The cultural attaché who is responsible for them should deduct the value of the Zakah from the account of the disabled person - after asking his permission - and pay it on their behalf to the deserving recipients of Zakah, i.e. the poor, the needy, and the other categories of the deserving recipients of Zakah.

The second case: The disabled person can be underage or mentally retarded, but have a guardian, whether be it his father or anyone else. For those in this category, it is their guardian who should be informed of the amount of their balance and the amount of Zakah due from them upon the completion of a Hawl. They should also be notified that the Zakah money can either be sent to them to be paid to the Zakah recipients or that they should authorize the attaché in this regard.

The third case: The disabled person can be underage or mentally retarded, and have no guardian, or have a guardian who abandoned him. The cultural attaché is officially responsible for the affairs of those in this category, and should deduct the sum of Zakah due from the balance of the disabled person and pay it to the deserving recipients of Zakah, i.e. the poor, the needy, and the other categories of the deserving recipients of Zakah.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 241)

Fatwa no. 20434

Q: Please advise us regarding the following issue, may Allah benefit you! I work in accommodating Muslims coming to perform Hajj or offer `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). We rent the whole building from the landlord for one million riyals, which we pay in full. We rent out the apartments during the month of Ramadan and the three months of Hajj. During the other months of the year, we rent few apartments, because it is necessary for those coming to offer `Umrah to get visas from the embassy, which remains suspended during the first three months of year, the whole month of Shawwal, and during the first half of Dhul-Qa`dah. During these months the rentals fall into complete stagnation. What matters, may Allah reward you, is that we continue to pay the salaries of our workers and staff throughout the whole year. Throughout the year (about 300 days) we also pay to have water trucked in; during the Hajj season, the price of the water truck cargo increases threefold. We also pay electricity and telephone charges, and repaint the building each year. Our income from profits is only in the range of 8% or 10% of the value of the lease. Thus we ask you, by Allah, is the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on us or on the landlord of the building who receives his due right on the day of concluding the contract? Please advise us regarding this matter, may Allah benefit you, since Your Eminence and Your Fatwas are our only reference. May Allah bless you and your life.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 242)

A: A: Any net rental income you receive from the building throughout the whole year (minus expenses) should be added to your other money and you should pay Zakah on the total upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), since the rent is considered to be the profit of your property. The ruling on dividends is that they should be added to the capital when paying Zakah. As for the other rent paid in full to the landlord of the building upon concluding the contract, it is Wajib on him to pay Zakah on what remains of it upon the passage of a Hawl if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q 2: I heard a question directed through phone, stating the following: There is a person who appointed for his wife a deferred Mahr (mandatory gift to a bride from her groom) that reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) but she did not receive it. Knowing that a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on this, should the woman pay Zakah on it? The answer was: The deferred Mahr of a wife takes the same ruling as all her other property. Thus, she should pay Zakah on it if it reaches the Nisab and a Hawl has passed on it. If it is a debt owed by the husband, the Zakah due on it has the same ruling as Zakah on debts.

My question is: What is the difference between Mahr and deferred Mahr? When should the Mahr be paid to the wife? As far as I know, the deferred Mahr is to be paid in case of Talaq (divorce pronounced by a husband) or the death of the husband. I have been married to my paternal cousin for 25 years and we are leading a peaceful life, praise be to Allah. My paternal uncle (may Allah be merciful to him) had imposed on me a deferred Mahr of five thousand dollars.

Is it to be considered a debt due on me that I should pay as soon as possible? Is Zakah due on it throughout this period?

If there is Zakah due on it, on whom is it due, i.e., on the husband or the wife? If it is due on the latter, should she pay it all at once upon receiving the Mahr? It should be noted that I pay the Zakah due on my property, praise be to Allah, and my cousin did not demand that I give her this Mahr, nor has such a thought ever crossed her mind. Moreover, if I ask her to free me of this debt, she will do so, since she knows that all I own is for her and our children both during our lifetime and after our death. I want to behave in the right way and discharge my responsibility, if I have to pay it to her immediately, even if she does not ask for it.

A: With regard to deferred Mahr, this is considered a debt owed to a wife by her husband, which she should pay Zakah on for every year if it reaches the Nisab or more, unless her husband is insolvent or the receiving of Mahr is conditioned by Talaq or the death of her husband, in which case no Zakah is due on her until she takes possession of it and one Hawl passes on it.

Fatwa no. 13815

Q: I proposed to a girl and - praise be to Allah - our marriage contract was concluded, in which we agreed that the consummation of the marriage will take place within less than a year. I bought the amount of gold we agreed on, which was about 42,000 (forty-two thousand riyals). Before the completion of the marriage, I applied to join a military college, where - all praise be to Allah - I was admitted. Knowing that the period of study in the college is three years, her father only consented for the marriage to be completed after graduation, i.e. after three years. After I bought the required gold, I deposited it in the gold shop in trust with the shop owner and not for trade. After a full year had passed since I bought the gold, I wanted to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on it. However, the shop owner told me that there was no Zakah due on it and advised me to ask about this, but I did not ask. The gold remained with him for three years, during which time we paid no Zakah on it. Then after that the marriage was completed and the gold was in my wife's possession for two years. Before the end of the second year, she sold and replaced some of it. Now all the gold has been stolen, with nothing of it remaining except what she was wearing. What should I do? Five years passed without me paying Zakah on this gold. Now the gold does not exist, except for the small amount worn by my wife. The weight of all the gold is unknown to us; what we know is the price paid for it (42,000 riyals). How can I calculate the Zakah due on it? I am very worried and obsessed with the thought of paying the Zakah due on it.

Should I pay the Zakah due on it for the past five years according to my estimation? If there is Zakah due on it, must I pay the total sum at one time, or can I pay it in monthly premiums when receiving my salary? Am I sinful for not having paid the Zakah for the past five years?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 245)

Is there a Kaffarah (expiation) for this?

I trust you to answer me regarding all these inquiries, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: Zakah is due on the mentioned gold for the five years mentioned, even if it does not exist at the present time. You should repent and seek forgiveness for the delay in paying the due Zakah.

Fatwa no. 13785

Q: I would like to inform Your Eminence that I have a showroom for both selling and purchasing cars. I only got permission to open the showroom after depositing a sum of twenty thousand Riyals in SAMA (Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency), which I will restore within six years without any increase on the sum. We hope that Your Eminence would explain whether Zakah (obligatory charity) is due on this sum or not.

It should be noted that I do not benefit from it, and that I can only receive it after the closure of the showroom, which is unknown to me, i.e., whether this will take place after one or twenty years. If Zakah is due on this sum, should I pay Zakah for the previous years, each year according to its due Zakah, or from now? If there is no Zakah due on it, we hope you would inform us about this. May Allah reward you with the best for benefiting us and all Muslims.

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, there is no Zakah due on you regarding the sum you mentioned until receiving it and you start counting a new Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) from the date of receipt.

Fatwa no. 14261

Q: My savings of many years out of Allah's provision for me - i.e. my salary and suchlike - have reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due). Even though this money has grown with the passage of time, I have not fulfilled Allah's obligation on me regarding paying the Zakah due on it. I had the idea to use this money to voluntarily build a Masjid (mosque) for Allah's sake to both express my obedience to Him and seek His mercy and pleasure. I have already started building the Masjid but it is not yet completed. Is it Wajib (obligatory) for me to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on this money if it is already being spent in Allah's Cause? Please clarify this for me, may Allah forgive us both! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: It is Wajib on you to pay the Zakah due on your savings for the past years if they reached the Nisab and a Hawl has passed on them. As for the money you have dedicated for building the Masjid, there is no Zakah due on it beginning from the time you so intended it.

Q: I know that there is a Shar`i ruling that permits spending the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the money of the Zakah payer on those for whom Nafaqah (obligatory financial support) is not his responsibility. Since my wife is employed, is what she spends out of her income to be considered out of the Zakah due on her property, even if she spends the whole amount on her children? Our justification for so doing is that Nafaqah on the children is not her responsibility, but the responsibility of their father.

A: If your wife spends her whole salary and saves nothing within a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), there is no Zakah due on her. On the other hand, if she has saved dirhams out of her salary or any other resource, on which a Hawl has passed, Zakah becomes due from her for this money. It is not permissible for her to spend Zakah on her children, since the Zakah due from a parent is not permitted to be spent on his child and vice versa.

Q: We are the committee responsible for serving cooked food to the security forces in the Diplomatic Quarter in Riyadh. We are responsible for deducting a fixed monthly sum from each soldier and officer in the force, according to their desire and in accordance with the orders and instructions issued by the competent authorities.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 248)

In return, we serve cooked meals including breakfast, lunch, and dinner for all the staff on the force. At the end of each month we have either a deficit or a surplus of funds. Any surplus is deposited into the subsistence fund to be taken from when necessary. When the total balance of this fund reaches a certain level, we use this money instead of deducting the fixed sums from the forces for one month.

Our inquiry, Your Eminence is: Is it Wajib (obligatory) for us to pay Zakah on the total sum that goes into the subsistence fund as a balance, upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)?

Please explain the ruling for us to always follow, may Allah protect you.

A: If the contribution of each of the individuals reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and one Hawl has passed on it, Zakah becomes due on it.

Fatwa no. 18223

Q: Accompanied by his youthful brother, a young man came to propose to my sister two years ago, at which time they gave us forty thousand riyals as half the Mahr (mandatory gift to a bride from her groom).

My question is: If a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes on this Mahr, should we pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on it? Should the Zakah be paid out of the Mahr or from another source? It is worth mentioning that last year we paid the Zakah due on it from the Mahr itself. Please explain this for us, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: Zakah becomes due on the Mahr of a woman if it remains in her possession after a Hawl has passed on it since the marriage contract, where one-quarter of one-tenth should be given in Zakah. On the other hand, if the mentioned sum was paid upon the betrothal, where the marriage contract was not concluded between them, the Zakah on this money becomes due from the man who paid it, since the sum is still in his possession as it has not yet been transferred into the woman's possession.

The third question of Fatwa no. 19283

Q 3: A person has banknotes of a thousand naira in his private possession. Is it Wajib (obligatory) for him to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on it? What is the amount of Zakah due according to the Four Madh-habs (Hanafy, Maliki, Shafi`y, and Hanbaly)?

A: Zakah becomes due on this money if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on it. At this time, one quarter of one tenth (i.e. 2.50%) of it should be given as Zakah.

Q 2: I am an employee living in government house, for which I paid insurance of 5,000 riyals when I received the house. When I want to leave the house, the sum will be paid back to me. It should be known that the responsible body deposits these insurance sums in the American bank. My question is: Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this insurance? Is it permissible for these officials to deposit these sums - that amount in total to more than one million riyals - in the bank? It is worth mentioning that the employees who pay these sums do not agree to them being deposited in the bank.

A: If the purpose behind depositing the mentioned sums in the bank is to protect them, there is no harm in doing so. On the other hand, if they are intended for usurious investment, this is not permissible. Either way, it is Wajib (obligatory) for the owner of the money to pay the Zakah due on it if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on it.

Q: I own a house that I lease to a company, for which I receive the rent in advance every two years. I deposit the full sum in the bank. Upon the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), I pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on it. Is Zakah due on the sum remaining after paying Zakah if another Hawl passes on it? It is worth mentioning that other than the Zakah I take nothing from this sum and that I owe certain premiums that I repay to the Real Estate Development Fund, since that is the body that lent me the money to build the house. The yearly premium I pay is 9,593 SAR. I still owe the sum of 253, 821 SAR to both the REDF and to others. Is the Zakah waived for me due to my debt? As for the fixed money whose Zakah was once paid, is there Zakah due on it again once another Hawl has passed on it? If this money is less than the total debt, is Zakah due on it?

A: It is Wajib for you to pay Zakah on your remaining money, whether deposited in a bank or any other place, if it reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), every time a Hawl passes on it.

First question of fatwa no. 17574

Q 1: I am a university student and I barely have enough food to last the day. This is also the case with my brother who is studying abroad. I have a family of six sisters and my mother. Praise be to Allah, my mother observes Salah (prayer) regularly, observes the Sawm (fast) of Ramadan (the ninth month of the Islamic calendar), and obeys her Lord as much as she can. My father (may Allah be merciful with him) passed away and left us some money on which we depend after putting our trust in Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He). The problem is two-fold:

First: The money that my father left is deposited in a Riba (usury/interest)-bearing bank and none of us has the right to dispose of it except my mother, who only uses it to buy our clothes, food, necessary commodities, and education. I advised her repeatedly using all possible ways of kind encouragement, and firm discouragement, to withdraw the money from the said bank. At times our discussions go further and become far worse, until quarrels and estrangement take place due to this issue.

Second: She refuses to pay the due Zakah claiming that we are orphans and more in need of it than others. She also argues that there is no one who legally deserves it in our community. And even if the legal recipient is found, you will find him a drunkard who squanders all his money on wine-drinking until he becomes insolvent; or a smoker who wastes his money on smoking. When I advise her vehemently, she only pays a small sum and asks that I send the rest to my brother for his education. I reply that it is impermissible to pay the Zakah to my brother because he has a share in the money, but she claims that she has asked people who say it is permissible to do so.

Please, guide me regarding what I should do and how to behave with her? I fear that Allah will reject my Du`a' (supplication) because my food, drink, and clothes are Haram (prohibited i.e. of prohibited source)? How can my Du`a' be answered? How do I escape this problem and what is the solution for it?

A 1: First: Depositing money in a Riba-bearing bank is permissible, if no interest is taken on the money, when necessary. However, if the deposit yields a usurious interest, it is impermissible, for this is a form of Riba (usury).

(Part No. 8; Page No. 253)

Second: If the money reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes, Zakah becomes due on it even if it is in the possession of orphans and their likes. You should be kind to your mother when showing her the Islamic ruling. Her claim that there are no poor people is not a legal excuse for her to withhold Zakah, because Zakah is Wajib (obligatory). Allah (Exalted be He) states: [﴿And those who hoard up gold and silver \[Al-Kanz: the money, the Zakât of which has not been paid\] and spend them not in the Way of Allâh, announce](#) unto them a painful torment.) ﴿On the Day when that (Al-Kanz: money, gold and silver the Zakât of which has not been paid) will be heated in the Fire of Hell and with it will be branded their foreheads, their flanks, and their backs, (and it will be said unto them): "This is the treasure which you hoarded for yourselves. Now taste of what you used to hoard."﴾ The Prophet (may Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon him) also stated: ﴿If any owner of gold or silver does not pay what is due on him, when the Day of Resurrection would come, plates of fire would be beaten out for him; these would then be heated in Hellfire and his sides, his forehead and his back would be cauterized with them. Whenever these cool down, (the process is) repeated during a day the extent of which would be fifty thousand years, until judgment is pronounced among worshippers, and he sees whether his path is to take him to Jannah (Paradise) or to Hellfire.﴾ You should continue to advise your mother and clarify for her that the payment of Zakah is a source of blessing and abundance. If she gives the Zakah to you, then give it to the poor and do not send it to your brother, because it is the due Zakah on your and his money.

Third question of fatwa no. 17299

Q3: If I have a sum of 30,000 Saudi Riyals that yield about 2,000 Riyals. After the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), should I pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the sum of 30.000 Riyals only or on the total sum after the monthly increase although the last increase occurred only one month before the completion of the Hawl?

A3: It is Wajib (obligatory) to pay Zakah due on the money including the profits and other increases after the passing of the Hawl. If the increase is a profit, the Hawl is the same for both the capital and the profit. However, if the money gained is not a profit, then Zakah becomes due on it after the passing of a Hawl. However, if a person pays the Zakah on it in advance, it is acceptable.

Q 2: A needy person who has no home, store, or agricultural land, and also has not got married for shortage of money, is now working in the Gulf region and is saving money at the Islamic banks to build a house, buy a store or agricultural land. In the meanwhile, the sum saved reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passed. Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on it or not? Please advise me. May Allah reward you.

A: If the sum reaches the Nisab and a full Hawl passes, Zakah becomes due on it, even if the person saves it to build a house, or for marriage, or similar purposes.

Second question of fatwa no. 17832

Q 2: The deferred Mahr (mandatory gift to a bride from her groom) of my wife has been due on me for about ten years. She asks if Zakah is due on this deferred Mahr? If it is due, how should it be calculated? It should be noted that I cannot repay this deferred Mahr on demand and it forms a Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due).

A 2: The Zakah is due on the Mahr if it reaches the Nisab and a full Hawl passes from the contract of marriage because the wife owns it upon concluding the contract of marriage. Thus, it is Wajib (obligatory) on your wife to pay the Zakah due on her Mahr during the past period.

Q 2: If I have some money deposited at the bank. After the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), I pay the Zakah due on the money from other money I possess. Is this permissible, as I pay from other Dirhams with me?

A 2: It is permissible for a person to pay the Zakah due on the Dirhams in his possession from other money after the passing of the Hawl, especially when his money is due on other people or in deposits. Thus, after the passing of the Hawl, he should pay the Zakah from the money he owns, because Zakah is due on him and he is permitted to repay it from the same money on which Zakah is due or from other money.

Zakat-ul-Fitr

Second question of fatwa no. 14893

Q 2: It is the habit that my brothers give Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) to my mother to distribute it because they are not living in the town and are not familiar with the inhabitants. Is this permissible? However, I distribute Zakah (obligatory charity) according to my own knowledge and when she knows, she gets angry with me. Am I to blame? Am I unjust to my mother through this behavior?

A 2: Your brothers should pay Zakat-ul-Fitr that is due on them to the poor existent in the place in which they live at the time when Zakat-ul-Fitr becomes due. However, if no poor people exist near their location and they send the Zakat-ul-Fitr to your mother to distribute it, you should not distribute it unless you have her permission. That is because she is the agent and she should distribute Zakat-ul-Fitr in person or entrust a trustworthy person, with whom she is satisfied, whether she chooses you or anyone else.

All praise is due to Allah. May peace and blessing be upon the Last Prophet! To proceed
The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed

what was sent to the General Chairman from the Charity and Social Services Society, Yanbu`. It is referred to the committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars with number (6143) and dated 28/10/1410 A.H. The society's question reads as follows:

Some citizens and other foreign residents came to us asking those in charge of the society to accept Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast), due to their unawareness of the legal recipients worthy of the Zakah in the city. The process runs as follows:

- 1. The society does accept the value of Zakat-ul-Fitr [i.e. does accept it in cash].
- 2. The society then buys rice with the money of Zakat-ul-Fitr delivered to it.
- 3. By the end of Ramadan and at the fixed time of the payment of Zakat-ul-Fitr, the society forms committees for the distribution of Zakah in the city, the neighboring villages and desert communities.

Upon the request of the honorable brothers, we present this question hoping to receive the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) opinion in this regard. As for the distribution of Zakah to the neighboring villages and desert communities, we would like to know if it is acceptable when the distribution is delayed beyond the legal time fixed? We are waiting for your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on this issue. May Allah grant us all success to do what leads to welfare and goodness! Kindly receive our question and accept our due greetings and assurance of respect!

After studying the case in question, the committee answered that there is nothing wrong with the society's undertaking the duty of distributing Zakat-ul-Fitr on behalf of those entrusting it with this duty. The society should pay the Zakah before Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer) and it is impermissible to delay it, because the Prophet (may Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon him) commanded the payment of Zakat-ul-Fitr to the legal recipients before Salat-ul-`Eid and it is Wajib (obligatory) to pay it in the form of food, not money.

Fatwa no. 15767

Q: We know that Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) is Wajib (obligatory) upon every Muslim who should pay it for himself and for those under his charge such as his children, wife and servant. However, if the wife travels to visit her parents in another country and stays there for more than two months until it is the day of `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) while she is still there at her parents, should the husband pay Zakat-ul-Fitr due on her or should her parents pay it, because she is staying with them at the time of payment?

A: If the case is as you have mentioned, Zakat-ul-Fitr that is due on the wife should be paid by her husband.

Third and fifth questions from fatwa no. 15888

Q 3: Is it permissible to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on me to the chieftain of the tribe? Note that he does not deliver the Zakah to the legal recipients and he takes it himself. Is it permissible to take the ewe due on the sheep of my brother as Zakah and give its price to the Zakah collectors? Is it permissible for me to do that and retain the ewe with my sheep where it feeds and drinks?

A 3: It is only permissible to pay the Zakah to the Muslim ruler on demand or to the poor. It is permissible to pay the Zakah to the chieftain of the tribe if he distributes it to the legal recipients, provided that the ruler does not request it officially. However, if the chieftain takes Zakah for himself, it is impermissible to pay it to him. It is also impermissible to pay the value of Zakah due on the cattle unless Zakah official collectors request the value of the cattle; only then, the value is accepted. As for retaining the ewe that you bought from your brother with your sheep, there is nothing wrong with that.

Q 5: Is it permissible to pay the equivalent of Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) in cash to the needy, by giving them the price of the prescribed amount of staple food, i.e., a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.)?

A: It is not permissible to pay money instead of food as Zakat-ul-Fitr. The Prophet (peace be upon him) commanded the giving of food as Zakat-ul-Fitr and specified its weight in Sa`, which indicates that it is fixed and that payment of its value does not discharge the obligation. The poor can then sell the food after receiving it and make good use of the money.

The third question of Fatwa no. 16428

Q 3: Is it obligatory on a host to pay Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) on behalf of his guests who spend the whole of Ramadan at the host's home? Is it obligatory to pay Zakah on behalf of a woman, whose marriage is not consummated, bearing in mind that she is still at her father's home? What is the meaning of the Hadith reading: (The Prophet (peace be upon him) commanded the payment of Zakat-ul-Fitr for every Muslim whether minor or old, free or slave.) (Related by Al-Daraqutny on the authority of Ibn `Umar and was ranked as good by Al-Albany) May Allah bless you. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you.)

A: A Muslim may pay Zakat-ul-Fitr on behalf of the guest whom he supported during Ramadan if he was informed of that and the guest agreed before the payment. However, it is better for the guest to pay Zakat-ul-Fitr on his own behalf from his own money for it is he who is addressed by the Prophet's (peace be upon him) order.

Zakat-ul-Fitr on behalf of the wife whose marriage is not yet consummated has the same ruling as that of expenditure; as the husband is not required to pay her expenses until she comes to his home. The same applies to Zakat-ul-Fitr.

The meaning of the Hadith mentioned above is that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) ordered Muslims to pay Zakat-ul-Fitr on behalf of their dependants.

Fatwa no. 20923

Q: One of the Arab countries undertakes the duty of collecting Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) from people in cash through Zakah officers sent to villages and cities. These sums of money are collected and delivered to the balance of the ministry of social affairs of the state to be paid throughout the year on a periodic basis. Every three months, the aid is given to the legal recipients registered in social affairs. However, the aid may be delivered to some people who are not legal recipients. This money also covers the salaries and allowances of the government officials who undertake the task of collecting these sums from villages and cities. Thus, Zakat-ul-Fitr is considered a source of supplying the ministry of social affairs. Some people feel uneasy about this and then pay Zakat-ul-Fitr twice. First, they pay it according to the legal command. Second, they deliver it to government officials. Please, advise us about the validity of this activity to inform people and guide them to the proper legal way in this regard. Please let the Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) be in written form to be easy for us to print it out.

A: You should pay Zakat-ul-Fitr at the due time that is legally fixed for its payment, which is the night preceding the day of `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast). However, it is acceptable to give it one or two days earlier than the day of `Eid-ul-Fitr. The amount given should be Sa` of staple food which is about 3 kilograms that should be of edible substance (i.e. wheat, barley, corn, rice, etc). It is not acceptable to pay the value of the Sa`, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) commanded us to give it out of the [staple] food.

Q 6: I live in Saudi Arabia, while my wife and my son live in Egypt; should I pay Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) on their behalf? Please note that my wife lives with my father, mother, and sisters; should my father pay Zakat-ul-Fitr on behalf of me and them in Egypt? Please note that some of our relatives there are deserving recipients of Zakah.

A: You should pay Zakat-ul-Fitr in the country where you will be staying till the end of Ramadan. Your father should pay it on behalf of your wife and children in the country where they are staying. However, if you pay their Zakat-ul-Fitr along with yours in the country where you are staying, there is nothing wrong with this. The same applies if they pay your Zakat-ul-Fitr in the country where they are staying.

Q 1: Should I pay Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) on behalf of the orphan whom I support in Africa?

A 1: Zakat-ul-Fitr should be paid in the country where every person lives before the end of Ramadan, for it is related to the body, i.e. it is a purification for the body. Accordingly, the orphan in question should pay it himself in his country or it should be paid there on his behalf by the organization that supports him.

Q: What is the amount of Zakat-ul-fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) in kilogram? I have given out an amount of ten kilograms of rice on behalf of four members of my family, but later I doubted and asked about the amount due on every single individual and was told that it is 2.25 kg.

I hope Your Eminence would inform me of the amount in kilograms, and what should I do if the amount I gave out fell short of the due amount? Please give us Fatwa. May Allah reward you with the best.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 266)

A: The amount of Zakat-ul-Fitr which is due on every individual is about three kilograms of rice or other staple foodstuffs of the region where one lives. Accordingly, the questioner should make up for the incomplete amounts remaining as due Zakat-ul-Fitr on behalf of those four persons.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18426

Q 1: If for paying Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) to a specific person, one takes a bag of rice with a label showing that the weight of the bag is 40 or 45 kilograms according to the measure of the producing company. Thus, it is taken without emptying and measuring it by means of Sa`, according to which every 3 kilograms are regarded as one Sa`. In case the weight of the bag is less than the required amount, one will add to it, but if it is more, it will be Sadaqah (voluntary charity). Is this permissible?

A: It is necessary to be sure of the measure of the bag, which one will give as Zakat-ul-Fitr. It is not sufficient to depend on the label written on the bag or the random estimation that it equals such and such amount, because it may be of a lesser amount, thus one is not fully clear from the obligation of Zakat-ul-Fitr.

Q 1: Rice is the most common food used in our land. We use the prophetic Mud (a dry measure of half bushel, 543 grams) for measuring, which legally suffices for one person. After that, we measure the bag of rice and draw our measure on this basis. We determine the number of Muds that each bag contains and give Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) according to this basis. What is the legal ruling on this work? Is it permissible or not?

A: The value of the Prophetic Sa` is 3 kilograms approximately, so everyone should give this amount, i.e., 3 kilograms, as the obligatory charity paid before `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast). Now that you know the amount that should be paid by each person, you can calculate the amount required from a number of people.

The tenth question of Fatwa no. 20308

Q 10: Sometimes we give out the soul-purifying Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) to the Fuqaha` (Muslim jurists) following this Madhhab (School of jurisprudence), and at other times to the needy.

A: Allah (Exalted be He) has enjoined one sort of Zakah (obligatory charity) to be taken from the wealthy whose property has reached the Nisab (the minimum account on which Zakah is due) or more. This Zakah is taken from the wealthy to be given to the poor and the rest of the eight deserving recipients of Zakah whom Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) has specified in Surah At-Tawbah, saying: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.﴾ So, if a Muslim has given their Zakah to any of these categories or to the ruler, they shall have fulfilled their duty. A Muslim is also permitted to give some of their Zakah to the ruler and the rest to some of these categories, unless the ruler demands it all. However, it is Munkar (that which is unacceptable or disapproved of by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect) and groundless to enjoin the wealthy to give the Zakah twice: once to the ruler and again to any given person like a Faqih (Muslim jurist). This is an unjust act that must be avoided. I have been informed that some people assign an amount of money to be taken from their wealth as a due obligation for the benefit of some shaykh belonging to a Sufi order. The amount assigned is one-fifth of one's wealth, and such shaykhs say: This is the fifth of the booty due on people. Also, they regard the properties of Shi`ah (Shi'ites) as Ghanimah (war-booty). Actually all these obligations are void and have nothing to do with the pure Shari`ah (Islamic law). As for the one-fifth which Allah (Exalted be He) has mentioned in the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) that reads: ﴿And know that whatever of war-booty that you may gain, verily one-fifth (1/5th) of it is assigned to Allâh, and to the Messenger, and to the near relatives [of the Messenger (Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم)], (and also) the orphans, Al-Masâkin (the poor) and the wayfarer﴾ it refers to a one-fifth of the properties Muslims take from the Kafirs (disbelievers) as a Ghanimah after defeating them. This amount of wealth is distributed by the ruler who is (supposed to be) the commander of the believers or the king of the state who led the war against the Kafirs, or by his deputy to the recipients mentioned in the Ayah and for the public interests exactly like the way of distributing the Fay' (booty gained without engagement in war). So judges, teachers and Muslim soldiers are given an amount from it that would help them dedicate themselves to their jobs as explained by scholars on the issue of the recipients of Fay' and the one-fifth of the Ghanimah.

This means that all Muslim sects have to submit to the Islamic laws on all affairs: on the issues of Zakah, Fay', Ghanimah and so on. They are not allowed to deviate from the Muslim mainstream by innovating rulings which have nothing to do with the Islamic Shari`ah, as this constitutes a breach of the rulings of Shari`ah and opposition to Allah (Exalted be He), His Messenger (peace be upon him) and Muslims. It further creates a gap between Muslims which sows dissension and contention. This would eventually harm Muslims and help their enemy to prevail over them.

Zakat-ul-Fitr has to be given to the poor and needy, as Ibn Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) is reported to have said: \(The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) ordained Zakat-ul-Fitr as a purification from idle or indecent talk for those observing Sawm \(Fast\), and as food for the needy.\) He (peace be upon him) further prescribed it to be given before going out for Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer). It is also permissible to give it one or two days before the day of `Eid, as it has been authentically reported that the Sahabah (Companions of the Propeht) used to give it to the poor one or two days before the day of `Eid. Allah is the One sought for help and guidance to the right path.

Q 2: A man died before sunset of the last day of Ramadan and another died after sunset; on whom is it obligatory to pay Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast)?

A: Zakat-ul-Fitr is not obligatory on anyone who dies before sunset on the night preceding `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast), as it becomes obligatory only after sunset of the last night of Ramadan and the man in question died before the set time of Zakat-ul-Fitr. On the other hand, Zakat-ul-Fitr should be paid on behalf of the person who died after sunset, for it became obligatory on him as he died in the set time of Zakat-ul-Fitr.

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 20628

Q 7: I am a resident of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia and I want to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) or Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast); is it permissible to pay it here on behalf of myself and my family or should my family pay it on behalf of me and themselves in their country; or should each of them pay it in the country where they live?

A: Every person should pay Zakat-ul-Fitr in the place where he resides until sunset of the last day of Ramadan. The person in question who is a resident of the Kingdom should pay his Zakat-ul-Fitr in Saudi Arabia, while his family should pay their Zakat-ul-Fitr in their country. This is the best. However, there is nothing wrong if the person pays Zakat-ul-Fitr on behalf of his family in the country where he resides, since his family is his dependants. Concerning Zakah on property, the principal ruling is that it should be paid in the place where the money is raised. However, if it is necessary to transfer it to a poorer area where people are in more need of it, it is permissible to do so.

All Praise be to Allah alone, and peace and blessings be upon the last of the Prophets. To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' have read the question submitted to the Grand Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from Al-Bir Society in Al-`Urayja' suburb, a question which has been referred to the committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars no. (6115) on Shawwal 20, 1419 A.H. The question reads as follows:

Charitable organizations, authorized by the poor, collect Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) from the benefactors in behalf of the poor but they distribute it few days after the `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast). What is the ruling in this case?

Having reviewed the question, the committee answered that it is not permissible to delay giving Zakat-ul-Fitr beyond Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer), unless its deserving recipients authorized someone to take it at its due time in their behalf, in which case the reception of the authorized agent at its due time is the same as if the authorizing persons received it themselves.

May Allah grant us success, and peace be upon our Prophet Muhammad and his family and companions.

Q: Is it permissible for the committees of Zakah (obligatory charity) to buy the items to be given as Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) on the first day of the month of Ramadan and distribute it to the poor at the end of the month, given that the donors have not yet made the intention of giving Zakah? So, is it permissible to give it before making the intention to do so?

A: The time of giving Zakat-ul-Fitr is after seeing the crescent of the month of Shawwal until before Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer).

(Part No. 8; Page No. 273)

However, it is permissible to give it one or two days before seeing the crescent but no more. The Zakah payer should give it to its deserving recipients on his or her behalf and on behalf of those he or she provides for. One can also authorize an honest person to give it on their behalf at the due time, for it is an obligation that one must fulfill. So, one is not permitted to make light of it or depend on organizations that do not pay due attention to it.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 21593

Q 5: Is it permissible to pay Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) on behalf of the Kafir (non-Muslim) whom I am acting for?

A: It is not permissible for you to pay Zakat-ul-Fitr on behalf of a Kafir, for there is an absence of Islam which is the principal condition for the validity of his action. Zakat-ul-Fitr is a financial act of `Ibadah (worship). This kind of `Ibadah cannot be done on behalf of others except after having their permission if they are Mukallafs (persons meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) and a Kafir's intention is not valid. Moreover, if it is not valid due to his Kufr (disbelief), it is not permissible to act on his behalf.

Q 1: At the end of the blessed month of Ramadan 1416 A.H., I did not give Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) that was due on me and my family, as I had work which distracted me from giving it. Actually, I have decided to give it along with this year's. Is it permissible to do so?

A: Zakat-ul-Fitr becomes obligatory starting from sunset on the night preceding `Eid-ul-Fitr until before Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer). Anyone who delays it beyond its due time without an excuse shall be considered sinful and should still make up for it. However, it will then be regarded as a sort of Sadaqah (voluntary charity) according to the Hadith reported on the authority of Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him and his father): \(Anyone who gives it out before Salat-ul-`Eid, it will be accepted as Zakah. If anyone gives it after Salat-ul-`Eid, it will be considered Sadaqah.\) (Related by Abu Dawud in his Sunan (v. 2, p. 262-263 Hadith no. 1609), Ibn Majah, Al-Daraqutny and Al-Hakim have related this Hadith with a similar wording)

Therefore, Muslims should not make light of this duty or be too occupied to fulfill it; especially that it serves as purification for the fasting person from idle or bad talk and as a food gift for the needy.

Q 1: With regard to Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) in Europe and the United States; is it permissible

Some people claim that this is not permissible and that it should be paid in cereals and distributed among the needy who are not found in the countries where we are, while the Mujahids are in dire need of it.

A: Zakat-ul-Fitr is obligatory on every Muslim who witnesses sunset on the last day of Ramadan. It is permissible to pay it one or two days before `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast). However, it is Mustahab (desirable) to pay it on the `Eid-ul-Fitr day before offering Salat-ul- `Eid (the Festival Prayer), for this is what the Prophet (peace be upon him) and his Companions (may Allah be pleased with them) did. Collecting Zakat-ul-Fitr from the beginning of Ramadan is contrary to the Sunnah (whatever reported from the Prophet) and the action of the Companions (may Allah be pleased with them), so it is not permissible to ask people to pay it before its due time.

Sadaqah

Q: Many benevolent people differ regarding the the best way of charitable spending that earns one the highest reward. Is it Sadaqah (voluntary charity) extended to the poor and the needy? Is it provision of Iftar (breaking the Fast) for people observing Sawm? Is it contribution to projects supporting Islam and spreading Da`wah (call to Islam) to unveil the truth and warn against the opposing ways through the print and distribution of religious books, and sponsoring the Du`ah (callers to Islam) and similar relevant activities of calling to Allah (Glorified be He)? Please provide us with the legal ruling in this regard for the benefit of Muslims, as the one guiding to goodness will earn a reward similar to that of those who are guided by them and observe it. May Allah reward and safeguard you.

A: The ways of doing good are many, praise be to Allah. It is prescribed for a Muslim to do as much of them as they can in the hope of earning reward from Allah and helping fellow Muslims. Nevertheless, some ways of charitable spending may be better than others when urgently needed or when only a few people observe them, and similar criteria for determining the better way of spending. If it is possible for a Muslim to contribute to every way of charitable giving, it will be good.

Q: Some tribes are named after a man from our tribe and this man asks us to collect money to help those who are named after him. Hence, we collect more than five thousand Riyals for him. Whoever does not pay is to be despised and degraded by people, particularly by the Multazim (practicing Muslim) youth who accuse anyone who refuses to pay of being stingy. I give them money with the intention of reconciling their hearts and making them accept my advice. What is the opinion of Your Eminence?

A: It is permissible for a Muslim to spend their money in all aspects of good and during calamities in particular. However, it is Sadaqah (voluntary charity). Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿It is not Al-Birr (piety, righteousness, and each and every act of obedience to Allah, etc.) that you turn your faces towards east and (or) west (in prayers); but Al-Birr is (the quality of) the one who believes in Allah, the Last Day,﴾ until He says: ﴿and gives his wealth, in spite of love for it, to the kinsfolk, to the orphans,﴾ It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿The wealth of a person will not diminish by giving Sadaqah.﴾ Allah (Glorified be He) warns us against stinginess when He (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿And let not those who covetously withhold of that which Allah has bestowed on them of His Bounty (Wealth) think that it is good for them (and so they do not pay the obligatory Zakat).﴾

Q: A Turkish fellow sold his wife's gold and used the money to come to Afghanistan to take part in Jihad (fighting/striving in the Cause of Allah). Then, he was killed in there. Referring to some Turkish members of the committee, they told us that the wife and children of the killed person are in dire need of financial assistance, knowing that they live in Turkey, and not in Pakistan. Is it permissible to help them by giving them some of the money allocated to committee managing the affairs of the Afghani Mujahids (ones striving/fighting in the Cause of Allah)?

A: There is nothing wrong with giving the family of the deceased Mujahid, who are living in or outside Pakistan, financial assistance deducted from the money allocated to the Mujahids at the discretion of the committee which is responsible for distributing the money mentioned in question.

The third question of Fatwa no. 15088

Q 3: I support four children and my mother as well. I have sufficient income, so we live in luxury and save some, all praise be to Allah. However, I am confused as to how I can dispose of these savings. When I think about my life and the life of my children, I make up my mind that I should save a lot of money for the future. As my children grow up, their education and marriage expenses will increase. I remember here the Hadith reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) when he told the man who came to bequeath all his property: "... for you would better leave your inheritors wealthy than leave them poor, begging of others." When I read Islamic magazines that raise funds for Muslims in need of money, I say: "I should donate for my Muslim brethren." Meanwhile, I ponder on the behavior of the early Muslims who did not save much money for their future. Muslims should put their trust in Allah and be sure that Allah is able to guarantee their future and their children's as well.

I then ask, could you guide me as to how I can leave off excessiveness and negligence? And is there a limit proportion or rule within which one spends and saves? May Allah reward you with the best!

A 3: We advise you to follow the example of the Prophet (peace be upon him) when he advised Hakim ibn Hizam (may Allah be pleased with him) and told him: \(The upper hand is better than the lower hand. One should start giving first to

(Part No. 8; Page No. 281)

his dependents. And the best object of Sadaqah \(voluntary charity\) is that which is given by a wealthy person \(from the money which is left after his expenses\). And whoever abstains from asking others for some financial help, Allah will make them contented; and whoever are satisfied with what they have, Allah will make them self-sufficient.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) The upper hand is the one that gives, and the lower hand is the one that takes.

However, one is not allowed to bequeath over one third of his property for non-inheritors when he is stricken with a fearful illness. It was authentically reported on the authority of Sa'd ibn Abu Waqqas (may Allah be pleased with him) that he asked the Prophet during his illness whether to bequeath all his property, half of it or one third of it. The Prophet (peace be upon him) answered him to bequeath one third only.

Fatwa no. 15591

Q: Our Charitable Society for Holy Qur'an Memorization in Al-Ta'if have received three kinds of donations this year: Zakah (obligatory charity), Sadaqah (voluntary charity), and Sadaqah Jariyah (ongoing charity). Zakah was given to its prescribed recipients of the poor who are attributed to the Society. Sadaqah was given as salaries to the employees and teachers and as prizes for the students. Yet, we are confused as to how we can dispose of the Sadaqah Jariyah since some donators send, for example, one hundred Riyals as Sadaqah Jariyah which we, with other sums of money, save until they became considerable money and we have not disposed of it waiting for the opinion of Your Eminence.

A: All aids given to your Society under the name of Sadaqah Jariyah are to be used in purchasing real estates whose revenues are to be spent in the interest of the Society and there is no blame if it is used to restore the endowed real estates of the Society.

May Allah guide and help you do all good!

Q: A benevolent, righteous young man who was known for seeking knowledge, enjoining Ma`ruf (that which is judged as good, beneficial, or fitting by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect) and forbidding Munkar (that which is unacceptable or disapproved of by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect) - although none can verify this but Allah - died and did not get married. He (may Allah be merciful to him) was a teacher. A friend of his decided to launch an appeal fund to make a charitable project in his favor. This friend, whenever a donator brings money, reminds them to intend this money for so and so (the dead person). He intends to establish a Masjid (mosque) in Somalia named after this dead person as Sadaqah Jariyah (ongoing charity). Some object to this project lest those people in that country should fall into Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) because they may magnify and draw false images of this dead person, when searching for the reason behind naming the Masjid after him?

My question is: Is it permissible to furnish funds for a dead person with the intention of designating a charitable project for him or not?

A: Furnishing funds out of Sadaqah Jariyah not Zakah (obligatory charity), from kinsfolk and friends of the dead person, is a permissible act. However, it is preferred not to name the Masjid after this dead person, leaving off excessiveness.

All Praise is due to Allah. May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon the Last Prophet! To proceed,

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed what was sent to the General Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from the Director of Social Welfare Home for Males in Madinah via the Presidency of courts in there in the letter numbered (567), dated 4/4/1416 A.H., which was referred from the committee to the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under number (1746) dated 11/4/1416 A.H. The persons request a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on the following issue:

We would like to inform you that we have a sum of money, which is (444.559) Riyals registered in the name of the Social Welfare Home for Males in Madinah. It is the total sum of the donations granted to the Social Welfare Home when it was a non-governmental organization.

The officials of the Ministry decided to avail of this sum and formed a committee for this purpose. The committee now wants to know the ruling on the legal channels that can take advantage of this money. For example, constructing buildings, or maintaining the utilities of the house, or building playgrounds, etc.

Please, give us the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) ruling on this question so that we may act accordingly. Kindly accept our sincere greetings.

After reviewing the case in question, the committee answered that if the case is as mentioned and the sum of donations in question is not given as Zakah (obligatory charity), those in charge of the Social Welfare Home may spend it in the interests of the Social Welfare Home such as establishing or maintaining buildings and similar expenditures for the benefit of orphans, unless the donator specifies the way of spending, then his condition should be fulfilled. As for the money given as Zakah, it should be given to the poor orphans living in the Social Welfare Home.

Q 2: I intend to sponsor a Muslim orphan through the International Islamic Relief Organization. The sponsorship will be registered in the name of my late mother. Is this permissible? Will she be rewarded for it? Please advise. May Allah reward you.

A: It is permissible to give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) on behalf of your mother by sponsoring an orphan and meeting their need. Your mother will be granted the great reward promised for sponsoring an orphan and you will be rewarded as well. It is authentically reported from Sahl ibn Sa'd (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: (I and the sponsor of an orphan in Paradise will be (near to one another) like this - and he (peace be upon him) pointed with his index and middle fingers, holding them apart.) It is also reported in the Sahih Book of Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: (The one who takes care of an orphan, whether a relative or a stranger, I and them, will be (near to one another) in Paradise like these two.) The narrator, Malik ibn Anas (may Allah be pleased with him), pointed with his index and middle fingers. His saying: (...relative or a stranger...) means that the reward is the same whether the orphan is of their kinfolk or is a stranger.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 289)

For example, an orphan may be sponsored by a relative such as their mother, grandfather, brother or other relatives. Commenting on this Hadith, Ibn Battal said: "It is the duty of everyone who hears this Hadith to act accordingly to accompany the Prophet (peace be upon him) in Paradise and there is no better place in Paradise than that."

Q 2: A working wife earns money from her work and gives in charity to those she feels are in need. Upon learning of this, her husband objects and rebukes her. She thus gives charity in secret. What is the ruling on this act? What is the ruling on similar cases such as an unmarried working daughter, who gives in charity secretly and her father does not know? Is this a blamable act? Should she tell her father about it?

A 2: The two women in the cases mentioned above are free to give in charity from their money. In fact, they are rewarded by Allah for this charity. Neither the husband nor the father has the right to prevent them from giving charity.

However, if the husband or the father is poor, it will be better to give them this charity. The Hadith reported from Zaynab, the wife of `Abdullah ibn Mas`ud, (may Allah be pleased with them both) states that she and another woman from the Ansar (Helpers, inhabitants of Madinah who supported the Prophet) asked the Prophet (peace be upon him): Is the Sadaqah (charity) given to husbands and orphaned relatives acceptable? Q: I asked a brother to donate toward building a graveyard. He gave me some money, but I do not know if it is given as Zakah (obligatory charity) or Sadaqah (voluntary charity). Another person also gave me a sum of money several times, which I do not know whether it was given as Zakah or Sadaqah. Recently, I have questioned the donators but they did not remember. I then gave this money to the poor to fulfill some of their needs. I also sent other funds to complete some extensions of a Masjid (mosque) that we built including a library, a center for teaching the Qur'an, and an area for preparing the dead for burial in addition to building a wall around the graveyard for protection.

I am now uncertain about the sums spent on each of these concerns. My brother, who supervised the building of the Masjid, the house of teaching the Qur'an, the library, and the place for preparing the dead for burial, died.

Question: What is the ruling on spending these sums of money on the mentioned concerns, if they are of the money of Zakah? What should we do? It should be noted that a small amount of money is still allocated for these purposes. Please, advise.

A: The basic rule is that money given as Sadaqah is different from that given as Zakah. It is your duty to spend it in the ways specified by the donators. It is impermissible to spend this money in other affairs, unless the donators agree, when possible. However, if it impossible to have their agreement and some surplus money, it may be spent on other similar charitable projects.

As for the sums given as Zakah, they should be spent in the legal channels specified for Zakah, which are mentioned in the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) of Surah (Qur'anic chapter) Al-Tawbah where Allah (May He be Exalted) states: «As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor)» It is unlawful to spend these sums of Zakah on public projects, such as building Masjids, libraries, walls around a graveyard and the like.

I have a married daughter that entrusted me with keeping her Mahr (mandatory gift to a bride from her groom), which is 6000 riyals. Upon visiting her, she told me that she wished to donate her Mahr to build a Masjid (mosque). I felt sorry for her, lest she should give this large sum in charity and told her that it is enough to give 1000 riyals as charity. Since then, she has not spoken to me as if she is angry with me for objecting to her contribution of the entire amount to the Masjid. My question is: Did I commit a sin when I did not agree to the donation of the whole sum to the Masjid? Should I carry out her wish, even if this decreased her money? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: Charity and donation that a daughter may give to the extension of a Masjid is a good and Mustahab (desirable) deed, but obeying one's father is a duty. The father did not prevent her from donating, but merely wanted her to reduce the contribution in pursuit of her interest. The father is then not to blame, but it is better to carry out her desire, for the great reward and goodness, hoping that Allah will give her greater compensation. Allah (Glorified be He) states: \(And whatever good you send before you for yourselves, \(i.e. Nawâfil non-obligatory acts of worship: prayers, charity, fasting, Hajj and 'Umrah\), you will certainly find it with Allâh, better and greater in reward.\)

His question was referred to the committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars no. 251, dated 14/1/1418 A.H. The question is as follows:

Your Eminence Shaykh: `Abdul-`Aziz ibn `Abdullah ibn Baz, the General Mufti of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. May Allah safeguard you! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!) Your Eminence Shaykh, the chairman and the board of directors of the society expressed their deep love and respect to you. They also pray for your good health, safety, and long life. May Allah make your knowledge a source of benefit! A discussion raised about a sum of money remained from a charitable Iftar (breaking the Fast) project of the past blessed month of Ramadan. The money was collected from donators for this charitable concern [Iftar (breaking the Fast) of Ramadan]. Please, guide us about the following points: Is it permissible to spend from this money on other charitable channels undertaken by the society? Should we save the money until the next Ramadan when we make the same charitable project again.

May Allah safeguard and protect you and guide you to the best way of goodness!

After reviewing the case in question, the committee answered that the sum remained after supplying the Iftar (breaking the Fast) of Ramadan of the last year, should be saved until the Ramadan of the next year. That is because the donators specified the manner of spending the donation, so it is impermissible to change what is specified, because this manner of spending does not end. Thus, the sum should be allocated for the Iftar (breaking the Fast) of the next Ramadan to be spent in the way specified by the donators.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 18677

All Praise is due to Allah. May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon the Last Prophet! To proceed,

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed what was sent to the General Mufty from Al-Bir Society in Jeddah, which was referred from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars to the committee under number (5765), dated 27/11/1416 A.H. The inquirer asks for a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) on the following issue:

1. The society is organizing a charitable project for the Iftar (breaking the Fast) of Fasting people. In light of the size of the project during the last years and after estimating their need of the current year, they expect a specific number of meals that the donations of benevolent people will cover. They thus make a contract with some restaurants to provide the required meals of Iftar and deliver them to the places where the needy gather to receive them. The value required for the payment of these meals is only completed by the end of Ramadan and it may even be less than the required sum. Thus, the society is compelled to take a portion of the Kaffarah (expiation) for oaths or of the money allocated for feeding the needy to cover the shortage. After these additional sums, the sum may be more than required and then we save it for the next year. What is the ruling on this act? Is it permissible to deliver meals of Iftar before getting the sums for payment from the donators? The Iftar may even take place before the donator intends to give the Sadaqah (voluntary charity) for Iftar. Is it permissible to change the way of spending the sums from a charitable category to another? Is it permissible to save some money to the next year when other sums come late, i.e. by the end of Ramadan?

2. The society is also organizing a project for collecting Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) and delivering it to the legally eligible recipients. Those in charge of the society also estimate the size of the project equally as they do with the project of Iftar. What is the ruling on this act?

Reviewing the question, the committee answers as follows:

First: It is obligatory to spend the Sadaqat and Kaffarat according to the way specified by the donators. If the giver of charity specifies Ramadan as a time for delivering their charity, it should not be delayed beyond it. Similarly, if the payer of Kaffarah gives it to the society to deliver it to the legal recipients, it is impermissible to spend it under another category. It is obligatory to buy the things specified as Kaffarah and deliver them to the due recipients.

Second: It is impermissible to pay the Sadaqah or the Kaffarah before the intention and command of the payer of Sadaqah or the Kaffarah take place, because the intention is legally necessary.

Upon receiving the money of the donators, it is obligatory to pay their donations according to their directions and the same goes to the way of delivering the Kaffarat.

Q 1: Sometimes we ask some businessmen to donate to a particular project supervised by our office, such as printing books and other projects. Can the money received for a given project be used for another project supervised by the same office? For example, one of the donors contributed to buying a computer for the office; can this contribution be used to print books instead?

A: Contributions to such projects are mostly given as Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and not as Zakah (obligatory charity), so they must be used for the purposes specified by the donor. It is not permissible to use them for any alternative projects, unless with the permission of the donor.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 298)

However, if it is difficult to get permission from the donor or it is not possible to spend these contributions for the purposes specified by the donor and there is extra money, then they should be spent on charitable activities similar to those which the donor has specified. However, if donors pay such amounts of money as Zakah due on them, it is not permissible to spend them on the mentioned projects; rather, they must be given to the categories of Zakah recipients which are mentioned in the Saying of Allah: \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\) and those employed to collect \(the funds\), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined \(towards Islâm\)\)

Fatwa no. 21109

Q: My son died and left two wives. He divorced one of them about two month before his death, and she has four daughters from him, three of them are disabled and have reached the full legal age. They are totally disabled, as they cannot speak or move except a little. Their mother cares for them, and some benefactors provide financial aid for them as well. Is it permissible for their mother to take some of the aid they receive? It should be mentioned that their mother is a frail woman who has no money and has a healthy daughter who is fifteen, so can this daughter make use of this aid as well? The girls' grandfather has been granted legal guardianship over them and he asks that since these disabled girls are under his guardianship, can he take from the Sadaqah (voluntary charity) they receive, and are they given the ruling of those who are under age?

A: If these disabled girls do not have sufficient money to cover their needs, their guardian is permitted to accept Sadaqah that is sufficient to cover their needs and to provide for them. However, he is not permitted to take a cent from the money they receive, as that money is allotted for them. Also, their healthy daughter is not allowed to take from this money. If the State agencies that care for the disabled have assigned a sufficient sum of money to be regularly given out to these girls, their guardian is no longer permitted to accept charity for them as they are no longer in need of it.

Q: We are a group of employees living in one village where we carried out a charitable electric project. At that time we counted the employees living in the village and agreed that each employee would pay a month's salary.

We raised the money and signed a contract with a company to set up an electrical network and buy generators, and the State also contributed and provided some generators. Thus, our village has been supplied with electricity for a nominal charge to avoid the interruption of electrical power.

The purpose of this charitable electrical project was to have an electricity supply in our village where our families live. We did not intend to make profits from this project. So by Allah's Grace, then through the support of our prudent government, the public electrical services have reached our village and our charitable electrical project came to an end. We calculated the money left over from this project as well as the debts of our project, which was 16,000 riyals. We then gathered the people of the village who has been making use of the electricity supply and informed them that everyone who had unpaid bills for the electricity meters or electricity consumption, would have their debts settled. Some village residents are still indebted to the project.

After settling the debt we found that we have some 22,464 riyals as extra money.

Since the project is charitable, we cannot distribute this amount of money to those who donated their salaries or any other sum of money, as some donated thirty riyals. Yet, some employees who contributed to the project at that time are still alive and some have passed away. So to absolve ourselves as well as those who supervised this project whether alive or dead, we have the following question:

Is it permissible for us to give out this money as a donation to charities, to Chechnya, to the poor in our village, or any other deserving organizations or even individuals with the intention that the reward will go to everyone who contributed to this charitable electric project?

May Allah grant you all success, and may Allah's Peace, Mercy and Blessings be upon you!

A: If the case is as mentioned that the contributors to this electric project made those donations with the intention of doing good for the village residents and did not intend to gain profits, then the extra money from the project can be given for useful charitable purposes and every contributor to the project shall be rewarded accordingly In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q1: We wish to inform you that in Jeddah there are schools for memorizing the Qur'an and teaching the Sunnah. These schools are charitable and not profitable organizations and are under the administrative supervision of the organization founded by the mother of Prince Thamir ibn `Abdul-`Aziz

(Part No. 8; Page No. 302)

May Allah be Merciful to them all. The activities of these schools are monitored by Shaykh `Abdul-`Aziz ibn `Abdul-Khaliq ibn `Abdullah Al-Himdan, the General Supervisor, and under him is Shaykh Hussayn ibn Saqr. After Allah's grace, success and continuation of these schools depend on the contributions of the donors. Are the buildings granted to the school regarded as Sadaqah Jariyah (ongoing charity)?

A1: Yes, buildings granted to schools of Qur'an memorization or to be used as orphanages and the like are considered Sadaqah Jariyah.

Q 2: Is it a form of Sadaqah Jariyah (ongoing charity) to furnish a Qur'an teaching center with necessary tables, chairs, desks, a printer and other stationery requirements and providing the bus that transports the female Qur'an teachers and female students?

A: Whatever a Muslim donates to the benefit of other Muslims, whether the given charity is movable or stationery articles of enduring benefit, are all forms of Sadaqah Jariyah, for which great reward is expected from Allah (Glorified be He).

Q 1: Is it permissible to help a non-Muslim, such as a Christian, Hindu, Sikh, Buddhist, or a follower of any other disbelieving beliefs, who asks for financial help while he is sick, from: (a) Zakah (obligatory charity) (b) Sadaqah (voluntary charity) (c) Muslims' donations (d) Returns that are received by the Fund from the Kuwait Finance House (the Islamic Bank of Kuwait) after one year passes since charities and donations have been deposited? This is a general question.

Q 2: The Fund exchanges interests with some governmental and non-governmental bodies. For example, a non-Muslim patient, adopting one of the above-mentioned beliefs, must leave the country because he is afflicted with a contagious disease. Now, he is receiving medical care in a governmental hospital that is engaged with the Fund in a very fruitful and constructive cooperation. Is it permissible to help this patient from the forms of religious charities mentioned in the first question (i.e., a, b, c, d)?

Q 3: Is it permissible to give him a travel ticket that is usually given to the Fund for free and on a yearly basis from the Kuwait Airways?

A: It is permissible to give non-Muslims, such as Christians and Buddhists, who ask for aid from Sadaqahs and donations. However, it is not permissible to give them of Zakah. That is because it was authentically reported on the authority of Mu`adh (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «\(Zakah should\) be taken from the rich \(Muslims\) and distributed among the poor of them \(i.e. the Muslims\).»

Paying Zakah before the completion of Hawl

Fatwa no. 14411

Q 1: I own a sum of money and by next Dhul-Qa`dah, it will complete a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due).

- Is it permissible to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money during Ramadan?
- If this is permissible, should the beginning of the Hawl be counted starting from Ramadan?

A: It is permissible for you to pay Zakah before the completion of the Hawl to attain the religious benefit and merit of paying it during Ramadan.

B: If I gather a sum of money from the profits of this store, i.e., the rate of profits is five thousands per month, should I gather the profits until the end of Ramadan (the ninth month of the Islamic calendar) and pay the due Zakah on them or what should I do?

A 2 : As for commercial stores, an inventory should be made of all the commodities prepared for trade and the Zakah should be calculated on the value of these commodities according to the market price thereof upon the end of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). Q: We have established a holding cooperative association with which people deal on the basis of prompt and deferred deals. One of the customers died in a car accident and did not pay the debt he owed to the association. This person left no inheritance or heir. He was working in return for a monthly payment and has no right to pension or the like. Is it permissible for us to pay his debt from the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the association? It should be noted that the Zakah is paid to the Department of Zakah and Income Tax affiliated to the Ministry of Finance.

A: It is permissible for you to pay the debt due on the dead to the association from the Zakah. The payment of the Zakah due on the dead that left no inheritance to pay their debts is permissible according to the more correct of the two opinions maintained by scholars. That is due to the generality of evidence on the permissibility of giving the Zakah to Gharim (one who cannot repay their debts by themselves). This is the juristic preference of Shaykh-ul-Islam Ibn Taymiyyah (may Allah be merciful to him).

Q 2: When the time of the payment of Zakah (obligatory charity) is due on property and cattle like sheep, which is during the blessed month of Ramadan, some villagers from our village and the neighboring villages come asking for the Zakah because, according to their claim, they are poor. Thus, we set aside for them a share of the due Zakah and leave the rest to the governmental collectors of Zakah. Is it permissible to give those people of the money of Zakah?

A: It is permissible to give those who ask for Zakah from it, when they are not known to be rich. However, if the government imposes the payment of Zakah to the governmental authorities, it is a must to abide by their regulations in this regard. In this case, those who ask for Zakah may be given of other kinds of charities, such as Sadaqah (voluntary charity), because the one asking for favor has a religious right to be answered. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And in their properties there was the right of the Sâ'il \(the beggar who asks\) and the Mahrûm \(the poor who does not ask others\).﴾ And Allah knows best!

Q: A rich man did not pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on his property throughout his life until he died. His heirs want to inquire about the following:

- 1. Is this estate Halal (lawful) and permissible for them to take and utilize without fear of any harm?
- 2. Should they pay the Zakah of their father's property that he owed throughout his life, even if it consumes the whole estate?
- 3. Is paying the Zakah due on their father's property a way of extending dutifulness to parents?

A: If their father is a Muslim and they know for certain that he did not pay the Zakah of his property, they should pay it from his wealth for all the missed years, because it is considered a debt due on their father. Indeed, the debt due to Allah (Exalted be He) is worthiest to be repaid. However, if some of them are minors, the case should be referred to the court for proper judgment and taking the necessary measures.

Fatwa no. 15605

Q: You know (may Allah safeguard you) that the payment of the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on money such as gold and silver, as well as on commercial commodities and cattle, is conditional upon the passing of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), which is completely acceptable. However, confusion occurred with regard to the money added during the Hawl to the original property for which the Hawl is complete. Is Zakah due on the money added and does it take the same rule of the original capital? Please clarify this issue and cite the relevant textual evidence, (may Allah safeguard you). Indeed, we are confused about the statement of some of our scholars at the present time. They say that no Zakah is due on this added money, which is contrary to what we know from the books of Fiqh (Islamic Jurisprudence) that declare the obligation of Zakah on generated money. This also entails great hardship, as people will be obliged to pay Zakah throughout the whole year, as every part of the money will have a specific time for Hawl and Zakah; a person will pay the Zakah of the capital and then the Zakah of the added money and so on. The process of adding new capital may occur several times during the months and days of the Hawl. Furthermore, according to the accounts in the biography of the Prophet (peace be upon him), he only sent Zakah collectors once during the year, which only repeated on a yearly basis. First: If the case was as our scholars, who said that Zakah is not obligatory on the money added to the original assets, mentioned, it would have been obligatory on the Prophet (peace be upon him) to mention that, because people face this many times. It is well known that delaying the legal declaration beyond the time of need is impermissible. Second: It would also have been obligatory upon the Prophet (peace be upon him) to send Zakah collectors during the whole year on a monthly basis to collect Zakah from Muslims on the money whose Hawl was complete from the money added to the original assets. Please elaborate on this issue.

A: When a person has any kind of wealth on which Zakah is due and adds to it kinds of wealth for which Zakah is obligatory before the completion of the Hawl, then the question will be one of only two cases:

First case: The money added may be profit, thus, the Hawl of it will be the same as the original capital. Upon the passing of the entire Hawl of the capital, he must pay the Zakah due on the capital and the profit. The same is equally applied to animals born from the original cattle during the Hawl, so Zakah is due on both the original cattle and their offspring during the year.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 310)

Second case: When the added money is neither profit nor offspring of the original cattle but independent money, the sum of Zakah, which a person may save from his salary, will be due on every sum after the passing of a full Hawl from the time of saving this independent money on the condition that the money is a Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) or more. However, if it is difficult for a person to calculate an independent Hawl for each sum, he is permitted to pay the Zakah due on all his money at a specific time of the year. Thus, the Zakah on the money, whose Hawl is not yet complete, will be paid in advance. At the same time the following year, he should pay Zakah on all the property and so on.

Farwa no. 15611

Q: I own a farm that is located in a town other than that of my residence. Upon the season of harvesting wheat, I harvested the crop and sent it to the silos. I only reserved an amount of 400 bags of wheat. At other times, I reserved only 100 or 200 bags for future use as seeds for the coming year. This is the usual way I manage things.

My question: Is there Zakah (obligatory charity) on the amounts that I reserved for future use as seeds, which I did not send to the silos?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 311)

If Zakah is obligatory on them, is it permissible to pay the Zakah to people of the town of my residence or must it be paid to the people of the town where the farm is? Is it permissible to give the Zakah to my relatives as some of them are poor and some are helpless women?

A: First: If the case is as you mentioned, you should pay the Zakah due on the wheat which you reserved, as it is equal in the judgment of Zakah to that which you sent to the silos.

Second: It is permissible to move the Zakah from one town to another, when a legal interest is verified. Thus, if the distribution of Zakah to the legal recipients of the town of your residence achieves a preponderant legal interest that is legally greater than distributing it in the town where the farm is, it will be permissible to do that.

Third: It will be better to pay Zakah to poor and needy relatives other than ancestors (i.e. fathers, grandfathers, mothers, grandmothers, and so on,) and descendants (i.e. the children of a person and their offspring, however low), for it is Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and a form of maintaining the ties of kinship.

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 16045

Q 4: In which month should the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on money be paid? What are the legal channels to which the Zakah should be paid? What is the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) of commercial commodities? I read that the amount of Zakah due to be paid upon reaching Nisab is 1/4 of a dirham per 200 dirhams. However, we do not know this measure. How much it equals of our present currencies or of other foreign currencies?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 312)

A: As for the Zakah due on items of wealth, if it is grains and fruits, then Zakah is obligatory upon the time of harvest or reaping. If it is banknotes, commercial commodity, or cattle, then Zakah is due after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). Zakah should be paid to the legal recipients stated in the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) where Allah (Exalted be He) says: As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) However, it is permissible to give all the Zakah to only one category of those specified in the Ayah. The Nisab of money is 200 Dirhams (a dirham of silver equals 2.975 grams of silver) of the Islamic Dirhams, which are equal to 140 Mithqal (1 Mithqal = 4.25 grams) of silver. This is equal to 56 of the silver Saudi riyals or what equals them of today banknotes. The amount of Zakah due when the money reaches Nisab is only a quarter of the tenth (i.e. 2.5%), namely, two and half riyals per 100 riyals.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 313)

to those poor people or should we pay it to the official collectors of Zakah sent by the government (may Allah reward them with the best)?

Q 3: How should Zakah (obligatory charity) be calculated on salaries? It should be noted that the bank account of a person may reach SAR 50,000 and sometimes may be only SAR 1000. How should Zakah be calculated and paid?

A: People receiving salaries and others should pay the Zakah due on their money when the money reaches the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due). The amount of Zakah is 2.5% of the capital and the profits, as the ruling of the capital is equally applied to profits.

Q: Some people in villages think that it is not permissible to give the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on An`am (camels, cows, or sheep) except to the collectors of Zakah sent by the government. Although there are poor people who deserve Zakah in the places where they live, they refuse to give them from it. It is also worth mentioning that the government does not impose that Zakah should be given to it. Is what those people do correct? A: If the government does not demand that Zakah should be given to the collectors of Zakah, there is no problem if they distribute it among the poor of the village or the city where they live. However, if the government imposes that Zakah should be given to its collectors, they must do so in obedience to the ruler.

the Departments of Zakah. However, the Zakah paid on the agricultural production is given to this chieftain for his personal use. Is this act valid? Please, advise us about what we should do if the payment of Zakah is unacceptable in this case?

A: It is compulsory to pay Zakah to the legally specified recipients or to the authorized Zakah collectors sent by the government. If the chieftain of the tribe is authorized by the government, it is obligatory to deliver the Zakah to him; otherwise, it should be paid to the Zakah officers sent by the government. If the government does not send anyone to collect the Zakah, the person on whom Zakah is due must pay it to the legal recipients of the poor and the needy. The value of the sheep that is paid on a yearly basis differs from one year to another according to the high/low rate of prices, so this difference should be considered upon giving the value to clear one's self from this fundamental obligation, which is always joined with Salah (prayer), and should seriously be observed without the least neglect.

As the new tax overloaded the income of the Egyptian Muslim working outside his country, I would like you to clarify the ruling on deducting this tax from the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on his money?

A: It is impermissible to deduct the tax from the amount of Zakah, because the Zakah is a religious obligation, worship, and a pillar of Islam that must be delivered to certain legal recipients and it is necessary to abide by the recipients specified while the tax is a financial fine that does not include, in most cases, the amount of Zakah.

A: A: The charitable societies are regarded as agents acting on behalf of the payer of Zakah but they are not agents for those to whom the Zakah is given.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 318)

B. The charitable societies have no right to dispose of the Zakah; they must deliver it to the poor as received. However, with regard to the forms of voluntary charities, they may choose the most beneficial way for the poor when the grantor of charities entrusts them with this duty.

Q 2: So much Zakah (obligatory charity) is collected under our charge. However, for the sake of continuity of work, the delivery of some of the Zakah to the legal recipients may be delayed until the next year. Is this permissible or is it mandatory to deliver the Zakah of each year during the same year?

A 2: It is not permissible to delay the Zakah beyond the due time. Charitable societies should take of the amounts of Zakah what they can distribute at the due time without delay.

Q 3: Is the receipt of Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) by the charitable societies regarded as a legal and acceptable payment of it or is it necessary to deliver it directly to the needy before the due time of Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer)? What is the legal method to adopt when some recipients who were intended to be given of this Zakah are absent?

A 3: The receipt of Zakat-ul-Fitr by the charitable societies is not a legal delivery of this Zakah and it is a must to deliver it to the poor before going to the Salat-ul-`Eid. When the poor person intended is not present, he may entrust someone to receive it on his behalf or it may be given to another poor person of those who are present before the due time of Salat-ul-`Eid.

All praise is due to Allah Alone. May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon the Last of all Prophets! To proceed,

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' have reviewed the letter sent to H.E. the General Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) by H.E. the director of the cooperative office of Da`wah, guidance and foreign awareness in Al Majma`ah. The letter is referred to the committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. (2598) in 23/6/1415 A.H. The Question he presented is as follows:

As we receive sums of Zakah (obligatory charity) to deliver to the needy among Muslim laborers and those who have recently converted to Islam to make them assured of their religion, we notice that upon delivering the Zakah to these categories of people they buy some luxurious things, which may be forbidden. What is your opinion if we buy what they need of foodstuff and similar commodities and distribute it to them on an interim basis instead of paying them all of the Zakah in cash except when necessary? Please, provide us with your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) in this regard. May Allah reward you with the best!

After studying the question, the committee answered as follows:

It is compulsory upon whoever receives the Zakah from a person to distribute it on his behalf to give the same Zakah that he received to the legal channels specified as the recipients of Zakah. It is impermissible for him to delay it or to buy commodities with the money of Zakah and distribute them.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 320)

Fatwa no. 17286

Q: I have received a sum of 800 riyals from some brothers, who informed me that this sum is the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on his camels for the last year 1414 A.H. He told me that the Zakah due on his camel is a one-year-old she-camel. The officers of Zakah asked for the value of this camel, which is the sum mentioned above, i.e., 800 riyals, but he was not able to pay it and he offered to give them sheep instead of the value but they refused and argued that it is not permissible to take sheep instead of the Zakah of camels. The Zakah officers then left and did not levy the sum. After he had the sum, he sent it to me in order to undertake the duty of distributing it. However, I wanted to keep it until I receive your answer concerning the proper way of distributing it. Should it be distributed to the legal channels specified to Zakah? Please, elaborate, in detail, on the case in question.

A: You should pay this Zakah to the poor on behalf of its original payer, intending that it is the due Zakah.

Second question of fatwa no. 17650

Q 2: When I come back to visit my home during the annual leave, I buy some clothes and distribute them as gifts to my family, brothers, relatives, neighbors, and friends. They are all civil servants and get their salaries from the government. Some of them are average people and others are lower than that. I deduct these gifts from the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on my wealth and then add the remaining portion in cash and distribute it to the needy including some of them and others of my town. Is this behavior legally valid or not? Please, advise me in this regard!

A 2: It is permissible to deliver Zakah to civil servants, if his income does not meet his needs. He should be given what is sufficient to meet his requirements in full. It is also permissible to buy some things that he needs and deliver them to him when this is better than giving him money. This is provided that he is one of those who are permitted to receive the obligatory Zakah. However, if the one who receives the Zakah is one of your ancestors (e.g. father, mother, grandfathers, grandmothers, etc. however high), or of your progeny (i.e. children, grandchildren, etc. however low), or your wife and those under your charge, it will be impermissible to pay the Zakah due on your money to them, because it is compulsory upon you to undertake the responsibility of providing for them.

Second question of fatwa no. 17660

Q 2: Is it permissible for a person to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) before the passing of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)? In other words, before `Eid-ul-Adha (the Festival of the Sacrifice), my mother gave a sum of money to one of her relatives in order to enable him to buy Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims). She said to me that she intended to make it of the Zakah due on her upon the passing of the Hawl, which is the Day of `Ashura' (10th of Muharram). Thus, at this time she would deduct this sum that she paid to her relative from the total sum of Zakah. What is the religious ruling in this case?

A: It is permissible to pay the Zakah in advance before the passing of the Hawl. What your mother did is acceptable provided that she intended the sum paid to be of her Zakah.

Q: My mother is in her old age and she does not know any of the worldly affairs and does not even recognize anyone. I am her son and legal agent and the custodian over her and over my brothers according to the will of my father (may Allah be merciful with him). I keep a sum of money for her. Is there any Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this sum? If it is due on it, then upon the payment of the Zakah:

1. Should I pay the Zakah in cash?
2. Is it permissible to buy some textiles and deliver them instead of Zakah?
3. Is it permissible to pay some of the Zakah to the children of her daughters? It should be noted that all of them are civil servants.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 323)

4. Is it permissible to give her daughters from the Zakah? Note that each of them has a building.

Please, advise me regarding the mentioned points and guide me to the right way.

A: You should pay the Zakah due on the money of your mother under your custody and should pay the Zakah in cash. You are permitted to buy clothes with it and distribute them to the poor when it is better for them. And it is impermissible to give Zakah to her children or her grandchildren, because the Zakah of the ancestor is not permitted to be given to his/her descendants and vice versa [i.e. the Zakah of the descendant is not permitted to be given to his/her ancestors].

Q: Some Bedouins, upon missing the officers of the Zakah (obligatory charity) sent by the government, dispose of the Zakah due on the cattle and some others claim that they undertake the duty of paying the Zakah to the poor and the needy by their locations and their likes.

Is it better and legally preferred to pay the Zakah to the officers that the government entrusts with collecting it or to pay it directly to the recipients? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) to pay the Zakah to the officers sent by the government and a person, on whom the Zakah is obligatory, should be careful to give the Zakah to them at the due time when they receive it. However, if they do not come to take the Zakah, the owner of the wealth should pay the Zakah due on him to the poor after losing all hope that the Zakah officers will come. A Muslim should abide by Taqwa (fearing Allah as He should be feared) of Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) and should pay the Zakah to the legal recipients.

First question of fatwa no. 17943

Q 1: What is the legal evidence in support of the ruling that money should be added to the gold for the payment of Zakah when the gold does not reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) separately and the same goes for money, i.e., gold should be added to money when money does not independently reach the Nisab?

A: All forms of money including silver, banknotes, value of commercial commodities should be added to the gold in order to complete the Nisab, because the total of the gold and money completes the Nisab and makes the payment of Zakah obligatory. That is because the obligatory Zakah on the commercial commodity is paid on the value, which is calculated in terms of gold or silver.

Q: I would like to inform Your Eminence that I inherited a sum of 60,000 riyals from my father 15 years ago. This sum remained in my possession for 12 years when I took 30,000 riyals and kept the remaining 30,000 until now. As I did not pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this sum since I possessed it and up to now, please advise me about the amount of Zakah I have to pay on this money.

A: A Muslim must pay the Zakah due on his wealth immediately after the passing of a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) while the money is in his possession. If he delays the payment of Zakah without a legal excuse, he will be considered sinful and must pay all the due Zakah at once even if he missed several years.

Thus, you must pay the Zakah due on the mentioned sum for all the past years beginning from the end of the first Hawl after this sum came into your possession and the payment should be at once. You should also endeavor to make sincere Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for the sin of delaying the payment of Zakah. There is no Zakah on the 30,000 riyals that you took 3 years ago, after they were no longer in your possession but you should pay the Zakah due on them during the past years i.e. 13 years.

Fatwa no. 18292

Q: During previous years, Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the financial activity of of Panda Company was paid as follows: Zakah was calculated on the capital in addition to the annual profit.

Questioning some seekers of knowledge about this issue, they gave us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) that this is an invalid behavior and Zakah should be paid on all the existent commodities upon annual stocktaking without deducting the debts due to the suppliers or spoilt goods. It should be noted that we purchase goods on credit and at the time of stocktaking, some debts are due to the suppliers. For example, this is the statement of one previous year:

Total goods upon stocktaking = 3.313.509 Riyals.

Debtors (suppliers) = 2.712.864 Riyals.

Please, clarify the issue for us. May Allah reward you with the best! Thank you very much and kindly accept our due respect!

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) to pay the Zakah due on all the articles in the commercial store including all the commodities that have remained for a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) or on their value upon purchase that remained for a Hawl. Similarly, it is Wajib to pay the Zakah due on the money after the passing of a Hawl from the time of owning it whether it is in the hands of its owners or debts due to them if the debtors are solvent and are not procrastinators. The debts due on the owner of the store are not regarded and the debts should not be deducted from the money on which the Zakah is due when it is owned by the owner of the store, after the passing of the Hawl, according to the more correct of the two scholarly opinions.

Should I pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money on her behalf or leave the matter totally to her, whether she pays it or not? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

A 1: It is impermissible for you to pay the Zakah due on her money, which is deposited with you, except after informing her and after she deputizes you to pay it because she may pay the Zakah while you are not aware. It is better to talk to her about the issue out of keenness to fulfill this Rukn (integral pillar) and cooperate in righteousness and Taqwa (fear/wary of offending Allah).

Who should pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on this money: the original owner or I? Please, advise. May Allah reward you with the best!

(Part No. 8; Page No. 328)

A 2: It is Wajib (obligatory) on the owner of the money to pay the Zakah due on it if it has reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and a full Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed. You are not required to pay anything, as the money described is a deposit with you. If the owner asks you to act on his behalf in the payment of Zakah, then you should pay the due Zakah on his behalf. Q: My brother and I are partners in car sales on installment. Our Zakah (obligatory charity) becomes due on us by the end of Jumada Al-Awwal (May 30th) each year. All praise is due to Allah.

For example, by the end of Rabi` Al-Thany or in the middle of Rabi` Al-Awwal or other months, I may sell a car on installment; should I include it in the Zakah? First question of fatwa no. bn 18147

Q1: It is customary in some areas of Bihar in India for people to collect the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on money, Sadaqah (voluntary charity), Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast), and the hide of Ud-hiyahs (sacrificial animals offered by non-pilgrims) in one place to be mixed together and then sold. After that, a certain sum is given to some Islamic schools in the country and the rest of the amount is given to other primary, preparatory, and secondary schools where the children of those who pay Zakah and Sadaqah study. It should be noted that these schools and colleges do not provide students with meals but the Zakah pays the salaries of teachers and purchases land among other such things.

1- Is it permissible to pay Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) to the above mentioned committee taking into consideration that they are not paid to the poor and Miskins (the needy) at the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) due time?

2. Is it permissible to pay Zakah and Sadaqah to schools and institutes in which the children of those who pay Zakah study because the giver of Sadaqah in this case is actually benefitting from his paid Sadaqah?

A1: The Zakah due on money and Zakat-ul-Fitr must be paid to the poor and the needy and to the other legal recipients specified by Allah (Exalted be He). It is impermissible to pay this money to charitable projects such as schools and Masjids (mosques). This is especially true with regard to Zakat-ul-Fitr that must be paid to the poor of the town where the payer resides during the period from sunset of the night preceding `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) until the payer goes out for Salat-ul-`Eid (the Festival Prayer). It is also permissible to pay it one or two days in advance. However, it is impermissible to delay the payment of Zakah beyond this time. The matter is flexible for other kinds of Sadaqah, and they may be given to the poor or to charitable projects such as schools, Masjids and charitable associations. However, if the giver specifies a certain channel for spending, it must be given to it.

First question of fatwa no. 18829

Q1: My grandmother is more than eighty years old. As she is no longer able to manage her worldly or religious affairs properly, my father, in agreement with other uncles, decided to open her safe where she saves her money and the like to ascertain how much money she has and pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on it from that which has reached the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due), which was not paid for years. They found more than 20.000 Riyals. However, the problem that faces them is: how should they pay the Zakah due on this money, especially after the passage of several years during which the due Zakah was not paid. Please advise them how to pay the Zakah due on this money in the proper way.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 332)

A1: It is Wajib (obligatory) to refer the issue to the court so that the court would appoint one of your grandmother's sons as her deputy. After that he should pay the Zakah due for every year after the completion of the year. He should try his best to count how many years have passed and work according to what he thinks is most likely correct after consulting other brothers. He should pay the Zakah due on the years that they believe she did not pay the Zakah for them.

Second question of fatwa no. 19128

Q2: If I pay the due amount of Zakah (obligatory charity) and later I notice that the sum that I paid is more than the obligatory amount that I should have paid, is it permissible for me to deduct the extra amount from the due amount of Zakah that I should pay next year? For example, if I have to pay 100 Riyals as the Zakah of the present year but I paid 200 Riyals and after calculating the due Zakah I found out that I had paid 200 instead of 100; is it permissible to deduct the extra amount of 100 Riyals from the Zakah due on me the following year?

A2: If you paid the Zakah due on your money for the past year and later you found out that the Zakah that you paid is more than the required amount, it is unacceptable for you to deduct the extra amount from the Zakah of the following year, because it is necessary to have the intention prior to paying Zakah. However, you did not intend to pay this extra amount for the Zakah of the following year, so it is impermissible and you have to pay the Zakah due on your money for the next year regardless of this extra amount of money.

Fatwa no. 19692

Q: Is it permissible to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on commercial commodities from the same commercial commodity? For example, the owner of a house ware store may pay the Zakah out of the house ware instead of estimating their value and paying the Zakah in cash. What is the due Zakah on commercial commodities and how should this be calculated? May Allah grant us all success to do what pleases Him. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you.)

A: The principle with regard to commercial commodities prepared for if they reach the Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) independently or after adding other money owned by the same owner is that they must be evaluated after the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) and then Zakah of 2.5% of their value at the time of estimation should be paid in cash. However, if it not possible to pay the value in cash or if it is necessary to pay the Zakah of the commercial commodity such as for the benefit of the poor and the needy, it is permissible to pay it from the commercial commodity but the rich should be careful to pay the due amount of Zakah from these commercial commodities.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 334)

There is nothing wrong with this and in support of this ruling, Al-Bukhari related in his Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book) (chapter: The payment of commodities as Zakah, vol 2.,p.122) from Tawus in the form of Hadith Mawquf (words or deeds narrated from a Companion of the Prophet that are not attributed to the Prophet) that Mu`adh (may Allah be pleased with him) said to the people of Yemen: "Bring me small or second-hand garments for Zakah instead of barley and millet. It will be easier for you and better for the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) in Madinah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said to women: Give Sadaqah \(voluntary charity\) even if it is out of your jewelry.) He did not exclude the obligatory Zakah from voluntary charity in this general command. Then, women began to give their earrings and necklaces. The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not confine this permissibility to goods made of only gold and silver.

Q: We would like to bring to your attention that the non-profit organization in Ha'il has purchased many vacant lots of land after getting approval from the relevant authority, the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs. These lots have been purchased for the purpose of investment and profit, and one of these lots has already been sold with a profit amounting to 330%.

The question: Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the value of these lots? It should be mentioned that the par value of these lots has been collected from the donors' contributions, not from the money due on their wealth as Zakah. Moreover, the profits are used for the benefit of the organization in several fields of activity including the administrative expenditures, social care projects, investment projects such as purchasing land with prospective profits and building schools with both educational and investment objectives. A portion of this money is further allocated to support the categories deserving Zakah, i.e. the poor and the needy. So if Zakah is due on these lots of land, to whom should it be given; to the Zakah trust owned by the organization or to other outlets? We hope to benefit from your answer, and may Allah bless you!

A: Zakah is not due on the money received from philanthropists for charitable activities, as it is not owned by a particular individual. However, money which is raised from the Zakah must be promptly given out to its legal recipients. Delaying it and keeping it in possession and even investing it is unlawful.

Q: I would like to ask about the following: The time when Zakah (obligatory charity) is due on the money I have comes while I am here (in Saudi Arabia), which is four months before the time I go back to my homeland (Egypt), and no one there in Egypt can carry out this mission on my behalf. It is worth to mention that the money on which Zakah is due is there in Egypt. There is a benefit in paying the Zakah myself, as I give it out to some of my relatives as a means of maintaining ties of kinship with my late father's (may Allah be merciful to him) relatives. My question is: Can I delay giving out the due Zakah for four months until I am back home to do so myself?

A: It is not permissible to delay giving out Zakah once a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed on your money which amounts to Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) except for a legal excuse, such as difficulty to find the poor at the time when Zakah is due, or the inability to give it out to them, or unavailability of the money and the like. So you can deputize a trustworthy person to give it out - to its legal recipients whom you name when it is due. You still can give Zakah due on you before a Hawl is passed on the money you have if there is an interest in doing so.

Q: A civil servant depends on his monthly salary to meet the needs of his living expenses as well as other necessary expenses, such as the costs of his marriage, preparing, furnishing, and paying the rent of an apartment for residence and so on. He deposits what remains of his salary in one banking company and by the end of the year, he pays the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on the total sum he saved. He had been doing this for a long period of time: about 12 years. He is a religiously committed person and observes the Five Obligatory Daily Prayers and believes that Zakah is a Rukn (integral pillar) of Islam but he did not pay the Zakah due on him for some years. It is not out of his denial of its obligation but out of laziness. He sometimes pays only a portion of the due Zakah and keeps the rest until he has forgotten the number of years during which he did not pay the due Zakah and the sums of money that he used to own during these years.

After his Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for having delayed the payment of Zakah, he regrets the years when he was lazy and did not pay it. Does his Tawbah exempt him from paying the Zakah for the past years on the grounds that Tawbah deletes the past sins? If not, how should he calculate the Zakah after he forgot the exact number of years and the sums of money that were with him during each of these past years? May Allah reward you with the best in this life and in the hereafter.

A: He should pay the Zakah due on the years that he did not pay totally or partially. If he does not know the amount of the due Zakah for these years or the sums of money, he should be careful to free himself from blame but he is not exempted from paying the Zakah just because its due time has passed because it is an obligation that Allah (Exalted be He) ordains to be given to specific legal recipients. Therefore, he is free from this obligation until the Zakah is paid. He should offer sincere Tawbah from his total or partial abandonment of paying Zakah due on his money and be resolute repeat this. He should also do more supererogatory acts of `Ibadah (worship) and pay more Sadaqah (voluntary charity). May Allah accept his repentance and replace his sins with good deeds.

First question of fatwa no. 19947

Q 1: Is it permissible to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on money from the monthly salary without taking from the sum on which the Zakah is due after the passage of the Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due)? What is the amount of Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due)?

A 1: If the money reaches the Nisab and a full Hawl passes, then the Zakah becomes due. The due Zakah is 2.5%. One may pay it from the money on which the Zakah is due after the passage of the Hawl, from monthly salary, or from other money in their possession regarding which a Hawl has not passed yet. Whenever one pays the Zakah on their money, they are free from blame even if they do not pay it from the money on which the Zakah is due.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 339)

A: Your payment of the Zakah due on the wealth of your partner without his permission does not free him from the obligation and he should pay the due Zakah or deputize you to pay it. You should pay him back what you have spent of his money as Zakah without his permission, unless he consents your act and takes nothing from you.

First question of fatwa no. 20050

Q 1: My father and my late uncle possessed some pieces of land. Before my uncle's death, they saw it better to divide these lands into small plots and sell them individually. So, they began this project and they worked on selling these plots for some years. After dividing the lands, some plots used to remain for one, two or more years while displayed for sale and still unsold. They did not pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on these plots of land, which were still offered for sale after the passing of a year, two or more, after the passing of a Hawl or upon selling them. They did so due to their ignorance of how to calculate the percentage of Zakah due on the articles of merchandise. Now, what is obligatory on my father, who is still alive? And what is obligatory on the sons of my late uncle (may Allah have mercy upon him)? After disengagement of my father and my uncle in their partnership and after their selling of most of these plots of land except a few plots, now they do not remember the price of the lands sold or how many years have passed since then. Please, advise us on this matter. May Allah reward you with the best.

A 1: It is obligatory to pay the due Zakah for the past years. You should carefully calculate the years and pay the Zakah due on the land as precise as you can in order to clear your father and your dead uncle from sin. May Allah grant us all forgiveness and safety in this life and in the Hereafter.

Q: I am a farmer and I have good harvest that fluctuates between sixty to one hundred sacks of corn. Each bag equals 20 Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg). I am accustomed to the payment of Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the crops at the time of their harvest. However, suddenly a committee came and urged me to pay the Zakah due for the past five years, so I paid the Zakah again in goo heart. However, I wish to pay the Zakah upon the harvest of the crops lest I should die while the Zakah is still due. Grains are liable to decay after six months from the harvest, especially when exposed to rain. It should be noted that the authoritative committee entrusted with preparing inventories of the Zakah come so late after the due time and it may happen that they come to us after five years from the harvest. Please, give us your fatwa on this matter. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is obligatory upon you to pay the Zakah to the committee that the Muslim ruler entrusted with its collection. However, when the committee delays the reception of the Zakah and you fear lest the grains may decay or defected, you should contact the judge in your locality and he should decide on the best course of action, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

Q: The Directorate General of Zakah and Income Tax calculates the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on me randomly, while my son has another source of income. Their calculation of my assets liable for Zakah is less than the real wealth in my possession. Therefore, I then pay another share of Zakah besides what they take. Should I count the Zakah sums which the Directorate General of Zakah and Income Tax takes among my general Zakah or not?

A: The Zakah paid to the Directorate General of Zakah that is entrusted by the ruler with its collection is legally acceptable and sufficient. The payer of Zakah does not have to pay the Zakah again once his Zakah has been paid in full. Otherwise, he should pay any remaining sums of Zakah to the legal beneficiaries, if the full Zakah funds were not paid and he is not free from blame unless he does so.

Q: I want to pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on my possessions. I heard about the charitable project for helping impoverished Muslim youth with marriage costs. The project helps the needy youth and supports them to get married through unreturned grants or loans that are paid in monthly installments. Is it permissible to pay the Zakah and other voluntary charities to this project, if the case is as mentioned?

A: It is compulsory to pay the Zakah to the legal beneficiaries immediately at the time when the Zakah becomes due. It is not permissible to delay the payment unless with a legal excuse. The payment of Zakah to the charitable institutions may delay its payment to the legal beneficiaries beyond the due time. Some institutions may spend the Zakah funds in channels that are not legally assigned to Zakah. So, it is obligatory on the payers of Zakah to give it directly by himself or through his trustworthy deputy to the legal recipients.

The first, second, and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 21173

Q 1: I calculate all my possessions, money and others, every year in the middle of each Ramadan to pay the annual Zakah (obligatory charity) - bearing in mind that some of my income is from the rental of houses and some other sources. This income is collected in different periods of the year until Ramadan and the last days of Shaban. Therefore, a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) does not pass on most of the sources of my income. However, I pay the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on them with exception of a small amount.

A 1: In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), what you are doing is permissible and discharges your obligation.

Q 2: I pay some of Zakah (obligatory charity) funds due on me throughout the year. Whenever I see needy people who are rightful beneficiaries of Zakah, I give out to them some of my Zakah. For instance, I approximately pay 30,000 riyals every year, and I give as Zakah about 15,000 to 20,000 riyals throughout the year until the time of calculating the total sums of Zakah. When I calculate the total money, should I include the already spent money and pay out its Zakah, or should I consider that its due Zakah was already paid?

A 2: If you pay Zakah before the completion of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) for a particular need, you should add what you spent to the total balance upon the completion of the Hawl and then estimate Zakah of the entire sum.

Q 4: I invested 240,000 riyals with As-Sani` to be invested on 12 refrigerators. Each refrigerator costs 20,000 riyals. After a week of paying the money at the office in Riyadh, they declared bankruptcy. This was in 1414 A.H. and I have not heard anything from them for six years now. Also, I entered in a partnership for selling land in 1414 A.H. with a real estate office in Riyadh. I paid 30,000 riyals, but I did not benefit from this investment for six years as the funds have been frozen. I do not know whether they will be returned to me or not. So, how should I pay Zakah (obligatory charity) on these sums of money? Should I pay Zakah after receiving them and the passage of a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due), or for the past years of the entire period?

A 4: If the case is as you have mentioned, it is not Wajib on you to pay Zakah of these investments until they are in your possession and a Hawl passes. This is because the first sum of money is owed to you by someone who is bankrupt, and you do not know whether the second sum of money will be returned to you or not.

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings of Allah be upon the Last of the Prophets, Muhammad.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the submitted question to His Eminence the General Mufti (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions), by His Excellency, Dr. `Abdul-Rahman ibn `Abdul-`Aziz Al-Suwailem the Head of Saudi Red Crescent Society and the Chairman of the Joint Saudi Committee for Relief in Kosovo under no. (R 306) dated on 15 Rabi` Al-Awwal, 1420 A.H. The question was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 1943 dated on 15 Rabi` Al-Awwal, 1420 A.H. His Eminence's letter states:

(Part No. 8; Page No. 345)

His Eminence Shaykh, Abdul-Aziz Bin Abdullah Al Al-Shaykh the General Mufti and the Head of Council of Senior Scholars, As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!) I pray for Your Eminence success and guidance. On the basis of care and interest in Muslims' affairs by our rightly-guided government, the Noble Royal Decree no. (gh b 1863) dated 3 Safar, 1420 A.H. was issued. It stated the formation of a joint committee for relief in Kosovo. One of the tasks of this committee is fundraising and collection of donations in goods and cash. Some of these donations are either Zakah (obligatory charity) or Sadaqah (voluntary charity). As you know (may Allah keep you safe), administering these projects entail allocating a portion of these donations for administrative costs such as employees salaries, renting and furnishing buildings, media work for public awareness, communications, transportation, etc. Hence, I ask Your Eminence's view on this matter and the appropriate Shar'i percentage that can be deducted from the total of donations to cover these costs.

May Allah keep you safe! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh

After scrutinizing the question, the Committee answered that Zakah funds which are paid to the committee for the sake of the relief of people in Kosovo must be spent in the Shar`i channels mentioned in the Noble Qur'an. Allah (Most Exalted be He) says: \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât\) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\) and those employed to collect \(the funds\), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined \(towards Islâm\), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause \(i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle\), and for the wayfarer \(a traveller who is cut off from everything\); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.\)

(Part No. 8; Page No. 346)

Hence, it is not permissible to spend them in purposes other than those specified by Allah. This is because discharging the responsibility can only be fulfilled by carrying out the obligations in the manner that Allah has specified. What you mentioned is not included in the legal channels of distributing Zakah. Similarly, Sadaqah and donations which were paid for a specific project should be spent on what it is dedicated for and not for other purposes.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 21236

Q 3: Is it permissible to transfer Zakah (obligatory charity) from one country to another? Is it permissible to transfer it from one district to another within the same country?

A 3: It is prescribed to distribute Zakah of each country among its poor. The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said to Mu`adh: [\(Let them \[the people he was appointed to collect their Zakah\] know that Allah has obliged them with paying Zakah \(obligatory charity\) to be taken from the rich and distributed among the poor.\)](#) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) If there is a necessity behind transferring Zakah to another country such as a dire need, such as of poor relatives living there, etc., it is permissible to do so.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 347)

Yet, moving Zakah from a district to another within the same country is permissible because the same ruling applies to the entire country.

Fatwa no. 21467

Q: My brother's son was orphaned some years ago, and has not yet reached full legal age. There was a pension left for him because his father was an employee. My father used to avail himself of this pension and record it as a debt on him to be paid to the child when he comes of age. We also have taken upon ourselves to pay this spent money. However, more than two years ago, I forbade my father from making use of this pension, and rather to deposit it in the bank under a private account for the boy to get it when he comes of age. My question is:

First: Is Zakah (obligatory charity) due on the deposited money in the bank? If yes, how should it be calculated? It should be known that it is a monthly pension.

Second: Regarding the money that was spent by my father which both he and we pledged to pay if he cannot do so, is there Zakah due on it, if we pay it on behalf of our father and then collect it from him? It should be taken into consideration that my father's income is low and his family is big.

Third: If there is Zakah due on both sums of money, how should I pay it while I am not sure about the date in which this sum of money was deposited in the bank under a private account? Please advise on this matter. May Allah keep you safe. May Allah have mercy on your parents!

A: It is obligatory upon the Wali (guardian) of the orphan to pay Zakah on the money when it reaches Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) or more, and a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) passes while it is in his possession. The amount of 2.5% should be paid whether the money is deposited in a bank or in the possession of your father. It should be known that it is not permissible for your father to avail himself anything of this money because it is a trust with him that he must keep. Hence, it is obligatory upon your father to repay the sum of money which he owes to the orphan grandchild and keep it until the child reaches the age of consent and then he must give him the money.

If the money is deposited on a monthly basis, it is safer and easier to specify a month of the year to annually pay Zakah on all the child's money.

Fatwa no. 21499

Q: I am a business man who has been in this profession for many years. I used to deposit my Zakah (obligatory charity) fund and other voluntary charity in a special bank account. I would add to it the money of my friends' Zakah and voluntary charity.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 349)

I would then give this money to the needy in the form of a loan. I submit a lawsuit against anyone who does not repay the debt. The person is interrogated by the police, and may be detained for this reason. Actually, when these people received such money, they were already among the legal Zakah beneficiaries. My question is: Is it permissible for me to do so? It should be into account that my intention is to re-channel this money to other needy people for the same purpose, and thus more beneficiaries can be aided. Also, there are others indebted by great sums of money to the same account. What should I do in this case? Please advise me on this matter. Many thanks!

A: It is not permissible for you to hold your Zakah or the Zakah which others authorized you to pay on their behalf after the due time of Zakah. Zakah is due once a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) has passed over the money. You must pay it out immediately. Also, it is not permissible for you to indulge in any form of trade with the funds of Zakah, whether it is yours or others'. Rather, you must pay it on the spot to the poor once Zakah is due. So, you must immediately give out from your wealth to the poor the amount of money equal to that which people owe. Then the debt, which people were asked to repay, is yours.

Q: My father died a month ago and left about

(Part No. 8; Page No. 350)

180,000 riyals. Our mother informed us that for five years our father had saved this sum of money in a box without paying its due Zakah (obligatory charity). We roughly estimated the period over which this money was accumulated by the time of our younger brother's marriage, which took place in 1416 A.H. My father had spent all his savings on that marriage and since then he started to save his future earnings in a box. My question is:

First: How should we calculate the due Zakah of these five years without knowing the real figure of his savings in each year?

Second: How can our father's failed obligation to the payment of Zakah prior to these five years be discharged? He did not use to pay Zakah. Rather, he used to consider the unpaid debts by people as Zakah.

I hope Your Eminence could answer these two questions.

A: If it is certain that your father did not pay his due Zakah of the above mentioned sum of money, it becomes obligatory upon you to calculate his due Zakah for all the past years and pay it immediately in order to discharge him of his failed obligation. You should pay 2.5% of money which remains after paying Zakah of each previous year. Zakah is a debt to be paid to Allah. Neither his nor your obligation can be discharged except by paying Zakah to its deserving beneficiaries.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 21717

Q 3: I gave a friend a sum of money to invest it in trade. At the end of the first year, he calculated my due profits and told me that he had already paid the due Zakah (obligatory charity) on my earnings. Is it permissible for him to pay the due Zakah of my money which he invests on my behalf? It should be known that he is a trustworthy person to me, and he knows well the legal laws of Allah.

A 3: Zakah is `Ibadah (worship) for Allah (Most Exalted be He). Intention is a condition for its validity. Therefore, the payer of Zakah should have the intention to give it at the time of its payment. However, if you had authorized this man to pay the due Zakah of your money and consequently he gave it to its deserving beneficiaries, then it is permissible to do so. Hence, your obligation will be discharged. However, if you did not authorize him, your obligation is not discharged and you must pay the due Zakah regardless of the money paid by your friend. In this case, your friend should guarantee the money which he has paid without your permission.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Rightful Beneficiaries of Zakah

The second question of Fatwa no. 21365

Q 2: We give the due Zakah (obligatory charity) of dates to the chief of our tribe. He sells the Zakah and consumes its prices, and he feeds some of it to the sheep. Should we continue giving him our Zakah, or to whom should we give it? Please advise us on this matter. May Allah reward you with the best!

A 2: It is prescribed for you to calculate your Zakah and distribute it by yourselves among the legal beneficiaries, because it is a form of `Ibadah (worship). This is more cautious in order to discharge your obligation concerning it. However, it is permissible to give the sum of Zakah to a person who is trustworthy, with regard to his faith and honesty, to distribute it among the deserving recipients on your behalf. If the authorized person is not trustworthy, it is not permissible to give it to him. Hence, your practice of giving your Zakah to the chief of the tribe is impermissible.

The sixth question of fatwa no. 21545

Q 6: A Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) said that he missed the government employees for collecting Zakah (obligatory charity) last year. So, he paid out, one sheep for example, to a charitable organization which asked him to slaughter it and bring it to them so as to distribute it among the needy. He inquires whether what he did was right and sufficient, taking into account that charitable organizations take the Zakah and give it to the poor? Or, should he give the Zakah again to the government employers, and in doing so, what he paid to the organization becomes an act of Sadaqah (voluntary charity) which does not account for Zakah?

A 6: A herdsman has to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) to the employees appointed by the ruler and it is impermissible to pay it to other than them. If the time of their coming elapsed and it was difficult to give the Zakah to them, it is allowable to pay it to those who deserve it.

Fatwa no. 21544

All praise is due to Allah and peace and blessings be upon His Messenger.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' have read the letter delivered to the general Mufti from His Eminence, the acting Minister of Finance and National Economy no. 9/2/6315 which is referred to the committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 3131, dated 27/5/1421 A.H, and the question of his Excellency is:

As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!) In supplementing our letter no. 9/2/1984, dated 13/2/1421 A.H, which included an inquiry about the ruling on the permissibility of the chieftains and their deputies in the Southern Province and part of the Western Province, taking a tenth of the Zakah (obligatory charity). It was noted in our letter that the viewpoint of the ministry is that those chieftains and their deputies are not regarded as Zakah collectors. The ministry receives reports from the municipal and financial bodies of `Asir which included a request from a number of chieftains and their deputies to take the due tenths as they could not take them from the government Zakah collectors. However, no statement has been received until this date.

I hope you will inform us about the ruling on the permissibility of giving them a tenth (of Zakah) in order to take the required action. May Allah protect you.

After the Ifta' Committee studied the inquiry, it answered that as long as the chieftains and their deputies do not perform any work in collecting Zakah, they do not deserve anything from it. In the past they would take these tenths because of their work in collecting Zakah, but now the situation has changed.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

Fatwa no. 21420

Q: I am one of the chieftains of Shimal at `Asir district where there are many subordinate chieftains and deputies who directly follow us. You are rightfully aware that Zakah (obligatory charity) is one of the five pillars of Islam. When the government determines the time of collecting it, the chieftain would send a delegate on his behalf to take a tenth of Zakah from subordinate tribes. Officially, 20% of the Zakah is given to the chieftain and 10% is given to his deputy. We noticed that this only takes place in the Southern Province. We are greatly concerned and fearful of Allah (Exalted be He) for this share which we take for free and without any effort, while the government offers sufficient dues for the chieftains. Therefore, I doubt the permissibility of taking these portions and I resorted to you to illustrate the matter, because I am greatly concerned about it.

After referring an inquiry to His Excellency, Minister of Finance, concerning the opinion of the Ministry in this regard, His Eminence stated the following:

We refer to you letter no. 46 s 2, dated 1/12/1420 A.H, which states that you receive questions from some of the chieftains of `Asir district about the ruling on sending a delegate on behalf of one of them to collect the Zakah (obligatory charity) of his subordinate tribes. The delegated person takes a tenth of the Zakah, the chieftain takes a fifth and his deputy takes a tenth. This is defined by the government for them when they collect Zakah, and you want to know about the permissibility of that.

I would like to state that, since the time of King `Abdul-`Aziz (may Allah confer mercy upon him), the government has been sending civil servants to collect Zakah of livestock from all parts of the kingdom with the aim of making it easy for Muslims to give Zakah of their cattle. The Southern Province and part of the Western Province are very rugged and are not properly trodden. So it is difficult for our workers to reach all the areas there. Thus, the government used to give a tenth of the Zakah to the chieftains and their deputies who would collect the Zakah of their people and submit it to the representative of the government. It continued to pay out these tenths according to the noble order no. 7 B 5650 dated 14/4/1408 AH. However, after the development of means of transportation, roads and services, civil servants are now able to reach these areas and districts, count the number of Zakah payers and collect it directly from them. Also, they would get the name of the chieftain or his deputy and record it in the Zakah document. Then, after finishing their work, the chieftains or their deputies would come to take the tenth of the Zakah, though they did nothing in collecting it from those who paid it, contrary to what they used to do in the past. A chieftain would take a tenth if he did not have a deputy. If there is a deputy, he would take a quarter of the tenth, the deputy would take half of the tenth and the chieftain of Shimal would take the remaining quarter of the tenth. The instructions given to government officials provided for giving out these shares, because the government gave no orders about that but only instructed them to give a tenth to the chieftains and their deputies. This is all that the Ministry has in this regard.

The Ministry of Finance believes that those chieftains and their deputies are not included in the category of Zakah collectors. However, the legal opinion on the permissibility of taking this tenth by them is determined by the bodies that issue Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified Muslim scholar). We hope you will read this and inform us with your opinion.

A: Since the government officials can now reach any area and take Zakah from those who are obliged to pay it, and that chieftains, their deputies and delegates do nothing in the process of Zakah collection, they do not deserve anything from it. This is because they used to take that in the past in return for their work which, now they do not do.

Fatwa no. 14106

Q: We have an Egyptian housemaid who is a practicing Muslim and memorizes the Qur'an. Due to her bad conditions and accumulated debts, she had to travel and work to have enough money for her children and to pay off her debts, because the creditors do not stop asking her to repay. However, she is unable to pay her debts because of her low salary and that she has to spend on her family; her son who is studying in a university in Egypt and another son is being drafted. Her husband works at a company in Egypt and receives a low salary. Yet, he does not bear any financial responsibilities toward his children and wastes his salary in his personal pleasures, prohibited drinks and other forbidden things. This has led her and her family to sue him for divorce before a court of law in Egypt. Divorce took place, based on a condition he made that he is not responsible for the children. In this way, she became their breadwinner, in addition to her debts which are as follows:

8000 Egyptian pounds to buy the share of her husband in the house of which he owns half and she owns the other half.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 359)

3700 pounds, the rest of the money for the contractor who built the house.

2200 pounds for the lawyer who managed the divorce lawsuit and registered the purchase of half the house from her husband.

2500 pounds for buying a motorcycle for her son because the university is very far from the house.

Our question: Is it permissible to give her Sadaqah (voluntary charity) or Zakah (obligatory charity) to pay off her debts and relieve her concerns due to these debts? It is important to note that we are sure about the authenticity of these debts. Please answer us. May Allah reward you with all goodness.

A: If the reality is as mentioned by the questioner, then there is nothing wrong in giving your maid Zakah (obligatory charity) to settle her debts. This is based on the fact that she is indebted, and the debtors are one of the deserving recipients of Zakah.

May Allah grant us all success. All peace be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions.

Q: Is it permissible for me to receive Zakah (obligatory charity), taking into consideration that I am in debt for more than 100,000 riyals and that I cannot pay this money because my salary is low and does not cover the daily costs of living? Please answer. May Allah protect and support you.

A: There is nothing wrong in paying Zakah (obligatory charity) to those charged with an immediate debt when they cannot settle it. Thus, it is permissible to help and relieve them of it because they are included in Allah's Saying, \(and for those in debt\) The man in question is in debt, because he is so poor that he cannot repay his debt.

The first question of fatwa no. 19299

Q 1: A man was in debt for about a million riyals. He paid off 700,000 riyals but he could not repay the remaining 300,000 riyals. Then his three brothers paid 100,000 riyals each and the debt was settled. Do these three brothers deserve Zakah (obligatory charity) as they were debtors?

A 1: They are only entitled to take Zakah (obligatory charity) if they are poor.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 361)

The settlement of debt on behalf of their brother is a kind of donation and not regarded as a debt for which Zakah is permissible.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18938

Q 2: I have some indigent relatives; if I have to pay money in charity, is it permissible to give it to them as Sadaqah (voluntary charity)?

A: If you mean Zakah (obligatory charity), it is permissible for your to pay it to them if they are included in the eight categories of Zakah beneficiaries, excluding your ascending heir like your parents and your descending heirs like your children.

If you intend to give Sadaqah (voluntary charity), it is permissible to give it to any of your relative, even parents, children, or anyone else. It is better to give Sadaqah to relatives according to what is reported from the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) who said: ﴿Your Sadaqah to the needy is regarded as one good deed, but paying it to your relatives is both Sadaqah and maintaining ties of kinship.﴾ (Related by Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Imam Ahmad)

The second question of fatwa no. 14215

Q 2: I give Zakah (obligatory charity) of my trade to my paternal and maternal aunts and to my sisters who live with their husbands and I am not required to spend on them. I regard it as Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and dutifulness to them. I give the rest to other beneficiaries of Zakah, for example, 200 Saudi riyals each. I would like to ask whether this way of giving Zakah is right and whether I can continue with it. Otherwise, please clarify a specific direction to give it all at once or in supporting orphans in Afghanistan. I would like to add that my Zakah does not exceed 10,000 riyals.

A 2: Zakah is paid to the eight categories, i.e. recipients of Zakah, that Allah (Exalted be He) mentioned in the Qur'an in His Saying: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.﴾

(Part No. 8; Page No. 363)

If your relatives are included in these categories, it is recommended to give it to them as Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and a kind of dutifulness. If they are wealthy, it is not permissible to pay Zakah to them. The same is true for their husbands if they are poor.

Fatwa no. 17378

Q: I have a relative of mine that is neither my ascendant nor descendent. He is retired and his pension is 13,000 Saudi riyals. He lives in a rented house. He has a family of 16 people, including his children, wife and mother, who are all his dependents. Often, their number increases at weekends when his married daughters visit him. In summer holidays they may be sixty-five people. He has no other income resource except this money which is mostly spent on rent, electricity, telephone, water and housemaid expenses, not to mention the expenses of his children and other essential and luxurious expenditures. He does not have any real estate or any other money except a piece of land. He is known for his good conduct and righteousness and he wants to build on this land but he does not like to overburden himself with debts. He tried to build it by installments but he found that it will cost him too much. The question is: Is it permissible for me to give him enough money from Zakah (obligatory charity) to build on this land to live with his children in it, and to use his pension to pay for their needs and to relieve him of the burden of renting? It is well-known that a relative is worthier of Zakah than a non-relative.

A: The beneficiaries of Zakah (obligatory charity) are explained in Allah's (Exalted be He) Saying: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.﴾

It is understood from your description of the state of your relative that he is not poor and that his salary will be sufficient for him if he spends wisely without extravagance or lavishness. However, there is nothing wrong with you giving him some money, gift or loan with the intention of helping him and you will be rewarded, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

Is the monthly salary I give to him considered Zakah (obligatory charity)? If not, does he deserve Zakah though I pay him 1000 Saudi Riyals as a monthly salary?

A: The salary you pay the driver is an obligation you should do from your own money not from the money of Zakah. However, if he is a poor Muslim and his income does not suffice him and there is no favoritism with him, you can give him part of your Zakah.

If it is impermissible, should I give the sum of Zakah to their mother who would spend it on herself and her children? Please advise me on this matter. May Allah reward you greatly!

A 2: It is impermissible for you to give them some of your Zakah, because their essential Nafaqah (obligatory financial support) is obligatory upon you to undertake to the best of your ability. You should support them with your money so that they can meet their needs. Q: My son is an employee, and he has recently opened a shop for selling clothes, beside his office job. The opening of this shop cost him a lot of money, half of which he borrowed from my savings, which will go to my inheritors after death. However, the project not did not achieve any profit, but it did not also clear half of its debts. Now, my son is unable to pay back his debts to people and to me. Based on the conditions of the market, there is no hope he can pay back these debts. He pays half of his salary to clear the debts, but he will not be able to clear it even if he continues doing so for three years.

Is it permissible for me to help him with some money from my Zakah (obligatory charity) funds so that he can pay back some of debts to the creditors and to recover the debt he owes me? It should be noted that my son is married and is the breadwinner of a family of six. Please advise on this matter. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is not permissible for the father to pay Zakah of his money to his son, because Zakah can not be given to one's descendants or ascendants. Also, Nafaqah (obligatory financial support) of your son is obligatory upon you. It is permissible for you to help him with money other than your due Zakah, in line with the general meaning of the Hadith in which the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: \(Whoever relieves a Muslim of one of the distresses of this world, Allah will relieve them of one of the distresses of the Day of Resurrection.\)

Q 2: Is it permissible to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) to a brother who is single? Is it permissible to pay Zakah to one's parents, in case the son is married and live independently from them?

A 2: There is a difference among scholars on paying Zakah to a brother based on the fact that the giver is entitled to inherit from taker upon the latter's death. It is preferable to give him from money other than that of Zakah in order to be clear from the divergent opinions of scholars. However, according to the more correct of the two opinions maintained by scholars, it is permissible if one gives Zakah to his brother due to the latter's abstract poverty. On the other hand, it is impermissible to pay Zakah to one's parents, for their basic Nafaqah (obligatory financial support) is obligatory upon their son, if they are in need.

If the answer of the previous question is yes, is it permissible for me to recover some debt from him which I paid to save him from judicial prosecution by the creditors?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 370)

A: If your brother is severely indebted and unable to clear his debts, it is permissible to pay Zakah to him. This can be done from your own Zakah, according to the correct opinion held by scholars, or from the Zakah of other people who authorized you to distribute their Zakah.

With regard to the money that you paid to your brother to save him from legal prosecution, if your intention before giving him the money was to pay it as Zakah, then it counts as Zakah. Otherwise, it is mere Sadaqah (voluntary charity).

A year has passed now and he has not found a new job and does not have any source of income. Is it permissible to give him all of my Zakah? Please note that my mother lives with him in his home, and he pays towards her food and other expenses.

A: If the case is as you have mentioned, that your brother has not found a job and in his condition he is a deserving recipient of Zakah, then it is permissible for you to give to him your Zakah due to his poverty.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 371)

You should give him of your Zakah the provisions that suffice his needs for a year. Having your mother living, eating, and drinking with him does not invalidate paying Zakah to him. It is the case and need of the recipient of Zakah which is taken into consideration. Once Zakah is paid to the deserving recipient, such a recipient becomes the owner of this money and can dispose of it freely in accordance with Shari`ah rulings. Paying Zakah to him in this case should not be an indirect means to help him financially support your mother, if she is poor.

Q: I have a sum of banknotes, all praise be to Allah, and I want to give their Zakah (obligatory charity) to my married sisters or my single sister or my brother's children. I hope you could clarify to me if it is permissible to give Zakah to the said people.

A: It is permissible to give Zakah to kinsfolk such as brothers and their children if they are poor and needy, whether they are married or single. They take priority over others for the Hadith reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that reads: \(Your charity to the poor is regarded as one good deed, but paying charity to your relatives is both charity and maintaining ties of kinship.\) (Related by Imam Ahmad, Al-Tirmidhy and Al-Nasa'y and the wording is of Al-Tirmidhy who ranked the Hadith as Hasan [a Hadith whose chain of narrators contains a narrator of weak exactitude but is free from eccentricity and blemish])

However, if the brothers are not needy or the brothers-in-law are rich, it is not permissible to give them Zakah because they are not of the categories of Zakah recipients and the brothers-in-law should maintain their wives. However, if the brothers-in-law are poor, Zakah should be given to them, because they maintain their wives.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20422

Q 2: Our family consists of the father, the mother, and the children. We have a married brother who lives with us and financially supports us. My father and another brother also contribute to the expenses of the family. The former brother has some Zakah (obligatory charity) money due on him and we have a sister who is about to marry. Is it permissible for this brother to pay his Zakah to his sister so that she can meet the needs of her marriage expenses? Also, is it permissible for a brother to give his Zakah to his poor sister who does not live with him?

A 2: It is permissible for the brother to give some of his Zakah to his sister who does not live with him if she is a deserving recipient of Zakah. If she is poor, her brother should give her of his Zakah the provisions that suffice her for a whole year, due to her poverty. Fatwa no. 18382

Q: What is the ruling on giving Zakah (obligatory charity) to brothers and sisters who work but their salaries are not sufficient to support them and their dependents. Is there a sin in giving them Zakah while there are non-kinsfolk poorer than them who will be prevented from receiving Zakah when those brothers and sisters receive it? Guide us, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is permissible to give Zakah to brothers and sisters if they are as you said. However, they should be given what suffices them in order not to deprive the poorer people of receiving Zakah.

The fifth question of Fatwa no. 17575

Q 5: I have a daughter who is married to a poor man. Her Nafaqah (obligatory financial support) is not obligatory upon me, since she is married. Is it permissible for me to give her Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) and Zakah (obligatory charity) of my money? Please advise me on this matter.

A 5: It is not permissible for you to give your daughter the Zakah of your money because it is not lawful to give Zakah to one's ascendants (one's parents, regardless of their degree) or descendants (one's children, regardless of their degree). However, it is permissible for you to give your Zakah to her poor husband.

The ninth question of Fatwa no. 20628

Q 9: Should Zakah (obligatory charity) be given to kinsmen and kinswomen, or Dhu Al-Arham (heirs connected through the female blood relatives) without naming it Zakah?

A: If your kinsfolk or Dhu Al-Arham are of the deserving recipients of Zakah, and you do not have to support them, meaning that they are not your children and downwards, or your parents and upwards, it is permissible to give them what meets their needs from Zakah; rather, giving the whole Zakah to them is preferred because it will be counted as both charity and maintaining the ties of kinship. It is not necessary to inform them that you are giving them Zakah as long as you know that they deserve it.

Q: There is a relationship through marriage between me and a man who does not belong to my tribe. This man supports eleven persons, four of them pursue their academic studies in Syria. Some of them study medicine and others study engineering. His salary is only four thousand Saudi riyals. Is it permissible for me to support those children who are in Syria from my Zakah (obligatory charity) money? Or I should not do so, since their father is the only one who is obligated to financially support them?

A: If their father does not financially support them while they are in dire need of financial assistance because of their poverty, then it is permissible to give them from Zakah money as they are considered among the deserving recipients of Zakah. And Allah knows best.

Fatwa no. 14451

Q: We have a cousin who lives in Riyadh and is well-off, by the Favor of Allah. He pays his Zakah (obligatory charity) consistently every year, and he sends to me a significant sum of money that I distribute it among the needy in my village according to my knowledge of the people of the vicinity. Allah knows that I do my best to distribute it among the needy of my near relatives and other impoverished Muslims in general. Some friends have told me that restricting the distribution of Zakah money to the needy of my kinfolk is more preferable.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 377)

Is it permissible to confine Zakah to them, or should I do as I used to do before? It should be noted that the payer does not specify a certain category to pay Zakah to them. Rather, he asked me to distribute it, according to my knowledge, among the needy of my kin and Muslims in general. Is it permissible to take anything from it because I exert some efforts in distributing it? I never took anything before from it, though.

A: The basic ruling in the Islamic Shari'ah is to distribute Zakah among the poor of the town where the Zakah is paid. It is stated in a Hadith narrated on the authority of Mu`adh (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) sent him to collect Zakah from the people of Yemen and instructed him saying: \(Tell them that Allah has obligated on them the paying of Zakah \(obligatory charity\) to be taken from their rich and distributed among their poor.\) However, if there is a considerable Shar`i necessity, such as that the poor of a farther town suffer more pressing needs or they are close relatives, then it is permissible to send Zakah to them. They should be given what suffices their needs for a year. It must be mentioned that it is impermissible for you to take from the money of Zakah in return for distributing it. Rather, you should seek a reward from Allah (Most Glorified and Exalted). Whoever guides to a good deed will earn a reward corresponding to that of its doer.

Q 1: Is it permissible to give Zakah (obligatory charity) to women in a village? It should be known that their husbands are well-off, but do not give them any money. Their husbands only provide the basic needs, such as clothes, food, ...etc. Many people give their Zakah to female relatives whom they are not obliged to support, such as sisters, maternal aunts, grandmothers, ...etc. They give them the money in the form of `Eid gifts while it is actually intended to be Zakah. These women become angry if they are not given an `Eid gift. Is it permissible to give some of one's Zakah during the `Eid as Zakah and `Eid gifts at the same time, without informing these women about the real intention of the giver?

A: Zakah should not be paid except to its legal beneficiaries. They are mentioned in the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah said: \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\) and those employed to collect \(the funds\), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined \(towards Islâm\), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause \(i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle\), and for the wayfarer \(a traveller who is cut off from everything\)\) If the women of the village are really poor and needy, then it is permissible to give Zakah to them. Otherwise, it is impermissible to do so. If Zakah was paid while these women were not poor or needy, the person should pay Zakah again to compensate for what he has unduly given. It is impermissible to give Zakah to close relatives whose Nafaqah (obligatory financial support) is obligatory upon the giver, such as grandmother, daughter, mother, father, ...etc.

Q: My maternal uncle is married to my paternal aunt who is a germane sister of my father. He also has another wife from whom Allah did not will to grant him offspring. They become too weak and unable to look after themselves adequately. I wish to bring them a maid to serve them and to employ her husband as a driver for them. Is it permissible to pay the salary of this driver and this maid from my Zakah (obligatory charity) money? It should be known that they have no personal income. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the people referred to in the question are poor and can not hire servants and pay them from their own money, then it is permissible for you to bring them these servants and pay them from your Zakah because servants in this case are a necessity for your relatives.

Q 2: What is the ruling on transferring the Zakah (obligatory charity) of gold to people in Bosnia and Herzegovina? I should mention that I have no close relatives deserving of receiving Zakah.

Q 2: Zakah should priorly be paid to the poor of the town in which the giver of Zakah resides. If there are no poor people in the town, it should be paid to the poor of the nearest town. The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: «Allah has made Zakat obligatory for them that it should be collected from their rich and distributed among their poor.» If one is certain that the Zakah to Bosnia and Herzegovina

Q 5: Many people give Zakah (obligatory charity) to non-deserving recipients. Is it permissible for one who does not deserve Zakah to refuse taking it?

A 5: It is Haram (prohibited) to give one's Zakah to non-deserving recipients. It is also Haram for the recipient to take Zakah if they are not one of the mentioned categories in the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Most Exalted be He) said: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. These borrowed amounts of money accumulated upon her and now she sincerely repents to Allah. What should she do regarding this debt, which she cannot pay back? What is your advice to her?

A: It is obligatory upon her to repay each amount of money to its owners and to inform them that when she took this Zakah, she was not a deserving recipient of Zakah or Sadaqah and that she had the intention to repay this money to its owners.

Q 2: A widow asks: I have some money which I receive as Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and Zakah (obligatory charity). However, a Hawl (one lunar year calculated from the time a property reaches the minimum amount upon which Zakah is due) may pass over this money. Is there Zakah due on it? If there is Zakah due on it, how should I pay it?

A 2: It is impermissible for this woman to accept more Zakah than she needs. If the money she owns has reached Nisab (the minimum amount on which Zakah is due) and Hawl has passed over, she should pay 2.5% of the money as Zakah.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 382)

Fatwa no. 16692

I am a young man from Upper Egypt. I work as an Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) at a non-State-run Masjid (mosque) in Jeddah where the caretaker of the Masjid gives me 1,300 riyals as a salary. All praise is due to Allah, this salary suffices me and my five-member family. Every year in Ramadan, some frequenters of the Masjid give me and the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) some riyals. We used to spend them without knowing whether this money was a gift, Sadaqah (voluntary charity), or Zakah (obligatory charity). Therefore, I was concerned and feared that it might be Zakah. Thus, I decided to pay back all the money I took in the past years. It is about 4,500 riyals. I took this decision to apply the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(Leave what causes you doubt and turn to what does not cause you doubt.\)

However, I do not own anything and I am indebted 6,000 riyals. I should mention that when I accepted this money I was in debt. For two years, a young man owed me 4,500 riyals. This young man is indebted and insolvent, and has yet to give me my money. If I drop this debt in return for the sum of money which I took from Masjid frequenters, will my responsibility before Allah be discharged? Please advise, may Allah reward you. If I am given some money in Ramadan this year as usual, is it permissible for me to take it to clear my debts or should I reject it?

A: If what is given to you was a gift, you should know that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to give and accept gifts. Therefore, it is recommended for Muslims to accept gifts as long as they are not in a position of authority, such as a judge and the like, and that the gift should not be from a borrower to a lender unless this is a practiced custom among people in a similar case. If the money you were given was Zakah, it is permissible for you to take it if you are one of its deserving recipients. Otherwise, it is impermissible for you to accept it and you have to pay the money back to the payer if you know him. If you do not know him, you should give such money to the poor and the needy, intending to do so on behalf of the owner of the money. It is impermissible for you to pay it to the indebted person. If the given money was Sadaqah, it is permissible for you to take it.

Q: My mother is a widow, as her husband died some time ago. One day during the past year in 1419 A.H., someone gave her 400 riyals and told her that this money was from Zakah (obligatory charity). She took it and spent it on a public interest, because she believed that she was not one of the categories of Zakah recipients. Despite the fact that she is not well-off, she does not want to open the door of taking Zakah. Now she asks, what is the ruling on what she did? Is her responsibility discharged? Is the obligation on the Zakah payer discharged? Must she pay back the money to the Zakah payer?

A: If your mother is not one of the categories of Zakah recipients, it is impermissible for her to take or dispose of Zakah. What she did is invalid and she must pay back the money to its owner to give it to deserving people.

Q: My uncle, who is my father-in-law, has a great role in upbringing me. I bought him a car for 15,000 EGP with the intention of sharing him the value and profit. When he received it he told me that he would take it for himself and then pay its price to me. He gave me 9,000 EGP in the form of installments throughout some years, then he became insolvent and sold it. He apologized and complained of his conditions. He became ill and spent all that he had. Hence, I decided to pardon the rest of the money as part of Zakah (obligatory charity). I forgave him after his death, but his inheritors wanted to give me my right considering it a debt.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 385)

I did not accept the money from them on the basis that I had pardoned him and considered it as Zakah. Then, I was told that Zakah cannot be a discharge of a debt. It was a large amount of money, which I intended and counted as Zakah. Is this money considered Zakah?

A: It is not valid to count the debt that your uncle owed you as Zakah. This is considered protection of your money. It is obligatory upon you to pay Zakah to its deserving recipients mentioned in the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Exalted be He) states: «As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor)» (Surah Al-Tawbah 9:60)

Q: I lent some rich individuals a certain amount of money, however, they became poor and insolvent and now cannot repay the debt they owe me. In fact, some of them are declared bankrupt. Their relatives and some trustworthy people testify that they are insolvent. Is it permissible for me to waive my debts due on such insolvent persons and deduct them from the Zakah (obligatory charity) I am liable for? Please be informed that I defaulted on Zakah many years because of debtors defaulting on repayment that caused me cash flow problems. Answer us, may Allah benefit you. Should we apply to this case the ruling derived from the Ayah (Qur'anic verse), Surah Al-Baqarah, 2:279, that reads: ﴿And if the debtor is in a hard time \(has no money\), then grant him time till it is easy for him to repay, but if you remit it by way of charity, that is better for you if you did but know.﴾ Sadaqa Allah-ul-`Azhim (True are the Words of Allah, the Ever-Great). Q: A person who is indebted to another has been unable for so long to pay off the debt. Financially unable to repay the debt, it seems that the debtor is in a very bad financial position as may qualify him to be a Zakah (obligatory charity) recipient. Is it permissible for the creditor to issue a check payable to the bearer, so that the creditor's employees will not know about it, and thus help the debtor maintain his dignity and with which the creditor can pay off the entire debt or part of it? In other words, the debt is to be paid off out of the sum of money given by the creditor to the debtor as part of the former's Zakah budget. May Allah guide you to that which pleases and satisfies Him! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

Q: There is a destitute woman who lives with her brother and suffers from a chronic disease that demands ongoing treatment. As she is too poor with no source of livelihood except her brother, he supports her. Is it permissible for her then to receive his Zakah (obligatory charity) to buy her medicine and meet her expenses? Q: In the Heart Surgery Division in King Khalid University Hospital, we perform all of the open heart surgeries, all praise be to Allah, Who granted us success in achieving satisfactory results in this respect. However, we now face the problem of the provisions of the necessary requirements for these surgeries with respect to the non-Saudi patients. The available requirements are enough for the Saudi patients, as the country is responsible for all of the costs of their treatment in spite of the circumstances we experience and that you know well. As for the non-Saudi patients, Allah provided us with a way, through which we can perform these surgeries on them on the condition that each patient buys the requirements of his surgery, which cost twenty thousand Riyals for each surgery. This is the cost of the tools that are used only once, such as the valves of the heart and so on. As many of these patients are poor and cannot afford to buy these requirements, and accordingly, cannot afford to perform such surgeries in private hospitals, as the cost of each surgery, for example, is seventy thousand Riyals or more. Since there are many benevolent people, who pay Zakah (obligatory charity) to such recipients, I hope that you will give us your legal opinion to the question: Is it permissible to pay the money of Zakah for buying these requirements for the non-Saudi patients, who cannot afford to buy them after verifying their circumstances?

A: There is no objection against helping a poor Muslim in the cost of his treatment from the money of Zakah, if he is proven by the legal court that he is poor and unable to afford the cost of his treatment.

Fatwa no. 21250

Q: The Tibah Medical Resort Charitable Foundation was established in Al-Madinah Al-Munawwarah, under a license from the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs, numbered (5947), dated 28 Safar, 1420 A.H. The Foundation has a board of trustees headed by His Royal Highness the Prince of Al-Madinah Al-Munawwarah and its members include a number of the notables and dignitaries of Al-Madinah Al-Munawwarah. The income of the Foundation depends on many sources such as grants, donations, subsidies and the charitable support of the benevolent people. Moreover, the Foundation has a fund for spending money for the treatment of the poor patients

One of the early projects of this Foundation was the establishment of the Tibah Medical Resort, which aims to take care of the chronic and convalescent psychiatric patients, patients suffering from psychotic, mental or emotional disorders, and patients suffering from chronic neurological disorders such as paralysis, intractable epilepsy and head injuries. It also cares for the old aged patients. It is a private project that charges the patient a fee equal to the costs of the provided services plus 10% that is used to improve and develop the project. These fees are not intended to provide monetary profit, but to improve the service for the patients. If the patients are unable to pay for their treatment, their fees are covered by the patients' fund which is affiliated to the Foundation.

The Resort provides its services for the inhabitants of Al-Madinah Al-Munawwarah and all of the areas of the Kingdom. It is located on a spacious area of land that is 62,000 m² in Abyar `Aly. Its management is supervised by a fivefold committee taken from the board of trustees.

The question that requires Fatwa is as follows: Is it permissible to collect the money assigned to Zakah (obligatory charity) and specify a section for it in the patients' fund to be spent only on the poor patients deserving Zakah? If yes, is it permissible - as the medical work has not yet started - to spend the collected money assigned for Zakah on establishing the building, whereby the Resort will be indebted to the Zakah section for this sum, and after the completion of the establishment and the inauguration of the medical work, the debt will be repaid to the Zakah section of the fund?

A: It is not permissible to specify a section for Zakah in the mentioned patients' fund because it is not an official authority for collecting Zakah. It is not the deputy of the Zakah payer or the people deserving Zakah to disperse it to the deserving people. The beneficiaries of this fund may not be included in the legally stated categories of Zakah recipients in a trusted and reassuring way. Moreover, the method of dispersing Zakah may prevent Zakah from reaching the deserving people on time.

The basis here is that the Zakah payer should pay Zakah on his own or to have it paid to a legally stated and trusted deputy to be reassured that it will reach the deserving people on time, as mentioned by Allah (Exalted be He) in the following Ayah (Qur'anic verse) on time: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.﴾ The one who has Zakah money should not invest it in charitable projects, and should not borrow from it with the intention of paying it back from the return of the money of Zakah. The reason is that this way subjects the Zakah money to potential loss, and delays its delivery to the deserving people, which undermines the benefit for which Zakah is imposed, and its purpose is to meet the needs of the poor and pay the debts of the debtors on time. May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: My daughter is suffering from a large tumor that is spreading along her spinal cord. I have not been able to find its treatment in the hospitals specializing in this field in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. I have tried hard to find someone willing to undertake the costs of her treatment outside the Kingdom but my efforts have been in vain. Moreover, I considered taking out a bank loan from one of the banks to pay for my daughter's treatment. However, I changed my mind when I discovered that the interest paid on the loan is Haram (prohibited). Furthermore, I do not own anything that can be sold to pay for the treatment of my daughter's aggressive illness; and I could not have her treated in the hospitals specialized in treating these diseases outside the Kingdom because I cannot afford to it.

1- Is it permissible to ask the rich people to give me enough money for my daughter's treatment from their Zakah money (obligatory charity) ?

2- In case it is not permissible to ask for the Zakah money , is there a sin for me if not to have her treated, even though I know that she can be treated outside the Kingdom, if I cannot pay for it?

A: If you find someone to lend you the money necessary for treating your daughter without Riba (usury), you can do it. However, if you cannot find someone to lend you the money, because you are poor and cannot afford to pay for your daughter's treatment, you can ask to take enough money to pay for your daughter's treatment. May Allah grant her recovery and reward you with the best!

If you do not treat her, you will not be a sinner because treatment is not Wajib (obligatory) in the Shar` (law).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: What is your legal opinion, may Allah grant you permanent blessing, concerning a person who assigned his Zakah (obligatory charity) money to building, constructing or repairing Masjids (mosques) or anything related to this? Is it permissible to spend it in such acts? Is this act included in the meaning of "for Allah's Sake and the wayfarer"?

A: It is not permissible to pay Zakah in this manner; and the one who did so should pay Zakah again.

Q: The Committee for the Development of Al-Rawdah in Ha'il is seeking to widen the Muslims' passageways and the narrow streets in response to the request of the local residents. Narrow streets and passageways were the main reason for many children and old people losing their lives and being wounded in car accidents. Therefore, the Committee for the Development of the town is working to prevent the occurrence of such accidents and has plans to encounter this danger and save the lives of people from these hazardous streets and passageways. The entire members of the Committee, including Shaykh Sulayman Al-`Amir and the sender of this letter to your Eminence, exerted great efforts to raise people's awareness to the problem and to generously contribute to the accomplishment of this benevolent work. Many generous people assisted us in our project of widening the streets by donating some plots of their farms and parts of their houses, each according to his capability. The question is: some of the donors are not able to build a wall instead of the one taken from them during the work of expansion, or to rebuild a house to live in instead of their taken houses. They are too poor to even afford the cost of repairing a wall to shelter them and their families or to rebuild a house instead of the one they donated. We were embarrassed to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) for them in cash. Is it permissible to assign part of the money of Zakah to cover the expenses of repairing their walls or houses? The Committee is quite sure that the owners of these houses are in great need and have no source of income. Many of them are quite old people and unable to work? We hope that you will advise us on this matter.

Upon considering the Fatwa request, the Committee answered that it is not permissible to pay Zakah money for charitable projects such as surfacing the roads, building Masjids (mosques) ...etc, because Allah specified the Zakah legal beneficiaries in eight categories, which are mentioned in the following Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.﴾ However, it is permissible to give to the poor from the money of Zakah something to meet their need to repair or rebuild their houses, if they are so poor and unable to undertake this work.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Q: Sums of money are donated to us from some benevolent people for the purpose of distributing them among the deserving poor. Moreover, we run some charitable institutions such as the Institution for Memorizing the Noble Qur'an and the Institution for Supporting Impoverished Marriage Suitors who cannot afford paying Mahr (mandatory gift to a bride from her groom). The persons who are responsible for running these institutions request us to specify a certain sum of money to meet their respective clerical expenses and other obligations in order to be able to carry out their tasks. They help in benevolence and general good activities, such as memorizing the Noble Qur'an and supporting the youth to get married. The question is: is it permissible to assign to them some of the donations we receive, and will this be one of legal expenditures of Zakah? Or, should these funds be spent only on the deserving poor people? I hope you will give us your legal opinion concerning our question as soon as possible. May Allah reward you with the best! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabaraktuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you).

A: These funds should be given only to the poor as the donors requested. You may give financial assistance to the poor who cannot afford marriage expenses, and others who are students in the schools of Qur'an Memorization .

As for the clerical expenses of the institution, they cannot be covered by money donated for supporting the poor or from Zakah funds.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

All praise be to Allah alone, and peace and blessings of Allah be upon the Last of the Prophets, Muhammad. To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the question received by his Eminence the Grand Mufti from the Directress of the Thaqif Girls Institution for Women's Charity in Al-Ta'if, and referred to the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, numbered (5491) and dated 2 Ramadan, 1421 A.H.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 400)

The questioner asked the following:

We, at the Thaqif Girls Institution for Women's Charity in Al-Ta'if, provide care and support to the needy people in Al-Ta'if and its suburbs. The income of this Institution is generated from its general activities, money of Zakah (obligatory charity), donations and the subsidies of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs. Every year at the end of Ramadan, the Institution disburses bonus to all female employees from its balance, which accumulates from the profits of its various activities. Moreover, the Institution disburses money to the drivers and female workers from the funds of Zakah and donations. We hope to continue giving these bonuses to the deserving people due to the heavy work load in Ramadan and as a gesture to motivate and appreciate the employees' services. I hope that your Eminence will guide us regarding the validity of our gesture.

May Allah reward you with the best and keep you safe!

Upon considering the Fatwa request, the Committee answered that it is not permissible to spend the money of Zakah on the employees of the Institution in the form of salaries or bonuses. Zakah funds should be spent on the legal categories of recipients, which Allah (Glorified be He) specified in the following Ayah (Qur'anic verse): [\(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\) and those employed to collect \(the funds\), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined \(towards Islâm\), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause \(i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle\), and for the wayfarer \(a traveller who is cut off from everything\); a duty imposed by Allâh. Q: A charity institution managed by some students works for the preservation and advocacy of the teachings of the Prophetic Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals by the Prophet Muhammad) through the preparation of researches on the Sunnah. Moreover, they edit and publish manuscripts of Hadith for free. Because this institution is still in its nascent years, it needs funding resources to cover its expenses and the salaries of its employees. Is it permissible to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) for this institution? I hope that you will give us your legal opinion on this matter, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is not permissible to pay Zakah to the mentioned institution or any other humanitarian institution, because the categories of Zakah recipients are clearly defined by Allah (Exalted be He) in the following Ayah (Qur'anic verse): \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\)\) to the end of the Ayah. This limitation implies that it is not permissible to pay

Q: There is a charitable school for the memorization of the Noble Qur'an, which specializes in teaching the Qur'an to women. More than 500 female students are enrolled in this school. They are taught by twenty female teachers, each receives a salary of 800 Riyals per month. The school is now undergoing some financial problems and is unable to meet its obligations towards the payment of the salaries. Consequently, there is a great risk that it will have to cease its activities due to this shortage. The question is: Is it permissible to give a share of the money of Zakah (obligatory charity) to this school to pay the salaries of its employees and cover other expenses? If yes, is it permissible to keep any remainder of the money for covering the expenses of the following months? I hope that you will give us your legal opinion on this matter, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the situation is as you have mentioned, then it is not permissible to pay the money of Zakah for the salaries of the teachers and the employees of the school, or for covering any of the expenditures of the school. This is because the activity of the institution is not one of the assigned legal categories of Zakah recipients.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Q: Thanks to Allah (Exalted and Glorified be He) and by His Grace, a plot of land has been allocated to establish a center for teaching the Glorious Qur'an and its sciences to Muslim girls and women, according to the way of the Salaf (righteous predecessors), may Allah be pleased with them. The competent authorities in Bahrain, represented by the Ministry of Justice and Islamic Affairs, have approved of establishing this center. After its establishment, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), some Muslim sisters who hold licenses in recitation of Hafs from `Asim (may Allah be merciful to both of them) will be assigned the task of teaching in this center. Those sisters, all praise and gratitude be to Allah, have a Salafy `Aqidah (creed) based on the two great sources of Shari`ah, i.e., Allah's Book and the Sunnah of His Prophet (peace be upon him), and the understanding of the Salaf (may Allah the Exalted be merciful to them). In fact, there has been a great need for establishing such an Islamic institution, taking into account the important role which the Muslim women can play when they are able to understand, contemplate, and recite the Glorious Qur'an according to the scientific and Shar`y (Islamically lawful) rules. Owing to the fact that the cost of establishing this center is beyond the financial capability of the people who want to build it, we thought about writing to Your Eminence to ask you the following question:

Is it lawfully permissible to pay from the money of Zakah (obligatory charity) and Sadaqah (voluntary charity) to establish this center? We also ask you to write to the generous and benevolent people to contribute to this project.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 404)

A: It is not permissible to spend Zakah to establish the center referred to or other projects, because the categories of Zakah recipients are specified in the noble Qur'anic verse, i.e., the Words of Allah (Glorified be He) Who says: «As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor)» to the end of the verse. However, it is permissible to finance this project from the donations of benevolent people.

Q: I hope that Your Eminence-may Allah reward you- will give us a Fatwa on the following issue: Suppose that a company has established an office for regulating the payment and distribution of Zakah (obligatory charity) and Sadaqah (voluntary charity), renting an office for this purpose, and appointing personnel to study the applications submitted, filter through them and follow up the same to ensure the concerned charities are given their due recipients, noting that 70% of the work carried out by the office is pertaining to the distribution of Zakah, while only about 30% is related to the distribution of Sadaqah. Is it permissible here to spend the money of Zakah to pay the salaries of the personnel working in this office and its expenses such as renting, furnishing, the stationary requirements, and travel expenses allocated for going to distant places by the representatives of the department for giving Zakah and Sadqah or following up the same? Or should these expenses be paid in proportion to the percentage of Zakah and Sadaqah? Please give us a Fatwa on this subject. May Allah reward you in this world and the Hereafter! Amen!

A: It is not permissible to spend Zakah money to pay the salaries of personnel working in the office referred to or to pay the value of renting the office or other expenses like furniture and stationary, because these are not included in the eight categories of Zakah recipients as mentioned in the Words of Allah (Exalted be He) when He says: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.﴾ "Those employed to collect (the funds)", as agreed upon by scholars, refers to people appointed by the ruler to collect Zakah and distribute it among its due recipients.

To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the question submitted to His Eminence, the Grand Mufty from the questioner: the chairman and members of the board of directors of the Fund of Lending Young People Wishing to Marry at the governorate of `Unayzah. The question has been referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 2208, dated 18/02/1422 A.H. The questioner has asked the following:

A businessman from Saudi Arabia sold Al Manar Complex for Oil Burnings at a rate of two million, two hundred thousand riyals to the Fund of Lending Young People Wishing to Marry at the governorate of `Unayzah. The sale was made on credit on the condition that the price be paid fully within two years from the date of the contract of sale. Now the Fund owes this sum to the businessman, but it is entitled to benefit from the gains of this station during these two years.

The question is: Is it permissible to pay off this debt to the businessman from the charities donated by benevolent people to the Fund?

We hope Your Eminence to provide us with the answer to this question. May Allah reward you with the best!

After pondering over the question referred to the Committee, it answers saying that you are required to pay Zakah to the categories of Zakah recipients that Allah (Exalted be He) has specified,

(Part No. 8; Page No. 407)

i.e., the eight categories mentioned in the Words of Allah (Glorified be He) when He says: (As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor)) and so on, to the end of the verse. Accordingly, it is not permissible to spend any of the money of Zakah to pay for the project you referred to, because it is not one of the categories stated in the quoted Qur'anic verse. Rather, it is one of the categories of other charity recipients that can be financed by donations and Sadaqah (voluntary charity).

Q: I have reviewed the recommendation Your Eminence made on the Tawhid and Ansar Al-Sunnah Al-Muhammadiyah Magazine in Egypt. May Allah reward you with the best! My question is: On account of their need for money, is it permissible to support the magazine publishers by giving them Zakah (obligatory charity) in order to help them spread the `Aqidah (creed) of Tawhid (belief in the Oneness of Allah/ monotheism)? I hope Your Eminence could give a written answer to my question.

A: It is not permissible to pay Zakah to support the publication of a religious magazine, or similar matters related to Da`wah (calling to Islam), because the categories of Zakah recipients are exclusive to the eight categories mentioned in Allah's Saying: \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\) and those employed to collect \(the funds\), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined \(towards Islâm\), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause \(i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle\), and for the wayfarer \(a traveller who is cut off from everything\)\)

Q: What is the ruling on giving Zakah (obligatory charity) to a group of persons working on the memorization of the Ever-Glorious Qur'an? This group is in dire need of financial support on which it depends, after Allah's Support, for its survival to carry out its message towards the Book of Allah (the Ever-Glorious Qur'an)?

A: There are eight categories of Zakah recipients that Allah (Glorified be He) set. It is not permissible to give it to any other category, such as a project for memorizing the Ever-Glorious Qur'an. However, if some of the students or teachers are poor, it is permissible to give them part of the Zakah, but on account of their poverty and not their work.

Fatwa no. (15353)

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.
To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the question submitted to His Eminence, the Grand Mufty, by His Excellency the Supervisor of the Public Relations at the Charitable Society for Care of the Disabled Children, which was referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council under no. (numberless), dated 04/07/1313 A.H. The questioner posed the following question:

The Administration of the Charitable Saudi Society for Care of Disabled Children is seeking the ways of good which support - by Allah's Might- its activities according to the true Shari`ah. Because we are certain that you sympathize with the humanitarian role played by this Society, we refer to you from time to time to consult you and be enlightened with your opinion on some issues which we are concerned with. As you know (may Allah safeguard you), the Society has found that one of the solutions that it can adopt to pay for the enormous rehabilitative, educational, and treatment services required for the children who need these things is to expand its existing projects, and build new ones for this humanitarian purpose. There is no doubt that these projects are very costly, but Allah will be with us - by Allah's Might- because our orientation has nothing to do with gaining profit or worldly purposes, but, rather, it is a close daily realization of the pressing humanitarian needs (of those children). Affording these projects will be through communicating with the philanthropists in our advancing country who always provide every kind of support for each needy person. We here pose Your Eminence a question related to this subject: Is it permissible for the Society to make use of all or part of the money of Zakah (obligatory charity) received by the Society to contribute to covering the expenses of establishing these charitable projects?

We hope that you will kindly answer this question which has been raised by the Financial Committee in its recent meeting. We would also like to know the opinion of Your Eminence about the following:

A person who wishes to do good has decided to give the Society a plot of land as Zakah on his real estates and properties after he has estimated the value of the plot and become certain that it covers all or part of the Zakah amount payable by him. Is it permissible for him to do this? We are looking forward to receiving the answer of Your Eminence, may Allah safeguard you!

After pondering over the submitted question, the Committee has answered as follows:

Firstly: Allah (Exalted be He) has specified the categories of Zakah recipients in His Words when He says: (As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.)

(Part No. 8; Page No. 411)

Accordingly, it is not permissible to spend Zakah money to establish the projects of the charitable Society, because this is not included in the categories of Zakah recipients, and because the Society is lived on by both poor and rich disabled children. The knowledgeable scholars (may Allah be merciful to them) said that Zakah is not to be spent on building mosques, fencing graves, or printing books.

Secondly: It is not permissible for the man to give the Society a plot of land referred to as Zakah on his properties. Rather, the landlord should sell the land or authorize the Society to sell it on his behalf; and when it receives the price, the Society may spend it on the poor who reside in the Society or other poor people.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. (15853)

Q: Your Eminence Shaykh! There is a man who moved from one city to another, and took some people with him. This man has great wealth;

(Part No. 8; Page No. 412)

Allah (Exalted be He) has provided him with a generous spirit to give Zakah (obligatory charity) and Sadaqah (voluntary charity) happily for Allah's Sake. The amount of Zakah he has to pay is estimated at millions of riyals. The people whom he desired to move with him from the city they were dwelling in, to the city he will go to, receive salaries that mostly do not exceed two thousand riyals and the highest salary of which is only three thousand riyals. They have families and children to support and do not have incomes other than their salaries. Besides, they feel responsible for entertaining guests who visit them; they are from tribes who are accustomed to receiving guests and feel shy to receive guests without showing them hospitality. The man, who takes them with him, helps them pay the rentals of their apartments. They explained to him how low their incomes are and how many children they have to support. They also told him that they have no houses of their own, which may be real estates, to support their family after their death. They asked him to help them buy a house for each of them to be a real property that can be a financial support for them in this world.

The question, Your Eminence, is: Is it permissible for this man to give them some of the Zakah payable to help them in this respect? It is worth noting that if he did so, this would not affect giving the other poor recipients from this Zakah, because the amount of Zakah he is to pay, as mentioned before, is estimated at millions and so it will also cover its due recipients. There are almost twelve persons who need help, and they may receive this help within two years; that is to say, they will be paid from the Zakah of two years, once for each, to suffice their needs in this respect.

So, may Your Eminence, please, inform me in writing about the viewpoint of Shari`ah on this question. Is it also permissible for this man to financially help those persons in the future from the amounts of Zakah he is to pay, owing to their low incomes and the rising costs which Your Eminence is aware of? I know it is not a matter of Ijtihad (juristic effort to infer expert legal rulings), but, in my opinion, Zakah has been legislated by Allah (Exalted be He) to give the poor an amount that will suffice their needs in a way that will not make them ask for it in the following years, and it may be a good start for them to become wealthy and thus Zakah payers. Suppose, for example, that a person has a million riyals as Zakah to be paid, it would be preferable to distribute this amount among fifty persons to make them no longer in need of help, rather than giving it to hundred persons without the same sufficing their needs. So, may Your Eminence answer me kindly in writing whether it is lawful to spend from the Zakah to be paid on helping those persons buy houses on their own, noting, as mentioned before, that such help will not prevent the other poor recipients of Zakah from receiving the amounts given to them every year. I am waiting for the answer of Your Eminance.

A: If the case is as it is mentioned in the question, it is permissible for the said man to spend from his Zakah that is to be paid on helping the persons in question to buy houses of their own, if they are poor.

Q: In our village, there is a Masjid (mosque) that runs a class for teaching the Ever-Glorious Qur'an. The Masjid needs reconstruction and maintenance, but the people of the village cannot afford to pay for this, and the authority of religious affairs in this country has not done the work. Is it permissible to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) of property and gold to help support this great work? Guide us, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: It is not permissible to pay Zakah on such things as you mentioned, as they do not fall within the eight categories of Zakah recipients mentioned in the Ever-Glorious Qur'an.

Q: Muslims in Tokyo do not have even one Masjid (mosque), so they offer the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer in a small place that serves as a temporary Masjid. They perform the Two `Eid Prayers - `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) and `Eid-ul-Adha (the Festival of the Sacrifice) - in a more spacious area for which they pay very high rent that donations from Muslims does not meet.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 415)

In this case, is it permissible to use any money remaining from Zakah to pay the rental for the place for the Two `Eid Prayers? Some claim that this is permissible as it serves the interests of Muslims, while others maintain that this is not permissible; what is the opinion of Your Eminence? We hope Your Eminence can explain this matter to us in detail, supporting your opinion with the evidence from the Book (the Ever-Glorious Qur'an) and the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet), may Allah reward you with the best! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: It is not permissible to pay an portion of Zakah to rent a place for offering Salah (Prayer), for this is not one of the categories of Zakah recipients mentioned in Allah's Saying: \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\) and those employed to collect \(the funds\), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined \(towards Islâm\), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause \(i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle\), and for the wayfarer \(a traveller who is cut off from everything\)\) As for His Saying: \(and for Allâh's Cause \(i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle\)\) , it refers to Jihad (fighting/striving in the Cause of Allah) according to the majority of scholars.

Fatwa no. 16266

Q: In the "Islamic World" Magazine, there was a question which reads as follows: Is it permissible to give part of the Zakah (obligatory charity) to a school for teaching the Ever-Glorious Qur'an? Mr.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 416)

Ahmad Muhammad Jamal, professor of Tafsir (explanation/exegesis of the meanings of the Qur'an) at Umm Al-Qura University answered as follows: "Some early and contemporary Fuqaha' (Muslim jurists) are against giving any part of the Zakah to charitable foundations, for building a Masjid (mosque), or school for teaching the Ever-Glorious Qur'an, or charitable housing for the poor. They maintain that the seven categories of Zakah recipients, namely 'for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle)' refers exclusively to Jihad (fighting/striving in the Cause of Allah), meaning fighting against the Kafirs (disbelievers) only." In conclusion, he added: "However, giving donations for building a Masjid, teaching the Ever-Glorious Qur'an, building charitable housing or a school for teaching Muslim children in some non-Muslim countries, and similar charitable deeds, is considered 'for Allah's Cause' and so it is permissible to pay part of the Zakah for it." End of quote.

In Ma`arif Al-Qur'an, concerning the Tafsir of Surah (Qur'anic chapter) Al-Tawbah, in the fourth part by His Eminence Grand Mufty, Muhammad Shafi': "The Jumhur (dominant majority of scholars) and the Four Imams (Abu Hanifah, Malik, Al-Shafi'y, and Ahmad) agreed that it is not permissible to give part of the Zakah to build Masjids, schools, hospitals, orphanages, etc." However, here in Mozambique, there are Islamic societies which do not have the means to build a Masjid, school, or to pay the salaries of the Imams (the ones who lead congregational Prayer) of Masjids, for most of them are poor. We would like Your Eminence to clarify this for us as we are in doubt after hearing these opposing viewpoints; is it permissible to pay part of the Zakah for such purposes?

A: Paying Zakah for building Masjids, schools, etc.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 417)

is not permissible, according to the Jumhur. Moreover, in the Tafsir of Allah's Saying: ﴿and for Allâh's Cause \(i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle\)﴾, some scholars are of the view that this is exclusive to the fighters in the Cause of Allah.

Q: What is the legal ruling on fencing graves? Is it lawful to spend the money of Zakah (obligatory charity) to fence graves? We ask this question to be enlightened about our religion and to avoid falling in mistakes, especially that we receive many applications asking for help in fencing graves lest some people who have weak faith may usurp the graves by constructing on them.

May Allah reward you and write your answer in the record of your good deeds on the Day of Judgment!

A: Fencing graves is required from the viewpoint of Shari`ah to protect the graves and avoid harming the dead by walking on them, but it is not lawful to pay for fencing them from Zakah money, because Zakah is determined to be paid only to the eight categories of Zakah recipients mentioned in the Words of Allah (Glorified be He): ﴿As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât\) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\)﴾ and so on, to the end of the verse. So, the payment of Zakah must be confined to these categories, to the exclusion of other charitable projects such as building mosques, fencing graves, and so on. Rather, such projects are to be financed from donations or by the relative competent authority such as the Ministry of Municipal Affairs.

Q: Out of the concern of the Charitable Society for Female Progress in spending the resources of Zakah (obligatory charity) on its lawful recipients, we kindly ask Your Eminence to answer some questions pertaining to Zakah.

First: Is it permissible to pay the salaries of social workers who estimate the number of needy families, conduct the [relative] social researches, and supervise the process of giving support and Zakah to such families from the money received for Zakah?

Second: Is it permissible to pay from Zakah money the wages or fees of the workers and persons whom the Society hires to carry the foodstuff distributed in Ramadan and at the seasons of charity distribution?

Third: The society has rented two buildings to house some poor and needy families; is it lawful to pay the rentals of the same from the money received for Zakah?

Fourth: The Society cares for an orphan family (some orphans who lost their parents during an accident), and it desires to buy them a house of their own; but because the family is not Saudi, they are not entitled to have ownership [in Saudi Arabia]; so is it permissible for the Society to buy them a house in its name from the money received for Zakah?

Fifth: During the activities performed by the Society, many valuable items are lost, like jewelry and banknotes, have been brought to the administration of the Society. The latter has been putting these items in its safe for years, during which no person has come to claim his or her entitlement to the items; what is the legal procedure to be taken by the Society in this concern?

We hope that you will answer our questions. We are grateful for your kind cooperation with us! May Allah reward you with the best!

A: First: It is not permissible to pay the salaries of social workers from the money received for Zakah, because they are not included in the categories of Zakah recipients. Their salaries may be paid from general voluntary donations. This is also the case with the workers and persons hired to carry the foodstuff.

Second: It is lawful to give Saudi and non-Saudi poor families financial support to rent a building for housing.

Third: It is not permissible to take a lost item except by a person who can determine the type, description, and amount of the article he or she has found and trust themselves to be able to safeguard the same. Otherwise, the person who finds it has to give the lost item he or she found to the ruler, especially if it is valuable. Besides, It is not permissible for the Society to receive the lost items.

The first question of Fatwa no. (16467)

Q1: Is it permissible to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) to someone who owes me money, and after paying this Zakah, he or she pays off the debt from this Zakah?

A 1: It is not permissible to pay Zakah to a person who owes money to you so that he or she pays off that debt to you; but if you gave them the money because of their poverty and they paid off the debt to you without previously having agreed with you to do so, there would be no problem with this.

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, there is nothing wrong with giving Zakah to this needy family. As for demanding that their rich grandfather support them, this is an issue that could be referred to the court.

Q: The Islamic University, a store of Sciences in Dhaka - Bangladesh, is an Islamic religious institution that serves knowledge and `Aqidah (creed) from the perspective of Ahl-ul-Sunnah wal-Jama`ah (adherents to the Sunnah and the Muslim mainstream), following the footsteps of the pious Salaf (righteous predecessors). It supports many needy and poor Muslim students by providing them with housing, living costs, textbooks, and other expenses. Is it permissible for wealthy people from overseas and inside the country to spend the obligatory charity (Zakah) on those students?

A: It is permissible to spend Zakah on poor orphan students and other poor students to provide them with housing, clothing and living costs; because they are from the categories of Zakah recipients as mentioned in Allah's (Exalted be He) Words: \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\)

So, may Your Eminence tell us if it is permissible to invest Zakah money and make use of the returns of this investment in covering the tuition fees of the scholarships?

A: It is not permissible to spend Zakah money on things that are not included in its categories of recipients which Allah (Exalted be He) has specified in the noble Qur'anic verse which reads: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.﴾ Accordingly, it is not permissible to spend Zakah on scholarships,

The Committee of Nigeria intends to raise funds to provide the Du`ah (callers to Islam) working in the Authority (of Du`ah) in Nigeria with some selected books to enable them to call to Allah's (Exalted be He) Path in the best way and to confront the Christian missionaries and the invasion of ideas that contradict the way of Ahl-ul-Sunnah wal-Jama`ah (adherents to the Sunnah and the Muslim mainstream). In this concern, we would like to ask if it is permissible to pay Zakah (obligatory charity) to carry out projects which include:

- 1- Buying books for the Du`ah in the form of a briefcase presented to them.
2. Buying bicycles for them to move from one place to another during their work of calling to Allah's (Exalted be He) Path.
3. Buying microphones to be used in calling to Allah's (Exalted be He) Path in markets and public meetings.
4. Establishing libraries to be a source of knowledge for the Da`wah (calling to Islam), Muslims and whoever wants to know about Islam.

The libraries will also be used as centers for training the Du`ah and qualifying them. We would like that you kindly notify us whether paying Zakah is permissible for all the points mentioned above, clarifying what is permissible to pay Zakah for and what is not. May Allah benefit us and the Muslims with your knowledge.

A: It is not permissible to pay Zakah for the projects mentioned in the question, because they are not included in the generality of Allah's Words about the categories of Zakah recipients: (and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything)) "For Allâh's Cause " as mentioned in this verse, refers to the Mujahids (one striving/fighting in the Cause of Allah). Some knowledgeable scholars said that there is Ijma` (consensus of scholars) about these words, that they refer to the Mujahids. But, it is permissible to pay Zakah to poor teachers and Du`ah, and also to the needy students and employees because of their poverty, as Allah (Glorified be He) says: (As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor)) and so on, to the end of the verse. A: It is not lawful to spend Zakah on buying books, printing them, or paying for postal charges, because the categories of Zakah recipients have been clarified by Allah (Glorified be He) in His Glorious Book as follows: ﴿As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\) and those employed to collect \(the funds\), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined \(towards Islâm\)﴾ and so on, to the end of the verse.

Q: Your Eminence Shaykh, we would like to ask about the ruling on paying Zakah (obligatory charity) to cooperating offices for Da`wah and guidance spread throughout the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, praise be to Allah. If this is permissible, can we use the Zakah money to fund activities of such offices or should it be allocated only to new converts and those inclined to Islam so as to attract their hearts to Islam? Answer us, may Allah benefit you and reward you with the best!

A: It is obligatory to give Zakah to any of the eight categories of Zakah recipients as prescribed by Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) in the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) that reads: (As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor)) ... (Surah Al-Tawbah 9:60). A person liable for Zakah should give it personally to those deserving it or deputize a trustworthy person to assign it to any of such categories on their behalf. In this regard, Zakah may not be allocated to buying books or similar charitable activities as this runs counter to the text of the above-quoted Ayah. Moreover, persons referred to above are not included in the category of those whose hearts are to be attracted to Islam, as it refers to chieftains of high and respectable tribal esteem.

Fatwa no. 18290

Praise be to Allah, the Charity Foundation for Orphans in Makkah Al-Mukarramah was founded. Article (3) of the Foundation statute defines its objectives as follows:

The Foundation aims at offering services needed locally without financial profit. Following is a list of services:

1- Inculcate the principles of the true religion of Islam and the sound creed into the minds and the conscience of orphans, so that they might grow up firm in belief, steadfast in faith and of sound mind.

2- Provide orphans, or generally all minors who have been deprived of certain needs, with the necessary moral and material care since birth until they are fully educated or professionally trained, thus preparing them to face life's difficulties.

The following are examples of types of care provided:

a- Guarantee monthly assistance to those who sponsor orphans and their likes to help them maintain the cost of living.

b- Give aid to deal with educational problems that might be an obstacle to orphans and their likes in all stages of education.

c- Provide orphans and others with health care service, so as to guarantee medical management of illnesses or diseases and keep them healthy, vigorous and energetic.

d- Provide orphans and their likes with social care services within their families and natural environment in a way that fulfills their psychological, social, biological and other needs.

3- Seek to set up housing programs, projects and centers and manage them in a sound, scientific method in line with the objectives of the Foundation. They are also managed in such a manner as may confront difficulties that might stand in the way of orphans and others with special needs in their natural environment. The Foundation is also running other programs, projects and institutions within the scope of the Foundation's work with which it is entrusted by the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs.

The overwhelming majority of those whom the Foundation is to care for are orphans who will be housed in the Foundation's headquarters or among their poor and needy families. Moreover, a reasonable number of them will be vagrants who have no breadwinner at all and are thus included under the category of orphans. Is it permissible for the Foundation to provide livelihood, including housing, food, drinking water, clothing, health care, educational and cultural care and the like for orphans and others out of the Zakah (obligatory charity) money received by the Foundation? Note that if we suppose that some of these orphans belong to solvent families, so it will be possible to identify their percentage precisely.

A: If the case is as you mentioned, i.e. these orphans are poor and needy, it is permissible to provide for them out of the Zakah money. As for solvent orphans, it is impermissible to provide for them out of the Zakah money, but out of their own money.

Q: I present to Your Eminence the fact that my father got old and is retired and hence stayed at home. He possesses money in the bank but he is often forgetful. Zakah (obligatory charity) is due on his money deposited with the bank. When he is asked about its Zakah, he says he paid its Zakah. However, owing to my acquaintance with his accounts, I know that he has not paid the obligatory Zakah. I am in charge of many of his works and I can pay his Zakah. Is it permissible for me to do so without his knowledge and approval? Give us a Fatwa. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If you have a legal Wakalah (appointment of a legally accountable person to act on behalf of another for a specific permissible matter) to be in charge of the money of your father, it is obligatory for you to pay Zakah on his behalf. If you do not have such a Wakalah, you have to come to the Mahkamah Shar'iyah (a court dealing with family affairs of Muslims) to take a legal Wakalah to be in charge of your father's money in a way that develops and preserves his money and pay Zakah out of it. We advised them but they insist on this. Is it permissible to give them Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) and give charity to them?

A: If your neighbor is neglectful of Salah and insistent on neglecting it, it is not permissible to pay Zakah to him because he is not a Muslim. Zakah is for the poor Muslims, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: [\(Tell them that Allah has made the payment of Zakah obligatory upon them. A 6: If this woman is given Zakah (obligatory charity) due to her poverty and need, it will be acceptable for her to buy Ud-hiyah and make Hajj (pilgrimage) out of such money. However, she is not permitted to take from Zakah more than what she needs for a year.

Q: A man from our community has a family of eight people. He also possesses a shop but his business is very weak and does not cover the living expenses of his household, let alone the wages of the workers and the rent of the shop which amounts to 35,000 (riyals) per year. He is also indebted so much that he cannot repay his debts. This is due to the weakness of the market and because he bought a house ten years ago. Finally he was afflicted with a thrombosis in the heart and he receives medical treatment. The doctor advised him not to work at the present time. The question is: Is it permissible to give him out of our Zakah? This is because I and many other people are willing to help him but we do not know the legal ruling on this and he may feel embarrassed because of this. However, when he sees your honorable Fatwa, the matter will become clear to him. We thank you. May Allah protect you and help you to succeed!

A: If the condition of the man and his inability to work are as you have mentioned, and his money is not enough to cover his legal expenses and pay his debts, it is acceptable to give him out of the Zakah as much as he needs.

Its branches are 152 centers which provide aid to the sick and the injured of car accidents and hospitalize the sick people who are in need of the hospital facilities and contribute to dealing with catastrophe and relief programs.

Benevolent people and lovers of righteous deeds in our country are numerous and ask about the possibility of donating some of their Zakah (obligatory charity) to the association to contribute to the injured rescue efforts. It may also be included in one of the types of Zakah mentioned in the Holy Book of Allah. Therefore, I beg Your Eminence, and you are known for charitable contributions and initiatives, to look into the possibility whether it is the association's right to take the Zakah money and spend it only on aid and relief programs. I also look forward to the contribution of the benevolent and righteous people to the association's activities which willingly implement the saying of Allah (Exalted and Glorified be He): (if anyone saved a life, it would be as if he saved the life of all mankind.) I pray to Allah (Exalted and Glorified be He) to reward you and put this in your record of righteous deeds.

A: It is not permissible to spend Zakah except on the eight categories which Allah (Exalted be He) mentioned in His Holy Book. Allah (Exalted be He) says: (As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything)) Your association is not included in these categories, because the injured include rich people and non-Muslims and the equipment and medicines are not included in these categories, because their uses are for the injured in general and not limited to the poor.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. (20483)

Q: Some charitable organizations carry out projects for qualifying poor people through teaching them some professions and vocations, such as tailoring and training them in the computer or allowing them to possess some means of production such as buying shops or instruments of a profession or craft mastered by the poor person but does not have the money to make a small business. These organizations have also some other projects to qualify the poor to work and become financially sufficient instead of having to beg. Note that this type of work is meant to achieve the interest of the poor. This is for fear that the poor become incapable of properly managing their money. Is it permissible to spend Zakah money on such projects?

A: Zakah has to be paid to the categories which Allah (Glorified and Exalted be he) has specified by His Saying: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything)﴾ ,

Zakah money should be given directly to the poor in order for them to be able to meet their needs. It is not permissible to spend Zakah on the above-mentioned projects, because this will delay the process of its payment to the poor and will not enable them to benefit from it in meeting their needs.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

Q: The national charitable foundation for home health care allocates annual sums from Zakah to pay needy families for the requirements of their sick people including beds, wheelchairs, ventilators, dialysis machines, artificial nourishment materials in addition to renovation of their houses according to their need and after their injury or by paying for an assistant to take care of the sick person. Can we rely on the payers of Zakah and include the above-mentioned payments in the legal categories of Zakah recipients or in carrying out some collective and individual projects of production to benefit these families? Of course this excludes what is paid to them in cash from the money of Zakah as monthly salaries of aid and in case of emergencies and crises as well as seasonal and religious occasions and feasts. Please let us benefit from your reply. May Allah reward you with the best.

A: It is obligatory to pay Zakah to its eighth categories which Allah (Exalted be He) specified in His Saying: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything)﴾ It is important to pay Zakah to the needy person or his representative. It is not permissible to spend it on public projects, such as hospitals and their requirements, because such projects are financed through donations from sources other than Zakah.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

Fatwa no. (20578)

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has been briefed on what was mentioned to His Eminence, the public Mufti (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from the questioner: the general manager of Al-Jubayl Centre for special qualification and what has been referred to the committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 4956, dated 10/8/1419 A.H., the questioner asks:

We are a private investment foundation caring for and qualifying handicapped children. Our centre has been opened due to the need of the society and for serving the largest possible number of handicapped people to qualify them comprehensively and integrate them into society. Since some benevolent people came to us and expressed their desire to pay part of their Zakah (obligatory charity) to support the handicapped children and to the centre in support of what serves the public interest and because of the keenness of the centre administration to investigate and follow the legal rules and application of the Saying of Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He): \(So ask the people of the Reminder, if you do not know.\) we hope Your Eminence will benefit us with a written Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar).

After studying the fatwa, the committee has replied that Allah (Glorified be He) has specified the channels for spending Zakah and limited them to eight categories defined in His (Exalted be He) saying: \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\) and those employed to collect \(the funds\), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined \(towards Islâm\), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause \(i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle\), and for the wayfarer \(a traveller who is cut off from everything\)\) Therefore, it is not permissible to pay Zakah to any other category including projects, such as educational establishments, hospitals, building Masaajid (mosques) and other similar charitable projects as such things are to be financed by charitable donations, not Zakah.

Q: We have the intention to offer dialysis machines to some remote territories where the sick people die on their way before reaching the nearest place in which such equipment is available. Since this work after Allah (Exalted be He) wills, reduces the death rate and saves a lot of people, is it permissible to establish such centers from Zakah (obligatory charity) money and can it be considered Zakah?

A: It is not permissible to spend Zakah on such a project or any other public charitable project, because the channels for spending Zakah are specified by the eight categories defined in the noble Ayah (Qur'anic verse): «As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor)» (Surah Al-Tawbah 9:60). This is because this project is not included in the categories mentioned in the noble verse. This project can be financed

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the question submitted to His Eminence, the Grand Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from his Royal Highness Prince Saud Al-Faisal, the managing director of the national establishment for protecting and developing natural life, letter no. 1/1283, dated 20/3/1419 A.H. which was referred to the committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars no. 2279, dated 26/3/1419 A.H.. His Highness asks:

The efforts of the national establishment for protecting and developing natural life focus on protecting the natural beings created by Allah (Exalted and Glorified be He), so that they would play their role in the environmental system. Such creatures share the earth with man whom Allah (Exalted be He) has made a viceroy on the earth and to whom He has subjected many of

His creatures including various kinds of animals and plants. The government of the Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques - May Allah protect him - has exerted great efforts to preserve several kinds of animals and plants and has rescued other endangered species. These efforts, with the praise and grace of Allah, succeeded. There is no doubt that the achievement of these aims requires great efforts and bearing huge burdens on the part of the establishment. The establishment is expected to carry out numerous projects requiring a lot of expenditure which is better not to delay. The establishment thinks of establishing a fund for supporting natural life, which gained the support and aid of the Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques and His Excellency Crown Prince and His Excellency the second deputy. The establishment asks Your Eminence about the permissibility and possibility of using Zakah (obligatory charity) money to finance the fund for supporting natural life, aiming at the achievement of the aims of the government to preserve and develop the natural life in this beloved country.

After studying the question, the Fatwa committee replied that spending Zakah on what has been mentioned is not permissible, because it is not included in any of the eighth Zakah recipient categories, which Allah (Glorified be He) mentioned in His Saying: ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.﴾

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the question submitted to His Eminence the Grand Muftý (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from His Eminence member of the Committee for the Friends of the Sick in Al-Jawf, which has been referred to the committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars no. 4213, dated 17/10/1415 A.H. His Eminence asks:

The Committee for the Friends of the Sick in the area of Al-Jawf extends to Your Eminence best regards and appreciation. We hope you will help us by issuing a Fatwa on the question of spending Zakah money received by the committee. We would like to inform Your Eminence that the activity of the Committee for the Friends of the Sick in Al-Jawf is as follows:

1- The committee helps the poor brothers and the underprivileged from the sick people of the area by fulfilling some of their medical needs, such as wheelchairs, hearing aids, eyeglasses, oxygen cylinders and other medical equipment which they cannot afford.

2- Buys nappies for the elderly and nappies and clothes for anonymous children.

3- Secures clothes and other needs for the deserted patients in psychiatric hospital.

4- Provides medical supplies and equipment for hospitals to help raise the health standards offered to the sick people in the area.

5- Builds wards in hospitals to accommodate more patients from the area and upgrades the existent hospitals with office and medical furnishings.

6- Conducts campaigns for raising health awareness and blood donations.

7- Visits hospital inpatients and offers them gifts on occasions and feasts.

After what we have mentioned, we ask Your Eminence:

1- Can the salaries of the secretary and employees of the committee be paid out of the Zakah money, bearing in mind that the secretary does several activities including the collection of funds and letters and the organization of the committee work?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 444)

2- Can we spend part of Zakah money on the needs of work including the costs of printing, paper and posting letters which are sent to individuals and foundations to raise donations as well as the costs of the car used for the work?

3- Is it permissible to spend part of the Zakah money on buying clothes for poor patients, particularly in the psychiatric hospital as well as buying nappies for the elderly and the anonymous children and medical equipment for the poor patients such as wheelchairs, hearing aids, eyeglasses, oxygen cylinders and other medical devices and equipment to measure blood sugar content and so on?

4- Can we spend part of the Zakah money on buying medical equipment for hospitals and building new wards to accommodate more patients?

5- Is it permissible to spend part of the Zakah money on conducting campaigns for health awareness and calling for blood donation?

6- Is it permissible to spend part of the Zakah money on buying gifts for hospital patients on occasions and feasts to raise their morale which helps speed up their recovery?

After what has been mentioned, we hope Your Eminence will direct us to what pleases Allah and how this Zakah can be spent?

(Part No. 8; Page No. 445)

After studying the question, the committee answered as follows:

It is obligatory to spend the Zakah money you receive on its legal categories mentioned in the Ayah (Qur'anic verse): ﴿As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât) are only for the Fuqarâ' (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm), and to free the captives, and for those in debt, and for Allâh's Cause (i.e. for Mujahidûn - those fighting in a holy battle), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise.﴾ The Zakah money has to be distributed the way it was given to you in cash and its recipients can buy what they need or authorize you to do this. It is not permissible for you to buy anything for patients or to spend out of it on your employees, or the projects of the construction committee and its medical equipment or the awareness campaigns, advertisements and gifts.

Q: I am holding the wealth of orphans and I develop it for them by buying cars in cash and selling them by installments. One of those to whom I sold a car on installments owes a sum of 17,000 (riyals) which he has not paid due to his insolvency and he deserves to receive Zakah (obligatory charity). Is it permissible to pay his debts out of the Zakah of the wealth of the orphans which I pay annually? May Allah reward you with the best! May Allah bless you!

A: Paying the debt of the insolvent does not substitute for paying the Zakah of the wealth of the orphans or others. Allah ordered the payment of Zakah which means paying it to its due recipients and allowing him to own it. Paying the debt does achieve this. And Allah knows best.

Fatwa no. (19889)

Q: I have a question from which I seek nothing but good and assistance. I work for a foundation whose owner is well-known for being benevolent, although none can verify this but Allah. All workers in this foundation complain of receiving low salaries, despite the fact that the owner of this foundation is known to be honest and sincere. All workers, without exception, are indebted to this foundation due to the above-mentioned low salaries and the absence of benefits and allowances. The workers do their job because it is their duty, but they are not content with the situation at the foundation.

The question is: Can the owner of the foundation pay part of the debts of the workers from his Zakah (obligatory charity), particularly because they cannot pay their debts as most of them have families and must pay rent. Moreover, a sum of money is deducted from the monthly salary of the worker as the owner of the foundation wishes and the worker is surprised that the deduction has increased and the salary is not sufficient for him.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 448)

As a result, after some days the worker borrows again. The owner of the foundation pays his Zakah in Ramadan. Some are eligible to receive Zakah, but people gather in front of the house and the workplace and he does not know who from among them is eligible to receive Zakah. He just distributes it. Give us a Fatwa on this issue, because there are some people who claim that those workers are not eligible to receive Zakah. Their salaries range from 800 up to maximum of 3000 riyals. I ask you kindly to fax me the answer. May Allah reward you for our sake and that of Islam with the best!

A: If the owner of the foundation pays part of the Zakah of his wealth to those who work under his authority to pay their debts and they are eligible Zakah recipients, and this is not for exploiting or rewarding them, this is permissible and there is nothing wrong with it. The workers should pay their debts which they owe to the foundation where they work willingly and without compulsion or imposing conditions on the part of the foundation. However, if the owner of the foundation deducts the debts of the workers from his Zakah, this is not permissible, because this means that he protects his wealth with his wealth. This is also because the worker may delay the payment of his debts to the foundation, in which case the owner of the foundation would resort to a ploy to protect his wealth with his wealth and because Zakah is payment and receiving.

Q: The husband's father passed away shortly after our marriage. This has resulted in some benevolent people sending us some of the meat of their sacrificial animals and other assistance including grain, dates and milk. Is it permissible for me and my husband to eat and drink from them, knowing that our financial standard is very high, all praise be to Allah.

However, if these debts are that of an insolvent and you do not know whether they will be paid or not, in that case Zakah shall be given when the money is paid off and a year passes over the possession of this money.

Q: The Forensic Medical Committee has issued a decree fining a physician some 450,500 riyals as compensation for a patient treated by the physician and others. The patient suffered from some infirmities. The physician concerned owns no accommodations except one for his family and a car for transportation. The value of both amounts to no more than 80,000 riyals. Fulfilling the commandment of Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) and following the Sunnah of His noble Prophet, we cooperate and work shoulder to shoulder to alleviate the burden of this colleague.

The question is: Can what we donate voluntarily to this colleague to complete the required sum be considered part of Zakah (obligatory charity)? Is it possible to pay Zakah of two years or more in advance?

A: If the case is as you mentioned, it is permissible for you to pay Zakah to this physician to help him pay his debts, because he is one of the eighth eligible recipients of Zakah whom Allah mentioned in Surah (Qur'anic chapter) of Tawbah (repentance to Allah): \(As-Sadaqât \(here it means Zakât \) are only for the Fuqarâ' \(poor\), and Al-Masâkin \(the poor\) and those employed to collect \(the funds\), and to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined \(towards Islâm\), and to free the captives, and for those in debt\) ...etc.

Fatwa no. (20567)

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 452)

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has read the letter that has come to His Eminence, General Mufti (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from the respected General Director of the branch of the Ministry of Islamic Affairs, Endowments, Da`wah, and Guidance in Al-Bahah area, Salih ibn `Aly Al-Zahrany, no. 26/1/2008, dated 29/7/1419 A.H., which was referred to the committee from Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. 4744, dated 3/8/1419 A.H. His Eminence has called for an investigation of the question presented by the citizen, which is attached to the letter of His Eminence that reads:

I did business with someone who took cars from me to help with the marriage of his son for a sum of 160,000 riyals. His son later dissociated himself from him and left the job. I lodged a complaint against this man and a judgment was passed for him to pay me or be imprisoned. He was sentenced to nine months in prison and could not pay back anything of this sum. I agreed with him to mortgage his two low standard houses and own nothing else to pay his debts under the following conditions: to pay me a sum of 80,000 riyals by the end of 1417 A.H. and another sum of 80,000 riyals by the end of 1418 A.H. However, the man managed only to pay 30,000 riyals which he obtained from a benevolent person. He still owes 130,000 riyals. Therefore, the low standard houses are considered to belong to me according to the legal document issued from the legal court of Daws.

Your Eminence, I am convinced that this man is poor and has no accommodations or shelter except these two low standard houses and has also no other source of livelihood. Your Eminence, please give me a Fatwa (may Allah safeguard you) as to whether is it permissible to consider this sum from Zakah (obligatory charity) of my wealth and I will not claim any ownership rights of the two houses?

After studying the question, the committee answered that Zakah is originally intended to give and allow to possess on the part of the one for whom it is obligatory to the one who is eligible to receive it. With regard to the fact that the creditor exempting the insolvent debtors from their debts and consider this Zakah of his wealth, it is not permissible. This is because the Zakah giver in this case will protect and preserve his wealth with his own wealth through the Zakah he gives in return for the debt. This is not permissible. However, if the creditor gives the debtor out of the Zakah of the former's wealth due to the latter's poverty with no condition to pay off the debt or part of it from this money, this is permissible. However, if the creditor receives Zakah and pays the debt out of it willingly, he can do this.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 20335

All praise be to Allah Alone, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon the Last of the Prophets, Muhammad.

(Part No. 8; Page No. 454)

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed what has come to His Eminence the General Mufti (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions) from His Eminence Chief Judge of the Upper Court of Mabraz and the Chief of the Committee for Facilitating Marriage in Al-Ahsa', Shaykh `Abdullah ibn `Abdul-Rahman Al-Mihisin under no. (1592) and dated 22/2/1419 A.H. and which was transferred to the committee from Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars under no. (2206) dated 24/3/1419 A.H. The letter of His Eminence reads:

It gives me pleasure to inform Your Eminence of the issuing of the approval of His Highness the Governor of Al-Ahsa' for the establishment of a committee to help the youth get married. The committee is part of the charitable committees in the Kingdom which provide financial support to the youth wishing to get married. The aid is in the form of loans, which are to be paid back, or in the form of grants to them as a charity or Zakah.

According to the Fatwa of Your Eminence, which permitted channelling some aid from Zakah funds to those who wish to get married, the committee has received some Zakah funds from some benevolent people. Since one form of aid provided by the committee is to offer loans to be paid back by the borrower, I hope - after Your Eminence has investigated the case, you can give us a Fatwa in this regard. Is it permissible to offer loans to those wishing to get married from the Zakah funds, which are to be repaid to the committee?

Or, should the Zakah money be given only to the needy with no obligation on them to repay what they have received? It should be noted that most of the funds that come to the committee are paid as Zakah?

After studying the question, the committee answered that Zakah funds should be given to their due recipients including the poor, the needy, those who are in debt and other categories of Zakah recipients. The money should be given to them as their due right and should be distributed among them immediately, in order to relieve the conscience of its possessors as Allah (Glorified be He) and his Messenger (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) ordered. It is not legally permissible to lend the Zakah funds to those who need it for getting married as well as for other legal expenditures. The primer objective of Zakah is to fulfil the needs of the poor and the needy and pay the debts of the debtors. Offering the Zakah money as loans will cause failure in the achievement of these needs or delay in benefiting from them.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his

The first question of Fatwa no. 18559

Q 1: How authentic are the following two Hadiths?

The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(Fast and you will be healthy.\) And:
\(Sleeping in Ramadan is an act of worship.\)

A: First: The phrase \(Fast and you will be healthy.\) is a Da`if (weak) Hadith. It was related by Al-Tabarany in Al-Awsat, Abu Nu`aym on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, and Ibn `Ady on the authority of Ibn `Abbas. The Sanad (chain of narrators) of this Hadith contains Nashhal who has been judged by Hadith scholars as Matruk (a narrator whose Hadith transmission was discarded due to unreliability).

Second: As far as we know, there is no Hadith that says: "Sleeping in Ramadan is an act of worship." However, one narration which reads: \(The sleep of a fasting person is an act of worship.\) has been mentioned by Al-Suyuty in Al-Jami` Al-Saghir. He attributed it to Al-Bayhaqy but classified it as Da`if. The Sanad of this Hadith contains Ma`ruf ibn Hassan who has been judged by scholars of Hadith as a weak narrator.

Congratulations on the coming of Ramadan

Fatwa no. 20638

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has examined the Fatwa request submitted to His Eminence, the Grand Mufti, by Al-Ahsa' General Court judge Muhammad ibn Sulayman Al-Sa'id, which was referred to the Committee by the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 5845, dated 24/9/1419 A.H. Following is a statement of the question:

Exchanging congratulations at the start of the blessed month of Ramadan whether by shaking hands, embracing one another, exchanging family visits, as commonly practiced by the people of Al-Ahsa': to which category does doing so belong: customarily practices or `Ibadat (acts of worship)? If it is better not to do so, what should the congratulated person do? Should they show disapproval of those who congratulate them? Please, bear in mind that such people do so in good faith.

I ask Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) to prolong our lives to witness Ramadan many years and enjoy its blessings for long. I also ask Him to make us all and our parents among those who will be manumitted from Hellfire during this month. Indeed, He (Glorified be He) is the Most Generous, Ever-Bountiful. May Allah safeguard and protect you.

After examining the Fatwa request, the Committee gives the answer that there is nothing wrong with exchanging congratulations on the coming of Ramadan. The Prophet (peace be upon him) used to announce to his Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) the coming of Ramadan by saying: \(There has come to you a great and blessed month.\) He (peace be upon him) also used to educate them about the merits of Ramadan and urge them to make the best use of it.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

Moon Sighting, Different Risings and Astronomical Calculations

The eighth question of Fatwa no. 20308

Q 8: We are accustomed to fasting the month of Ramadan as thirty days, not less.

A: This is wrong and a Munkar act (that which is unacceptable or disapproved of by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect) because it is in disagreement with the commands of the Book of Allah, Sunnah (whatever reported from the Prophet Muhammad) of His Messenger Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him), and the regular practice of his Sahabah (Companions) and the Tabi'un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet Muhammad) (may Allah be pleased with them all). This is based on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Glorified be He) says: ﴿They ask you \(O Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\) about the new moons. Say: These are signs to mark fixed periods of time for mankind and for the pilgrimage.﴾ Allah (Glorified be He) also says: ﴿And whatsoever the Messenger \(Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\) gives you, take it; and whatsoever he forbids you, abstain \(from it\).﴾ The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) is reported to have said: ﴿Start fasting on seeing the new moon \(of Ramadan\), and stop fasting on seeing the new moon \(of Shawwal\), and if the sky is overcast \(and you cannot see it\), complete the term \(of the month\) as thirty \(days of Sha'ban\).﴾ In another narration: ﴿Observe fasting for thirty days.﴾ In another narration: ﴿then complete the thirty days \(of Sha'ban\).﴾

These Ayahs and Hadiths indicate that it is obligatory to rely on sighting the new moon in determining the beginning and the end of Ramadan. If sighting the moon proves that the month of Ramadan is complete, i.e. thirty days, then people must comply with this. Likewise, if it proves that the month is only twenty-nine days, then they must adhere to it. Many authentic Hadiths have been narrated from the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) to the effect that the month can be twenty-nine days or thirty days. That is why the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) commanded Muslims to sight the new moon. Sha'ban and Ramadan must be completed as thirty days if the new moon is not sighted on the twenty-ninth day of each of them. Therefore, it is not for anybody to say that the month is always thirty days. This is because such an opinion is not in agreement with the authentic Hadiths narrated from the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). It is also in disagreement with the Ijma' (consensus of Muslim scholars). All scholars unanimously confirmed that the month could be either thirty or twenty-nine days. The astronomical calculations also prove this fact, and it is known by everybody who is interested in this field. Allah (Glorified be He) said in His Glorious Book: ﴿O you who believe! Obey Allâh and obey the Messenger \(Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم\), and those of you \(Muslims\) who are in authority. \(And\) if you differ in anything amongst yourselves, refer it to Allâh and His Messenger \(صلى الله عليه وسلم\), if you believe in Allâh and in the Last Day. That is better and more suitable for final determination.﴾ Scholars of Tafsir (exegesis of the meanings of the Holy Qur'an) and others stated:

"Referring matters of controversy to Allah means judging them according to the commands of the Holy Qur'an, while referring them to the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) means abiding by the teachings of the Prophet Muhammad when he was alive or to follow his authentic Sunnah after his death." We have presented to you pieces of evidence from the Book of Allah, Sunnah of His Messenger (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and the Ijma` of Muslim scholars that the month of Ramadan can be either thirty days or twenty-nine days. No one is allowed to disregard this fundamental principle. Allah is the One sought for help. He is sufficient for us and the Best Disposer of affairs.

First question from Fatwa No. 20400

Q 1: In India, the beginning of the Month of Ramadan and `Eid Al-Fitr (the Feast of Breaking the Fast) are determined based on the annual calendar which is issued by the Indian Parliament; namely, the beginning and the end of Ramadan are predetermined at the beginning of the year. By the same token, `Eid Al-Adha (the Feast of the Sacrifice) is also predetermined based on the annual calendar, and not based on the day of `Arafah. Moreover, Muslims in India usually sacrifice their animals after the time other Muslims, especially in Arab states, have made their sacrifices.

Now, our question is: concerning the fast of Ramadan, we usually start our fast when we receive a confirmation of the beginning of Ramadan by calling our families in Saudi Arabia, or in Kuwait or in the Gulf states in general, Our commence of the fast usually occurs before the fast of Muslims in India. Is our fast valid or invalid in this case, taking into consideration that most of the Muslim foreign students in India fast after the new moon is sighted in the Gulf states. Please provide us with a Fatwa on this matter.

A 1: You should observe the fast with Muslims in your country, and it is not permissible to have differences among the residents of the same country in this regard, due to the Prophet's (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) saying: \(The beginning of Ramadan is the day when you begin fasting, the end of Ramadan is on the day when you end it, and 'Eid Al-Adha is on the day when you sacrifice.\) It is noteworthy that the legal confirmation of the beginning of the lunar month is legally established by sighting the new moon with the naked eye or by adopting the means which help the eye sight the new moon. If the new moon can not be sighted, then it is an obligation to complete the month as thirty days. For, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: \(Start the fast on seeing the new moon \(of Ramadan\), and end the fast on seeing the new moon \(of Shawwal\), and if the sky is overcast \(and you cannot see it\), complete the term of the month \(thirty days of Sha`ban.\) Agreed upon its authenticity.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Fatwa number (20976)

Q: Is it permissible to know and predetermine the beginning of the blessed Month of Ramadan by the means of calculation based on the implicit meaning of the noble Qur'anic verse number twenty-five of Surat Al-Kahf?

A: The Islamic correct method of determining the beginning of the Month of Ramadan can be applied by sighting the new moon of Ramadan or by the completion of the Month of Sha'ban as thirty days, following what has been authentically reported from the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) who said: \(Observe the fast upon sighting the new moon \(of Ramadan\), and end the fast upon sighting the new moon \(of Shawwal\), and if the sky is overcast \(and you cannot see it\), complete the term of the month of Sha'baan as thirty days.\) As for using a computational method based on an allegedly implicit meaning of certain Qur'anic verse and their allusive numbers in order as a way to predetermine the beginning of the Month of Ramadan or any other lunar Months, this is an invalid method which keeps people away from the real understanding of the Holy Qur'an and from reflecting upon its true meanings. This is merely a waste of time and effort on useless things. Therefore, it is an obligation upon Muslims to eschew these fancies and to busy themselves with what is beneficial for them in their Deen, their lives and their Afterlife.

First and second question from Fatwa number (17638)

Q1: When does the day start according to Islam Law? Does it start at the time of Fajr (Dawn) prayer or right after midnight as established by astronomers? And what is the proof for that from the Holy Qur'an and the Sunnah?

A1: The Islamic day starts at the daybreak where the Fajr prayer is offered. Allah [Most Exalted be He] said: ﴿It is made lawful for you to have sexual relations with your wives on the night of As-Saum (the fast).﴾ till His [Exalted be He] saying: ﴿So now have sexual relations with them and seek that which Allâh has ordained for you (offspring), and eat and drink until the white thread (light) of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread (darkness of night), then complete your Saum (fast) till the nightfall.﴾ Moreover, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: ﴿Verily, Bilal announces the Adhan (call to Salah) during the night, so continue eating and drinking until the second Adhan is raised by Ibn umm Maktum ﴾ .

Q2: Must one who starts the fast upon receiving the news of the beginning of the Month of Ramadan during the day time have to make up for this day? Some people argue for this ruling when indicating to the Hadith of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) in which he says: (Whoever has not resolved the intention during the night to fast the following day, his Sawm (Fast) is null.) or as he (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said. And what is the ruling on one who has not started the fast upon receiving the announcement of the beginning of Ramadan? Is he obligated to make up for this day and offer expiation?

A2: Whoever has received the news of the beginning of the Month of Ramadan during the day time must complete the fast the rest of the day, by way of honoring the month. He then must make up for this day, since he has not actually fasted it from the beginning.

We ask Allah for success, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, upon his family and his Companions.

Fatwa number (21808)

Q: I have some relatives who do not start their fast with us when Ramadan commences, claiming that one of their Shaykhs in Makkah has not commanded them to start the fast. Thus, they may delay their fast by one or two days after us. They have been approached with advice in order to follow the community in the beginning of the fast, but they still insist on their practice. Their excuse is that their Shaykh has not yet commanded them to start fasting and the sighting of the new moon has not been established for him.

My question, Your Eminence, is: Can the visual sighting of the new moon established by the witness of one man, two men or more? Secondly, Your Eminence: What is the ruling on the fast of those people? Should I maintain good relations with them or desert them? And what is the ruling on my dealing with them and keeping good relations with them? Please give us the Fatwa regarding this, may Allah reward you well and may Allah benefit everyone with your knowledge.

A: The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: «Observe the fast when you see it \(the new moon\), and break the fast when you see it \(the new moon\). If the sky is overcast, then calculate it \(the months of Sha'ban or Shawwal as thirty days.\)» In another narration he (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: «then complete the month of Sha'ban as thirty days.» Therefore, it is incumbent upon them to start their fast with other Muslims, and it is not allowed for them to differ with them under the pretence that so and so has not yet commanded them to begin fasting. There is no obedience to a human if it entails the disobedience of the Creator. The Messenger (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) commanded us to fast along with other Muslims in the community. He (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) stated: «Sawm \(Fasting, i.e. beginning of Ramadan\) is the day when you start Sawm, and Al-Adha \(the Feast of the Sacrifice\) is the day when you sacrifice.» He (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) also said: «Keep firmly attached to the Jama`ah \(the Muslim main body which follows the Qur'an and Sunnah\), for the Hand of Allah is with the Jama`ah, and anyone who breaks away from it will be cast in Hellfire.» Moreover, it is not a condition that everyone must sight the new moon in order to start fasting. If it is sighted by just one person, then it becomes an obligation upon everyone to start the fast. When Ibn 'Umar (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) told the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) that he had sighted the new moon, the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) commanded all people to start the fast.

We ask Allah for success, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, upon his family and his Companions.

Fatwa no. (21800)

Q: You know, may Allah safeguard you, what occurs every year, especially this year, with regard to the difference of the Muslim countries over the beginning and end of the obligatory Sawm (Fast). Some Libyans observed a 31-day Sawm; some other Libyans received a Fatwa from their scholars and some of our scholars to break their Sawm in secret on the 30th day of Ramadan. After the latter had broken their Sawm, they came to us seeking a Fatwa on their breaking Sawm. This resulted in a conflict of Fatwas. We have refrained from giving a Fatwa to this latter group. Also some countries observed Sawm after us like Morocco, and then they came to this country [Saudi Arabia]. May you, kindly, submit these cases to the competent scholarly authorities whose issued Fatwas are accepted by the laypeople. We pose here, in brief, the questions we want to ask about as follows:

1. If the Sawm of those who fast (a day) before us is based - as some of them have mentioned- on seeing the crescent of Ramadan [in their country], was it permissible for them to follow our country in its Sawm when they came here, and due to this, fasting 31days?
2. If their Sawm is based on the calculation of time, would this mean they should fast 31 days? Would the ruling differ if their Sawm was based on the calculation of Greenwich Meridian Time - according to some people, as the Greenwich Meridian line passes by Morocco at a two thousand km. distance from Libya?
3. What is the legal ruling to be followed in the future in cases similar to those who broke their Sawm after completing a thirty-day Fast, whether due to having been given a Fatwa on their doing so or not? Also, what is the legal ruling to be given to those who observed a twenty nine day Fast, following the Sawm of Saudi Arabia, while their country where they started Sawm observed a thirty-day Fast as was the case in previous years?

A: First: The criterion upon which the beginning and end of Ramadan is based is watching the crescent, not astronomical calculations of time; as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Start fasting on seeing it \(the new moon of Ramadan\), and give up fasting on seeing it \(the new moon of Shawwal\).\) The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said: \(Do not fast until you sight it \(the moon\) and do not break your fast until you sight it.\) What is meant here is to observe Sawm on seeing the crescent of Ramadan with the naked eye or by the tools that help a person watch the sky and identify the crescent, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said:

(Part No. 9; Page No. 17)

\(The beginning of Ramadan is on the day when you begin fasting. the end of Ramadan is on the day when you end it, and `Eid Al-Adha is on the day when you sacrifice.\)

Second: The criterion of dating events as considered by the Muslims is the (Hijri) lunar calendar, according to which a month is at least twenty nine days or thirty days at most.

Third: A Muslim person is required to observe and break their Fast according to the country he or she is residing in at that time, whether this country is their homeland or they are only residents in it, and whether the beginning and end of Fast in this country is determined by the Government, the Mufty (Muslim scholar qualified to issue legal opinions), or through the Shar`y (Islamic legal) judiciary court and the religious judge to whom determining the same is assigned. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The beginning of Ramadan is on the day when you begin fasting, the end of Ramadan is on the day when you end it, and 'Eid Al-Adha is on the day when you sacrifice.\) This Hadith is reported by Abu Dawud, and Al-Tirmidhy through good Isnad (chain of narrators). Also, when the Muslims observe and break their Sawm at the same time in the same country, this indicates their unity and distance them from disagreement and difference.

Fourth: The Muslims residing in non-Islamic countries are to refer to the Islamic centers in such countries, as such centers replace the Islamic governments with regard to identifying the crescent of Ramadan.

Fifth: The criterion of determining the beginning of the month of Sawm is what is considered in this concern in the country in which a Muslim person resides at that time, and [should he or she travel to another country during this month] the criterion of determining the end of the same is what is considered in the country to which he or she has traveled. Accordingly, a Muslim is to end the month according to the country to which he or she has traveled, even if that country ended Sawm before the country where he had started his or her Fast; but if the duration of their Sawm days was less than twenty nine days, they must make up for a missed-Fast day so that they abide by the least duration of the month of Sawm.

If a Muslim completed a thirty day Fast in the country he traveled to, [calculating the fasting day he or she has observed with the country which started fasting a day before the country he traveled to], and there is still a day to be observed by the latter, he or she are to observe Sawm with its people to celebrate `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) and offer the `Eid Prayer with them.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Second question from Fatwa number (21672)

Q2: How is the first day of every month determined, and how do the scholars in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia know the number of the days of every Month when preparing the annual lunar calendar?

I must mention to you that the answer to this question is paramount for us, due to huge disagreement on how to determine the first day of the month. This confusion cause some Muslims sometimes to fast one or two days before or after Ramadan. Some of them celebrate `Eid Al-Adha (the Feast of the Sacrifice) and sacrifice their animals on the day of `Arafah. The only reason for this confusion is the lack of sound knowledge regarding the method of determining the first day of the month and the number of each month's days. Moreover, the new moon does not clearly appear to us on the first day of the month.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 19)

A2: The beginning and end of Islamic appointed times of rituals, such as Ramadan, Hajj (pilgrimage) and other rituals are determined by sighting the new moon with the naked eye. It is not permissible to rely on predetermined calculations and calendars which are made for the next ten years. This ruling is based on Allah's [Exalted be He] saying: ﴿They ask you (O Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم) about the new moons. Say: These are signs to mark fixed periods of time for mankind and for the pilgrimage.﴾ and on the Prophet's (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) saying: ﴿Observe the fast when you see it (the new moon) and break the fast when you see it (the new moon). If the sky is overcast, complete the month of Sha'ban as thirty days.﴾ Recorded by Al-Bukhari and Muslim in their two Sahihs.

We ask Allah for success, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, upon his family and his Companions.

Fatwa no. 15626

Q: Someone completed the Sawm (Fast) of Ramadan as thirty days in his own country. On the next day, he traveled to another country to find the people there fasting. So he fasted on that day like them to have the total of 31 fasted days. He later came to know that the people of the country referred to had sighted the new moon of Ramadan two days after his country had sighted it. In general, it may happen that after completing the Sawm of Ramadan, either as 29 days in view of sighting the new moon of Shawwal or as 30 days for not sighting it, a Muslim travels to another country to find the people there still have to observe Sawm for two more days. In such a case, should such a person fast on these two additional days, or not fast due to the fact that Ramadan can be no more than 30 days? I greatly appreciate Your Eminence issuing us a Fatwa in this regard.

A: If someone, after completing the Sawm of Ramadan in their country, breaks the Sawm on the first day of Shawwal on a Shar`y (Islamically legal) basis, they should not observe Sawm if they happen to travel to another country where people are still fasting because Ramadan, according to their sighting, has begun there on a later date. This is because they are to abide by the calendar of the country where they initiated their Sawm provided that ending the Sawm was founded on a Shar`y basis. However, they should not eat openly lest discord should take place. And Allah knows best.

Q: In some Muslim countries, there might be some delay during the Night of Doubt in the announcement of the beginning of Ramadan, resulting in the inability of some people to stay up long enough to hear whether the month has begun.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 21)

My question is: If one is overcome by sleep and cannot wait until the official announcement of one's country regarding the beginning of the month, how then can one make the intention to fast? Can one condition their intention to the beginning of the month by saying: If Ramadan starts tomorrow I will fast, and if not I will not fast? Will one have an excuse and thus can make the intention in the morning if is informed that the month has started? Or, what should one do in this circumstance?

A: If one goes to bed without knowing if the month has begun and does not wake up until morning the following day only to realize that the month has already started, then one must fast for the remainder of that day and make up for it after Ramadan.

We ask Allah for success, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, upon his family and his Companions.

Q: Is it lawful to start fasting Ramadan in Mayotte island Comoros on a day other than that on which Makkah Al-Mukarramah started fasting or not?

May you, please, cite the evidence for your answer? Also, is it lawful to offer the Prayer of `Eid-ul-Adha (the Festival of the Sacrifice) on a day other than that on which the `Eid Day is celebrated in Makkah Al-Mukarramah or not? Please cite the evidence of your answer, especially that in this season, like all previous seasons of fasting, the majority of the people of the Mayotte islands started fasting on Monday; March 5, 2001 instead of Tuesday, March 6, 2001, noting that our island is located on the same meridian as the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, our sister Muslim Country.

A: It is obligatory for Muslims in each country to start the fasting and end it, and to offer the Prayer of `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) and the Prayer of `Eid-ul-Adha, upon sighting the related new moon in their respective countries; otherwise, they are to calculate the respective month [Sha'ban or Ramadan or Dhul-Qa`dah] as thirty days. For, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Fast when you see it \(the new moon\), and break your fast when you see it. If the weather is cloudy, calculate it,» meaning calculate (the months of Sha'ban or Shawwal as thirty days). In another version of this Hadith, the second part of the conditional clause reads: «then complete the month of Sha'ban to be thirty days.» Accordingly, when the new moon is seen in a certain country [on the 29th night of Sha`ban], or the latter is completed as thirty days, all the people of that country must start the fasting of Ramadan. The same applies to the time of `Eid-ul-Adha, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Sawm \(Fasting, i.e. beginning of Ramadan\) is the day when you start Sawm, Fitr \(Breaking the Fast, i.e. end of Ramadan\) is the day when you end the fast, and Al-Adha \(the Festival of the Sacrifice\) is the day when you sacrifice.»

The meaning of Imsak

Q 1: I would like Your Eminence to clarify the meaning of Imsak. Is it only a commendable act, or are all Muslims required to abide by it? Is it true that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) specified the time of Imsak as being equal to the recitation of fifty Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) before Fajr (Dawn) Prayer? Scholars estimated it to be half an hour. What is the ruling on whoever eats or drinks while the Adhan (call to Prayer) for Fajr is being announced? Does Sawm (Fast) start upon hearing the Adhan for Fajr Prayer, or half an hour before Adhan, or after the Adhan is announced?

A: Imsak means abstention from food and drink and all that invalidates Sawm from the beginning of the appointed time of Sawm. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) clarifies in the Glorious Qur'an the starting time of Sawm, which is the break of dawn, saying: ﴿and eat and drink until the white thread \(light\) of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread \(darkness of night\), then complete your Saum \(fast\) till the nightfall.﴾ The Adhan for Fajr Prayer is a proclamation of the break of dawn. Therefore, you have to stop eating and drinking when you hear it.

Q: What is the ruling on a person who delays breaking Sawm (Fast) until after Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan)? It is noteworthy that the person concerned is well-aware of the rulings pertaining to breaking Sawm. Also, when observing voluntary Sawm, he is in the habit of breaking Sawm after `Isha' (Night) Prayer. What is the ruling on the validity of Sawm as such? I appreciate giving me advice in this regard.

A: Sawm ends at sunset. This is based on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿...then complete your Saum \(fast\) till the nightfall.﴾ This is also based on the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said: ﴿When night comes from this direction \(east\) and the day departs from this direction \(west\) and the sun has set, it is time for the fasting person to break Sawm.﴾ The Prophet (peace be upon him) is also reported to have said: ﴿People will remain on the right path \(i.e., acting upon the Sunnah\) as long as they hasten to break Sawm \(immediately at sunset\).﴾ Only Mu'tadi's (those who introduce innovations in religion) who contradict the Sunnah (action following the example of the Prophet) consider delaying breaking the Sawm until after sunset as an act of `Ibadah (worship). Anyone who does so should repent to Allah of it. However, it is permissible for a Muslim to continue Sawm until the time of Sahar (pre-dawn time), although it is better not to do so. The Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade fasting for consecutive days without breaking Sawm, saying:

﴿Do not fast continuously day and night; anyone who wishes to continue Sawm may only do so until the time of Sahar.﴾

The second question of Fatwa no. 18771

Q 2: Should a person, who is invited by a Muslim brother to a daytime meal, break Sawm (Fast)?

A: It is not permissible to break an obligatory Sawm. As for voluntary Sawm, a Muslim has the choice either to continue or break the Sawm, although it is better to continue Sawm. It is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(When any of you is invited to a meal, they should accept \(the invitation\). If they are fasting, they should say, 'I am fasting.'\) According to another narration, the Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said: \(If they are fasting, they should make Du`a' \(for the inviter\), and if they are not fasting, they should partake of the meal.\)

Q: Is it permissible to fast without having Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast)? May Allah reward you with the best.

A: A fasting person is recommended to have Suhur before dawn breaks as it gives the energy to fast. The Prophet (peace be upon him) encouraged Muslims to have Suhur stating that there is a blessing in this meal. However, Sawm (Fast) will still be valid even if one does not have Suhur.

Fatwa no. 15861

Q: What is the ruling on a person who mistakenly breaks their fast five minutes before the Adhan (call to Prayer) of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer is announced? The reason is related to miscalculation of time.

A: The time of the fast starts from the break of dawn until sunset. A person is required to make up for their fast if they mistakenly broke it before sunset. One should not solely depend on checking the time by looking at the clock when breaking the fast. The visualization of the setting of the sun must also be taken into consideration. This is because the day length differs from one day to another.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 27)

Q 2: What is the ruling on a person who starts the fast of Ramadan despite the fact that the Ministry of Religious Affairs has announced that the moon has not yet been sighted?

A: It is not permissible to fast one or two days before ascertaining the beginning of Ramadan. Once it is announced that Ramadan has not yet started, one should not keep the fast; rather they have to break their fast. This is based on the Hadith in which the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) is reported to have said: «Do not observe the fast a day or two ahead of Ramadan, except in the case that a person had already intended to observe a particular fast; in which case he may fast that day.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

Third and fourth questions from Fatwa number (15905)

Q3: Is it permitted to break the fast immediately upon hearing the Adhan (call to Salah) of Maghrib (Sunset) prayer during Ramadan, or must one wait until the Mu'adhin (caller to Salah) has finished the Adhan and then one may break the fast? ?

A3: One should break the fast when one has clearly setting of the sun, or by hearing the Adhan of the Mu'adhin who raises the Adhan only after the sun has set. Thus, one should break fast upon hearing the Adhan.

Q4: Is it permissible to drink while the Mu'adhin is still in the middle of raising the Adhan for Fajr (Morning) prayer during Ramadan?

A4: It is incumbent upon the fasting person to intend the fast when clearly seeing that the dawn time has fallen or when hearing the Adhan of the Mu'adhin who thoroughly makes sure that the Fajr time has fallen before making the Adhan. Allah [Most Exalted be He] said: \(and eat and drink until the white thread \(light\) of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread \(darkness of night\)\)

Second question from Fatwa number (17549)

Q2: Allah [Most Exalted be He] says: ﴿then complete your Saum \(fast\) till the nightfall﴾ It is established that the Shi`ah (Shiites) quote this verse as evidence that breaking the fast should not take place except after seeing the stars in the sky, which for them is the actual approach of the night, as stated in the story of Prophet Ibarhim (Abraham) (peace be upon him) in which Allah says: ﴿When the night covered him over with darkness he saw a star.﴾ Then, what is the reply to their claim, keeping in mind that they deny some Ahadith which we quoted for them as evidence for breaking the fast upon the setting of the sun. They also claim that the Holy Qur'an has more authority than the Hadith?

A2: If the sun has set, then it is the time to break his fast. The setting of the sun is the inception of the night, according to the Prophet's (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) statement: ﴿When night falls from this side and the day disappears from this side

(Part No. 9; Page No. 29)

and the sun has set, then one should break his fast.﴾ .

Fatwa number (17689)

Q: A group of people emerged in our town saying that they staunch adherents to Sunnah of Al-Mustafa (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). But it is observed that they break fast in Ramadan and in other months at twilight (the time the sun is declining). They also say that the Hadith which they quote in support of their action is sound and authentic. What is your opinion with regard to this issue, O our Shaykh?

A: Allah [Most Exalted be He] says: ﴿then complete your Saum \(fast\) till the nightfall﴾ and the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) stated: ﴿When night falls from this side and the day disappears from this side and the sun has set, then the fasting person should break fast.﴾ Reported by Al-Bukhari. Therefore, it is not allowed to break fast until the sun has completely set and declined below the western horizon and the night has fallen in the eastern horizon. This can be ascertained either by witnessing the setting of the sun or by hearing the Mu'adhin (caller to Salah) making the Adhan (call to Salah) at the prescribed time.

We ask Allah for success, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, upon his family and his Companions.

The second question of Fatwa no. 19793

Q 2: Does Iftar (breaking the Fast) during Ramadan start upon hearing the Adhan (call to Prayer) of the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer or upon seeing the setting of the sun? According to a Hadith, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) was reported that: (Once he was on a journey, he said to one of his Companions: "Get up and mix Sawiq (powdered barley) with water for us." He then bade him mount a camel and watches for the sunset. once he has seen it, they would immediately break fast.)

A: The fast is to be ended upon the sunset or when one has been informed by a trustworthy person that the time of Iftar has become due. Alternatively one may hearken to hear the Adhan of the Maghrib Prayer.

Q 1: The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(The Du`a' \(supplication\) of a fasting person at the time of breaking Sawm \(Fast\) will not be rejected.\) What is the exact time referred to by the phrase "Du`a' at the time of breaking Sawm"? Does it refer to Du`a' made just few moments before Iftar (breaking the Fast), or immediately after it?

A: This Hadith is related by Ibn Majah. The author of Al-Zawa'id ranked its Isnad as Sahih (authentic).

(Part No. 9; Page No. 31)

Focusing on the question, Du`a' can be made before or after Iftar because the preposition "at" refers to both times.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20336

Q 2: What is the ruling on a person who delays breaking Sawm (Fast) until a long time after Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer during Ramadan; for example, at 9 or 10 p.m.?

A: A fasting person should break Sawm immediately at sunset. This complies with the regular practice and words of the Prophet (peace be upon him). In this regard, it is reported on the authority of Sahl ibn Sa'd (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: «People will remain on the right path (i.e., acting upon the Sunnah) as long as they hasten to break Sawm (immediately at sunset).» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). In brief, delaying Iftar until a long time after sunset does not conform to the Sunnah; rather, it is a Bid'ah (innovation in religion).

Q 3: We cannot hear the Adhan (call to Prayer) because the Masjid (mosque) is far away from the place where we live. Is it permissible for us to break our fast once we see that the sun has set?

due to heavy clouds, then you may break your Sawm (Fast) even if you are too far away from the mosque to hear the Adhan. Fatwa no. 18372

Q: What are the Islamic etiquettes one should follow when breaking the Fast? Many people take long time in eating until the time of Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer is over. They claim that Salah (Prayer) should be delayed once the food is served. Is this claim true? What should one do when breaking the Fast? Does one have some dates first, then resume the Iftar (breaking the Fast) for after offering Salah, or should one have all the Iftar course first and then offer Salah?

A: The Sunnah is that the fasting person should break their fast once they are sure that the sun has set. This is based on the Hadith in which the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: “The people will continue to be in a blessing so long as they hasten to break the fast.” Another Hadith says: “The most beloved of Allah's servants to Him are those who hasten to break their fasts.” It is more desirable that the fasting person should break their fast by eating some dates and resume eating after until after offering the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer. In this way they will combine between the Sunnah of hastening to break the fast and offering the Maghrib Prayer in congregation and at its appointed time. By doing so, one will be following the practice of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). Concerning the Hadith which says: “No prayer should be \(rightly performed\) when the food is served, and one should postpone his prayer when he is prompted by the call of nature” Also, there is another Hadith which reads: “When the supper is served and the time for ‘Isha’ \(Night\) Prayer is due, one should first start by having supper.” There is a number of Hadiths narrated to the same effect. They mean that when food is already served, one should first eat and then offer Salah (Prayer). One reason for this is to ensure that one is fully concentrating in their Salah, and not distracted by being busy thinking about food. However, one should not ask for a meal to be served if eating the meal first will make him miss offering Salah in congregation and at its appointed time.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

at our home including family members and relatives? Are we rewarded for serving Iftar to fasting persons to whom we extend a special invitation during Ramadan?

A: It is authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Anyone who offers a fasting person something to break their Sawn will earn the same reward as them, without diminishing in the slightest the reward of the one fasting.» (Related by Al-Tirmidhy) The Hadith refers to any fasting Muslim, especially those who deserve to be charitably invited to Iftar, such as poor and needy people or a wayfarer. It carries the same connotation as the Hadith saying: «Anyone who equips a warrior \(going to fight\) in the Way of Allah \(is like one who\) actually fights.»

I heard from some Muslim brothers that the collective Iftar (breaking the fast), whether it is during the Month of Ramadan or during a voluntary fasting, is an act of Bid'ah (heresy in religion). Is this true?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 35)

A: There is no harm in having collective Iftar during Ramadan or in any other month, as long as such a gathering is not perceived as a form of worship. Allah [Most Exalted be He] said: \(No sin on you whether you eat together or apart.\) However, if it is feared that the collective Iftar during voluntary fasting might include showing off and is seen as an act of distinguishing the fasting people from those who are not fasting, then Iftar in this case is reprehensible to observe.

Fatwa no. 17717

Q: First: The Company where we work opens its restaurant during the daytime in Ramadan to serve meals to non-Muslim employees. The evil consequences of such violation, as we pointed out, led some weak Muslims to break their Sawm (Fast) and share food with the Kafirs (disbelievers). This happened last year, and the Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (CPVPV) has been notified about a case that was filed against a Muslim who deliberately broke his fast in the above-mentioned restaurant during Ramadan without a valid excuse.

Second: The workers at the restaurant are not permitted to offer the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer in congregation at the nearby Masjid (mosque) because they have to serve lunch for non-Muslims at that time. Therefore, they are keep busy preparing food in the restaurant for non-Muslims.

Third: We are extremely offended by the smell of food coming from the restaurant as we pray in the adjacent Masjid.

Fourth: All SABK companies, except ours, give permission to their non-Muslim employees to go home to have lunch. Our company is the only one that opens its restaurant during the daytime in Ramadan.

Fifth: The behaviour of our Company stands as a blatant violation of the directions of our Muslim rulers, may Allah keep them. They expressively warned against this violation through all forms of media.

We ask Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) to help you find a solution to this problem. At least, we wish to help our Muslim brothers who work in this restaurant during the daytime in Ramadan to be allowed to offer the Zhuhr Prayer at its appointed time. As I have explained above, at the time of Zhuhr prayer they are obliged to prepare lunch for non-Muslims and hence can not offer the prayer. May Allah guide you to that which is right and most pleasing to Him.

A: It is not permissible to open the restaurant during the daytime in Ramadan to prepare food for non-Muslims. This is because doing so may give rise to the indulgence in grave prohibitions, such as assisting them in committing what Allah (Most Exalted be He) has prohibited. It is well-known that Muslims are obligated to invite non-Muslims to follow the fundamental as well as the secondary rulings of Shari'ah (Islamic Law).

(Part No. 9; Page No. 37)

And certainly, the Fast of Ramadan is one of the pillars of Islam. Non-Muslims are encouraged first to embrace Islam and then to observe the fast. Therefore, it is not permissible for the Muslim to assist non-Muslims to abandon what Allah (Most Exalted be He) has originally obligated on them. Moreover, it is not permissible for a Muslim to serve non-Muslims in a way that brings humiliation to him, like serving food to them. Non-Muslims who come to live in Muslim countries are obliged not to do any act which openly violates the rites of Islam and harms the feelings of Muslims. Therefore, we see that the aforesaid restaurant must be closed during the daytime in Ramadan.

Fatwa no. 16078

Q: During Ramadan some people are in the habit of gathering together from the time of Iftar (breaking the Fast) until the time of Sahur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast). They hire someone to recite the Holy Qur'an for them and lead them in the `Isha (Night) Prayer and Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan). During the break, they have some drinks like tea and smoke the water pipe. Even the Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) smokes cigarettes and makes amulets, which people believe to cure diseases. Moreover, they make Khatmah (one complete reading of the entire Holy Qur'an) in Ramadan and dedicate its reward to the dead. They describe this as a night spent in seeking the pleasure of Allah (Most Exalted be He). Furthermore, when a person dies, they hold a large marquee where people gather to listen to Holy Qur'an recitation and smoke cigarettes. What is the ruling on that?

A: It is obligatory to observe fasting during the blessed month of Ramadan. It is also desirable to offer Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) during the night time. This was the regular practice of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and his Sahabah (Companions). One must not follow acts of Bid'ahs (heresy in religion) which came to be practiced to Islam after the demise of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and his Sahabah. The books of Sunnah as well as the statements of reliable Fuqaha' (jurists) provide a good source for knowing the proper description of the Tarawih Prayer. It is not permissible to spend the nights of Ramadan smoking cigarettes and the water pipe, and reciting the Qur'an in the manner as the questioner has mentioned. It is not permissible to offer Salah (Prayer) behind an Imam who makes amulets which contain Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) and seeking the help of other than Allah (Most Exalted be He). By the same token, it is not permissible to recite the Holy Qur'an for the dead, whether during or after Ramadan. This is because there is no proof to support this practice.

Q: When I was a teenager I regrettably neglected some prayers while offering some other prayers without ritual purity. However, my negligence of prayer was not due to my denial of it as a religious obligation, but it was due to laziness and bad company. Moreover, I did not fast some days during Ramadan. Now, I have sincerely repented of this sin and regretted what I had done. My heart is now determined not to go back to my previous sins. Does sincere repentance obliterate what has been committed before it of sins, or do I have to make up for the missed prayers and fast days, taking into consideration that I do not know the number of prayers which I missed nor the number of days which I did not fast?

A: It is an obligation upon the questioner to be truthful and sincere in his repentance of the sins he has committed and to regularly continue offering prayers and keep the fast in Ramadan. On the other hand, the questioner is not obligated to make up for the missed prayers or the missed days of fasting. According to the most preponderant of two opinions of Muslim scholars, whoever abandons prayers intentionally has committed a major disbelief. For, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him): \(What stands between a Muslim and disbelief is his abandonment of Prayer.\) Recorded by Imam Muslim. Furthermore, there are other proofs supporting this view. It is noteworthy that repentance of sins obliterates all past sins, and all praise is due to Allah.

Q 5: Some people observe fasting during Ramadan but they do not offer Salah (Prayer). Will their Sawm (Fast) be accepted by Allah?

A: Allah does not accept the Sawm of people who abandon offering Salah unless they turn to Allah in repentance and start performing Salah again. Q: There is a man who, for about ten years, regularly kept the fast of Ramadan but deliberately broke the fast for some days without a valid legal excuse. However, a few years ago he repented of this sin to Allah. What should he do now regarding the years in which he did not fast some days of Ramadan, keeping into consideration that he had not made up for these days or counted the days which he missed fasting? It is noteworthy that he regretted having done these sins.

A: It is incumbent upon this person to do his best to make up for the days when he deliberately and inexcusably broke the fast. Thus, he should fast the number of days which he is most sure he had missed in fasting. There is no prohibition in fasting these days separately. Moreover, he needs to feed a needy person in lieu of every day he had missed in fasting and did not make up for them without an accepted legal excuse until the subsequent Ramadan started. He should give the amount of half of a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of wheat, rice or similar staple food in his town. On the other hand, if one had coincidentally had sexual intercourse with his wife during the daytime of Ramadan within the days he broke the fast without a valid legal excuse, then he has to give expiation of sexual intercourse for each day he had sexual intercourse. The expiation in this case is as follows: first, he must emancipate a believing slave; if one cannot find a slave or cannot afford the emancipation of a slave, then he should fast for two consecutive months, i.e. sixty days. If one cannot do that, then he has to feed sixty needy people by giving each one of them half of a Sa' of wheat, rice or similar staple food in his town. Furthermore, one should sincerely repent of this sin to Allah and should not go back to this evil act. For, whoever does not fast during Ramadan while he has no valid legal excuse commits a grievous sin and a heinous misdeed and incurs the wrath of Allah and His Punishment. It is known that the violation of the sanctity of Ramadan means the negligence of one of the pillars of Islam. The questioner here is advised to consistently make Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah), to perform optional acts of devotion and to keenly implore Allah, so that He might pardon him, forgive his past sins and replace his evil deeds with good ones.

Now, eighteen years later, I regularly observe the fast in the whole month of Ramadan. What is the ruling on the days of fast I had missed?

A: You are obliged to make up for the days that you did not fast with no valid legal excuse. You must also turn to Allah in repentance and ask him to forgive you your sin. You are also required to feed a Miskin (needy) person for each day you had missed, because you delayed making up for the days you missed until some time later.

Q: What is the ruling on a disciple whose shaykh (teacher) ordered him not to fast Ramadan, though he is all fit and has no valid legal excuse to break the fast? The disciple thinks that his shaykh will save him from Allah's Punishment and that he is capable of atoning for his sin. What does Islamic law say about abandoning the obligation of fasting? Benefit us may Allah reward you greatly!

A: It is prohibited to obey a person who directs towards disobeying Allah, whether they happen to be a shaykh or anybody else. This is based on the Hadith in which the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) is reported to have said: «There is no submission in matters involving Allah's disobedience» Recorded by Imam Ahmad and Al-Hakim. The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) is also reported to have said: «No one is to be obeyed except in Ma`ruf \(that which is judged as good, beneficial, or fitting by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect\).» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

Fasting the month of Ramadan is one of the five pillars of Islam. The Muslim is not allowed to abstain from fasting unless he has a valid legal excuse for missing it, such as suffering from illness or being on a journey. Still one is required to make up for the days of fasting they miss when his condition changes. This is based on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Most Exalted be He) says: [«So whoever of you sights \(the crescent on the first night of\) the month \(of Ramadan i.e. is present at his home\), he must observe Saum \(fasts\) that month, and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days. Allâh intends for you ease, and He does not want to make things difficult for you. \(He wants that you\) must complete the same number \(of days\), and that you must magnify Allâh \[i.e. to say Takbîr \(Allâhu Akbar; Allâh is the Most Great\] for having guided you so that you may be grateful to Him.»](#) Moreover, one is not allowed to obey the orders of anyone unless they are knowledgeable about Allah's Book and the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet Muhammad) of the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). They must be well known for their Istiqamah (steadfastness in religion). You must stay clear from deviant shaykhs and proponents of Sufism. You must also warn people against their evil. This is because they sometimes order people to make lawful what Allah has declared prohibited and vice versa. For example, they order people to hold them with much esteem as if they were lords beside Allah. Allah says regarding the Jews and Christians: «They \(Jews and Christians\) took their rabbis and their monks to be their lords besides Allâh \(by obeying them in things which they made lawful or unlawful according to their own desires without being ordered by Allâh\)»

Fasting of the Menstruating and Nufasaa' (a woman in her postpartum period)

Second question from Fatwa no. 14043

Q 2: If a woman became menstruating in Ramadan after breaking her fast and before the Isha' (Night) prayer. Is she obligated to make up for this day, or is her fasting valid?

A 2: The fast of a woman who became menstruating after sunset and before Isha' (Night) prayer is valid for that day, which she has already fasted. She is not obligated to make up for it later.

Q: Some women do not make up for the days of fasting they have missed in the month of Ramadan until some years later. For instance, a woman may happen not to fast the month of Ramadan of 1410 A.H due to illness or being in postpartum period. She postpones making up for this Ramadan until after Ramadan of 1411 AH. Other women do not make up for the days they miss at all. They give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) instead of fasting. I hope Your Eminence will guide us towards the right view in this regard. May Allah's Peace be with you!

(Part No. 9; Page No. 45)

A: First: If a woman breaks her Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan on account of being menstruating, in postpartum period, or falling ill, she will be required to make up for the days of fast she had missed after Ramadan is over. This is provided that her condition has changed and the legal excuse for which she broke the fast is cleared.

Second: If the valid legal excuse which prevented her from fasting remains until the next Ramadan comes, then she is still required to make up for the days she missed once the legal excuse is over. However, if the excuse is over, yet she delays making up for the days she had missed until after two Ramadans have passed, then she will be required to make up for the days she had missed along with making Kaffarah (expiation). The Kaffarah includes feeding a Faqir (poor) person for each day.

Q1: A woman used to break her fast during her monthly period in Ramadan, but she would neither make up for the missed days of fasting nor for the missed prayers. However, she was unaware - that is; she was ignorant of the legal ruling in this connection. What should she do now, taking into consideration that she was doing this out of ignorance? Please provide us with a legal fatwa on this matter, may Allah reward you greatly.

A1: She is obligated to make up for the number of the days of fasting she had missed in Ramadan due to menstruation, whether this happened in one year or a number of years. In addition, she must feed a needy person as an expiation along with making up of the days of fasting she had missed. The expiation is that she must feed one needy person for every day of fasting she had missed by giving this person half of a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) from the staple food of the country, if she can afford it. However, if she cannot afford it, then fasting alone will be sufficient.

As for the prayers missed during her menstruation, they are not to be made up for, due to the report of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) with regard to the missed days of fasting and the missed prayers for menstruating women: (We used to make up for the missed days of fasting, but we were not ordered to make up for the missed prayers).

A: You have to make up for the days of fasting which you had missed during Ramadan. In addition, you have to feed a Miskin (needy) person for each day you missed. You have to give him half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food in your country. However, it is enough to observe Sawm if you are incapable of feeding him.

Fatwa number (15196)

Q: I am an elderly uneducated woman, and in the past before getting acquainted with the opinions of Muslims jurists and the media, such as Radio, whenever

(Part No. 9; Page No. 47)

I had my monthly period or postpartum bleeding during the daytime of Ramadan, I would continue fasting and would not make up for these days. I thought that it was not obligatory on me to make up for the fast when I have my menses or during postpartum bleeding, in the same way I do not have to make up for prayer. I continued doing this for many years, but now I am aware that I am obligated to make up for the missed days of fasting which I missed. However, I cannot do this for several reasons:

Firstly: I do not know the number of days of fasting which I had missed.

Secondly: I cannot do fast due to my old age and my physical inability.

I, like many other Muslim women, are in this situation due to our ignorance. We ask Allah, the Most Merciful, to pardon us.

A: Firstly: You are obligated to make up for all the days of fasting during which you were menstruating and had postpartum bleeding. Fasting of these days while being menstruating or in postpartum bleeding was invalid.

Secondly: You need to do your best to make an approximate counting of the days of fasting which you had not fasted.

Thirdly: You are not obligated to make up for these missed days consecutively, but you can fast sporadically, in accordance with your ability.

Fourthly: You must give an expiation, i.e. to feed a needy person for every day of menstruation and postpartum bleeding because of your delay in making up for these days. This feeding for several days can be done all at once, even by giving the entire expiation amount to one needy person.

Fifthly: If you are too poor to give expiation, then you are not obligated to give it, and fasting only will be sufficient for you in this case.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 48)

Sixthly: If you are unable to make up for the missed days of fasting and you cannot permanently fast Ramadan due to old age or chronic disease and you are able to feed the needy, then feeding the needy will be sufficient for you in the stead of the fast. In this case, you should give half of a Sa', about (1.5 kg), from the staple food of your country, such as dates, rice or other similar types of food. However, if you are unable to feed the needy and you cannot fast, then you are not obligated to do any of them, due to Allah's (Most Glorified and Exalted be He) saying: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ and His (Most Glorified be He) saying: ﴿Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾

We ask Allah for success, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions.

First question from Fatwa number (15439)

Q1: I am a woman. Due to an illness, I could not fast the month of Ramadan eight years ago. Now I am aware that it is an obligation upon me to make up for the missed days of fasting in Ramadan. I desire to comply with the Islamic law and make up for these days, but I can not due to a pectoral disease, which affects my health very much. My question is: Can I feed sixty needy persons instead of the fast, or am I required to fast and feed the needy? Can the expiation be given as money instead of food?

Also, I have a brother who deliberately did not fast one day of Ramadan about six years ago with no legal excuse, and now he wants to make up for this missed day. However, some people told him that it is impossible to make up for this day even if one were to fast the rest of his life. Given this, he has not made it up for it until now.

Please provide me with Fatwa regarding these questions. I am very frustrated and I direly need you guidance. May Allah reward you greatly.

A1: You must make up for the number of days of fasting which you had missed in the month of Ramadan eight years ago, and you should also ask Allah's (Most Exalted be He) Forgiveness for this sin. Moreover, you are obligated to feed a needy person by giving him half of a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) from the staple food of your country in lieu of every day you make up for. However, if you are unable to make up for the days which you had missed because of an illness, then you should feed a needy person by giving him one kilogram and a half of food for every day of fasting you had missed. Similarly, your brother has to make up for the day which he intentionally missed in fasting during Ramadan and should repent to Allah (Most Glorified and Exalted be He) in addition to feeding a needy person because of his delay in making up for this day.

We ask Allah for success, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, upon his family and his Companions.

Fatwa number (15847)

Q: We know that menstruation invalidates fasting, and when it ends and a woman has performed the ceremonial bathing (Ghusl), then she can resume fasting. She also has to make up for the missed days of fasting. However, there is a woman who performed the ceremonial bathing (Ghusl) upon noticing that her menstruation blood ceased. But after taking the ceremonial bathing, her menstruation restarted again and remained for one more day and stopped. This time she did not perform the ceremonial bathing, and yet she fasted for six days after that. Is her fasting for these six days valid or invalid? If it is not valid, is her fasting without performing the ceremonial bathing judged as one who does not fast intentionally, bearing in mind that her intention was not to violate the rulings of Islamic law? If her fasting of those six days is judged like one who intentionally does not fast, and in case she is poor, then she is obligated to fast for sixty consecutive days. This ruling applies when one does not fast for one day intentionally, then how about missing six days of fasting?

A: The menstruating woman is not to take the ceremonial bath until the bleeding has completely ceased and she notices that she is clear from any blood. But, if she took ceremonial bathing before becoming pure and the complete cessation of blood, and then the bleeding resumes, this blood is considered part of her monthly period, as long as the period of menstruation does not exceed fifteen days. Based on this, the first ceremonial bath which she took is not valid, and the day in which the bleeding resumed was part of her monthly period. As such, she had to ceremonial bath after the blood has completely ceased.

As for fasting after the complete cessation of bleeding, it is valid, even if she did not perform the ceremonial bathing. It must be noted that the ceremonial bath is not a condition for the validity of fasting, but it is a condition for the validity of prayer. Therefore, she should only make up for the prayers which she had missed during the above-mentioned days.

We ask Allah for success, and may Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, upon his family and his Companions.

Q 2: When I was fourteen years old I had the monthly period and I did not tell my family about it. In Ramadan I did not fast for five days and did not make them up. I did the same thing for three years. When I got married I made up for these days, but I did not pay expiation for them. Am I obligated to pay expiation for breaking my Sawm (Fast) in those days?

A 2: It is an obligation upon a woman who starts getting her monthly period to fast Ramadan. Not making up for the missed days of Sawm due to menstruation is a mistake committed by the question and she should repent to Allah from that. However, if she has already made up for these days, which she missed in Sawm due to her menstruation, she is still obliged to feed a needy person for each day she missed in fasting by giving half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.), or about 1.5 kg, which she should give to the poor, because of her delay in making up for these days until the following Ramadan without an excuse. On the other hand, there is nothing wrong with her if she gives the entire amount of expiation to one poor person or to more than one person.

Q 2: A woman says that since she reached puberty until she reached menopause she has not made up for the days of fasting which she missed during Ramadan due to the monthly period and she is now in her menopause. She said that the reason for not making up for these days was that she used to think that she was not required to make up for the missed Salah (Prayer) or for the missed days of Sawm (Fast). Now, she found out that she has to make up for the missed days of Sawm, but she does not know the number of days she missed due to the passage of many years. What should she do now with respect to all the days that she did not fast in Ramadan, taking into consideration that this happened due to her ignorance of the ruling and her unawareness of it?

A 2: It is incumbent upon this woman to make up for the days she missed in Sawm of Ramadan starting from the time she reached puberty until her menopause. She should exert efforts to estimate the number of days she missed in during Ramadan within the past years. She should make up for them and feed a needy person for every day she missed in Sawm, because of her delay in making up for these days. She should pay to the needy half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.), which is about 1.5 kg from the staple food of the people of her town, for every day she did not fast and delayed making up for it to the following year. However, if she is poor and cannot feed a needy person for every day she missed in Sawm, it is sufficient for her to make up compensatory Sawm, and there is nothing wrong with her in fasting these missed days consecutively or separately.

after `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer I noticed traces of blood, and therefore, I ate an olive. Thereafter, I did not have any blood, and thus, I fasted and prayed until the 29th night of Ramadan.

The eighth Question of Fatwa no. 18637

Q 8: I had my menses during Ramadan. Actually, my period has a regular pattern of six days. However, last Ramadan it continued for only five days and I had doubts regarding its continuation to the sixth day. On the sixth day, at six o'clock a.m, I got up to find no bleeding but Kudrah (dusky-colored vaginal discharge during or after menstruation). I was unsure whether my period had already ended before or after dawn. Now, what should I do in this a case? Should I make up for the fast of the day I doubted? Please, be informed that I took ceremonial bath (Ghusl) and offered Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, and I abstained from eating and drinking since four a.m., that is, before seeing the Kudrah. Praise be to Allah, I continued fasting that day and observed Sawm (Fast) on the subsequent days without noticing any bleeding except for the Kudrah.

A: Your regular pattern of menstruation lingers for six days and the Kudrah is part of your menstruation period, and you did not see the white discharge, which indicates that the period was over. Now, you should make up for the sixth day on which you fasted, as it is a continuation of your menstrual period.

The sixth question of Fatwa no. 18637

Q 6: My grandmother died while still had to make up for some missed days of fasting in Ramadan. However she did not know exactly how many she missed. She would brake Sawm (Fast) when she was menstruating, during her postpartum period or when she was extremely tired. But, she did not make up for these missed days out of ignorance. By the time she had learned the rulings of the fast, she was already very old and unable to fast. She died (may Allah have mercy on her) while still did not make up for these missed days. My mother does not know either how many days her mother did not fast. Will it benefit my grandmother and make up for her missed days of fasting that my mother fasts on her behalf during the White Days (13th, 14th, and 15th of every Hijri month), along with Mondays and Thursdays, with the intention to dedicate the reward to her mother? Or will it benefit her if my mother makes an estimation of these days and offers Kaffarah (expiation) for them along with fasting?

A 6: If you are most certain that your grandmother did not make up for her missed Sawm, and she told you so when she became old, then it is permissible for you to fast on her behalf with the intention of making up for her missed days of fasting. This should be done after doing your best in discerning the number of the days of fasting she had missed. Also, you must feed a Miskin (needy person) for each day she had missed, by giving him approximately one kilo and a half of the staple food of your country. This is an expiation for the delay in making up the missed Sawm until the following Ramadan. The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said, \(Whoever dies while having missed Sawm \(days not fasted\), his Waliy \(heir\) should fast on his behalf.\) A Wali is a close relative.

The second question of Fatwa no. 15449

Q 2: I am a young women. My monthly period usually lasts for only five days. Once, it came before the White Days (13th, 14th, and 15th of every Hijri month), which I usually observe fasting in them, all praise be to Allah. I intended to fast the first day of them, which coincided with the fifth and last day of my menstrual period, when I saw that the menstrual blood stopped. On that day, I proceeded with Sawm (Fast) until after Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, but I had to break the fast because the menstrual blood resumed. On the second day of the White Days, I performed Ghusl (ceremonial bath) and intended to fast. However, I noticed some bleeding, tending to be orange and sometimes red in colure, was still coming out. Yet, I did not break the fast and continued it to the end of the day, putting my trust in Allah (Most Glorified and Exalted be He). The discharge did not stain my clothes, and I performed Ghusl once again and changed my clothes. Also, on this second day of the White Days, at the time for `Asr (Afternoon) Prayer I went to perform Wudu' (ablution) and offer the two Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) of Wudu' only to find the bleeding had once again resumed and it was brown in colure. This time, it stained my clothes. I performed Ghusl once again and continued with fasting the rest of the day. What is the ruling on fasting this day? Is it invalid?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 56)

A2: Your Sawm is valid because the you usual period of menstruation was over and the bleeding mentioned above is not judged as menstruation.

The second question of Fatwa no. 16019

Q 2: My wife performed after-menstruation Ghusl (ceremonial bathing) on the first day of Ramadan, but she observed the fast before doing this Ghusl. Is her fasting on that day valid? Sometimes, after she performs after-menstruation Ghusl, some drops of blood are still seen. In this case, should she repeat the after-menstruation Ghusl? ?

A 2: A woman should perform after-menstruation Ghusl when her menstrual blood has completely stopped; that is, she sees the sign of Tuhr (purity from menstruation or postpartum blood, i.e. seeing the white discharge or seeing no blood traces). As long as some menstrual blood is still seen, even if it is a little, a woman is still considered menstruating, except when the menstrual period exceeds the maximum time, i.e. fifteen days. This is according to the saying of Um Al-Mu'minin (Mother of the Believers), `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) to women: "Do not hasten (in performing Ghusl) until you see the white discharge (meaning purification from menstruation)". Recorded by Al-Bukhari. If the menstrual blood stops and a woman fasts before performing after-menstruation Ghusl, her Sawm (Fast) is valid. That is because Taharah (ritual purification) is not a condition for the validity of Sawm. Besides, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) would be Junub (person in a state of major ritual impurity) and would fast before he performs Ghusl (ceremonial bathing).

Q 1: For four years, I have not made up for the days of the Ramadan fast that I missed when I was menstruating. I am 19-year-old now, and I started to observe Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan when I was 14 years old. Actually, I initially decided to fast for a complete month and thus collectively make up for the five days of fasting that I had miss in the last five years (due to menstruation) when their total reaches thirty days. Having grown up and known that doing so is impermissible. I was advised that I must make up for every day I missed in addition to feeding a poor person or paying a certain sum of money per day. However, it is beyond my financial capacity to feed a poor person or pay a certain sum of money per day, as I am still a student and fully supported by my father. It is noteworthy that I changed my plan, and this year I made up for the missed days of fasting (due to menstruation) from the last Ramadan. What do you advise me to do in this regard? May Allah reward and keep you?

A: The ruling is that you should make up for the missed days of fasting in Ramadan during the past years, in addition to feeding a poor person half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food of your country for each day. But, if it is beyond your ability to feed a poor person, it will remain as a debt on you till the time you can fulfil it. However, paying a certain sum of money instead does not discharge the liability.

Q 1: Should a woman observe the fast and abstain from all that breaks Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan, if her menstruation ends and she becomes Tahir (ritually pure) after Fajr (Dawn) Prayer or after Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer? Or must she not observe the Sawm in this circumstance, because the duration of Sawm is from the break of the dawn until sunset?

A 1: If menstruation ends and a woman becomes Tahir after the time when abstention from all that breaks Sawm is obligatory enters, whether this occurs at the beginning of the day or in the middle of it or at its end, then she has to abstain from all that breaks Sawm the rest of the day. This is according to the Saying of Allah (Most Exalted be He): \(So whoever of you sights \(the crescent on the first night of\) the month \(of Ramadan i.e. is present at his home\), he must observe Saum \(fasts\) that month\) This is also because of the sanctity of Sawm's time for whoever Sawm is obligatory in their case. By the cession of the impediment (menstruation ends), the woman in the question has become of those in whose case Sawm is obligatory. However, she has to make up for that day, because she did not fast all of the day and the part does not replace the fast of the whole day. Allah (Most Glorified and Exalted be He) says: \(and eat and drink until the white thread \(light\) of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread \(darkness of night\), then complete your Saum \(fast\) till the nightfall.\) Besides, she has to perform after-menstruation Ghusl (ceremonial bathing) so that she can offer the Obligatory Prayers.

Q: I use contraceptive pills especially in Ramadan in order to maintain the state of Taharah (ritual purity) during Ramadan. Having taken them only in the middle of the month of Sha`ban, my menstrual period started at the beginning of Ramadan and lasted for six days after which I performed post-menstruation Ghusl (ceremonial baththing) so that I can resume the state of Taharah and observe Sawm (Fast) for the remainder of Ramadan. To my surprise, two days later I noticed some blood drops and secretions that are different in color and texture form menstrual blood. Please, be informed that I have an intrauterine device and that I kept fasting even during the days when the blood drops were seen. Should I make up for these days?

A: If the matter is as you have mentioned, your Sawm and Salah (Prayer) are valid. As for the blood drops and secretion you noticed after your period is over, these are not of your menstruation blood. However, under such a condition, you should perform Wudu' (ablution) for each Salah as the case with Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or postpartum period) and urinary incontinence.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Fatwa no. 19544

Q1: I gave birth to a baby a month before Ramadan and became Tahir (ritually pure) from postpartum bleeding. During my Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan, I saw some drops of blood, tending to be yellow in color. This occurred before the forty days had passed (the usual period for postpartum blood). Is it permissible to keep the fast in this case?

A1: If the blood resumes during the forty days after a woman becomes Tahir (ritually pure) from postpartum bleeding, then it is postpartum blood according to the correct scholarly opinion. In this case, the woman should refrain from praying and fasting. After she becomes entirely Tahir (postpartum blood stops completely), she has to make up for the days on which she broke fast because of the postpartum bleeding that returned before the forty days had passed.

Q2: I have a one-month old baby girl. Ramadan came and I still breastfeed her. Is it permissible for me to offer Sawm (Fast) or should I break it?

A2: If the breastfeeding woman fears any harm for herself if she breastfeeds her baby in Ramadan or fears any harm for her baby if she fasts and does not breastfeed her, then it is permissible for her to break her Sawm and she only has to make up for the days she has missed.

Q3: I fasted four days of Ramadan then I started menstruating. After the menstrual period ended, I did post-menstruation Ghusl (ceremonial bathing) and began to fast. But later one, I noticed some intermittent drops of blood which stopped after a while. When I did the post-menstruation Ghusl and fasted, I found some more drops still coming out. This occurred through the entire month of Ramadan. What should I do in the regard?

A3: If the case is as you have mentioned, then the drops of blood that you noticed after performing post-menstruation Ghusl are not part of your menstruation blood, because it was not continuous bleeding. This does not fall under the same ruling as menstruation. Thus, you should offer Sawm and Salah (Prayer) regardless of this. Moreover, in the case that these drops are still seen, you have to offer Wudu' (ablution) at the time of offering each Salah just like a woman experiencing Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period) and the case of people suffering from urinary incontinence. So, in conclusion, your Sawm on those days was valid.

Fatwa no. 19714

Q: In Ramadan during the years 1416 and 1417 A.H., I took pills to stop the menstrual period. But I noticed that after approximately ten days, there were Kudrah (dusky-colored vaginal discharge during or after menstruation) and Sufrah (yellow vaginal discharge during or after menstruation) fluids still being emitted. The discharge was sometimes light brown, sometimes yellow and sometimes tended to be black in color. But I fasted because the menstrual bleeding did not occur until the night of `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast). Was my Sawm (Fast) in these days valid? If it was not valid, what should I do, bearing in mind that I did not count the number of days of fast I might have missed? I strove hard to count them but I failed. Should I offer Kaffarah (expiation) instead? Please give me a Fatwa on this question. May Allah reward you and benefit others through your knowledge.

A: If Kudrah and Sufrah were emitted on days outside those of your menstrual period, then these secretions are not of your menstruation, and a woman in this situation may normally offer prayer and observe fasting. This is according to the saying of Um `Atiyyah (may Allah be pleased with her) who was one of the female Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet Muhammad): "We used not to regard

Kudrah and Sufrah after Tuhr (purity of menstruation) as being part of our menstruation period." But, if Kudrah and Sufrah are noticed during the menstrual period, then they are considered menstruation fluids according to the meaning of the saying of Um `Atiyyah that we have mentioned above.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20114

Q1: My wife observed fasting during the recommended six days in Shawwal. During these days, she noticed some vaginal bleeding, but not menstrual blood. This blood she notices resulted from taking contraceptive pills. Is her Sawm (Fast) permissible in this case? Please advise us on this question.

A1: If your wife experienced vaginal bleeding on days outside her regular menstrual period and it does not have the characteristics of menstrual blood, then most probably it was irregular bleeding that is caused by taking the contraceptive pills. This blood falls under the same ruling as Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period). In this case, a woman enjoys all rulings apply to Tahir (ritually pure) woman. For instance, she may pray and fast, and so on, and her husband may have sexual intercourse with her. But when the time for each Salah (Prayer) approaches and she intends to offer Prayer, she has to do Istinja' (cleansing the private parts from any blood traces) and make Wudu' (ablution). According to what was mentioned above, the Sawm of your wife during those six days in Shawwal is valid. However, if your wife had noticed that bleeding during the days of her menstrual period, then it is part of her menstruation and it is forbidden for her to fast or pray in that time. Also, it is not permissible for you to have sexual intercourse with her until the bleeding stops completely and she performs post-menstruation Ghusl (ceremonial bathing). Moreover, her Sawm in this case is invalid and does not count for the Sawm of six days in Shawwal because it is now clear that it was menstrual bleeding.

May Allah grant us success. May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions.

Fatwa no. (20490)

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.
To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has viewed the Fatwa that His Eminence, the Grand Mufty, has received from His Eminence the Chairman of Faifa Organization Center: Muhammad ibn `Aly Al-Faify, under no. 97, dated 16/6/1419 A.H., that was transferred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, under no. 3825, dated 21/6/1419 A.H. His Eminence required the consideration of the Fatwa request that was presented to him by a questioner, to which was attached his letter that reads as follows: To the respected Chairman of Faifa Organization Center, As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!). I present this letter to you so as to tell you that I have a daughter who is 18 years old, and she has a psychological disease. She did not fast 12 days in Ramadan, 1418 A.H., and whenever she fasted, she had her menstrual period again. Please send my question to the responsible authorities. May Allah Grant you success! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

After studying the Fatwa request, the Committee replied that this woman must start compensating for the days that she missed last Ramadan, by assuming that the duration of her menstruation is the same as the duration that she was used to before the disturbance of her menstruation; so she must spend this period without observing Sawm (Fast) or Salah (Prayer), and without having sexual intercourse with her husband, if she is married. When this duration ends, she must perform the ritual bath and fast. Then if she bleeds again while she is fasting after her menstrual period, she must not bother herself about it because it is proved to be Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period), which does not prevent her from observing Sawm, or Salah, or having intercourse with her husband. During the period of having Istihadah, she must perform Wudu' (ablution) before each Salah after its time begins.

Fatwa no. 21160

Q: Because I was planning to go to Makkah, I took contraceptive pills in order to delay the coming of my regular menstrual period. Since my period was due on 22/9/1420 A.H., I took the pills two weeks before that date. On 20/9/1420 A.H, I noticed a small brownish blood drop, which thence continued to fall once a day until stopped taking the pills on the second day of `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Feast of Breaking the Fast), yet I continued to observe Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan. Two days later, I had my actual menstrual period.

My question is: Is my observance of Sawm during Ramadan as mentioned above valid? I also fasted six days after `Eid-ul-Fitr; can these days compensate for the missed days of fasting in Ramadan? If those intermittent blood drops I used to notice was not menstrual, is my fasting in the six days valid for the recommended fast during the month of Shawwal?

Note: I was ritually pure when embarking on with the intention of making `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) at the Miqat (one of the specified destinations for entering into the ritual state for making Hajj or `Umrah). In fact, I noticed the brownish blood drop referred to in my question only after finishing all the rites of `Umrah. Is my `Umrah valid in this case, or was it invalidated because of such discharge? Give me a fatwa, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the case is as you have mentioned, your observance of Sawm during Ramadan is valid and this discharge does not affect the validity of your acts of worship such as Sawm, Salah (Prayer) and the like. Accordingly, you do not have to make up for the days of Ramadan. As for fasting for a number of days after Ramadan with the intention of making up for any missed days of fasting, it is out of place here for there was no reason to do so. If you wish to observe the recommended Sawm of the six days of Shawwal, intention has to precede doing so. As for the `Umrah, it is valid In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills) and is not affected by the intermittent blood drops you noticed after finishing the `Umrah. This is because the Taharah (ritual purification) state is originally presumed and you were not sure whether it was discharged before or during Tawaf (circumambulation around the Ka`bah). However, we advise you not to use such contraceptive pills so as not to spoil your acts of worship such as Salah, Sawm and the like.

Q: A woman has had a fetus remained in her uterus for six months. On the eighth day of the blessed month of Ramadan, she bled but the blood was no more than the amount of a cup of tea discharged from her. This bleeding continued day after day. On the twenty-eighth day of Ramadan, the fetus was taken out from her uterus (by a medical operation).

The question is: Should this woman make up for the days on which bleeding occurred? Bear in mind that she fasted the days before the miscarriage and did not break Sawm (Fast) till the fetus was taken from her uterus. Please advise us, may Allah safeguard you.

A: The woman in question does not have to make up Sawm. This is because the bleeding was not menstruation or postpartum blood. However, if the bleeding occurred one, two or three days before the miscarriage and there were signs of labor, then it is considered postpartum blood and Sawm is invalid in such case.

Q: Last Ramadan, my mother was in her postpartum period, and after Ramadan she was breastfeeding. She wanted to make up for the missed Sawm (Fast), but she feared for her baby. She could not offer Kaffarah (expiation), until this Ramadan came. Please guide us. What should she do concerning the last Ramadan, bearing in mind that she is fasting this Ramadan. Is it permissible for her sons to fast on her behalf or should she offer Kaffarah, and if so, how? May Allah reward you with the best.

A: You mother has to make up for the days on which she broke her Sawm during the past Ramadan, even if this is after the next Ramadan. There is no Kaffarah due on her, because she did not overlook making up her fasts, and she just delayed this due to breastfeeding her baby.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

Q: Twenty-seven years ago, my mother gave birth to a baby in Ramadan and she could not fast the days of this month. When she wanted to make up for the days she had missed, my father told her that she is not obligated to do so. However, we heard that she must make up for the missed days of fasting, and now we would like to know your opinion on what should my mother and my father do in this case?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 69)

A: Your mother must make up for the days of fasting she had missed due to her childbirth. Besides, she also must feed a needy person for everyday she missed as Kaffarah (expiation) for delaying her making up for the fast. Your father should seek Allah's Forgiveness for what he mistakenly said to her without having sound knowledge and he should not repeat such an action. And Allah knows best.

Fatwa no. (16141)

Q: I am a woman who believes in Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He), and all praise is due to Allah for this! I observe Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan, and I may not fast some days because of an Islamically lawful excuse that Allah (Exalted be He) permits for women, and I make up for these days after Ramadan. But one year, Ramadan coincided with my being in a postpartum period, and I intended to make up for the days that I missed after that period ended; that is, when the time of ritual purification comes; but I could not fast because I was breastfeeding my baby. Also, I live in a very hot region, and I have many domestic duties that I have to do. As for breastfeeding, however, there are many alternatives which help me feed the baby.

The Second Issue: After four months from the end of the postpartum period, Allah (Exalted be He) granted me a baby as I became pregnant, so my fear of observing Sawm (Fast) increased. Do I have to feed the poor or should I compensate in this case? And, if I have to feed the poor, please inform me how this should be done?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 70)

A: This woman must make up for the days that she did not fast in Ramadan during her postpartum period, and she also has to feed one Miskin (needy) for delaying the compensation till the following Ramadan. The amount that should be given to each Miskin is one and a half kilos of rice or wheat, and so on, of the country's staple food. She must also seek Allah's Forgiveness for her excessive delaying of Sawm, and there is nothing wrong with bringing out the food all at once before, after or during compensation.

A: Your wife should make up for the days on which she broke her fast in Ramadan, and should also pay Kaffarah (expiation) for her delay in making up for the fast. She must pay half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of wheat, date, rice or similar staple food of the country.

Q 1: My paternal grandmother asked me to send this question to you, in which she says:

Forty years ago, I gave birth to a baby girl during the blessed month of Ramadan, and I have not made up for the days on which I broke my fast until now, due to my being preoccupied with worldly affairs and my ignorance of religious matters. When I came to know about religious matters and obligations, I realized my shortcoming for not making up for the days on which I broke my fast. Now I am about eighty years old and I enjoy good health. My question is: Is it permissible for me to make up for the fast of that month after such long period or not? If yes, should I only fast or I should combine the fast with feeding? And in case I should do both, should the feeding be at the end of every day I fast or to be done collectively at the end of the month?

A: Your grandmother should make up for the days on which she broke her fast during Ramadan, and seek forgiveness of Allah (Exalted be He). She should also feed a poor person in compensation for every day she fasts, by giving out about half Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of the staple food of the country, due to her negligence of making up for the fast. It is permissible for her to feed the needy before or after fasting, jointly or separately, even if it is all given to one poor person.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18041

Q 1: My wife broke her fast in some days during Ramadan due to her childbirth. I keep advising her to make up for these days, and she usually expresses her willingness to do so. However, she is not consistent in fulfilling her promise; she would observe the fast for a couple of days and then abandon it. What is the ruling on this?

A: If the case is as you have mentioned, your wife is obligated to make up for the days on which she broke her fast in Ramadan due to her delivery. It is not permissible for her to delay making up for them until the next Ramadan. If she does so with no excuse, she would be sinful and must repent to Allah. Accordingly, she should start making up for them immediately and offer Kaffarah (expiation) to compensate for her negligence, i.e. she should feed a needy person about one and half a kilo of rice or any other staple food of the country for each day.

Q 2: My wife was two months pregnant when Ramadan started, and she fasted for fifteen days, then she had non-menstrual bleeding for seven days, but she continued to fast and pray. Afterwards, she had miscarriage and did not fast for the rest of the month, Is her Sawm (Fast) before the miscarriage valid despite the bleeding? Or, does she have to compensate for it?

Please inform us with the right legal opinion, may Allah reward you!

A 2: This woman experienced non-menstrual bleeding, and thus it is not inconsiderable. She did well when she continued observing Sawm and Salah (Prayer); and if the case is exactly as you mentioned, her Sawm and Salah before the miscarriage are valid and she does not have to compensate for it. After the miscarriage, however, the rulings vary according to the time in which the miscarriage took place, which is classified according to the four stages of pregnancy as follows:

The First: If the pregnancy was miscarried within the first two stages: the Nutfah (mixed drops of male and female sexual discharge) stage, which is the first forty days after the embryo attaches itself in the womb, and the `Alaqah (clot; a piece of coagulated blood) stage where it turns into coagulated blood during the second forty days, which add up to a total of eighty days, then in this case, there are no rulings to be followed, and there is no controversy among scholars concerning this point. The woman should continue observing her Sawm and Salah as if she did not miscarry the pregnancy.

The Second: If the pregnancy was miscarried in the third stage, a little lump [of flesh] stage, in which the embryo becomes a lump of flesh with his organs, features and overall appearance beginning to have form, which lasts for forty days from the eighty-first to the one hundred and twentieth day, then there are two cases:

1- If the a little lump [of flesh] does not have any clear-cut, or even indistinct, human features, and the midwives do not testify that this is the beginning of a human being, then the ruling on abortion of this a little lump [of flesh] is the same as the ruling on miscarriage in the first two stages; that is, there are no rulings to be followed.

2- If the a little lump [of flesh] has complete human features and some clear human features, such as a hand or a foot or indistinct features, or the midwives testify that this is the beginning of a human being, abortion in this case is followed by postpartum period and signals the end of `Iddah (woman's prescribed waiting period after divorce or widowhood).

The Third: If the pregnancy is miscarried in the fourth stage, i.e., after the soul has been breathed into the fetus, which is after the beginning of the fifth month or after one hundred and twenty days of pregnancy have passed, there are two cases as follows:

1- If the fetus does not cry after birth, the rulings mentioned with regard to the second stage of the a little lump [of flesh] are to be followed, and also the fetus should be washed, shrouded and the Janazah (Funeral) Prayer offered for him; he should be given a name and the `Aqiqah (sacrifice for a newborn) should be made for him.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 75)

2- If the fetus cries after birth, the full rulings on the birth of a baby are to be followed, among which are the rulings mentioned in the previous case. In addition, the newborn can possess money through a Will or by inheritance, so that he can inherit or be inherited from, and so on.

And Allah knows best.

Q: We read in some Islamic books that a woman who is in her postpartum period, breastfeeding, or pregnancy when she breaks her fast in Ramadan she must make up for the days on which she breaks her fast. However, I read in the book entitled, Tuhfat Al-`Arus that a woman who has just delivered, is breastfeeding, or pregnant does not have to make up for her missed days of fasting, and she should only offer Fidyah (ransom). This view is reinforced by a Hadith that reads: \(When the pregnant and breastfeeding women break their fast, they have to offer Fidyah and do not have to make up for the days in which they broke fast.\) (Reported by Ibn `Umar and Ibn `Abbas). The author of Tuhfat Al-`Arus is Mahmud Mahdi Al-Istanbwly, and the above quote is mentioned in page 302.

A: If the matter is as you have mentioned, then what is mentioned in that book is untrue. According to the Ijma` (consensus of scholars), a woman who has just delivered has to make up for the days on which she broke her fast and she is not obligated to offer the Fidyah (ransom) of feeding the needy. As to pregnant and breastfeeding women, they should make up for the fasting if they had broken their fast on account of their fear for their own safety and for the safety of their babies.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 76)

They do not have to feed the needy except if they negligently had delayed making up for the fast with no Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse until the next Ramadan comes, in which case they should make up for the fast and feed a needy person for each day on which they had broken their fast. The rule according to which they should make up for it is evidenced by Allah's Saying: [\(So whoever of you sights \(the crescent on the first night of\) the month \(of Ramadan i.e. is present at his home\), he must observe Saum \(fasts\) that month, and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.\)](#) Pregnant and breastfeeding women take the same judgement as that of the ill, when they find the fast hard on them. Offer feeding only is sole concession given to two categories: the elderly who cannot fast due to their old age, and the ill whose recovery is not hoped for, since they are unable to make up for their fasting. This is based on Allah's Saying: \(Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.\) This was also authentically reported from a group of Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet, may Allah be pleased with them).

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. (20799)

Q 1: I was three months pregnant and I had an abortion ten days before Ramadan. When Ramadan started I was still bleeding as a result of the abortion, but I observed Sawm (Fast) on the assumption that the blood was only Istihadah (abnormal vaginal bleeding outside the menstrual or post-partum period), as the third month of pregnancy had not finished. What is the ruling on that?

A: Firstly: Abortion is not permissible except in case of a necessity that should be decided by a trustworthy medical committee that issues an authentic Fatwa. This is because protecting and maintaining pregnancy is an Islamically lawful necessity.

Secondly: Your observance of Sawm after abortion during the period of bleeding is not valid if you were eighty-one days pregnant or more, because blood in this case is considered post-partum blood. Accordingly, you must compensate for the days that you fasted in Ramadan during the period of bleeding. But if you did not reach eighty-one days of pregnancy, your Sawm is considered valid.

The first question of Fatwa no. 16420

Q 1: A woman missed out the fast of Ramadan in two years

due to her coincidentally being in the postpartum period. This was fifteen years ago, and she did not know that she must make up for them. What should she do now? Kindly, take into consideration that she cannot fast due to an illness.

A: If her present illness is curable, then as soon as she recovers from it she should make up for these two months in which she had broken her fast in their order. Along with this, she must pay Kaffarah (expiation) for her delay in making up for the fast; i.e. she should feed a needy person for each day. If her illness is incurable, she should feed a needy person for each day on which she had broken the fast in replacement of the fast. She should also offer a Kaffarah for each day of the two months, due to her delay in making up for the fast.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Fasting by the elderly

The second question of Fatwa no. 14461

Q 2: What is the age that if reached by old people makes it permissible for them not to observe Sawm (Fast) of the blessed month of Ramadan and permits them to feed the poor instead? How should they feed the poor, i.e. should they do so at the end of Ramadan or day by day?

A 2: There is no fixed age at which old people are permitted not to fast Ramadan. Rather, it depends on the permanent inability to fast. To put it in plain words, if one cannot endure Sawm (Fast) due to being an old, it is permissible for him not to fast and to feed a poor person (as expiation) for every day (wherein he breaks Sawm) half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the common food of the country. It is also permissible for him to give out all the fifteen Sa`s at the beginning of Ramadan.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 14449

Q: My father is very old and is unable to stand without my help. He was not able to observe Sawm (Fast) in the current Ramadan. He usually performs Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth) to offer Salah (Prayer), as he is not able to perform Wudu' (ablution). He offers Salah either while sitting or lying on his side. What is the ruling on this?

A: First: If your father is unable to fast due to his old age, he should feed one Miskin (needy) person an amount of about one half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of dates, wheat, or similar staple food of the country for each day on which he breaks Sawm.

Second: If your father is unable to use water or cannot find someone to help him use it, he is permitted to perform Tayammum and offer Salah according to his ability, i.e., if he is unable to offer it while standing, he can offer it while sitting.

Fatwa no. 18869

Q: Since my mother cannot endure Sawm (Fast) due to her permanent feebleness, she has not been fasting during Ramadan for the past twenty years. During this period she would feed a poor person (as expiation) for each day wherein she broke her fast. Three years ago she was divorced by my father. Now she is under the sponsorship of both me and my brother who does not live with us in the same house. As we have limited income, is it obligatory on her to feed the poor (as expiation) or should we do this on her behalf? It should be known that she has no financial resources. What is the amount of food that should be given to a poor person (as expiation) for each day? Should the amount of Zakat-ul-Fitr (obligatory charity paid before the Festival of Breaking the Fast) that is due on her be paid by all of us, or does it suffice that one of us pays it on her behalf?

A: You should feed, on behalf of your mother who cannot endure Sawm permanently, a poor person an amount of one and a half kilogram of the prevailing food of the country (as expiation) for each day wherein she broke her Sawm. It suffices that this be done by any of you. The same applies to Zakat-ul-Fitr, i.e. it suffices that any of you should pay it on her behalf.

Q: My mother suffers Alzheimer's disease which makes her forgetful and can recognize neither the relatives nor times, such as the month of Ramadan. Last Ramadan, for example, she did not fast. Moreover, she is feeble in the sense that she cannot eat food enough to enable her to fast. Is it obligatory on her to fast? What should she do regarding the past Ramadan that she did not fast? What should she do regarding Salah (Prayer), where she cannot recognize their due times and the number of Rak`ahs (units of Prayer) but she performs Salah according to her estimation? Please give us a Fatwa, may Allah reward you!

A: If the condition of this woman is as mentioned in the question, it is obligatory on her neither to perform Salah nor observe Sawm (fast), since, as mentioned in this case, she is not accountable for her actions. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(There are three whose actions are not recorded: an insane person until he is restored to sanity, a sleeper until he awakens, and a boy until he reaches puberty.\) The person whose mind became disordered has the same ruling as an insane person.

Q: Through this letter I would like to inform you that my mother has now reached miserable old age, where she is unaware of anything regarding religion or worldly affairs. She can only recognize my voice. She cannot differentiate night from day, nor can she recognize anything else. The matter of the obligation of Sawm (Fast) on her bewilders me. Is there any Kaffarah (expiation) obligatory on her, since she is so disabled that she cannot carry out any of the pillars of Islam? It should be known that this is due to neither negligence, laziness nor Kufr (disbelief) on her part. Rather, this is due to old age. Please give me your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified Muslim scholar). Is it obligatory on us to feed the poor on her behalf? May Allah guide you and grant you success.

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, your mother owes nothing, since she is no longer Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions), because she lost her memory as a result of her old age.

The Sawm of an Ill Person

Fatwa no. (18295)

Q: Shaykh Muhammad Mutawally Al-Sha`rawy, may Allah guard him, said about the Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) no. 183, 184 in Surah (Qur'anic chapter) Al-Baqarah: that any one who is ill or on a journey must not fast and must compensate for that missed Sawm (Fast); but he affirmed that this applies to any kind of illness, even if Sawm causes the patient no harm and constitutes no threat upon him. He also said that no traveler should fast and must compensate for the days that he missed. He took evidence from what Allah (Glorified be He) says: [\(and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.\)](#) He says: "the same number of days", which means: making up for the missed days, and not "and if they did not fast, then the same number of days".

In short, he said that any one who is ill or on a journey must not fast and must compensate for the missed days, taking evidence from the word: "the same number of days must be made up for from other days". So, he affirmed this must be done whether or not the patient or the traveler observes Sawm. What is the ruling on this?

Is it right that any one who is ill or on a journey must not observe Sawm, taking evidence from this Ayah?

A: Any person who is ill and finds it difficult to observe Sawm, or who is on a journey, has Rukhsah (concession) not to fast on the daytime of Ramadan, according to what Allah (Exalted be He) says: [\(and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.\)](#)

However, if they observe Sawm, then it is valid, according to the Hadith narrated by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her): \(that Hamzah Ibn `Amr Al-Aslami \(may Allah be pleased with him\) asked the Prophet \(peace be upon him\): Shall I fast while traveling? And, he used to fast a lot. He said: You may fast if you wish, and you may not fast if you wish.\) Related by the Six Hadith Compilers (Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y, and Ibn Majah).

But, if they fear to be harmed as a result of Sawm, they must not fast, because of the Hadith narrated by Jabir (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: \(the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) was as on a journey and saw a crowd of people, and a man was being shaded \(by them\). He asked: "What is the matter?" They said: "He \(the man\) is fasting." The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said: "It is not righteous that you fast while being on a journey."\)

Allowing the traveler not to fast is generally better, due to the Hadith narrated by Hamzah ibn `Amr Al-Aslami: \(He said: "O Messenger of Allah! I am capable of fasting while traveling, is there anything wrong in that?" He \(peace be upon him\) said: "It is a Rukhsah from Allah \(Exalted be He\). Anyone who takes advantage of it, it will be good for him, and anyone who prefers to fast, there will be no blame on him." ﴿ Related by Muslim.

As for the problem that you encountered concerning the superficial meaning of the Ayah in Surah Al-Baqarah, it can be solved

(Part No. 9; Page No. 85)

Insha'a-Allah (If Allah wills) when you know that there is an omitted phrase that is assumed to be: "and he does not fast". Then the meaning becomes: any one who is ill or is on a journey and he does not fast, the same number of days must be made up for from other days. This has been clarified by scholars, and there are many similar examples of it in the Qur'an, the Sunnah (acts, sayings or approvals of the Prophet) and the language of the Arabs that we can not mention in detail in this respect.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q: I underwent an operation in Ramadan, and I stayed in hospital till the end of the month. How can I make up for the days of the month that I could not fast? And, if I can not make up for the Sawm (Fast) till next Ramadan, how can I make up for it in both cases?

A: It is permissible for you not to fast in Ramadan if you have an illness that makes Sawm difficult or impossible for you. Then, you can compensate for the days of Sawm that you missed whenever possible, even if another Ramadan passes, because you have an excuse for delaying this compensation. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾ And, Allah (Glorified be He) also says: [﴿and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.﴾](#)

However, if the compensation for the missed Sawm is delayed till the following Ramadan without a valid excuse, you have to repent to Allah (Exalted be He), make up for the days that you did not fast and feed one Miskin (needy) for every day as Kaffarah (expiation), which is half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) from the country's staple food, which is equal to one and a half kilos, given to the poor, even to one person only.

Q: I have suffered from diabetes for four years. I used to fast Ramadan every year, but over the last two years I have found it too hard to fast. My physician decided that I should break Fast, but I continued to fast some days and break Fast on other days.

Am I to be rewarded by Allah for these days which I fasted?

Should I make up for the days on which I broke Fast?

During this time I was still a student, so my father paid to feed needy people for each day on which I broke Fast. Now, all praise be to Allah, I work and earn enough money; should I repay to my father the money he paid to feed the needy people on my behalf or use the money to feed more needy people?

A: You have to make up for the days on which you broke Fast in Ramadan and should also offer Kaffarah (expiation) for the days on which you broke Fast and did not make up for before the next Ramadan. The Kaffarah is half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of the staple food of Q: It happened that my wife suffered some burns on her body in 1408 A.H., and she was hospitalized for treatment. She remained there till the end of the year, which prevented her from fasting the month of Ramadan in that year (i.e. 1408 A.H.). She could not fast because of the instructions of the doctor, since her body was bleeding and she was receiving glucose nutrition. She was also obliged to make up for a week of Sawm (Fast) that she missed in Ramadan of 1407 A.H. When she left the hospital, she managed to fast the Ramadan of 1408 A.H. and then fasted the week of the previous Ramadan of 1407 A.H. Is her Fast this way correct, where she observed Sawm for what she missed in 1408 A.H. first and then a week of what she missed in 1407 A.H.? Please clarify the issue and the manner of expiatory Sawm or feeding the poor if there is anything obligatory on her.

A: The way she made up for the days of Sawm she missed of Ramadan is correct. Yet, if she could fast the seven days before the following Ramadan, she should feed a poor person as Kaffarah (expiation) for each day, because she delayed making up for them till the next Ramadan. Her way of Sawm is correct.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 89)

Fatwa no. 17193

Q: I am a thirty-eight year old woman with five children: three sons and two daughters. My eldest son studies at university and some of them are in the elementary stage and the others are in the preparatory stage. I want to inform Your Eminence that I have been suffering nephritis and have been receiving treatment for ten years. During this period, and with the approval of my husband, I underwent a surgical operation to have a ligature. Yet with the passage of time the illness has aggravated and I got renal failure. Then I have been undergoing dialysis twice a week. In the month of Sha`ban 1414 A.H. Allah (Exalted be He) conferred His blessing on me and my brother donated me his kidney. The implant succeeded, thanks to Allah (Exalted be He). Yet I am still receiving treatment and the doctor asks me not to offer Sawm (Fast). Thus, I hope Your Eminence will give me your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified Muslim scholar) regarding whether it is obligatory on me to make up for the days I missed or feed the poor as Kaffarah (expiation) for this. Note that I was prevented from fasting by a Muslim Sudanese doctor. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you.)

(Part No. 9; Page No. 90)

A: If you cannot fast, because of your illness or for fear that this may result in delaying the healing of your illness, it is permissible for you not to fast but you should make up for the days of Sawm you missed. After Allah (Exalted be He) grants you recovery you can make up for these days.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20768

Q 2: I had an accident two years ago. During this period I was not able to perform Sawm (Fast). Thus, I fed a Miskin (needy) for each day and performed compensatory Sawm for a month. But, there is one month left, should I perform compensatory Sawm or feed Miskins? All praise be to Allah, I can now perform Sawm, but I am still paralyzed. I hope you will give me your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified Muslim scholar) concerning this matter.

A 2: If you can perform compensatory Sawm for the days in which you broke your Sawm, you should perform it. However, you should not feed Miskins in this case, because it is only obligatory on a person who can not perform compensatory Sawm.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20213

Q 2: I broke fast for twenty-five days during Ramadan, and fasted for only five days. This is because I get a terrible headache all day whenever I fast. I even suffered from a painful headache during the five days that I fasted, to the extent that I could barely prostrate while praying. Before this year, I fasted normally without suffering any headaches.

Due to my misunderstanding of religious texts concerning asceticism and renouncing worldly pleasures, I would spend one or two days without having even one meal. This resulted in my suffering from a constant headache for ten months. I checked with a doctor who prescribed me some drugs and ordered me not to skip any meal and not to starve myself. Therefore, whenever I fast or skip a meal, this terrible headache strikes me. Kindly give me your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) in this regard before the next Ramadan comes or death overtakes me.

A: You have to make up for the days on which you broke fast during Ramadan as soon as possible. Allah (Exalted be He) says: (and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number [of days which one did not observe Saum (fasts) must be made up] from other days.) You do not have to do anything else, unless you postpone making up the missed days while being able to do so, until the next Ramadan comes. In this case, you would have to make up the days and also feed a needy person one and a half kilograms of foodstuff for every day you broke fast. There is nothing wrong with making up for these days separately.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19810

Q 1: In the year 1409 A.H. it was Allah's (Glorified be He) destiny that I was afflicted with renal failure, which made me break my Sawm (Fast) three days in Ramadan. Three months later I underwent a surgical operation for a kidney transplant. The operation was successful, thanks to Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He). In the year 1410 A.H. (i.e. after the kidney transplant) the doctors advised me not to fast due to my need to drink large amounts of water and some medicines. After that, I suffered from blood pressure, i.e. in the year 1411 A.H. Yet, I have managed to fast Ramadan till now, praise be to Allah, but until now I have not made up for the month of Ramadan or the three days I did not fast.

- Is there Kaffarah (expiation) that I should make for the previous months of Ramadan?
- Is it permissible to give the total sum to just one person?
- Is it permissible to give it in the form of money? If so, how much is it?

A 1: It is obligatory on you to fast the days you failed to fast, once you are able to do so, since this is an obligation that you owe. You should both feed a poor person half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) as Kaffarah for each day and make up for these days. You should feed a poor person for each day of Sawm you missed, because you delayed making up for it despite your ability to fast. It is up to you whether you give the whole Kaffarah to one poor person or more.

May Allah facilitate your affairs and the affairs of every Muslim.

Q: My wife was predestined to be injured by fire as the kerosene refrigerator burst into flames. Some parts of her body were injured due to this fire years ago. Then, Ramadan came while she was being treated in the hospital and was pregnant as well. Then, she gave birth to a baby in the hospital during her illness. She stayed in the hospital for a year and did not perform compensatory Sawm (Fast) for Ramadan of that year. She is still ill in the hospital; sometimes she is pregnant and some others she is ill. As I mentioned, she did not perform compensatory Sawm until now. Is she obliged to perform compensatory Sawm or anything else?

1 - Should I perform Sawm for this month or is feeding valid?

2 - If it is not valid, is it permissible to perform Sawm for this month before next Ramadan?

A: You should perform compensatory Sawm for the days you broke your Sawm in Ramadan at the time of the surgery. Allah (Exalted be He) says: [\(and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.\)](#)

(Part No. 9; Page No. 97)

Moreover, you should feed a Miskin (needy) for every day you delayed the performance of compensatory Sawm until after the next Ramadan had come.

Q: My eleven-year-old daughter has to observe Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan this year, but she suffers from epileptic fits and has to take her medication every day. If she doesn't, the disease will overtake her again. Should she fast this year or not?

A: If your daughter has not yet reached puberty, she does not have to observe Sawm, for she is not Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions). The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(There are three \(persons\) whose actions are not recorded...\) and he mentioned among them the young until they reach puberty. However, if your daughter has reached puberty and is unable to fast, she is to break fast and make up for it if she can. However, if her disease is incurable, she should feed a needy person for each day on which she breaks fast. Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(but if any of you is ill or on a journey, the same number \(should be made up\) from other days. And as for those who can fast with difficulty, \(e.g. an old man, etc.\), they have \(a choice either to fast or\) to feed a Miskin \(poor person\) \(for every day\).\) The amount of food that should be served is half

Q 1: I had a kidney transplant after suffering from kidney failure three years ago. Two Ramadans passed in the last two years in which I broke my Sawm (Fast) and fed a Miskin (needy) according to the recommendation of the doctor that I was not able to perform Sawm. The reason is that I was not able to delay my prescribed drug from the morning to the evening, and that I should drink no less than three or four liters of liquids to enable my kidney to work well. This year, the doctor informed me that there is no objection to perform Sawm, and I do, in fact, continue fasting, all praise be to Allah. What should be done about the two previous months of Ramadan, in which I broke my Sawm? Should I perform compensatory Sawm in my current state, even if I am afraid of the deterioration of my state, may Allah forbid!

A 1: If the doctor, who told you this was Muslim, and you fed Miskins for the two months in which you broke your Sawm, and now your health is better and you are able to perform Sawm, you should fast in the future without repeating the Sawm of the previous months.

Q: I would like to inform you that I am an old man, about eighty years old. I am a heart patient and I take tranquilizers three times a day according to the recommendations of the doctor. I have never stopped taking such pills. The blessed Ramadan has come and it might be difficult for me to perform Sawm (Fast). I hope that you will inform me urgently with your legal opinion, as I fear Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He). May Allah grant you success to what pleases Him, and safeguard you!

Q: Allah (Glorified be He) willed that I have been suffering from diabetes since I was about 14 years old and in 17 Muharram, 1411 A.H., I had kidney failure; and in 16 Jumada Al-Thany, 1412 A.H., I had a kidney transplant in the Arab Republic of Egypt, which cost me a large sum of money. When Ramadan, 1412 A.H. started, the doctor ordered me not to fast, so I fed one Miskin (needy) for each day. And, I have a follow-up in hospital every month and a half, so I asked the doctor about Sawm, and he told me to fast if I can, and not to fast if I am not able to, knowing that the doctor is a Muslim, and he is Sudanese.

Knowing, respected Shaykh, that the doctor told me that: If you fast, do not do a lot of work and do not sleep at night so as to make up for the liquids that you lost throughout the day. In addition, I take medicine for diabetes in the morning and in the evening, and another medicine between 9:00 am and 10:00 am, and between 9:00 pm and 10:00 pm. The doctor has also advised me to drink 4, or at least 3, bottles of mineral water, a day. Knowing that I argued with the doctor about Sawm and he did not tell me whether to fast or not, I ask Allah (Exalted be He), then Your Eminence, to answer my question, and tell me whether I can fast or not. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: You must fast if delaying the medicine till night will not cause you any harm, but if you find it difficult to fast or your illness worsens, or if taking the medicine is necessary during the day in which you have to fast, you do not have to fast and you must feed one Miskin for each day.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 101)

This should be one and a half kilos of the country's staple food, if you are not likely to recover and are not able to compensate for the days that you missed.

Fatwa no. 14970

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets, to proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed the question received by His Eminence the Grand Mufti from the director of Da`wah and Guidance Center in Najran, referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 4313, dated 21 Sha`ban 1412 A.H., regarding a man's wife suffering from kidney failure, stating the following:

His wife suffers from kidney failure and receives medical treatment at the Public Hospital in Najran. She cannot perform Sawm (Fast) as mentioned. We asked the husband to attach a medical report about the state of the patient from the hospital in which she receives treatment. We attach to Your Eminence the requested report received from Najran Hospital about the state of the patient. I hope you will give the man a legal opinion whether his wife should perform Sawm or not. As stated in the attached medical report, the patient suffers from chronic kidney failure and undergoes dialysis treatments three times a week. The duration of each session is four hours.

Upon considering the Fatwa request, the Committee answered that the patient is permitted to break her Sawm on the days which she receives dialysis treatments and the other days in which she is not on dialysis, if she cannot endure Sawm. She may make up for all of the days she broke her Sawm after Ramadan, if she can.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18540

Q 1: I am twenty-nine years old. Since I suffer from renal failure, I undergo hemodialysis three days a week. During Ramadan, I fast for one day and break fast on the next. During the last Ramadan of 1415 A.H., I broke fast for twelve days, of which I have made up for only five days, with seven still remaining.

My question is: Should I do anything with regard to the remaining seven days? What should I do with regard to the next Ramadan, bearing in mind that I will do what I did before, i.e.

fast for one day and break the fast on the next due to my sickness?

A: Allah (Exalted be He) has given permission for sick persons who cannot fast during Ramadan to break the fast. With regard to the days on which you broke the fast, you only have to make up for them. You should make up for these seven days as soon as possible and, likewise, for the days on which you will break the fast during the next Ramadan of 1416 A.H. For, Allah has made it a general ruling in His Saying: [\(and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\)\] must be made up\] from other days.\)](#)

Fatwa no. 19851

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets, to proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed the question received by His Eminence the Grand Mufty from the questioner, Head of the Kidney Department in Riyadh Medical Complex, Dr. Fahd ibn Ahmad Al-Kanhal. It was referred to the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, no. 5315, dated 27 Sha`ban, 1418 A.H. The questioner asks the following:

We have many patients suffering from chronic kidney failure, which is an incurable disease according to what is known about its nature. One of the medical treatments necessary to keep the patient alive is the continuous portable peritoneum purification. It entails laying a permanent artificial tube in the patient's abdominal wall. Liquid is injected into the abdominal cavity through the artificial tube four times a day, i.e. every six hours. This liquid contains salts, sugar and water, which are a kind of nutrition. Its function is to draw out the extra fluids and poisons from the body, the function that would be done by the healthy kidney. Some of these components are absorbed into the blood from the peritoneum membrane lining the abdomen and not through the stomach.

The question is: Is this method permissible in Ramadan, i.e. in the day of Ramadan? Appreciate your guidance, may Allah guide you!

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, this procedure of purification invalidates Sawm (Fast). If it cannot be delayed until the evening, and the disease is not expected to be cured, the patient should feed a Miskin (needy) for each day in which he or she breaks Sawm an amount of 1.5 kg in compensation for Sawm. If it is expected to be cured, the patients should perform compensatory Sawm after their recovery.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20914

Q 2: My mother has been suffering from kidney failure for nine years, and Ramadan comes while she undergoes dialysis to purify her blood. She goes to the hospital three times a week: Saturday, Monday and Wednesday. The dialysis functions through tubes and two injections, thus breaking one's Sawm (Fast). She has not performed Sawm of Ramadan for nine years on the days which she has dialysis treatments. When Ramadan passes, she makes up for the days in which she broke her Sawm without performing compensatory Sawm, as she goes to the hospital three times a week. What should she do, although nine months after Ramadan have passed? Is there any sin on her, as she made up for every day in which she did not perform Sawm without performing compensatory Sawm? I hope you will give us your legal opinion, may Allah reward you with the best!

A 2: If the reality is as you mentioned, she should perform compensatory Sawm for the days of Ramadan she did not fast. This compensation should take place in regular order: she should perform compensatory Sawm for the days of the first Ramadan, then the second...etc.

Moreover, she has to expiate for delaying the compensatory Sawm by feeding a Miskin (needy person) for every day an amount of 1.5 kg of wheat, rice, dates or any other staple food known to the people of the country. This is included in the general meaning of the following Ayah (Qur'anic verse): [\(and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.\)](#)

Fatwa no. (21552)

Q 1: I suffer from kidney failure, and I undergo dialysis three times a week, that is, every other day; and in Ramadan, some of us can fast and some can not.

My first question is: Can those who are capable of observing Sawm (Fast) fast without having any rulings to follow? Knowing that some people say that their Sawm is not valid as there are some solutions that enter the body with the returning blood. Then, if the Sawm is not valid, what is the ruling to be followed? Does one have to compensate for the days he could not fast, or to feed, or do both? And, what is to be done concerning the years in which a person used to fast while undergoing dialysis?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 107)

The second question is: Is it permissible to pray while undergoing dialysis without Wudu' (ablution)? And if not, what is to be done if the Zhuhr (Noon) and the `Asr (Afternoon) Prayers pass while we are having dialysis, and sometimes we are very tired as a result of the dialysis and we take a rest till the time of the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer, so we pray them all together. Is this permissible?

Q: If delaying the dialysis till the evening during the days of Sawm is not possible, and the patient has to undergo dialysis while fasting, dialysis invalidates the Sawm because, according to what specialists mention, it involves taking the patient's blood out of his body into a machine and then returning it to the body with some chemicals and nutrients that are added to it, such as sugars and salts, and this invalidates the Sawm. In this case, the patient has to abstain from all that breaks his Sawm for the rest of the day in which he undergoes dialysis, unless it becomes necessary for him to break his Sawm the rest of the day because of his illness. If the patient is likely to recover, he must make up for the Sawm after his recovery; and if he is not likely to recover, he must feed one Miskin (needy) for each day in which he undergoes dialysis during the day in Ramadan. This is an amount of one and a half kilos of wheat, rice and so on, from the country's staple food.

The patient must perform each Salah (Prayer) on time before or after the dialysis if he can manage to do so, as it is not permissible to perform a Salah after its time ends or before it starts. Then, if the dialysis encompasses the rest of the Salah time, which means that the time of the Salah ends if it is delayed till after the dialysis,

he must perform it at the beginning of its time if possible, or he must combine it with the one with which it is possible to be combined if he cannot pray the other Salah on time or if he finds it difficult to perform it after having the dialysis. So, he combines Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers at the time of the earlier one, which is Zhuhr, and combines Maghrib and `Isha' (Night) Prayers at the time of the earlier one. However, if the dialysis is to be done before the time of the Salah starts or at the beginning of its time, and the patient can not perform the Salah in this short period, he can delay it with the one that follows it if they can be combined. That is, he combines Zhuhr and `Asr Prayers at the time of the latter, because he falls under the same ruling as a patient. If it becomes necessary to have dialysis before one can perform the Salah at its due time, and the dialysis does not end until the time of the Salah ends, and it can not be combined with another Salah, for example, if someone undergoes dialysis after the time of `Asr Prayer starts or before the time of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer starts, he is permitted to delay it and compensate it after the dialysis ends. This is so even if its time is over, only for the necessity, because Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ Allah (Exalted be He) also says: ﴿Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.﴾ Also, when the Prophet (peace be upon him) was occupied with fighting the Mushriks (ones who associate others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) on the day of Al-Ahzab and could not pray the `Asr Prayer, he delayed it till after the time of the Maghrib Prayer and then prayed the Maghrib Prayer after it.

Q: I suffer from renal failure. The doctor has forbidden me from performing Sawm (Fast), as it affects my health negatively and I cannot endure it. He decided that I should be treated by dialysis twice a week. I have undergone dialysis for a month and a half. Later I saw another doctor in Riyadh, who prescribed medication for me and diet. I eventually recovered, all praise be to Allah, but I broke my Sawm in Ramadan for three years. I performed Sawm this year with difficulty, as I consulted a doctor who recommended me to perform Sawm for ten days and then return to him to determine whether I could continue fasting till the end of the month or break the Sawm. When I came back to him, he told me to continue fasting till the end of the month. I hope you will advise me concerning the days in which I did not perform Sawm. Should I perform compensatory Sawm for these months, although I paid Kaffarah (expiation) for each month? If it is obligatory to perform compensatory Sawm, should I perform it for the three months in one year or only a month per year? May Allah safeguard you!

A: If the reality is as you mentioned and you fed the poor (as Kaffarah) for the previous years, as a trusted doctor told you that Sawm would affect your health negatively, as well as your inability to perform it in the future; your feeding of the poor was valid and there is no blame on you In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). Q: My father went into the Intensive Care Unit in hospital at the beginning of Ramadan 1416 A.H. because he had heart failure and kidney inflammation as a result of a disturbance in his blood sugar level. He spent the first four days in a coma-like condition, and the rest of the month in a better condition, and he left the hospital a few days before `Eid-ul-Fitr (the Festival of Breaking the Fast) as his health had improved relatively, but he was still ill and taking a lot of medicine so the doctors ordered him to take it on time. He takes tablets for diabetes, blood pressure, and for strengthening the heart muscle, in addition to diuretics which help to discharge liquids from the body, three times daily: in the morning, at noon, and at night. He did not fast except four days of the whole month because of his condition, and he brought out two packs of rice, each of which weighs 45 kilograms, before the following Ramadan, 1417 A.H.,

(Part No. 9; Page No. 111)

and gave them as charity to two poor families. In Ramadan, 1417 A.H., he did not fast at all because his doctors ordered him not to fast. After `Eid-ul-Fitr he brought out two packs of rice as well, which a trustworthy person distributed over some poor people that he knows. However, he wants to be reassured and to know the Islamically lawful ruling on what he did, and to know from Your Eminence in particular what he must do in detail. May Allah grant you the best reward and recompense!

A: If your father is not able to compensate for the days that he missed because of a chronic disease, he must feed one Miskin (needy) an amount of one and a half kilos of food for each day. This amount can be given either to one person or to many people, and this will be a substitute for the compensatory Sawm (Fast), as Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And as for those who can fast with difficulty, \(e.g. an old man\), they have \(a choice either to fast or\) to feed a Miskin \(poor person\) \(for every day\).﴾ Therefore, the food that you brought out is considered more than the required amount, so you can consider the extra amount as Sadaqah (voluntary charity). But if your father is likely to recover and he can perform compensatory Sawm, he must wait until he is able to fast and then make up for the missed days.

Q: I have been suffering from depression and psychological disturbance for more than thirteen years, and I use some sedatives, but the number of tablets that I take have now reached 10 tablets per night, in addition to the medicine that I take for diabetes and the electroconvulsive therapy because my body has gained immunity against the medicine. I sleep about two hours only every night after taking the tablets, then I spend the rest of the night suffering from sleeplessness and psychological instability.

And, now that Ramadan is approaching, the time of taking the medicine will change and I will encounter a lot of suffering like last year, as I underwent a lot of exhaustion and fatigue by observing Sawm (Fast). Some scholarly students have told me not to fast and to feed poor people instead, and now I am not able to fast without sleeping and having rest. I beg Your Eminence to direct me to the right way, and I hope that your answer be written on paper so as to be evidence that I can show to my sons or any body who may suspect my attitude. May Allah guard you and reward you with the best!

A: If the case is as you mentioned, and you are unable to fast because you need to take the medicine during the daytime, and the illness you have continues throughout the whole year, it is permissible for you not to fast and you must feed one Miskin (needy) for each day, an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.), which equals one and a half kilos from the country's staple food, such as rice. Q: My wife is seventeen years old, and suffers from anemia. A doctor warned her not to perform Sawm (Fast), and she has not performed Sawm in Ramadan for three years except for a few days. As her body is weak, I hope you will give us your legal opinion concerning the action she should take. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, your wife is not obliged to perform Sawm. However, she should feed a Miskin (needy) for each day she missed Sawm an amount of 1.5 kg of staple food. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And as for those who can fast with difficulty, \(e.g. an old man\), they have \(a choice either to fast or\) to feed a Miskin \(poor person\) \(for every day\).﴾ This means that the people who are unable to perform Sawm due to a chronic disease or old age can feed a Miskin for each day, as explained by Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) and a group of Salaf (righteous predecessors). Q: My wife suffers from diabetes to the extent that she sometimes faints. Two female Muslim doctors treating her decided that she could not perform Sawm (Fast) or Hajj. Respected Shaykh, my wife was not able to perform Sawm last Ramadan due to her illness, and due to being pregnant, then, she miscarried.

The question is: What is the ruling as she is unable to perform Sawm especially after her miscarriage? What is the ruling on her inability to perform Hajj, taking into consideration that she did not perform the obligatory Hajj? Moreover, she is pregnant now, and is expected to give birth at the end of Sha`ban, what should she do about Ramadan this year? The doctors, who are treating her, still order her not to perform Sawm for an indefinite period. I hope you will give us your legal opinion, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: First, if the reality of your ill wife is as you mentioned, she should feed a Miskin (needy) for each day in which she do not perform Sawm an amount equal to half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of the staple food of your country.

Q: During last Ramadan, I was ill in the Military Hospital in Riyadh, as I suffered from pain on Friday, 29 Sha`ban and I spent the night in the heart center. Then, the doctors decided to perform a surgery on three arteries. Moreover, they advised me not to perform Sawm (Fast), as it would negatively affect my health because I suffer from hypertension, diabetes and asthma, according to the attached medical reports. Thus, I was prevented from performing this Faridah (obligatory act). In Muharram, 1420 A.H., I suffered from chest and liver diseases, resulting in me staying in the Military Hospital. After a checkup, I was given intense treatment, which the doctors advised me to take three times daily for nine months starting from 12 Safar, 1420 A.H. Your Eminence Mufti (Muslim scholar qualified to issue legal opinions), I am seventy years old, and I am confused concerning how to make up for the days in which I broke my Sawm during the blessed Ramadan, 1419 A.H. Thus,

(Part No. 9; Page No. 117)

I hope you will give me your legal opinion concerning making up for these days.

A: If you are not able to perform compensatory Sawm permanently, you should feed a Miskin (needy) for each day an amount of 1.5 kg (of staple food). You are not obliged to perform Sawm. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And as for those who can fast with difficulty, \(e.g. an old man\), they have \(a choice either to fast or\) to feed a Miskîn \(poor person\) \(for every day\).﴾ In this Ayah (Qur'anic verse), the ruling on the person who can fast with difficulty is abrogated, based on Allah's Saying: ﴿So whoever of you sights \(the crescent on the first night of\) the month \(of Ramadan i.e. is present at his home\), he must observe Saum \(fasts\) that month﴾ but remains the ruling on the person who is unable to perform Sawm whether due to old age or incurable illness. If you expect to recover and make up for the days in which you could not perform Sawm, you can break your Sawm and perform compensatory Sawm when you are able to do so. Allah (Exalted be He) says: [﴿and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.﴾](#)

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 20574

Q: My wife suffers from physical pain. She could not perform Sawm (Fast) of the previous Ramadan. And she will not be able to perform Sawm of the following Ramadan. Thus, we ask you to give us your legal opinion concerning how she should make up for this and the Kaffarah (expiation) she should offer. May Allah bless you.

A: If your wife is expected to recover, she should perform compensatory Sawm for the days in which she broke her Sawm. She should do this after she recovers. If she is not expected to recover in the future, she should feed a Miskin (needy) person for each day in which she broke her Sawm an amount of 1.5 kg of staple food of your country. This compensates for performing Sawm, as this Fatwa was reported from a group of the Companions (may Allah be pleased with them) of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20022

Q 2: My mother is 58 years old. She became ill on 7 Rajab, 1418 A.H, which resulted in being handicapped. Later, she began to recover, all praise be to Allah. She did not perform Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan, so that she would be able to take her medications and eat, because she suffered from incontinence, may Allah safeguard you. Should we feed Miskins (needy) on her behalf? Is she obliged to offer Kaffarah (expiation), and what is its amount?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 119)

A 2: If your mother is able to perform compensatory Sawm for Ramadan in the future, after recovering, she should wait till then. She should perform compensatory Sawm, and she is not obliged to offer Kaffarah. However, if her illness is permanent and she cannot perform compensatory Sawm in the future, she should feed a Miskin for each day in which she broke her Sawm an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of the staple food of the country, which is about 1.5 kg.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 14486

Q: My wife is nearly 50 years old. She is completely paralyzed and has not spoken for five years. Four years have passed and she has not been able to perform Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan. We did not feed Miskins (needy) as we did not know. Moreover, she is still extremely ill, and cannot move or speak except through signs. We do not understand anything she says except the Shahadah (Testimony of Faith), which she can say. Based on her condition, I hope Your Eminence will give me a legal opinion concerning the rulings on her acts of `Ibadah (worship) and the Sawm or its compensation that she should perform. May Allah safeguard you!

(Part No. 9; Page No. 120)

A: If two or more trusted doctors decided that your wife's illness cannot be cured, she should feed a Miskin for each day in which she did not perform Sawm in the past as well as the days that she would not fast in the future an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of the staple food of the country. May Allah grant her good health and reward you with the best!

Fatwa no. 14460

Q 1: A person fell ill and was hospitalized; therefore, he did not perform Sawm (Fast) for some days in Ramadan, but later recovered. He performed compensatory Sawm for some of the days of the previous Ramadan, then the following Ramadan came and he did not make up for the previous missed days. Is it permissible for him to make up for these days after the second Ramadan, as he intends to make up for them?

A 1: This person should continue making up for the days in which he did not perform Sawm due to his illness, even after the next Ramadan. Moreover, he should feed a Miskin (needy) for every day of compensatory Sawm he delayed without a legal excuse till the next Ramadan came.

Q 2: A person was once ill for four years, in which he did not perform Sawm. He has now been healthy for ten years and performs Sawm, but has not performed compensatory Sawm for the previous four years during which he was ill. What should he do?

A 2: The person in question should perform compensatory Sawm for the days of Ramadan in which he broke his Sawm throughout the four years he was ill. In addition, he should feed a Miskin for each of these days because he delayed the compensatory Sawm till a following Ramadan has come without a legal excuse.

Fatwa no. 14647

Q: Our father is old and has been suffering from a brain stroke for a year and a half. He is bedridden and only looks at us without speaking or moving. We do not know whether he recognizes us or not, and he has remained in the hospital throughout this entire period with a male nurse to care for him. We are with him constantly, taking care of him and turning him in the bed every two hours. Outwardly, he is shining in a way that indicates happiness, praise be to Allah. Our father has been an upright and devout man throughout his life, may Allah restore his health. He used to recite the Qur'an and never approached a Munkar (deed which is unacceptable and disapproved by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect), everyone acquainted with him knows this. He taught us Islam, all praise be to Allah, till it has become more precious to us than our souls, children and everything in this world. We exerted every effort for the sake of treating him, but our efforts were in vain - La hawla wala quwwata illa billah (there is neither might nor power except with Allah!). The question is:

(Part No. 9; Page No. 122)

- 1- What are the Ayahs (Qur'anic verses) and Hadiths regarding the trials that afflict a weak, upright believer who stops all forms of `Ibadah (worship) during his illness?
- 2- What should we do to dedicate to him Salah (Prayer), Du`a' (supplication) and Qur'an recitation we can do during his life, and what can we send forth for him and our mother who died thirty years ago? I hope you will provide us with a convincing, useful answer, may Allah reward you with the best!
- 3- We asked for a Muslim male nurse, but a non-Muslim came. We tried to send him back, but he appears to be kind and takes care of our father well. Thus, we kept him with our father and we try to convince him to embrace Islam. Is it permissible to keep him with our father? What do you advise us in this respect?
- 4- Last Ramadan, we asked many shaykhs concerning what we could do for our father, but we did not get a proper detailed Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified scholar). Thus, we fed a Miskin (needy) for each day in which he did not perform Sawm (Fast) an amount of a kilogram of rice and some dates. What should we have done, taking into consideration that our father does not perform any act of `Ibadah, due to his condition and inability to recognize anything? He merely stares at us. However, we fear that he perhaps is aware of his state and is discontent with his condition. And Allah knows best.

The doctors say that he is unconscious, therefore, we have let his beard to grow as it was and have not trimmed it? Should we shorten it, or leave it as it is?

- 5- Whenever we remember his condition while praying, sleeping, at home or work or elsewhere, we blame ourselves, thinking what should we do, and what a disaster has afflicted us and our father. We wonder whether it afflicted our father due to the many sins we committed, or due to his own sins. However, we as well as others know that he has been upright all his life.

We hope you will clarify these matters for us, may Allah reward you with the best! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!).

A: First, verily Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) afflicts people in this world and makes a trial of them with evil and good, illness and good health, distress and well-being, to test the patient and gratitude people. Then, He will reward them on the Day of Judgment. Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(and We shall make a trial of you with evil and with good. And to Us you will be returned.\) ,

Allah (Exalted be He) states: \(And certainly, We shall test you with something of fear, hunger, loss of wealth, lives and fruits, but give glad tidings to As-Sâbirûn \(the patient\).\) A Muslim must be patient and wait for Allah's reward if he is afflicted with misfortune, and thank Allah if something good happened to him. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(Remarkable are the affairs of the believer! Verily in every act there is good. If good befalls him then he reaches out in thanks and appreciation then that is best for him. Yet if harm or evil occurs then he shows patience and perseverance, then that is best for him. But that is not for any other except the believer.\)

Second, what is permissible for you is to supplicate to Allah to restore your father's health, to forgive him, to grant him a good end and to reward him with the best for the illness that has afflicted him. Moreover, you are permitted to pay Sadaqah (voluntary charity) for his sake and maintain his ties of kinship. You should do the same for your deceased mother. In addition, you should carry out his legal will, if he has one, and be patient in nursing him and wait for the reward of Allah (Exalted be He).

Third, as your father is unconscious and does not recognize anything, he is not required to perform any physical `Ibadah such as Sawm, Salah (Prayer), because legal accountability for actions depends on the mind. If he is unconscious, he is no longer legally accountable for his actions.

We hope that Allah (Glorified be He) will restore your father's health and grant you patience in waiting for His reward for nursing, which will indeed be great!

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 21209

Q 1: My grandmother (my Allah be merciful to her) died two years ago, but she was unable to perform Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan, as she was ill and feeble-minded. What is the ruling? Should I pay Sadaqah (voluntary charity) for each day in which she did not perform Sawm, or what should I do?

A 1: You should feed a Miskin (needy) for each day in which she did not perform Sawm an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of the staple food of the country. Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) commented on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Exalted be He) states: \(And as for those who can fast with difficulty, \(e.g. an old man\), they have \(a choice either to fast or\) to feed\) that it is not abrogated, as it concerns the elderly who are not able to perform Sawm. (Related by Al-Bukhari (may Allah be merciful to him)). Therefore, if she lost her ability to reason, she is obliged to nothing, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(There are three \(persons\) whose actions are not recorded...\) and mentioned that one of them is: \(A mentally ill person, till he is restored to consciousness...\)

Q 5: I am ill and the doctor has asked me not to perform Sawm (Fast). This doctor is Muslim and performs Salah (Prayer) with us in the Masjid (mosque). Should I follow his advice, taking into consideration that I cannot endure abstaining from water for more than two hours? If I do not perform Sawm, is it possible to feed a Miskin (needy) for each day in which I break my Sawm through the program of feeding a fasting person coordinated by charities or the Islamic Relief Organization? Appreciate your guidance, may Allah guide you.

A 5: If the reality is as you mentioned, it is better to break Sawm, as it will be beneficial for you and will rid you of any difficulty while you have a legal excuse - illness. You should perform compensatory Sawm when you recover, and you are not obliged to feed Miskins in this case. However, if you lose hope of recovering or of the ability to make up for these days, you will be required to perform compensatory Sawm and, in this case, you should feed a Miskin for each day you did not fast or give out an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of wheat, rice, dates or anything else of the staple food of the country. The poor and Miskins are everywhere; however, if you find a trusted organization that you can deputize to feed the Miskins, there is nothing wrong in that

Q: A chronically sick woman did not observe Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan last year. Even now, she cannot make up for the days she missed in Ramadan, bearing in mind that she did not fast the entire month of Ramadan. Moreover, she is unable to pay expiation or feed poor persons. I would like also to inform you that doctors asked her not to fast. What should she do? What if she dies? May Allah bless you and grant you success!

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, this woman should feed a poor person for every day she breaks Fast. The amount of what she pays to the poor is 1.5 kilogram of the common food of the country for each day she missed. However, if this is beyond her financial ability, she is excused. The second Question of Fatwa no. 17029

Q 2: I contracted diabetes before Ramadan 1413 AH and doctors asked me not to fast the days of Ramadan of that year and the next year 1414 AH as well. I am being treated with insulin injections three times a day. Should I make up for the days I missed in Ramadan? Please, be informed that I am financially supported by my father. How should I feed persons in case I am duty-bound to do so? May I calculate the total value of the food that I should give to the poor and pay its value in cash all at once?

A: If you cannot observe Sawm (Fast) because of this illness, you may break Fast. Later, if you can make up for the days you missed, you should do so. If you are perpetually unable to make up for them, you should feed a poor person 1.5 kilogram of the local staple food for each day you broke Fast, thus discharging the obligation of Sawm. It is also permissible to calculate the total amount of food and give it all at once to one or more poor persons at the beginning, or at the end of Ramadan. We ask Allah to cure you of all harms.

Q: Suffering from diabetes, hypertension and cholesterolemia, I am duty-bound to make up for two months and ten days as missed Ramadan fasts. Moreover, I gave birth to a child during Ramadan and doctors asked me not to fast. Is it permissible for me to pay expiation for the missed fasts? If yes, how much should I pay? Is it permissible for my children to observe Sawm (Fast) on my behalf while I am still alive?

As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: You should make up for the Ramadan fasts you missed during past years. If you cannot make up for missed fasts because your illness is incurable, you should feed a poor person per each day half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the local staple food, which equals 1.5 kg. Such Kaffarah (expiation) may be given in total to one poor person and may be given all at once. However, it is impermissible for your children to observe Sawm on your behalf while you are living.

Fatwa no. 16556

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.
To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed the submitted question by the director of Da`wah and Guidance Center to His Eminence the General Mufty at Abha in his letter no. A/9/566, dated 5 Sha`ban 1414 A.H, which was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars no. 3590, dated 8 Sha`ban 1414 A.H. His Eminence attached a question from a person stating:

My daughter is about thirteen and half years old, meaning she is pubescent and Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions). She has been diagnosed with epilepsy, and is currently being treated with medication which must be administered during the day and night. Taking into consideration that she still suffers from this disease and has seizures if she does not take the pills to be swallowed with water - on their prescribed time either day or night - is it permissible to pay Kaffarah (expiation) for not observing Sawm (Fast)? Is it permissible to pay the Kaffarah of the entire month all at one time? The girl in question has been ill for eleven years and is still undergoing treatment. Please advise, may Allah grant you success!

Then, a reply was sent to His Eminence with a letter no. 2/2395, dated

(Part No. 9; Page No. 131)

25 Sha`ban 1414 A.H, requesting him to send the attached medical report. His Eminence reply was sent in letter no. A/9/641, dated 3 Ramadan 1414 A.H, with a medical report, stating: "The patient suffers from epileptic attacks. She regularly takes medicine for this reason five times a day during the day: 6 am, 7am, 8 am, 3 pm, and 4 pm. The medicine cannot be given only once or twice during the day or night."

After studying the question the Committee answered that her father should pay 15 Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) if Ramadan is thirty days. If it is twenty nine days, he should pay 14.5 Sa`. He should pay them to the poor, even if one poor person either in the beginning of the month, during it, or at the end of it; until Allah cures her.

Q: My father has been ill for about a year. He was not aware that the month of Ramadan had commenced, and when he recovered he did not make up this month. It should be known that he was devotedly committed; however, the illness was extremely severe.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 132)

He died when he was over ninety years old. He left a son who works and has children, as well as, daughters who are married. Is it permissible for his family to make up these days or pay Kaffarah (expiation) on his behalf?

Q: My father (may Allah be merciful to him) died about twenty years ago after suffering from a chronic disease. The illness became so severe culminating in his suffering from intense thirst. He used to drink water every now and then. No matter how much water he drank, it would not quench his thirst. We used to give him a cup of water about every five minutes. If we would give him more water, he would drink it due to extreme thirst.

His Eminence Chairman, the reason for the above mentioned explanation is to tell you that my father could not observe Sawm (Fast). During these years of illness, he witnessed Ramadan and fasted fourteen days with great hardship. At the time of

Iftar (breaking the Fast), he used to be extremely hungry and thirsty. He could not complete Sawm of the remaining sixteen days of that month, and he continued to suffer from this illness until the next Ramadan when he could not fast at all. He (may Allah be merciful to him) lived for about three months after that Ramadan, may Allah admit him to Paradise, while having to make up for 46 days. I asked some scholars who told me that there is nothing upon him as long as he continued to suffer from illness until his death.

After hearing some scholars on Saudi radio with different opinions to what I was told and out of my desire to discharge the obligation of my father and to act according to the rulings of Shari`ah (Islamic law), I would like to know Your Eminence's opinion and ask that you give me a written answer. May Allah reward you with the best! May Allah grant you success in the way of goodness and guiding Muslims! If there is a Kaffarah (expiation) to be paid, please clarify it and its description. Is it permissible to send it to the deserving recipients through organizations like Snabil Al-Khayr?

If there is Sawm to be observed, is it permissible for his children, including me, to share out these days among ourselves, with each fasting some days? Should we share out the Kaffarah and Sawm if we have to do both of them? Would his obligation be discharged? Anyhow, I am waiting for the Shari`ah ruling in a written answer by you. May Allah reward you with the best! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: If the reality is as you mentioned that your father was ill until he died and that he was not able to fast Ramadan during his illness until he died; then, there is nothing upon your father: neither making up for these days nor Kaffarah (expiation).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 14525

Q: My sister's husband suffered from cancer, may Allah protect us and you from it, and underwent surgery. In that year 1411 A.H., he became very sick before, during, and after Ramadan. He died after Ramadan, may Allah admit him to Paradise. He did not fast the Ramadan of that year.

The question is: How much Kaffarah (expiation) should be paid for a missed day? Is it a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg), more, or less? Is it permissible to give rice instead of wheat? Is it permissible to give only wheat? Should the Kaffarah be paid all at once on one day or day by day?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 135)

We would like to know the answer to this question. It should be known that his wife, my sister, will pay this Kaffarah. He had young children and two wives, my sister and her co-wife who is from our tribe. He also was burdened with debts.

A: If your sister's husband continued to suffer from this illness before Ramadan until his death, you have not to make up for the missed days or to pay Kaffarah. He is exempted from Sawm during Ramadan due to illness, and because he could not fast after Ramadan due to the continuation of his disease until death.

Q 2: My father died and did not fast Ramadan due to illness? Should I observe Sawm (Fast) to make up for the missed days, or to provide needy people with food on his behalf? Which one is better?

A 2: If your father was able to make up for these missed days and did not do so, it is permissible for you to fast on his behalf. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(Whoever dies not having completed some days of the fast, an heir must fast on their behalf.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) reported by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her)

A 11: When your brother reaches puberty by means of one of its relevant signs, such as discharging Maniy (sperm), growing of coarse pubic hair, or reaching fifteen years old, it is obligatory upon him to observe Sawm. If he cannot do so because of his illness, it is permissible for him to break Sawm if it is a chronic illness. He should feed a needy person for every day

Q 1: I am an eighteen years old student. All praise is due to Allah, in the past Ramadan I traveled by a truck to an area that is not enough to permit a fasting person to break Sawm (Fast), so, I observed Sawm and traveled. When I reached this area, I became extremely thirsty and broke my Sawm. Have I only to make up for this day, or to make up for this day and pay Kaffarah (expiation) as well?

A 1: If you broke your Sawm due to intense thirst, you have to make up for the day on which you broke Sawm.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Q 5: A man was traveling during Ramadan. He intended to break Sawm (Fast), but he did not eat and only chewed gum until noon. Then, he intended to complete his Sawm and broke his Sawm at sunset. What is the ruling on Sawm of that day? Has he to make up for this day?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 139)

The fifth, sixth, and seventh questions of Fatwa no. 19472

Q 5: Is it permissible for a fasting person to begin Iftar (breaking the Fast) by eating meat if they do not find date?

A 5: It is permissible to break Sawm (Fast) with dates or any type of food or meat. However, it is better to break Sawm with ripe dates. If one does not find ripe dates, one should have regular dates. If there are no dates available, they can break Sawm with water. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to do so.

A 6: If the distance of travel is eighty kilometers or more, it is Mustahab (desirable) for the traveler to break Sawm, even if the means of transportation is comfortable like a train, ship, car, or plane. This is based on the general meaning of evidence on this issue.

Q: Should we observe Sawm (Fast) in this country, India. It should be known that our stay here is only an approximation. Most of us observe Sawm in Ramadan. Is it permissible for us to break Sawm?

A: It is obligatory upon you to observe Sawm in Ramadan because it is one of the Rukns (Pillars) of Islam. It is impermissible for you to break Sawm because you are in the country for study. You are not considered travelers. Allah permits only the ill and the traveler to break Sawm. Allah (Exalted be He) states: [﴿So whoever of you sights \(the crescent on the first night of\) the month \(of Ramadan i.e. is present at his home\), he must observe Saum \(fasts\) that month, and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.﴾](#) Pregnant and breastfeeding woman are included in this ruling, based on evidence such as the Hadith of Anas Ibn Malik, a man from Banu Ka'b, who said, ﴿The army of the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) invaded my tribe. I went to the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) and found him eating. He said to me: 'Come near to eat!' I replied, 'I observe Sawm \(fast\).'

Fatwa no. 14913

Q: As Ramadan approaches, the first air battalion in the Northern Region is being commissioned to fly at least a six-hour patrol a day over the northern borders. As a result, the pilots exert strenuous effort to perform this task and cannot observe Sawm (Fast) due to safety procedures. It should be known that there are two flight shifts, day and at night. Sometimes, there is an additional patrol on standby. Therefore, we would like to submit the case to the authorities concerned to instruct us on the issue of allowing the pilots to break their Sawm, so that they will be able to properly complete their task and safeguard lives and properties.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 142)

A: First: Commissioned pilots with the task of patrolling the northern borders of which the distance to their place of residence hits eighty kilometers, for which it is permissible to shorten Salah (Prayer), are permitted to break Sawm once they depart their base. It is permissible to break Sawm before flying, if necessary.

Second: Any pilot whose place of residence is not of such distance, must perform these tasks to preserve the Maslahah (public interest) of the nation, and cannot complete this task without breaking Sawm; it is permissible for them to break Sawm to achieve Maslahah and protect others from harm.

Third: It is obligatory upon those who return to their place of residence during the day and will not resume the task to abstain from all that breaks Sawm during the remainder of the day.

Fourth: All those involved in the above-mentioned cases must make up for the days on which they break Sawm.

Fatwa no. 1531

All praise be to Allah, and peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and Companions. To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' reviewed

a question submitted by Air Commodore, `Abdul-Muhsin Ibn `Abdullah Al Al-Shaykh, to His Eminence chairman that was referred from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars no. 2/175, dated 10 Safar, 1397 A.H. The question is:

As pilots are required to fly during the day in Ramadan but the rules of flying provide for pilots not to observe Sawm (Fast) while flying. Since we give precedence to the teachings of Islam over all conditions, we would like to know your Fatwa on this issue. Is it permissible for pilots to break Sawm when flying during the day in Ramadan?

The Committee answered as follows:

If pilots fly for a distance that makes it permissible to shorten Salah (Prayer), it is lawful for them to break Sawm during the daylight hours of Ramadan after departing the town in which the airport is located. It is permissible for them to enjoy every Rukhsah (concession) permitted for travelers, such as wiping over the Khuffs (leather socks) for three days, combining two Salahs (Prayers), and shortening the four-Rak`ah Salah (Prayer consisting of four units) throughout the flight even if they lands in the airport of another country; until returning to their home country even if on the same day.

However, if the flight takes place over the town and its districts for the sake of drills, spraying pesticides, antiseptics, etc.; they are not considered travelers. In this case, there is no Rukhsah to break Sawm in Ramadan, shorten Salah, combine two Salahs, etc.; even if the distance of the flight equals that for which it is permissible to shorten Salah and break Sawm in Ramadan. This case of a pilot is similar to the case of a driver who drives in the streets of a town all the day and night. It is impermissible for both of them to enjoy the Rukhsah of the traveler. It is possible to avoid hardship by carrying out these drills at night during Ramadan and the other months of the year.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 19773

Q 7: Is it permissible to break Sawm (Fast) during daylight hours of Ramadan in case of exhaustion, hunger, or thirst while carrying out civil defense operations? What is the criterion in this regard?

A 7: It is impermissible to break the obligatory Sawm without the excuse of illness or travel, except for one who fears for their own life, or needs to break Sawm to save the life of another; if this can not be achieved without breaking Sawm.

The second question of Fatwa no. 20239

Q 2: I suffer from thirst and fatigue while I am pasturing animals. May I break Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan and make up the missed days later? May Allah reward you with the best!

A 2: Pasturing is not a legal excuse that permits you to break Sawm in Ramadan. It is obligatory upon you to fast and seek reward from Allah in return for patience in enduring fatigue and thirst. In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), Allah (Exalted be He) will help you to do so. Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿O you who believe! Observing As-Saum (the fasting) is prescribed for you as it was prescribed for those before you, that you may become Al-Muttaqun (the pious - see V.2:2).﴾ until the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿The month of Ramadan in which was revealed the Qur'ân, a guidance for mankind and clear proofs for the guidance and the criterion (between right and wrong). So whoever of you sights (the crescent on the first night of) the month (of Ramadan i.e. is present at his home), he must observe Saum (fasts) that month, and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number [of days which one did not observe Saum (fasts) must be made up] from other days.﴾ All praise is due to Allah, you are neither ill nor a traveler. So, it is obligatory upon you to fast.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The second question of Fatwa no. 15910

Q 2: People in the Sahara may witness Ramadan during the summer season. It becomes too difficult or even impossible for them to observe Sawm (Fast). However, this will last for many years so how can those people observe Sawm? What should the elderly, who can neither observe Sawm nor feed needy people, do?

A 2: When Ramadan comes, it becomes obligatory upon every healthy, resident and Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) Muslim to observe Sawm. Allah (Exalted be He) states: [«So whoever of you sights \(the crescent on the first night of\) the month \(of Ramadan i.e. is present at his home\), he must observe Saum \(fasts\) that month, and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.»](#) It is obligatory to observe Sawm even if the weather is hot, because Sawm of Ramadan is a Rukn (pillar) of Islam. Those who observe Sawm and then suffer from thirst that may cause them to die are permitted to break their Sawm by having the amount of water that makes them survive. Then, they should abstain from all that breaks Sawm during the rest of the day. This day should be made up another day, and Allah knows best.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Intention

The first and fifth questions of Fatwa no. 16396

Q 1: We used to intend Sawm (Fast) of the next day directly after Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer in the following way: Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) says, "I intend to fast tomorrow as a fulfillment for the obligation of observing Sawm in this year for the sake of Allah (Exalted be He) and out of Ihtisab (confident anticipation of Allah's Recompense) for His sake." Then, the Ma'mums (people being led by an Imam in Prayer) repeat the words after the Imam.

A 1: Having the intention to fast during the night before dawn each day is Wajib (obligatory) according to Shari'ah. Hafsa (may Allah be pleased with her) said that the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(He who does not determine to fast before dawn does not fast.\) (Related by Ahl-ul-Sunan [authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes]) The heart is the place to determine intention. 'Umar (may Allah be pleased with him) said that the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(The reward of deeds depends upon the intentions.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) Therefore, pronouncing the intention to observe Sawm or perform Salah (Prayer) is Bid'ah (innovation in Islam) which has no evidence. People falsely attribute this act to the Madh-hab (School of Jurisprudence) of Imam Al-Shafi'y (may Allah be merciful to him). There is not a single text stating that intention should be pronounced verbally. This is proved by Imam Ibn Al-Qayyim (may Allah be merciful to him) in his book Zad-ul-Ma'ad. Hence, people of that Masjid (mosque) should abandon verbal pronunciation of intention. Adhering to Sunnah is an act full of goodness and blessings.

till the morning. Is our Sawm of that day valid? Have I to make up for that day because I had no intention except after its proper time?

A 1: You have to make up for this day which you did not intend to fast from the previous evening. Having intention the night before is a condition for the validity of obligatory Sawm. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: \(Whoever does not form the intention to fast before dawn, has not fasted.\) (Related by the Five Compilers of Hadith [Imams Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, Al-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah])

What is the ruling on one who drinks after hearing the Adhan though Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿and eat and drink until the white thread (light) of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread (darkness of night)﴾

A 3: If the Adhan is for the break of dawn, it is impermissible to eat or drink after it. However, if it is called before dawn, it is permissible to eat and drink after it because the evidence in this regard is the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Exalted be He) states: ﴿and eat and drink until the white thread (light) of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread (darkness of night)﴾ If someone is in doubt, they can be on the safe side and stop eating and drinking to apply the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: ﴿"So he who guards himself against doubtful things keeps his religion and honor blameless..."﴾

Q 4: If someone intends at night to observe Sawm (Fast) on the next day; however they break Sawm in the morning or any time the next day due to some reason, should they make up for that day because they intended to observe Sawm and did not do so?

A 4: If it is a Wajib (obligatory) Sawm, such as Sawm of a vow or making up for a missed day in Ramadan, it is impermissible to break Sawm. Breaking Sawm of such a Wajib day without an excuse is a sin and they must make up for that day. However, if it is a supererogatory Sawm, it is better to complete Sawm. If Sawm is broken, there is nothing wrong in this and making it up is not required.

Q 3: Is it obligatory to have intention for Sawm (Fast) each night of Ramadan? Does it suffice to make one intention for Sawm for the entire month of Ramadan on the last night of Sha`ban?

Q 1: What is the ruling on someone who observes Sawm (Fast) without offering the previous day's Salah (Prayer) of `Isha' (Night) and Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) out of forgetfulness?

A 1: The Sawm is valid and the forgotten Salah must be made up. It is not obligatory to make up for the missed Tarawih because it is a supererogatory Salah. If the person offers supererogatory Salah during the day according to their ability, this is the best. Whenever the Prophet (peace be upon him) missed Qiyam-ul-Layl (standing for optional Prayer at night) due to sleeping or illness he used to make up for it by day. Fatwa no. 18323

Q: While watching a Bahrain TV program, my two wives heard a Shaykh say that sexual intercourse during Ramadan is impermissible. It seems that the Shaykh meant that sexual intercourse is impermissible during daylight hours in Ramadan rather than nights although he did not make this clear. In fact, I am still arguing with them that sexual intercourse during Ramadan nights is permissible. However, it is a prevalent belief among women that sexual intercourse during Ramadan in general is impermissible. Please, give us your opinion. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: Allah (Exalted and Glorified be He) permitted sexual intercourse (for a married couple), eating and drinking at night during the month of Ramadan. Allah (Exalted be He) stated: [﴿It is made lawful for you to have sexual relations with your wives on the night of As-Saum \(the fasts\). They are Libas \[i.e. body cover, or screen, or Sakan, \(i.e. you enjoy the pleasure of living with her - as in Verse 7:189\) Tafsir At-Tabari\] for you, and you are the same for them. Allah knows that you used to deceive yourselves, so He turned to you \(accepted your repentance\) and forgave you. So now have sexual relations with them and seek that which Allah has ordained for you \(offspring\), and eat and drink until the white thread \(light\) of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread \(darkness of night\), then complete your Saum \(fast\) till the nightfall.﴾](#) Actually, sexual intercourse was made impermissible at night during the early days of Sawm (Fast), but this ruling was later abrogated by the above-quoted Ayah (Qur'anic verse).

Although I have a strong belief in Allah (Exalted be He), In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), Satan incited me during the blessed month of Ramadan to engage in foreplay with my wife, and thus we kissed and hugged one another while wearing our clothes, which caused us to reach orgasm. In fact, this took place during the early days of our marriage and we did so on three days of Ramadan, bearing in mind that we did not break our fast during these days in the sense that we continued fasting without eating or drinking. This took place during the month of Ramadan, 1410 AH. In any case, the present Ramadan has come while we have not expiated or made up for the mistake we committed during Ramadan two years ago due to our ignorance regarding the liabilities resulting from such a mistake. Give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified Muslim scholar), may Allah reward you!

A: If the case is as you mentioned, your fast was invalidated and both of you must make up for the days on which this took place. Since you delayed expiation without a legal excuse till a subsequent Ramadan came, each of you should make up for these days in addition to feeding one poor person, for every day you did so, an amount of 1.5 kg of the local staple food. Moreover, you must repent to Allah and ask His forgiveness.

Q 6: What is the ruling on someone who engaged in foreplay with his wife while fasting and ejaculated without intercourse, may Allah reward you?

A: If a husband engages in foreplay with his wife while fasting during Ramadan and ejaculates without intercourse, his Sawm (Fast) will be invalid and he should abstain from fast invalidators for the rest of the day. Moreover, he has to make up for that day (after Ramadan) and ask Allah for forgiveness. Anyway, he is not liable for a Kaffarah (expiation). So while fasting, we must guard our fasts against acts or words that nullify it or cause it to be defective. In this regard, a fasting person abstains from sexual desire, eating and drinking for the sake of Allah as authentically narrated from the Prophet (peace be upon him).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 15516

Q: I am a thirty-year-old young man. I am married and have children, praise be to Allah. I am, praise be to Allah, punctual in performing Obligatory Prayers. During Ramadan I offer 'Isha' (Night) Prayer, Tarawih (special supererogatory night Prayer in Ramadan) and Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer) in

Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy (the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah). One Ramadan night, however, after performing Tahajjud I went shopping and all of a sudden saw a woman of great charm. To be honest, I was charmed by her but I sought refuge with Allah from the accursed Satan and went home without committing any sin. Anyway, it was in vain to try to sleep after performing Fajr (Dawn) Prayer as I was totally obsessed by the image of this woman. Meanwhile, my wife was lying beside me and I started foreplay with her with the woman's picture in my mind. To clarify more, my penis was at that moment between the thighs of my wife which caused me unconsciously to ejaculate. Upon this, I wished I had disappeared off the face of the earth before this could have happened. Please guide me; what should I do?

Actually, I made up for this day but I was told that I have to fast, in addition, for two consecutive months, which I cannot afford. Please, tell me in detail about the Kaffarah (expiation). Is it permissible for me to pay the value of food to be given to the poor in cash? If yes, how much does a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) equal in riyals. Please, answer me as soon as possible because I am so confused and Satan whispers many evil thoughts - Allah only knows how evil they are - to me. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan does not stand for only abstaining from eating and drinking. Rather, it also entails that all the body organs fast, i.e. abstain from all things prohibited by Allah. Thus, a tongue should fast and thus abstain from backbiting, gossip and lying. Eyes should also fast refraining from looking at that which Allah prohibited to look at and ears should fast and thus refrain from listening to that which Allah prohibited to listen to. In this regard, Allah (Exalted be He) said: ﴿Tell the believing men to lower their gaze \(from looking at forbidden things\), and protect their private parts \(from illegal sexual acts\). That is purer for them. Verily, Allâh is All-Aware of what they do.﴾ In fact, giving free rein to one's gaze is a reason for inciting lusts and consequently committing sins. Therefore, we advise you to fear Allah and to lower your gaze and not to look at non-Mahram (not a spouse or an unmarriageable relative) women.

As for looking at that woman and then having foreplay with your wife which led to ejaculation during the daytime of Ramadan, you said you have made up for that day, which is the only obligation plus repenting to Allah. However, you are not duty-bound to any Kaffarah as it is entailed only by intercourse.

The first Question of Fatwa no. 21422

Q 1: My husband had foreplay with me during the daytime of Ramadan without intercourse which caused me to reach orgasm. Actually, I have regretted doing so and repented, but what am I obliged to do?

A: You should make up for that day. However, if this happened during Ramadan of a previous year before 1420 AH, you should make up for that day in addition to feeding a poor person for delaying making it up with no excuse.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 159)

However, if the delay was due to a legal excuse, you do not have to feed a poor person.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Kissing and touching during Sawm

Fatwa no. 13896

Q: What did `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) mean when she said (used to kiss and touch me?) (Related by Al-Bukhari)? What is meant in detail by "touch me" that is mentioned in the Hadith? Please guide me. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: Anyone who observes Sawm (Fast) has the Rukhsah (concession) to kiss and touch without having intercourse as long as he is able to control his lust. It was authentically reported on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said: (The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) used to kiss and touch (his wives) without having intercourse while observing Sawm; but he had the greatest control over his desire (as compared with you).) Also, it was authentically reported on the authority of `Amr ibn Abu Salamah (may Allah be pleased with them) (that he asked the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him): "Can a fasting person kiss (his wife)? The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: "Ask her" -meaning Um Salamah- and she told him that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) used to do that. Whereupon he said: "O Messenger of Allah, Allah pardoned you all your sins, the previous and the later ones. Upon this the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: "By Allah, I am the most God-conscious among you and I fear Him most among you.") We have issued a detailed fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) in this concern that explains the ruling on kissing and touching by the person observing Sawm that reads as follows:

Anyone who has desire and fears that he may release Maniy (sperm released on orgasm) if he kisses or touches without having sexual intercourse, it will be Haram (prohibited) for him to do that during Sawm. However, if anyone has desire and does not fear the release of Maniy but is unsure, it is Makruh (reprehensible) for him to kiss or engage in foreplay. This is because completing and protecting the validity of Sawm is an obligation while touching or kissing one's wife without having intercourse may invalidate the obligatory Sawm and so it is not permissible.

Yet, if one is not stimulated by kissing because of his ability to control his desire, illness or old age, he may then kiss and fondle his wife but without having intercourse. This is the case which `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) referred to when she said: (The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) used to kiss while observing Sawm; but he had the greatest control over his desire (as compared with you).) (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) As the Messenger (peace be upon him) had control over his desire and did not fear having intercourse or ejaculating, it was permissible for him to kiss and engage in foreplay. The same applies to those who can control their desire from the Ummah (nation based on one creed) when kissing and engaging in foreplay. It was related by Abu Dawud on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (that a man asked the Prophet (peace be upon him) about kissing (his wife) while fasting. He (the Prophet) allowed him to do so. Another person came and asked him about kissing while fasting and he did not allow him to do that. The one whom the Prophet (peace be upon him) allowed was an old man while the one whom the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not allow was a youth.)

Anyhow, if a person kisses and so on, and does not ejaculate, his Sawm is valid, but if he releases Maniy, his Sawm is invalidated and he must take Janabah Ghusl (full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge). On the other hand, if a person secretes Madhy (white viscid fluid secreted due to sexual thoughts or desire), his Sawm is not broken according to the correct scholarly opinion.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The second question of Fatwa no. 14283

Q 2: Does an erection due to kissing one's wife render Wudu', or Sawm (Fast) Batil (null and void), or Wudu' only? Another question: What is the ruling on wearing perfume while fasting; is it Haram (prohibited), or Makruh (reprehensible)?

A 2: Generally, as a fasting person, you should keep yourself away from acts which render Sawm incomplete, or Batil. The Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said: «When any one of you is fasting, he should neither have sexual relations with his wife nor behave impudently; and if anyone abuses him or quarrels with him he should say: "I am fasting."» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Yet, if you have already ejaculated Maniy (semen), your Sawm is Batil, and it is Wajib (obligatory) for you to make up for this day, and do

Janabah-Ghusl (full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge).

However, if you just kiss (while fasting) without ejaculation, this may lead to emission of Madhy (thin white viscid fluid secreted due to sexual thoughts or desire). Emitting Madhy while being in a state of Wudu' renders it invalid, so you should perform it again after washing the penis, and the testes (if you want to pray), but Madhy does not render Sawm invalid. These rulings are also applied to your wife. As for wearing perfume while fasting, there is nothing wrong with it, but you should avoid sniffing incense. However there is nothing wrong with perfuming clothes and turbans with it (incense).

Q3: Does kissing one's wife during the day in Ramadan without having sexual desire break Sawm (Fast)?

A3: When a fasting person kisses his wife, this does not break his Sawm. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to kiss his wives while he was observing Sawm. However, if anyone fears that his sexual desire may be aroused, he should not kiss his wife so as to keep his Sawm away from anything that might render it invalid.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18083

Q1: While a man was observing Sawm (Fast) during the month of Ramadan, he engaged in foreplay with his wife without penetrating her until he discharged a few drops of semen; what should he do?

A1: If a man engages in foreplay with his wife and discharges semen while observing Sawm in Ramadan, his Sawm is invalid. He has to make up for this day and abstain from food, drink and sexual intercourse on this day until sunset. In addition, he has to turn to Allah (Exalted be He) in repentance for doing so and be determined not to do this again. This is because a fasting person should be keen on not engaging in anything that would render his Sawm invalid. The same applies to his wife if she has a sexual discharge.

Q: A young man says that at some point in the distant past he wronged himself and could not control his sexual desire, and Satan enticed him to have sexual intercourse with an animal. Rather, he used to perform the act of masturbation. He adds that he practiced masturbation while he was observing Sawm (Fast) during the month of Ramadan. He says that he knows masturbation is forbidden, but he did it out of ignorance that it renders Sawm invalid. He adds that he would keep observing Sawm by abstaining from food and drink during the day, enduring the hot weather and offering Salah (Prayer). His question is as follows:

1- Does he have to do anything with regard to Sawm of the days on which he practiced masturbation while observing Sawm? It should be taken into account that he does not know the exact number of those days.

2- Is it obligatory for him to offer a Kaffarah (expiation) for having sex with the animal?

These are the very words of his question. I would be grateful if Your Eminence could send us a clear and confidential answer to this question as I see him distressed and displeased with what he did. May Allah protect you as a pride for all Muslims!

(Part No. 9; Page No. 166)

A: This young man has to turn to Allah in repentance for having sex with the animal and performing the act of masturbation. He should seek Forgiveness of his Lord. Besides, he must make up for the days on which he rendered his Sawm invalid by committing such sins. There is no Kaffarah for committing such sins, except for the Kaffarah prescribed for the delay of making up for these days. This Kaffarah is realized by feeding one needy person for each day he delayed making up for until the following Ramadan.

Q: During Ramadan, as soon as I reached my house before the Adhan (call to Prayer) of the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer I could not do anything except after performing the act of masturbation. I would begin performing the act of masturbation before the Fajr Prayer, but I would not finish and satisfy my sexual desire except after the Adhan. The worst matter is that I would sleep without performing the Fajr Prayer despite that I would observe Sawm (Fast). It is worth mentioning that I performed the act of masturbation for twenty nights in Ramadan. Is it Wajib (obligatory) on me to make up for the Sawm of those days? If so, how can I make up for those days? I would like to tell you that I have given up this practice completely, and all praise be to Allah! I would be grateful if you could guide me to the right practice with regard to this matter.

May Allah Almighty make all that you offer to the Muslim nation and the Muslims in the record of your deeds!

(Part No. 9; Page No. 167)

A: The act of masturbation you performed after the Adhan of the Fajr Prayer renders your Sawm invalid. Therefore, you have to make up for the days when you performed the act of masturbation after the Adhan of the Fajr Prayer, along with offering Tawbah (repentance to Allah) regarding this practice. As for the act of masturbation you performed before the Adhan of the Fajr Prayer, it has nothing to do with Sawm as it happened before the due time of abstention from all that breaks Sawm. Q 2: A person performed the act of masturbation during the day in Ramadan and he could not emancipate a slave, observe Sawm (Fast) for two successive months, or feed sixty needy persons as a Kaffarah (expiation). It is worth mentioning that this person performed this act more than once during the day in Ramadan. What is the ruling on this?

A: Whoever performs the act of masturbation while observing Sawm during Ramadan commits a forbidden sin which renders Sawm invalid. Therefore, this person has to offer Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for and make up for that day but he does not have to offer any Kaffarah (expiation) as the Kaffarah is prescribed in Islam for the act of sexual intercourse during the day in Ramadan. The act of masturbation is not deemed as an act of sexual intercourse.

Q 2: A Muslim fellow, may Allah guide him, asked me about the ruling on performing the act of masturbation during the night of Ramadan. He wants to know if the ruling on this is like the ruling on performing the act of masturbation during the day of Ramadan.

A: The act of masturbation is forbidden, so it is impermissible to perform it by day or by night. Worse still, it is more offensive and detestable to do that in Ramadan because the act of masturbation is considered a violation of the sacredness and honor of such a holy month. If a person performs the act of masturbation during the day of Ramadan, the following things are Wajib (obligatory) on them:

- 1- Offering sincere Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for such an abominable act.
- 2- Completing the Sawm (Fast) of the days when they masturbate and their Sawm is rendered invalid.
- 3- Making up for the days when their Sawm was rendered invalid after Ramadan.

Q 2: What is the ruling on the person who was willingly exposed himself to sexual excitement during the day of Ramadan, so he could not control himself and performed the act of masturbation? Does he have to offer any Kaffarah (expiation) for that?

A: It is impermissible for a fasting person to intentionally break their obligatory Sawm (Fast). If a person ejaculates semen without having sexual intercourse, the Sawm is rendered invalid and they have to offer sincere Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for such a practice and make up for the day(s) when their Sawm was rendered invalid, but they are not required to offer any Kaffarah.

Q: I forgot that I was in Ramadan and was observing Sawm (Fast) when I sat beside a woman, and I later ejaculated, what should I do?

A: If you have Maniy (sperm released on orgasm) during the daytime of Ramadan without having intercourse, you should repent, ask for Allah's Forgiveness and make up for this day because the release of Maniy invalidates Sawm but you do not have to offer Kaffarah (expiation).

However, if another Ramadan comes and you did not make up for this day, you should then make up for the day and pay Kaffarah (expiation) because of delaying making up for the missed day. The Kaffarah is to feed a Miskin (needy) half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of wheat, dates, rice and the like of the staple food of the country.

Q 1: One morning in Ramadan, I had a sexual dream after Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and Maniy (sperm released on orgasm) was discharged. I know that masturbation in Ramadan is Haram (prohibited) but I cannot control these sexual dreams. I hope Your Eminence will answer my question whether my Sawm (Fast) was invalidated and if it was, am I a sinner and should I make up for this day? What else should I do to expiate breaking Sawm on this day?

A: Having a sexual dream does not invalidate one's Sawm because it was out of your control. However, you should take Janabah Ghusl (full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge) to be ready for the Salah (prayer). The ruling on having a sexual dream is not the same as that of masturbation because with masturbation, one chooses to do it willingly while one does not in sexual dreams.

The second and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 15627

Q 2: If a person is making up for the missed days of Sawm (Fast) of the blessed Ramadan and after he performs the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and goes to bed, he has a wet dream; does he have to perform Janabah Ghusl (full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge) when he wakes up and complete his Sawm or break his Sawm and make up for it the following day?

A: If a person is observing obligatory or supererogatory Sawm and after he goes to sleep

he has a wet dream, this has nothing to do with his Sawm and does not render it invalid. The person has to perform Janabah Ghusl to be able to perform Salah (Prayer) provided that he sees semen. If he does not see semen, he is not required to perform Janabah Ghusl. As for the Sawm itself, it is valid in any case as having a wet dream occurs unwillingly.

Q 4: There is a refugee living with me who cannot observe Sawm due to an illness. Can he offer the Kaffarah (expiation) of feeding the needy to the other refugees living with us, taking into consideration that we all have the same living conditions? Or should he feed the needy when he returns to his homeland, Iraq?

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) on whoever cannot observe Sawm in Ramadan due to an illness and breaks the Sawm to make up for the missed days of Ramadan later on if they are able because Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: [\(and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.\)](#) As for the person who suffers from a chronic disease, they can feed a needy person for each missed day of Ramadan by giving the needy person half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of their common food. Q: I have committed a sin and I ask Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) to help me find a solution to my problem with Your Eminence. I am a young man with a burning sexual desire. During the month of Ramadan, Satan tempted me and made me ejaculate semen after I had imagined there was a woman before me during the day of Ramadan while I was observing Sawm (Fast) though I am unmarried and I am about to take the second term exams. I am still a university student. I ask Allah Almighty to help me find a solution to my problem. What should I do? What is the solution to my problem? Is it Wajib (obligatory) on me to make up for this day and offer a Kaffarah (expiation)? I would be grateful if you could give me the ruling on this question, may Allah reward you with the best!

A: If you ejaculate semen during the day of Ramadan after imagining that there is a woman before you, there is no sin on you, but you have to dismiss such thoughts and seek to safeguard yourself through marriage because Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: \(Our Lord! Punish us not if we forget or fall into error\)

Regarding the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) mentioned above, it was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Allah said: "I have so done!"\) Also, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Allah forgives my Ummah \(nation based on one creed\) those \(evil deeds\) their souls may whisper or suggest to them as long as they do not act \(on it\) or speak.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

Q: During last Ramadan, my wife and I would sleep in bed and talk to each other while fasting. Sometimes I would have an erection and feel excited, then I would slip away but a small viscous and colorless spot would come out of my penis. Please take into consideration that when I have an erection when I am not with my wife, the same viscous colorless spot comes out after five minutes. Does this invalidate Sawm (Fast) and should I take Janabah Ghusl (full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge)? I hope you could clarify this point for me.

A: Discharge of Madhy (thin white viscid fluid secreted due to sexual thoughts or desire) does not invalide Sawm according to the more correct of the two scholarly opinions. What you asked about is Madhy and when it is emitted, it is obligatory to perform Wudu' (ablution) after washing the penis and the testicles based on the Sahih (authentic) Hadith reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) in this regard. If the Madhy gets on one's body or clothes, it is sufficient to sprinkle water on it; one does not have to wash it.

Q 1: I am a woman who was ignorant that a woman putting her hand into her vagina for cleansing renders Sawm (Fast) invalid. I continued to do so for many years. Now I am making up for the missed days of Ramadan. Is it Wajib (obligatory) on me to offer a Kaffarah (expiation) by feeding the needy? What is the amount of such a Kaffarah? It is worth mentioning that I did so out of ignorance and I cannot observe Sawm except in winter.

A: The act of putting the hand into the vagina does not render Sawm invalid unless it results in sexual discharge out of sexual desire. When it results in sexual discharge, it renders Sawm invalid and it is Wajib on a woman to make up for it only. If the following Ramadan comes and she has not yet made up for these days with no excuse, she has to both make up for the days and feed a needy person by giving half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of the common food in her country for each of the missed days of Sawm. In addition, she has to offer Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for delay and determine not to return to that act in the future.

However, putting the hand into the vagina without having sexual discharge does not render Sawm invalid or requires making up for such days.

The first question of Fatwa no. 16339

Q 1: A young man committed the sin of Zina (sexual intercourse outside marriage) two hours before the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. He could not perform Janabah Ghusl (full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge), but he had Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast) and intended to observe Sawm (Fast). Three hours and a half before the Zhuhr (Noon) Prayer, he performed the Janabah Ghusl. What is the ruling on his Sawm?

A: There is no doubt that Zina is major act of disobedience and an abominable sin. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And come not near to unlawful sex. Verily, it is a Fâhishah \(i.e. anything that transgresses its limits: a great sin\), and an evil way \(that leads one to Hell unless Allâh forgives him\).﴾ Therefore, it is Wajib (obligatory) for a Muslim to avoid Zina and all ways leading to it. Whoever practices Zina must hastily offer sincere Tawbah (repentance to Allah), perform good deeds and protect their private parts from all that Allah has forbidden. As for what is mentioned by the questioner that he remained Junub (person in a state of major ritual impurity) until he had Suhur and began Sawm, his Sawm is valid, but it is impermissible for him to abandon the Fajr Prayer and delay the Janabah Ghusl until noon. It was Wajib on him to hastily perform Ghusl and offer the Fajr Prayer along with Tawbah from Zina and determining not to commit this sin again.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 16591

Q3: Is it permissible for a person who gets up Junub (person in a state of major ritual impurity) to observe Sawm (Fast) and what was reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) in this regard?

A: It is permissible for a person to intend Sawm while he is Junub and he can take Janabah Ghusl (full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge) afterwards because it was reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) would sometimes get up at the appointed time of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer while he was Junub and would then intend Sawm and then perform Ghusl.

The first question of Fatwa no. 20970

Q 1: With regard to supererogatory Sawm (Fast), one may have the intention to observe Sawm on a particular day but when they get up in the morning, they find themselves in a state of Janabah (major ritual impurity related to sexual discharge). What is the ruling on this matter? Should they complete the Sawm?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 177)

A: If one observes Sawm at the time when abstention from all that breaks Sawm abstention is due while they are in a state of Janabah, their Sawm is valid. This ruling is based on the Hadith related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of Umm Salamah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said: [\(At times Allah's Messenger \(peace be upon him\) used to get up in the morning in the state of Janabah out of sexual relations with his wives, not out of a wet dream. Nullifiers of Fasting

The third question of Fatwa no. 18424

Q 3: What nullifies fasting?

A: There are numerous things which nullify fasting, to mention but a few:

1- Sexual intercourse: if the fasting person, who is of sound mind and resident, has sexual intercourse during the days of Ramadan, their fasting is no longer valid. Thus, one must make up for that day, plus the Kaffarah (expiation), i.e. emancipating a believing bondsman, and if one fails to find a bondsman they have to fast two successive months, and if they are unable to do so, then they are to feed sixty Miskin (a needy person), i.e. giving half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food each, namely, 1.5 kg approximately. A woman shares the same ruling if she is resident, of sound mind, and not coerced.

2- Ejaculation: resulting from kissing, touching (a woman's body), or gazing (stealthily at women). Thus, one's fast is no longer valid, and one has to make up for that day only, without Kaffarah.

3- Intentional eating and drinking. However, if someone eats or drinks forgetfully their Sawm (Fast) remains valid. This includes all that enters one's stomach, such as food or water. In addition, there is what is called Sa`ut, which means sniffing water into one's stomach through the nose. Also, medical nutrients nullify one's fasting.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 179)

All these invalidate one's fasting and require Kaffarah.

4- Intentional bloodletting: whether through Hijamah (cupping) or drawing a large quantity of blood; all such things invalidate one's fasting and require Kaffarah.

5- Intentional vomiting: to eject the stomach contents, i.e. food and drink, through the mouth. This invalidates one's fasting and requires Kaffarah, but if one vomits unintentionally, then the fast remains intact.

In brief, these are the nullifiers of Sawm. However, some Muslim scholars, may Allah have mercy on them, fully explained these rulings that cannot be mentioned in detail here.

Q: An inquirer mentions in his question that sleep overwhelmed him one night in Ramadan. He woke up being thirsty and the dawn broke, so he drank. What is the ruling?

The first and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 16328

Q 1: A man doubts whether or not dawn has broken and he wants to eat Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast), what should he do?

A: The basic principle is that as long as night remains it is permissible for a Muslim to have food and the like. One should not abstain from food until the break of dawn, whether through observing or hearing a reliable Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) announces the break of dawn.

Q 4: What is the Du`a' (supplication) required from the fasting person before breaking his fast?

A: Du`a' is preferable during the breaking of the fast, as it is related by Abu Dawud upon the authority of Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both), who said: \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to say upon he broke his Sawm \(Fast\): "Thirst has gone, the arteries are moist, and the reward is sure, In sha'a-Allah \(if Allah wills\)."\) And it is related by Mu`adh ibn Zuhrah that \(the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) used to say when he broke his fast: "O Allah, for Thee I have fasted, and with Thy provision I have broken my fast."\) (Related by Abu Dawud with a weak Sanad [chain of narrators]). It is recommended to supplicate to Allah as much as you can, invoking Allah with good supplications, for the supplication of a fasting person is not rejected during the fast and upon breaking it as well.

Q 2: During Ramadan one night I was sleeping at my cousin's home, who is my brother-in-law as well. We were in the desert where there were no mosques nearby and the village is far away from us. I slept after having my Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast), and woke up suddenly, asking my wife: "What is the time right now?" She replied: "It is 4 o'clock." However, the Fast starts at a quarter to five. In other words, only a short time was left; so, I slept again and when I woke up, I thought I did not sleep for a long time. In addition, my wife put a glass of water near me while I was asleep, so that I could drink before the time of Imsak (time of day that marks the beginning of the Fast). I said to myself: "There is enough time left," and then I drank. After going out of the tent, I found the dawn had broken but the sun had not risen yet, as it was approximately a quarter past five because I did not have a watch at the time. What is the ruling?

A: It is obligatory on you to make up for the day on which you drank after daybreak. In other words, your fast was invalidated.

Q: I used to stop drinking in Ramadan after hearing Iqamah (call to start the Prayer) of the Fajr Prayer at dawn. I continued doing this after reaching the age of Taklif (meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for actions). This was out of ignorance, as there was no one to guide me. Allah knows that I do not exactly know the number of days on which I used drink until hearing the Iqamah; however, I know the number of years, namely nine months of fasting, of which I have fasted nearly one month and a half as expiation.

A: It is obligatory on you to make up for the months in which you did not abstain from food until hearing the Iqamah, as you ate and drank during daylight hours. You are to blame because you should have asked and consulted (Muslim scholars) regarding this matter, but you did not. In this regard, Allah (Exalted be He) states: and eat and drink until the white thread (light) of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread (darkness of night), then complete your Saum (fast) till the nightfall. Also, it is obligatory on you to make up for that period and to give Kaffarah (expiation) due to delaying fasting for another Ramadan, i.e. feeding Miskin (a needy person) for every day, which is 1/2 Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food, such as, barely or the like which equals approximately 1.5 kg.

Q: When my mother prepared the Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast), I overslept then woke up and started eating. Q: The muezzin pronounced Adhan (call to Salah) for Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer at 5:37 p.m. and Madfa` Al-Iftar [the canon signaling Iftar (breaking the fast) time] sounded at the same time followed by other muezzins pronouncing Adhan, and thus, people started breaking their fast. Those muezzins thought that the time of Maghrib had already started and the sun had set because it was cloudy, although the official time of Maghrib as set in the calendar and determined by the Department of Astronomy in the University of King Saud was at 5:45 p.m. Then Madfa` Al-Iftar sounded again at this time and other muezzins pronounced Adhan and some people started breaking their fast at that time. Your Eminence Shaykh, people are confused; some of them believe fast of that day was nullified and must be made up for due to such negligence of determining the right time, since the clock was available and they could know the exact time. Others said: you do not have to make up for this day, and the one who carries this sin and who should make up for the day is the one who caused this problem. Therefore, we request Your Eminence to quickly resolve this issue, so that this problem will be settled. May Allah grant you success and guide your steps on the Straight Path.

Q 1: Some fasting people break their Sawm (Fast) when the sun sets without waiting for the Adhan (call to Prayer) of the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer; what is the ruling on this?

A: Iftar (breaking the Fast) is only permitted after making sure that the sun has set. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿then complete your Saum \(fast\) till the nightfall﴾ There are many Hadiths reported from the Prophet (peace be upon him) in this regard, such as his saying: ﴿When night falls from this side and the day vanishes from this side and the sun sets, then the fasting person should break his fast.﴾

The way of ascertaining that the sun has set is either sighting the sunset or announcing Adhan by a Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer). Accordingly, it is unanimously not permissible to break Fast before sunset, and anyone who does so is sinful and should make up for this day.

Q 2: What is the degree of authenticity of the Hadith where the Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have ordered the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) to break their Fast when hearing the Adhan being pronounced by Bilal?

A: The authentically reported Hadith from the Messenger (peace be upon him) in this regard is the one that reads: ﴿Bilal pronounces the Adhan at night,

(Part No. 9; Page No. 187)

so carry on taking your meals \(eat and drink\) until the Adhan is pronounced by Ibn Um Maktum. ﴾

This Hadith has to do with Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast) not Iftar. It was reported because Bilal (may Allah be pleased with him) used to pronounce the Adhan a short time before the break of dawn to awaken those who were sleeping and alert people that it was time to get up, while Ibn Um Maktum did not use to pronounce the Adhan until the dawn had broken.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18559

Q 2: What is the ruling on breaking one's Sawm (Fast) a short time ahead of sunset? Will this Sawm be counted?

A: The time of Sawm begins at the break of the second dawn and lasts until sunset. If someone observing Sawm eats before sunset, their Sawm is invalidated and they should make up for it if the Sawm is Wajib (obligatory), but if the Sawm is Nafilah (supererogatory), there is no blame on them for what they did and they do not have to make up for it.

The seventh question of Fatwa no. 20941

Q 7: What is the ruling on breaking one's Sawm (Fast) in Ramadan whether with or without a legal excuse?

A: Anyone who breaks Fast in Ramadan without a valid excuse is to be considered a sinner and has to make it up. However, if a person breaks his fast by having sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan, he should pay the Kaffarah (expiation) which is to emancipate a believing slave; if he could not do this, he should fast for two consecutive months; otherwise, he should feed sixty needy persons. This Kaffarah should be made by both the husband and his wife. But if someone breaks their fast due to a valid excuse, such as sickness or travel, they should make it up and there is no sin on them.

Q 2: Some of my co-workers smoke while I am fasting the six days of Shawwal; does the smell of smoking invalidate Sawm (Fast)? Please note that I do not smoke, all praise be to Allah.

Q: I want to stop smoking and I ask Allah to help me achieve this goal. My question is:

There is a patch placed on the arm which helps the smoker to get over the difficulty of stopping smoking. Is it allowed to use this patch during Ramadan, taking into consideration that this patch automatically produces the nicotine substance whenever the body needs it? Please provide me with the answer, may Allah reward you well.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 190)

A: We ask Allah to guide you to repent from the habit of smoking and to help you stop, since it is extremely harmful and has no good at all. As for your question with regard to the permissibility of using a patch which is stuck to the arm and helps you stop smoking, and whether is it permissible for you to use it during Ramadan while you are fasting or not; our answer is that it is not permissible for you to use that patch, since we have asked the specialists about this patch and they said that it provides the body with nicotine that reaches the blood. Therefore, this will invalidate fasting the same way smoking does, because the effect of both is the same. On the other hand, you should have a strong determination to stop smoking by another means, since there are many people who repented and stopped smoking without using this patch. Remember that whoever abandons something for the sake of Allah, He will replace him with something better than it.

The first question of Fatwa no. 16480

Q 1: What is the evidence that if someone who breaks their fast during the daytime in Ramadan should offer Kaffarah (expiation) by fasting for sixty consecutive days?

A: According to the correct scholarly opinion, anyone who breaks their fast intentionally on a day in Ramadan, without a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse they should repent to Allah (Exalted be He) and make up for this day. Fasting for sixty days is concerned with the Kaffarah for having sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan, particularly that there is a Sahih (authentic) Hadith reported in this regard. As for breaking one's fast without having sexual intercourse, there is no evidence that Kaffarah is obligatory in this case, as far as we know.

Q 3: What is the ruling on the fasting person who swallows dust while performing Tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth)?

A: The Sawm (Fast) remains valid as long as they do not swallow the dust deliberately. The same applies to swallowing one's saliva after performing Wudu' (ablution).

(Part No. 9; Page No. 193)

at Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast). I slept without washing my mouth. When I woke up, the taste of tea was still in my mouth. Do I have to make up for that day?

A: Your feeling of the taste of tea after waking up in the morning does not invalidate your Sawm (Fast). The feeling of the taste does not nullify the Sawm. Therefore, your Sawm is valid and you are not required to make up for that day.

Q 2: One day during Ramadan I felt I had swallowed water as I was performing Madmadah (rinsing the mouth). What is the ruling on that?

A: Unintentional swallowing of water while performing Madmadah (rinsing the mouth) does not invalidate the Sawm (Fast). One is not required to make up for that day. This is based on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Exalted be He) states: \(Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.\) However, to be on the safe side one may make up for that day if they happen to rinse their mouth or sniff water excessively. This is to avoid the divergent opinions of scholars. This is based on the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade excessive rinsing of the mouth. The Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said to Laqit

ibn Sabrah: \(Sniff with water well except when you are fasting.\)

Q 3: One day during Ramadan, which was the month that I reached puberty, I remember that I had masturbated or something similar. I did not know that the Sawm (Fast) was more than just abstaining from food, so when I became aware that I had invalidated my Sawm, I ate a piece of bread. How can I make Kaffarah (expiation) for that day?

A: Whoever stimulates themselves by masturbating or causes themselves to discharge semen while not in the act of having sexual intercourse their Sawm is invalid. Accordingly, you are required to make up for that day. If no semen is discharged, the Sawm remains valid; however, you must offer sincere Tawbah (repentance) to Allah for committing this illicit act. You should not have broken your Sawm by masturbating, but because it was done out of ignorance, you are only required to offer sincere Tawbah and make up for that day. If, without a valid excuse, you happen to delay making up for that day until the next Ramadan has started, you must make up for that day as well as feed one Miskin (needy) for that delay.

Q: One night in Ramadan, I woke up to have my Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast) and after finishing it, I had a flavored drink. As the dawn had not yet come, I said I would wait for a while then go to the Masjid (mosque) to offer Salah (Prayer), intending to clean my mouth in the Masjid preparing for Sawm (Fast) before the Adhan (call to Prayer) was pronounced. However, while still waiting I overslept and only woke up after the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer was due. When I woke up, I found the taste of the flavored drink was still in my throat, so I spat it out and then washed my mouth; is my Sawm on this day valid? If not, what should I do?

A: Having the remains of food in between the teeth after the break of dawn falls under either one of two cases:

- 1- If there is only a small amount of food remaining in the mouth that cannot be spat, it does not affect the validity of the Sawm, even if it reached the person's throat, for this is unavoidable.
- 2- If there is a lot of food remaining in the mouth, and the person spat it out, the Sawm is valid. But, if the person swallowed it intentionally, the Sawm is invalid according to the majority of scholars.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 196)

Accordingly, you did well by spitting the remains of food from your mouth and hence, your Sawm is valid In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). A Muslim should be cautious with regard to religious matters.

Q: On the first day of Ramadan and after offering the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer, I vomited unwillingly; does this nausea and vomiting affect my Sawm (Fast)? I hope Your Eminence would answer me. May Allah protect and take care of you. As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you.)

A: If you vomit during the daytime in Ramadan unwillingly,

(Part No. 9; Page No. 197)

your Sawm is valid and you do not have to make it up. It was related by Abu Dawud, Al-Tirmidhy, and others on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who has a sudden attack of vomiting while fasting is not required to make it up, but anyone who vomits intentionally must make it up.\)

Q: Is it permissible for a Muslim to use nose drops while observing Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan?

A: It is not permissible to use nose drops during the daytime in Ramadan, as the nose has an opening to the stomach, and so some of the drops that are put into the nose will enter the stomach and so it will invalidate one's Sawm.

Q: A woman used nose drops during the daytime of Ramadan, as she was in need of it, for she could not breathe well without it. She kept on using it for some days and repeated it for three or four Ramadans; she does not remember exactly. She knows that using nose drops during the daytime of Ramadan breaks the fast if it reaches the throat and she felt the bitter taste of the nose drops several times in her throat. Is her past Sawm considered invalid? What should she do?

A: If it is necessary for a fasting person to use nose drops, there is nothing wrong in this and the Sawm is valid unless the person tastes the nose drops in the throat. Hence, the Sawm is invalid and the person should make up for this day if it is obligatory Sawm.

Fatwa no. 18084

Q 1: Toothpaste contains some sugar ingredients which a person tastes while using it, keeping in mind that the normal taste of food takes place by the dissolution of the tasted material within the saliva, and then penetrating it into taste senses. Thus, if the tasted material dissolves within the saliva, then, most probably, no one can avoid swallowing it.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 199)

A- Is it allowed for a fasting person to use toothpaste, keeping into mind that he can use the toothbrush only?

B- What is the ruling on using mouthwash (rinsing the mouth)?

C- It is reported through a good chain of transmission from Ibn 'Abbas (reported in Al-Irwaa', 937) that he (may Allah be pleased with him) did not see any harm in tasting honey, oil and similar foods and then spitting it out while one is fasting. This view is also reported from some righteous predecessors. Thus, after you got to know the way in which food is tasted, what is the ruling on tasting food by a fasting person?

A 1: There is no harm in using toothpaste during Sawm (Fast); however, one should spit out what has been dissolved of it in the mouth, and if something from it went unintentionally inside the throat, it will not affect his fasting. By the same token, there is no harm in using mouthwash which includes medications provided that one will spit it out and nothing from it goes intentionally into his throat. The same ruling applies to tasting food, there is no harm in doing it as long as one will spit it out and not swallow it.

Q 2: Sometimes the dentist or dental student or technician may rub dental fillings; this makes dust rise up; does inhaling this dust break Sawm (Fast)?

A: It is not permissible for the fasting person to inhale dust on purpose, but there is no problem if it has risen up and entered their throat against their will.

for the sake of local anesthetization, which does not have any nutritional elements. Does this affect Sawm (Fast), taking into consideration that the patient can delay the treatment until night time or even until after Ramadan?

A: There is no harm in giving a fasting person a shot in the mouth or in another organ of the body for the sake of local anesthetization in order to get treated, because this shot does not have any nutritional elements.

Q 4: A dentist may sometimes need to give intravenous or intramuscular injections of non-nutritious substance to a patient. Does this invalidate the Sawm (fast) of the patient, bearing in mind that they can postpone the injection until nightfall or until after Ramadan?

A: There is nothing wrong with injecting a fasting person with a non-nutritious substance if they are in need of it to cure a disease. However, it is better to postpone the injection until nightfall to be on the safe side.

Q 5: The dentist uses water to cool the dental carving pick. Does the patient's unintentional swallowing of this water affect Sawm (Fast), taking into consideration that one can delay the treatment until night time or even until after Ramadan?

A: There is no harm in putting water in the mouth of the fasting person for the sake of treatment and other purposes, on the condition that one will not intentionally swallow it. If some of this water goes unwillingly into his throat, then there is no blame on him; however, one will be on the safe side if he delays the treatment until night time or until after Ramadan.

Is there any sin on the dentist for examining the patient's teeth? Should he postpone the medical examination?

Q 8: The dentist uses some substances which the patient can feel their taste or smell. Does the existence of their taste or smell in the mouth affect Sawm (Fast), taking into consideration the fact that the patient can delay the treatment until night time or even until after Ramadan?

If this is the case, then is it considered a justification for the patient to accept treatment during the day time in spite of the possibility of swallowing blood, water and taking a shot of anesthesia for treatment?

A: If the goal behind the treatment of the teeth during the day time of fasting is only for the practice of the dentistry students without the patient's need for this treatment, then in order to be on the safe side, one should avoid

(Part No. 9; Page No. 202)

Q: What is the amount of bleeding caused by Hijamah (cupping) which invalidates a person's Sawm (Fast)? Does a person's Sawm become invalid if they bleed extensively during performance of an oral surgical operation?

A: Hijamah invalidates Sawm according to the correct opinion maintained by scholars. This is based on the Hadith which reads: \(A man who cups or gets himself cupped will have their Sawm broken.\)

The same applies to withdrawing a large amount of blood from the fasting person. However, Sawm will continue to be valid if blood is emitted because of a surgical operation. This is because emission of blood in this case is not out of the patient's own will.

Q 12: Dentists advise trimming Siwak (tooth-cleansing stick) every twenty four hours to keep its active constituent Does Sawm (Fast) become invalid because of using a new Siwak or a new part of it, given the fact that the person may swallow the wicks on the Siwak which break inside the mouth?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 203)

A: There is nothing wrong if a fasting person uses the new Siwak or the trimmed one. However, one must spit the wicks that get broken out.

B- Is it permissible for a patient to break his fast due to a toothache?

A: It is not permissible for a physician to break his fast during treating his patients, unless serious cases require him to break his fast in order to treat them. The third question of Fatwa no. 19477

Q 3: Donating blood during Ramadan

A- Does donating blood during Ramadan break one's fast, especially as it is medically known that this process has no side effects on the fasting person; in addition, they can carry out their daily activities normally?

B- Does blood donation during Ramadan break one's fast if this leads him to faint? Fainting occasionally occurs due to lack of blood flowing to the brain; therefore, we lift the legs of the donor up and put his head downward until he regain consciousness without any harm to him. However, such cases are very usual.

C- There is another kind of blood donation, i.e. donation of blood components and returning the unnecessary components to the donator's body. This new and unique method called APHERESIS. A highly technical device is used in this process. It is designed to draw a limited quantity of blood from the donor's body and then separate the blood components from each other. In doing so, it takes the required components, such as plasma, platelets and red blood cells, then the white cells go back directly to the donor's body together with a chemical anti-clotting substance to the quantity returned to the donor. This substance enters into the donor's body through the blood cells as mentioned earlier. The process takes place four to five times per hour, during which the donor lies down on the apparatus till the end. It draws the quantity required from the blood cells, then returns the remaining cells to the donor.

Does this kind of blood donation invalidate the fast of a Muslim, taking into account that this method is of less pressure on the donor's body in comparison with the ordinary process of blood donation?

A: Blood donation invalidates one's fast, because it is generally similar to Hijamah (cupping). The Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said: \(The man who cups and the man who has himself cupped brake their fast.\) Similarly, a person to whom blood is transfused breaks their fast as well.

I have not made up for those days until now, though I am now fifty. I am deeply regretful and ask Your Eminence: do I have to make up for the missed days or what should I do?

A: It is Wajib (obligatory) on this woman to make up for the missed days of Ramadan since the age of puberty and give Kaffarah (expiation) to the needy for every day, i.e., 1/2 Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of dates, or barely, or similar staple food of your country, due to her unexcused delay in making up for the missed days until the following Ramadan came.

The first and second questions of Fatwa no. 19305

Q 1: What is the ruling on those who listen to obscene speech while observing Sawm (Fast)?

If a fasting person has some abuse hurled at them, they are to reply : "I am fasting." (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book), Vol. 2, p. 228) upon the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) stated: ﴿Sawm is protection (from the Hellfire and from committing sins). If one of you is observing Sawm, he should avoid sexual relations with his wife and quarreling. If anyone should fight or quarrel with him, he should say, 'I am fasting'.﴾

But if the abuse is hurled at someone else or obscene speech in general, the abuser should be advised to give up hurling abuses and obscene speech, and should be warned against obscene acts by word and deed. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He): ﴿The believers, men and women, are Auliya' (helpers, supporters, friends, protectors) of one another; they enjoin (on the people) Al-Ma'rûf (i.e. Islâmic Monotheism and all that Islâm orders one to do), and forbid (people) from Al-Munkar (i.e. polytheism and disbelief of all kinds, and all that Islâm has forbidden)﴾

Q 2: What is the ruling on those who break their Sawm (Fast) after sunset and before the Maghrib (Sunset) Prayer?

A: If the fasting person verifies the occurrence of sunset, it is permissible to hasten to break the Sawm even if one does not hear the Mu'adhin (caller to prayer). It is narrated upon the authority of Sahl Ibn Sa'd (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: ﴿The people will continue to prosper as long as they hasten to break the Sawm.﴾ (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) This Hadith is related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book), Vol. 2, p. 241.

It is also related by Al-Bukhari, in his Sahih (Authentic Hadith Book), Vol. 2, p. 240, on the authority of `Asim ibn `Umar ibn Al-Khattab that his father (may Allah be pleased with them both) said that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: ﴿When night falls from this side and the day vanishes from this side and the sun sets, then the fasting person should break his Sawm.﴾ In addition, the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said, conveying what was revealed to him from his Lord, ﴿Of My Servants those I love most are those who hasten to break their Sawm.﴾ (Related by Ahmad, at-Tirmidhi, and Abu Dawud upon the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him))

Q 2: I started observing Sawm (Fast) when I was fourteen (14) years old, but in my first year of Sawm I remember that I had broken my Sawm some days without a lawful excuse. I cannot remember their number now, as do other women who experienced the same problem. I ask Your Eminence to explain the ruling on that?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 215)

Is it Wajib (obligatory) on me to make up for the missed days, being aware of the fact that many years passed and I did not make up for them? If so, is it Wajib on me to make up for the whole month, as I do not remember the number of days?

A: It is Wajib on you to make up for the missed days of Sawm and you should offer Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah). As for the number of the missed days, you should do your best to remember their number as far as you know. Moreover, it is Wajib on you to offer a Kaffarah (expiation) for delay, that is, you must feed a Miskin (a needy person) with 1/2 Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of barely, or dates, or the like of the staple food in your country for every day.

Q 4: A woman was grazing sheep in Ramadan and she overdid Madmadah (rinsing the mouth) due to extreme thirst, trying to let some water enter her stomach. If she was aware that this action is Makruh (reprehensible), what is the ruling? Is it Wajib (obligatory) on her to make up for those days?

Moreover, one day she performed after-menstruation Ghusl (full ritual bath) during Ramadan and she discharged a drop of blood the next day. This occurred while she was away from home at an occasion, and when bleeding ceased that night she did not perform Ghusl. Rather, she went back and completed her Sawm. What is the ruling on that? Is it Wajib on her to make up for the remaining days of the month, i.e., the days on which she observed Sawm during her menstruation taking into account that she does not remember the number of those days? We hope you will explain the ruling on that?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 216)

A: First, if the woman in question overdid Madmadah to the extent that the water entered into her stomach, then it is Wajib on her to make up for that day.

Secondly, the drop of blood that she noticed after Tuhr (period of ritual purity) and performing after-menstruation Ghusl is of no importance and her Sawm is valid.

Q 1: I was pregnant and the weather was very hot during Ramadan. My mouth became extremely dry, so I did Madmadah (rinsing the mouth) with cold water to moisten my mouth and lips but I was keen lest any water enter my stomach. Am I sinful? Should I offer a Kaffarah (expiation) for that?

A: According to what you have said, there is no sin on you and you do not need to make up for that day in which you did Madmadah with water because this does not invalidate one's Sawm (Fast).

Kaffarah of breaking Sawm

The second and third questions of Fatwa no. 5163

Q 2: Three men broke their Sawm (Fast) intentionally in Ramadan: one once, the second three days, and the third observed Sawm only one day. What is the ruling regarding each one of them?

A: It is obligatory on those who break their Sawm because of having sexual intercourse to make up for the missed days and offer Kaffarah (expiation) for each day, that is, emancipating a believing bondsman, but if they do not find one, they must observe Sawm for two successive months. If they cannot afford to do so, then they must feed sixty Miskins (needy persons) for every day of Sawm. As for those whose breaking the Sawm is because of some nullifiers other than having sexual intercourse, such as eating or drinking, it is obligatory to only make up for the missed days without offering Kaffarah according to the more correct of the two scholarly opinions. Moreover, each one of them should offer Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah). If a Mukallaf (a person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) intentionally breaks their Sawm during Ramadan, this is regarded as one of the major sins if done without a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse.

Q 3: How should I feed? Should I feed a Miskin (a needy person) for an entire day, that is, from the morning to the evening, or just one meal?

A: It suffices to give every one of the sixty Miskins 1/2 Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food eaten by your family.

What kind of food should I give to them? Is there a certain kind of food? Is it permissible to clothe them instead of feeding them?

A: First: if those who look after children do not have money to spend on them because they are poor, they are considered among the category of the Miskins regarding offering Kaffarah (expiation).

Second: the proper food acceptable for Kaffarah is the average food you provide to your own family, that is, dates, or barely, or maize, or rice, or the like.

Third: It suffices if one clothes sixty of Miskins instead of feeding them. It is also permissible to feed thirty of them and clothe the other thirty.

The first and the second Questions of Fatwa no. 17086

Q 1: A man had sexual intercourse with his wife during the daytime in Ramadan being ignorant of the ruling and the Kaffarah (expiation). However, later he came to know about his mistake. What should he do?

A: Anyone who has sexual intercourse with his wife during the daytime in Ramadan is liable for Kaffarah, which is emancipating a believing slave, fasting for two successive months if the previous option is unavailable, or feeding sixty poor persons if the two previous options are not available in addition to repentance and making up for that day. However, ignorance about the fact that this act is prohibited and entails the Kaffarah does not waive his liability, bearing in mind that he lives in a Muslim country. Furthermore, his wife is also liable for the same Kaffarah.

Q 2: Feeding poor persons is a kind of Kaffarah: Does this entail breakfast, lunch and dinner or only one meal?

A: If food is to be given away, an amount of 1.5 kg for each person of wheat, rice, dates or any other local staple foodstuff will discharge the obligation. However, if feeding will take the form of a banquet, one satisfying meal, launch or dinner, for each poor person will be enough.

The second Question of Fatwa no. 19182

Q 2: Is the obligation of feeding sixty poor persons discharged when the total amount - enough for sixty persons - is given in one container to one family provider?

A: Feeding poor persons can take the form of giving each poor person half a Sa' (1 Sa' = 2.172 kg), which equals approximately 1.5 kg, of a staple foodstuff. However, it will discharge the obligation to gather the aggregate number of poor persons and offer them lunch or dinner according to the correct opinion maintained by scholars. However, it is necessary to feed the number of people defined by Shari'ah (Islamic law), i.e. sixty poor persons.

Q: I deliberately broke my fast one day in Ramadan and thus, I want to feed sixty poor persons.

My question is: Is it obligatory to feed them all at once? Or, may I feed three or four poor persons, for example, per day? Is it permissible to feed my poor family members such as my father, mother or brothers?

A: If you broke your fast during Ramadan through anything other than having sexual intercourse, you will not be liable for Kaffarah (expiation) according to the correct scholarly opinion. In such a case, you just have to repent and make up for that day on which you broke your fast. However, if breaking your fast was through having sexual intercourse, it will entail repentance, making up for that day and Kaffarah, which is emancipating a believing slave, fasting for two successive months if the previous option is not possible, or feeding sixty poor persons if the two previous options are unavailable.

If a person is to feed poor persons because emancipation and fasting are unavailable, it will be permissible to feed all the poor persons at once or divide them into batches; whichever is possible. Either way, the total number of poor persons has to be fed. However, it is impermissible to feed, as Kaffarah, one's ascendants including parents and grandparents or one's descendants including male and female children or grandchildren.

Q: I am a young man that married just before Ramadan. At the beginning of Ramadan, I had sexual intercourse with my wife out of mutual desire during the daytime. However, I did not ejaculate thinking that we would only be liable for Kaffarah (expiation) if I do not ejaculate. The following Ramadan, we did the same although my wife was not willing to do so as she doubted that we were liable for Kaffarah for doing so. However, I ejaculated that time. In fact, I do not know whether Kaffarah is necessary for the former or the latter Ramadan. Note that I am now about to feed sixty poor persons: How much money should my wife and I pay for feeding sixty poor persons for the two months? It would be better if you give us an address (of a charitable organization) to which we can send the money of the Kaffarah. Please give us a Fatwa on this regard. May Allah reward you with the best and grant you success.

A: If the reality is as you mentioned, you are both liable for Kaffarah in addition to making up for the first day on which you broke your fast, as well as repentance and asking Allah (Exalted be He) to forgive the sin you committed. The Kaffarah is to emancipate a believing slave, fast for two successive months if the previous option is unavailable, or feed sixty poor persons; each poor person receiving half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of dates, wheat, rice or any other local staple foodstuff, if the two previous options are unavailable. Focusing on the second day on which you broke your fast, you have to make up for that day in addition to Kaffarah. Your wife is not liable for Kaffarah and only has to make up for that day if she had sexual intercourse with you unwillingly.

Q 2: Three years ago, I had sexual intercourse with my wife during one Ramadan night. On finishing, it turned out that dawn had broken and that the time to start Sawm (Fast) had passed half an hour before. I then proceeded to ask one Shaykh who advised me to feed 60 poor people. Therefore, I prepared a charity food for this purpose but could not feed the complete number of sixty poor people. Should my wife and I feed sixty poor people collectively or individually? If it is unfeasible to feed 60 poor people in total, how much should we pay approximately, instead and how and where should we pay it? Please, bear in mind that I have been feeling guilty about having done so ever since, especially during the blessed month of Ramadan.

A: It is obligatory on one who had sexual intercourse with his wife during the daytime of Ramadan to repent, ask Allah for forgiveness and pay Kaffarah (expiation) in addition to making up for the day on which sexual intercourse took place. The Kaffarah is to emancipate a believing slave, fast for two successive months if the previous option is unavailable, or feed sixty poor people, each poor person receiving half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of a staple foodstuff, if the two previous options are unattainable. Moreover, the wife is liable to the same Kaffarah if she consented to it.

afresh or resume Sawm after recovery?

A: Anyone who interrupted offering a Kaffarah for having sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan due to illness has to resume their Sawm and not to start afresh. This is because they are excused.

Q: I got married at an early age in 1369 A.H. and lived in a desert area where there was almost no water. In the same year, the month of Ramadan came. We fasted the first two or three days and on the fourth or the fifth day my wife and I decided to break our fast. We actually did so and I had sexual intercourse with her. We were ignorant and knew no Hadiths except that we heard from some people that making up for a missed day (of Ramadan) can be done by fasting a day. We broke our fast on this day and made up for it afterwards. Could you please inform us about the expiation of this day. May Allah protect you.

A: You and your wife have to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) immediately because breaking fast in Ramadan without a legal excuse is a major sin. It is obligatory on each of you to perform the expiation, which is to emancipate a believing slave. If this is not possible, you must fast two successive months. If this is not possible, sixty poor persons are to be given food. As for making up for the missed day, you said that both of you fasted a day in place of it and that is enough.

Q: I was on a journey in Ramadan and I broke my fast while traveling. Then, I returned from traveling and went home. I saw my wife and had sexual intercourse with her in the daytime of Ramadan while she was fasting. She was not unwilling but she was ignorant because she is illiterate. She thought that fasting a day in place of the missed day is enough. This happened a short time ago. She decided to fast two successive months without asking anyone but she could only fast 15 days. Please explain what we should do. May Allah guide you to what is right

A: You have to pay Kaffarah (expiation) according to your capacity. It is to emancipate a believing slave and if you cannot, you should fast two successive months. If this is not possible, you should offer food to sixty poor persons: for each one half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of wheat, rice or other such local staple food.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 227)

This is because once you arrived in your country, it was obligatory on you to observe Sawm (Fast) and all the rulings of Sawm are applied to you. The same is true for your wife with regard to expiation and fasting a day in place of the day in which you had sexual intercourse. In addition, she has to pay another Kaffarah of feeding a poor person if she did not fast it until another Ramadan came. Both of you should repent to Allah (Exalted be He) for having done this and be determined not to do it again.

Fatwa no. 15998

Q: All praise is due to Allah, I am a young Muslim man. I got married a week before Ramadan but I had sex with my wife during the daytime in Ramadan without complete penetration and we were both fasting. We have deeply regretted doing this and I ask Allah (Exalted be He) for forgiveness. I know that the Kaffarah (expiation) of this is to free a Muslim slave or fast two consecutive months. If I am unable to do that, I have to feed sixty poor persons. The first two are difficult for me because the first is now not available and, for the second, I cannot fast two consecutive months because I am an employee and I have to go to distant places during work and I do not have two months leave available to me. My question: Is feeding sixty needy persons sufficient, and what is the manner of doing so?

A: It is forbidden to have sexual intercourse in the daytime in Ramadan. It invalidates fasting and entails the major expiation mentioned in the question. It is to be observed in the following order: emancipating a believing slave. If this is impossible, it is to fast two successive months. If this is also infeasible, one should feed sixty poor persons: half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) each, from the local staple food of the country such as rice or wheat. According to what you mentioned about your case and that you are unable either to free a Muslim slave or to fast, you have to offer food to sixty poor persons and repent to Allah (Exalted be He) for that. In addition, you are obliged to make up for the day which you invalidated by having sexual intercourse. If another Ramadan elapsed before you make up for that day, you are required to feed one more needy person along with making up for that day as a kind of atonement for delaying. Allah knows the best.

Q: I travelled to a place that was 240 kilometers away and I broke my fast. On the second day, I had sexual intercourse with my wife and stayed with my relatives for three days while I had the intention to travel at anytime during these three days and I broke my fast. I hope you will illustrate the ruling on having sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan, taking into consideration that my intention was to travel to another place 250 kilometers away - from Saudi Arabia to Syria because I travelled to Al-Sham (The Levant) to receive medication. I returned home with the intention of fasting but I had sexual intercourse and broke my fast on another day. Hence, I have broken my fast for two days.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 230)

May Allah protect you.

A: No Kaffarah (expiation) is required for having had sexual intercourse while travelling, since it is permissible for someone on a journey to break his fast by copulation and such permissible things but it is obligatory to make up for the day he broke fast. Allah (Exalted be He) says: [\(and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number \[of days which one did not observe Saum \(fasts\) must be made up\] from other days.\)](#) The same applies to your wife if she is on journey with you: after you return home, you have to fast because the journey is over. As for having sexual intercourse after returning home, you have to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) for having done this and make up for that day. Also, you are required to offer Kaffarah (expiation) which is to emancipate a believing slave. If you could not do that, you have to fast two successive months. If this is also impractical for you, you have to feed sixty poor persons. Your wife is the same in this regard.

A: Each of you has to offer Kaffarah, which is to emancipate a believing slave. If this is not possible, each of you has to fast two successive months. Fatwa no. 18890

Q: I traveled to Egypt by bus and it took three days. I broke my fast during those days because I was on a journey and I intended to make up for them later. When I arrived in Egypt and went home in the afternoon I had sexual intercourse with my fasting wife. She disagreed in the beginning but when I told her that we would make up for it, in sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), on another day she agreed but I was unaware of the Kaffarah (expiation) when I made her break her fast. I thought that it is like any day as in the case of a traveler or a sick person and she can make up for it.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 232)

I would like to know the ruling on this day and whether I have to offer Kaffarah or only her.

Then, at night when it was 1 am, I slept with her and we went to bed to relax and prepare for Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast) while having the intention to fast the following day. However, we woke up at 11 am in the morning. We had neither made Ghusl (full ritual bath following major ritual impurity) nor eaten Suhur and I was very tired from traveling. Therefore, we also broke our fast on that day. Do we have to observe expiation for this day?

Moreover, is one Kaffarah enough for both days altogether or does each day require one? If the Kaffarah is what I read in the book of Allah (Exalted be He), to fast two consecutive months, and we are not able to fast, what is the alternative? May Allah reward you the best!

A: Neglecting Janabah Ghusl (full ritual bath to cleanse of sexual discharge) or Suhur does not affect one's fast and you should have completed your fast which you intended at night. Hence, you made an error and you have to make up for these two days and feed one poor person for each day if you have delayed it until another Ramadan came.

In addition, each of you should be charged with Kaffarah for having sexual intercourse during the daytime of Ramadan, which is to emancipate a believing slave. If this is impractical, you should fast two successive months.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 233)

If this is even not feasible, you should offer food to sixty poor persons. You are also required to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) and not do so again. Moreover, you have to pay a similar Kaffarah if you have had sexual intercourse on the second day in which you broke your fast and repent to Allah (Exalted be He), because this took place in Ramadan.

Q: I got married more than 30 years ago. I am Bedouin and illiterate and I have no religious knowledge. Moreover, there are no knowledgeable people around and we are in complete ignorance of the matters of our religion. However, I had sexual intercourse with my wife in Ramadan after Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and she was willing. We broke our Sawm (Fast) together that day and it was our first Ramadan (i.e. in marriage). We were young and we did so thinking that it, being Junub (person in a state of major ritual impurity) because I also slept with her during night and there was no water, was impermissible to fast without Ghusl (full ritual bath following major ritual impurity). Therefore, I copulated with her after Fajr Prayer and we were ignorant of the related rulings.

A: It is obligatory on you to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) and not do so again. Then, you have to do the required Kaffarah (expiation), which is to emancipate a believing slave for each one of you. If this is not possible, each of you has to fast two successive months. If this is also impossible, then each of you has to feed sixty poor persons: for everyone half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) from the staple foodstuff of the country. Also, both of you are required to make up for the day in which you had sexual intercourse. If you delayed making up for it until another Ramadan came, you should give additional half a Sa` of the staple food of the country to a needy person for the day in which you broke your fast.

Fatwa no. 15854

Q: In three months of Ramadan over the last three years, I used to abstain from eating and drinking but I had sexual intercourse with my wife. In the first year, we had it for twenty-five days of Ramadan. In the following year, I had sexual intercourse with her for fifteen days. In the third year, we had intercourse for five days. I did not know that engaging in sexual intercourse during the day of Ramadan invalidates Sawm (Fast). Appreciate your guidance, may Allah guide you!

A: Firstly, You and your wife have to repent to Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) and seek His Forgiveness.

Secondly, you have to make Kaffarah (expiation) for each day you had sexual intercourse with your wife. A Kaffarah is to emancipate a believing slave, and if you can not find one, you have to fast two consecutive months, and if you can't, you have to feed sixty Miskin (needy); each Miskin half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food of the country.

Thirdly, you have to make up for these days. If you delayed making up fasting before the following Ramadan, in addition to making up for these days, you have to feed a Miskin half a Sa` of the staple food of the country for each day.

Fourthly, your wife should also perform Tawbah, make Kaffarah, and make up for these days.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of fatwa no. 16087

Q 1: I was young and uneducated when I got married. My husband used to have sex with me in the daytime in Ramadan and I was agreeable, but I was ignorant of the punishment and so was he. Now, he is dead and I do not know the number of days in which I did so. What should I do?

A 1: You are required to observe the due Kaffarah (expiation) of each day of Ramadan where you had sexual intercourse. The Kaffarah is to emancipate a believing slave. If you cannot do that, you have to fast two successive months (60 days). If this is impractical for you, you have to feed sixty poor persons for each day in which you had sexual intercourse. If you do not remember the number of days in which you did that, you can guess them. The same is true for your deceased husband. If he left an estate behind, the Kaffarah is to be given from it. If anyone of his relatives or even any Muslim wants to fast on his behalf, there is much good in doing so. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(If anyone dies in a state \(that he had to complete\) some days of fasting, his heir must fast on his behalf.\) (agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

If there is no one to fast on his behalf and there is no Muslim slave to free, food for sixty poor people should be taken from his estate for every day in which he had sexual intercourse. Every poor person is to be given half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) from the staple food of the country, such as rice. If he did not leave an estate but some of his relatives or some benevolent persons donate the food, it is good. You are also obliged to make up for the days on which you had sexual intercourse and you should feed a poor person half a Sa` for each day because you delayed making up for those days. The same applies to your deceased husband; to make up for those days on his behalf and to feed the needy for having delayed doing so.

Q: I had sexual intercourse with my wife twice in the blessed month of Ramadan, 1403 AH. and another time on one day from the blessed month in 1407 A.H. Anyway, I made up for these days after the end of each month but I did not observe the due Kaffarah for them. Because I worked in a remote area where there was no electricity and roads were rugged, I could not fast two successive months. I hope you will give me a suitable solution to my case. Moreover, I want to ask if I should expiate by feeding sixty poor persons for each day or for all the days at once, because they were separated. In addition, what is the quantity of the Kaffarah and is it allowable to spend it in charitable acts, such as building a mosque or a house for some poor persons? I hope you will give me a written answer. May Allah reward you with all good for Islam and Muslims. He is the All-Hearing and All-Answering. Thanks very much.

A: If the case is as you mentioned, you are obliged to make up for these three days and to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) and ask Him for forgiveness. In addition, you are charged with three expiations because sexual intercourse took place on separate days.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 238)

The expiation is to emancipate a believing slave. If you could not do that, you have to fast two successive months. If you are unable to do that because of illness, old age or some hardship that prevents you from fasting, you are to feed sixty poor persons for each day on which you had sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan. Every poor person should be given half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) from the staple foodstuff of the country, such as wheat, rice, etc. However, it is not permissible to spend the value of expiation in charitable acts, building mosques or even to pay it in cash.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

Fatwa no. 15685

Q: I married a woman other than my present wife and the marriage took place in the month of Ramadan. I was a teenager at that time. However, I slept with my first wife on two days in the blessed month and repented to Allah (Exalted be He) and completed my Swam (Fast). This took place ten years ago and I am still concerned about it after I knew that there is a specific expiation for that. Then, three or four years later, my father (may Allah confer mercy upon him) died in a car accident and I pardoned the one who did it, because he was driving while my father (may Allah be merciful with him) was walking along the side of the road. Does my pardoning make up for the expiation as I did so for the sake of Allah or how can I atone for my wrongdoing? May Allah reward you all the good and support Islam and Muslims by you.

A: If the case is as you mentioned, it is obligatory on both you and your wife to offer Kaffarah (expiation) of having sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan. It is to emancipate a believing slave. If this is impossible, it is to fast two successive months. If you are also unable to do that, it is to feed sixty poor persons a mudd (measure) of wheat or half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) from other things twice to make up for the two days. In addition, each of you has to make up for the two days and two feed two poor persons for having delayed the expiation for those days until another Ramadan came. You are also required to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) and seek His forgiveness. Your relinquishing the Diah (blood money) of your father does not make up for the expiation of having sexual intercourse in the daytime in Ramadan.

Q 2: A few days ago, a friend of my father told me that my father have had sexual intercourse with his (my father's) wife in the daytime in one of the days of the blessed month of Ramadan. My father told him that he fed sixty needy. But my father was a pious person and was well known for his righteousness. Yet, we cannot free a Muslim slave but we are able to fast on his behalf two consecutive months. Is it permissible for me to fast on behalf of him? My brothers and sisters can do the same but I would like to fast on his behalf.

A: If a man copulates with his wife in the daytime in Ramadan, both of them have to offer the Kaffarah (expiation), which is to free a believing slave. If they do not find one, they should fast two consecutive months. If they cannot, they should feed sixty poor persons for each a poor person 1.5 kg of the staple food of the country. As for what you mentioned that your father did the expiation required on him by feeding sixty needy, he then has did what is required on him and only you are asked to make up for that day on behalf of him. Fatwa no. 17542

Q: After eating Suhur (pre-dawn meal) on the 28th of Ramadan, I had sexual intercourse with my wife and we finished when the Iqamah (call to start Prayer) was announced. I do not know whether intercourse took place before or after the time of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. Please give me your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) to know whether I have to make up for that day and whether I am charged with the due Kaffarah (expiation).

A: If a man has sexual intercourse with his wife during the daytime or at night and continued til the daytime in Ramadan, as indicated in the aforementioned question, he is required to make up for that day and to observe the due Kaffarah, which is to emancipate a believing slave. If he cannot do that, he has to fast two successive months. If this is also impossible, he is required to feed sixty poor persons.

The wife has to make up for that day, and if she had sexual intercourse willingly, she is charged with the due Kaffarah as well.

Q: A man had sexual intercourse with his wife several times in the daytime in Ramadan. He was newly married and this happened some years ago. Then, they performed Hajj and `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). What is incumbent on them?

A: It is incumbent on them to make up for the days on which they had sexual intercourse and to feed a poor person for each day because they delayed making up for those days. Furthermore, it is obligatory on them to ascertain the number of days they had sexual intercourse so they can count the number of Kaffarah (expiation). If they had sexual intercourse several times on the same day, each of them is required to observe only one Kaffarah, which is to free a Muslim slave. If this is not possible, then it is to fast two successive months. If this is also impossible, then each one has to feed sixty poor persons. What they did does not affect their Hajj and `Umrah, as long as they performed them in the right way.

Fatwa no. 17311

Q: I had sexual intercourse with my wife twice in the daytime in Ramadan and in two different years. I remember that the first time I was returning from a journey but I do not remember the second time. Regardless of the excuse, I regret what I did and I ask Allah (Exalted be He) to accept my repentance and forgive all my sins, for He is the All-Forgiving. I asked one of the shaykhs by phone while I was offering Hajj in the past year, 1414 AH. in Makkah. He told me that if I and my wife had been observing all the Prayers and had not been neglecting any of them for any reason, so we would have to fast two consecutive months. He added to me that if we offer some Prayers but neglect others, that we would be considered disbelievers. May Allah protect us from that. Thus, according to him, we have to return to Islam, regret what we did and not repeat it. We were stunned with this Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar), especially because we testify that no one is worthy of worship but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah. We believe in Allah, the Last Day, Angels, the revealed Books and destiny, its good and bad.

Dear shaykh, please give us your Fatwa regarding what I and my wife should do. May Allah reward you with the best. I would like you to note that we cannot fast two successive months, because I donated my kidney to my brother in 1406 A.H. and I should drink water continually in order to preserve the other kidney. In addition, my wife suffers from several diseases. Anyway, we may be able to fast if we divided the two successive months, but is this sufficient? May Allah reward you with all the good and benefit the Muslim Ummah with you. He is the All-Hearing, the All-Nearer and the One Who answers supplications.

A: If you and your wife are unable to emancipate a Muslim slave or to fast in order to atone for having sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan, both of you has to observe two expiations by feeding sixty poor persons for each time of expiation; each poor person takes half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) from the staple food of the country. Thus, each of you has to give out sixty Sa`s and distribute it among sixty needy persons, and each takes a Sa`, which is about three kilograms.

Finding it unusual to consider the one who does not offer Prayer as disbeliever is improper, because it is proven by evidence that anyone who deliberately neglects Prayer is a disbeliever. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, \(What makes one a disbeliever and a polytheist is abandoning Prayers.\) (related by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith). The Prophet (peace be upon him) also said: \(What differentiates between us and them \(disbelievers\) is Prayer, whoever neglects it is a disbeliever.) (related by Imam Ahmad and the Compilers of Sunan) through an authentic Sanad (chain of narrators). There are other Hadiths to that effect.

Fatwa no. 18165

Q: I am aware of a few rulings about the Kaffarah (expiation) of the nullification of Sawm (Fast) and I hope you will give me some information about the expiation of invalidating Sawm by having sexual intercourse in the daytime in Ramadan. I knew from a Muslim scholar and also read in Al-Muslimun newspaper that the expiation is to emancipate a Muslim slave and if this is impossible, then a person should fast sixty days and if this is impossible, then sixty poor people should be fed.

I would like to ask you about the expiation of invalidating the Fast because of having sexual intercourse in the daytime in Ramadan. I do not know the Kaffarah in detail and I ask you to give me the answer. May Allah reward you in the best.

Does feeding sixty needy persons apply to the wife just like the husband and therefore the total number becomes 120 needy persons? Also, a husband might be aware that doing this spoils one's Fast but his sexual drive overcame him whereas the wife was unaware but simply obeyed her husband and so sexual intercourse took place in the daytime in Ramadan with the approval of both of them.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 245)

A 1: If a husband has sexual intercourse with his wife in the daytime in Ramadan, each of them is required to observe the expiation unless the wife does so unwillingly. In this case, there is no expiation incumbent on her.

The expiation is to emancipate a believing slave. If the person can not do that, then he or she is to fast two successive months. If he or she could not do so, each of them is to feed sixty poor persons half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) which is about 1.5 kg from the staple foodstuff of the country such as rice, wheat, or dates. Furthermore, it is obligatory to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) and to seek His forgiveness for that. A wife is not excused if she is willing to have sexual intercourse, even if she is unaware of the related religious ruling. This is because she lives in a Muslim country and this ruling is not disregarded because of ignorance, for it is well known and occupies a serious position in the religion.

Q 2: Is it obligatory to make up for the day in which a person broke its Fast together with observing the expiation?

A 2: In addition to observing the expiation, it is obligatory on the husband and his wife to make up for the days of Fast, which they invalidated as a result of having sexual intercourse in the daytime in Ramadan. If they invalidate one or more days, they are to make up for them.

Q 3: Is it permissible to feed the fasting persons in Ramadan or at any other time? Is expiation sufficient in this case?

A 3: The expiation of having sexual intercourse in the daytime in Ramadan is shown in the aforementioned order. Hence, a person can only move to fasting if they are unable to emancipate a Muslim slave and similarly they should not move to feeding sixty needy people unless the first two are impossible for them. Thus, as you mentioned in the question, it is permissible for him to feed sixty fasting poor persons with what satisfies them from the staple foodstuff of the country. This should be observed twice on behalf of the husband and his wife or another alternative to give the sixty needy people 60 Sa`s on behalf of him and his wife.

Q 4: Is it permissible for me to pay a sum of money in cash to one poor person instead of feeding sixty needy persons? If this is allowable, what is the value of feeding one needy person in Saudi riyals?

A 4: It is incumbent to give the expiation in the manner mentioned in the revealed texts, and this does not include paying it in cash. It is obligatory to follow the religious orders as they are related. Al-Bukhari and Muslim reported on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) (A person had sexual relations with his wife during the daytime in Ramadan (while he was fasting), and he came to the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) seeking his verdict concerning that action. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said (to him): "Can you afford to manumit a slave?" The man said: "No." The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "Can you fast for two successive months?" He said, "No." The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "Then feed sixty poor persons.")

Q 5: There is a poor and ill person who had sexual intercourse with his wife in the daytime in Ramadan and he is unable to work because of his illness. He has a simple house where he and his family live, praise be to Allah. Sometimes, he does not find enough sustenance for his family but he is not discontent. If he is unable to emancipate a Muslim slave, fast sixty days, or feed sixty poor persons and his conditions are what has been mentioned, what should he do? Is there any other thing for him to be absolved before Allah (Exalted be He)? Appreciate your guidance, may Allah guide you!

(Part No. 9; Page No. 247)

May Allah reward you in the best way.

A 5: If the case is as you mentioned, being unable to do the expiation, then the expiation is cancelled. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not order the one who could not do the expiation for copulation in the daytime in Ramadan to do it. It is sufficient in this case to repent sincerely to Allah (Exalted be He).

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The first question of fatwa no. 19667

Q 1: I broke my Swam (Fast) in a day in Ramadan when my husband had sexual intercourse with me, with my approval. I made up for this day. Please, give me a Fatwa, because I am confused. I cannot fast two successive months and my health is not so good. Moreover, I still have the monthly period. Please answer me. May Allah reward you with the best.

A 1: Having sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan spoils Fast and calls for the expiation in addition to making up for that day. The expiation incumbent upon each of you is to emancipate a Muslim slave. If you cannot do this, then you should fast two consecutive months. If you can not do that, you should feed sixty poor persons. You are obliged to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) for this sin. If you cannot fast, you should feed sixty poor persons, and every poor person should receive half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food of the county, such as dates, wheat, rice, etc.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 248)

Having the monthly period is not an excuse for avoiding Fast and does not interrupt the successiveness of fasting. Thus, you can complete it from the third month.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The second question of fatwa no. 19745

Q 2: An anonymous person says that 30 years ago, he married a woman and had sexual intercourse with her in one of the days of Ramadan while he was fasting. He neglected that matter all this time because he was ignorant. However, he admits that he knew that this is impermissible and that he has to fast two months, emancipate a Muslim slave or feed sixty poor persons. He says that he cannot fast two months. In addition, his financial conditions are bad and he cannot free a slave or feed sixty persons. Hence, I refer his question to you and hope that you will answer him. May Allah grant you all success and benefit Islam and Muslims with you. All praise is due to Allah.

A 2: If anyone has sexual intercourse with his wife while fasting in the daytime in Ramadan, he is required to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) for that act. In addition, it is obligatory on him to make up for that day and to observe the Kaffarah (expiation) for his act. The Kaffarah is to emancipate a Muslim slave.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 249)

If he cannot do that, he should fast two consecutive months. If he is unable to fast due to illness, old age or anything else, he should feed sixty poor persons: each poor person should receive 1.5 kg of wheat, rice or any other staple food of the country. If he is not able to do that, he is excused from having to fulfill the Kaffarah. It is reported in the the Two Sahih (authentic) Books of Hadith (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) and other books of Hadith on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: \(A Bedouin came to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) and said: "I am ruined!" The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said: "Why?" He said: "I had sexual intercourse with my wife in Ramadan \(while fasting\)." The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said to him: "Can you afford to manumit a slave \(as expiation\)?" He replied: "No." The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said: "Can you fast for two successive months?" He said: "No." The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said: "Can you afford to feed sixty poor persons?" He said: "No." Then a basket full of dates was brought to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) and he said \(to that man\): "Give this \(basket of dates\) in charity \(as expiation\)." He said, "Shall I give it to people who are poorer than us? There is no family between Madinah's two mountains poorer than us." The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) smiled till his pre-molar teeth became visible. He then said, "Feed your family with it."\) The Prophet (peace be upon him) did not order him to do another Kaffarah if he was able to observe it. In addition, the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not mention to him that it is a debt on him, which indicates that the Kaffarah is cancelled if the person is unable to observe it.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

Q 1: My colleague asked me to ask you the following question. He said: "In Ramadan 1418 A.H. I had sexual intercourse with my wife shortly before the Adhan (call to Prayer) of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer and I finished after I heard the first Adhan. I heard one Adhan from another mosque and while it was being pronounced, another Adhan started and then another Adhan from another mosque. I became confused and I did not know which was closer to the right time, because they were pronounced at different times. What is the ruling on my case?

A 1: If a man has sexual intercourse with his wife before dawn in Ramadan and continued until the second Fajr and they were obliged to fast Ramadan, he has to make up for that day and expiate for having sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan. Apparently, this man was quite negligent with regard to fasting because he did not stop even though he heard the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) calling for the Adhan of the second Fajr. The point is that the Adhan of the second Fajr was called regardless of those who are late. This man should have stopped when he heard the first Mu'adhin calling the Adhan of the second Fajr. However, as long as he continued having sexual intercourse even though he heard the Adhan, he has to pay the expiation because sexual intercourse took place in the daytime in Ramadan. The expiation is to emancipate a Muslim slave. If he cannot do that, he should fast two successive months. If he cannot do that because of some illness or old age, he should feed sixty poor persons: every needy person should receive one half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) which is equal to approximately 1.5 kg of wheat, rice or any other staple food of the country.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The sixth question of fatwa no. 20412

Q 1: In Ramadan, I was newly married and I indulged in foreplay with my wife after the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer. I would enter a part of my penis in her vagina with her assent. We did not ejaculate but we were pleased with that. I do not remember how many times this happened; perhaps three or four. What is the ruling on that and what should I do? May Allah protect you!

A 1: If the reality is as mentioned in the question, it is Wajib (obligatory) on you to pay the Kaffarah (expiation) of sexual intercourse during the day in Ramadan. If the sexual intercourse took place on separate days, it is Wajib in you to offer Kaffarah for the number of days in which you had sex and you have to make up for these days. If you had sex on one day but frequently and you did not offer Kaffarah for the first time of sex, it suffices to observe one Kaffarah for all of them and to make up for that day. It is noted that inserting the penis or a part of it in the wife's vagina invalidates Sawm (Fast) and required a Kaffarah even if there was no ejaculation. It is Wajib on your wife to offer the same Kaffarah and make up for the days because she was willing. The expiation is to emancipate a Muslim bondman. If you do not find one or if you are unable to do it, you have to observe Sawm for two consecutive months, that is, sixty days. If you cannot do that due to some illness or old age, you should feed sixty poor people, for each one half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) from the staple food of the country. You are also required to offer Tawbah (repentance to Allah) for that.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of fatwa no. 20443

Q 1: A man slept beside his wife after eating Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast) in Ramadan and he confused the loud recitation of the Imam (leader in congregational Prayer) in the mosque. He thought that it was Tahajjud (optional late night Prayer) and did not try to find out whether it was the Fajr (Dawn) Prayer or the Tahajjud Prayer and he finally copulated with his wife. Surely, this man was able to turn on the light to know the time but he did not. However, after he had sex he found out that it was the Fajr Prayer. By doing so, is he regarded as careless with and degrading the prohibitions of Allah?

A 1: If the reality is as mentioned, that he had sexual intercourse after the occurrence of Fajr (dawn) in Ramadan and he thought that the night did not elapse, he is not sinful because he did not seek to have sexual intercourse in the daytime in Ramadan. However, he and his wife have to make up for that day and they are obligated to observe the expiation of sexual intercourse during the daytime in Ramadan. The expiation is to emancipate a Muslim slave. If he does not find it, he should fast two successive months. If he cannot fast because of old age or illness, he should feed sixty poor persons. The wife is the same in this regard if she did so willingly. If she was unwilling, she is required only to make up for that day. It is obligatory on him to repent sincerely to Allah from that act and not to be negligent in this regard. This ruling is based on carefulness in making sure of the break of Fajr if you are not sure about the Tahajjud in order not to spoil your Sawm (Fast).

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The sixth question of fatwa no. 20628

Q 6: A man had sexual relations with his wife during the daytime in Ramadan. He knew the Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) about this from the people of knowledge but he could not find a Muslim slave to free and he could not fast. The only option he has now is to feed the needy. This took place three years ago. Is he sinful because he delayed making up for this day and is there a required Kaffarah (expiation)?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 254)

A 6: If a man has sexual intercourse with his wife in the daytime in Ramadan, he is obliged to make up for it and to observe the expiation, which is to emancipate a Muslim slave. If this is not possible, he is to fast two successive months. If he is also unable to do that because of illness, old age and the like, he should feed sixty needy persons. If a person is required to make expiation, he should hasten to observe it to absolve himself of it. If he delays it with no excuse, he should repent to Allah (Exalted be He) and hasten to do it for there is no expiation for that except doing it.

Q: A questioner says: What is the ruling on a person who committed premarital intercourse (fornication) during the day of Ramadan and continued committing this sin for three days? What should they do, especially that he turned to Allah in repentance and regretted the past? Kindly, support your answer with evidence and the opinion of scholars.

A: The man and the woman should offer a Kaffarah (expiation) for each of the three days. A Kaffarah is to emancipate a believing slave, and if they do not find, they have to fast two consecutive months, and if they cannot, they have to feed sixty Miskin (needy) people, this is in addition to fasting the three days. Moreover, both should perform sincere Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and determine not to return to such a sin.

Q: What is the ruling on Zina (sexual intercourse outside marriage) in Ramadan? A man committed this sin when he was ignorant and he asks Allah (Exalted be He) for forgiveness. It is noted that he is now married and has children. He asked about that and he was told that he has to fast two successive months. But, if he does so, his wife and family will ask why, which will surely cause damage to his character in front of his family. Allah (Exalted be He) has veiled him. Thus, is it permissible for him to feed the poor or to free a Muslim slave in order to preserve his dignity and protect his family, which may be disunited because of this mistake, which took place before marriage?

A: It is obligatory on the man in question to repent to Allah (Exalted be He) and observe the Kaffarah (expiation) which is to free a Muslim slave and if this is not possible, then he should fast two consecutive months. If cannot do that, he should feed sixty poor persons. He is also required to make up for the day on which he broke his fast and to do the expiation of delaying making up for that day - that is, to give a poor person 1.5 kg of wheat or the staple food of the country. The excuse you mentioned in the question is not valid to overlook the obligation of fasting and feed the needy instead. May Allah grant us all success.

Q: About 25 years ago, I had sexual relations with my husband in the daytime in Ramadan while the Adhan (call to Prayer) of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer was finishing. My husband is a wise and old person and I do not know if he was aware of the ruling at that time or not. However, I did not know that doing so is impermissible because I was about 20 years old at the time, but I recently knew it through listening to the radio and because knowledge is now widespread.

I hope you will give me a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) in this regard, because I deeply regret it. May Allah reward you the best.

A: If the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) pronounces the Adhan upon the break of dawn, it means that you had sexual intercourse in the daytime in Ramadan and each of you has to make up for this day and to pay the Kaffarah (expiation), which is to emancipate a Muslim slave. If this is impossible, it is to fast two successive months. If this is also not possible, it is to feed sixty needy persons. In addition, both of you must feed a poor person for delaying making up for that day.

Q: At dawn on Sunday (29/9/1416 A.H.) in the blessed month of Ramadan, I had sexual intercourse with my wife in a closed room at 5:17 am and we finished shortly at 5:22 am. The time of Fajr (Dawn) Prayer of Makkah was 5:31 am while the time of Fajr Prayer of Qunfudhah city was about 5:26 am on Sunday. When I finished and went out to take Ghushl (full ritual bath) I heard the Adhan (call to Prayer) of Fajr Prayer. Then, after about two minutes, the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) of the nearby mosque announced the Adhan. Am I sinful for having sexual relations with my wife at that time? It is noted that I did so another time in 1413 A.H. Really, I am greatly perplexed, especially as because my wife refused and she did so unwillingly. She suffers from a simple disease in her body. I hope you will give me a Fatwa (legal opinion issued a qualified Muslim scholar) for, as you know, this is a blessed month and we want to perfect our Sawm (Fast). It should be taken into consideration that my wife and I completed our Fast and did not break it until that Sunday. May Allah reward you the best.

A: A: If the reality is what is mentioned, that after you finished sexual intercourse when you heard the Mu'adhin (caller to Prayer) and you became sure that some minutes remained between the occurrence of Fajr Prayer and sexual intercourse, then there is no blame on you, because sexual intercourse took place outside the time of Fast. There is no blame on you for performing Ghushl after the beginning of the time of Fajr.

Fasting on behalf of the Dead

Q: My mother passed away. Before she died, she mentioned to me that she had to make up for two months of Ramadan in two years. The month of Ramadan came while she was postpartum and she died without making up for them. Women at that time used to be involved in agriculture work in addition to housework. She lived for about 50 years. Should I fast on her behalf or feed sixty poor people and if so, what is the manner of feeding? Should I slaughter some sheep and distribute the meat among sixty poor houses or should I pay the value of food? Please guide us. May Allah reward you with the best. I want to absolve her.

A: It is better to fast on behalf of your mother, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «If anyone dies in a state \(that he had to complete\) some days of fasting, his heir must fast on his behalf.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). The "heir" mentioned in the Hadith includes relatives. If you or any other relative are not able to fast, you should feed one poor person for each day from your money or her estate. One poor person is to be given half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) from the staple food of the country. If you pay all the food to one poor person, it is sufficient.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The second question of fatwa no. 19810

Q 2: My wife, may Allah confer mercy on her, died two weeks ago. She had to make up for seven days of the past Ramadan in which she had her monthly period and she died without making up for them.

Should I fast on her behalf? It is noted that I have to make up for a month: should I fast what is required on me first and for her after that?

A 2: If the reality is as you mentioned, then it is incumbent on you to make up for your missed fast and after that it is permissible to fast on behalf of your deceased wife. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(If anyone dies in a state \(that he had to complete\) some days of fasting, his heir must fast on his behalf.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

The fourth question of fatwa no. 18057

Q 4: My father was ill and died while he had to make up for two days of Ramadan. This was a year ago. He passed away in Shawwal and he said that he would feed poor people for two days. What is obligatory on us regarding him? Should we fast and feed poor people or only feed poor people on his behalf? It is noted that we do not know whether he fed poor people for these days or if he fasted them.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 262)

He was a diabetic and he would fast Ramadan but with great difficulty.

A 4: If your father was able to make up for the missed fasting of the previous Ramadan but he was careless until another Ramadan came, after which he passed away, it is better that someone makes up for these two days. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, «If anyone dies in a state \(that he had to complete\) some days of fasting, his heir must fast on his behalf.» (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) Nevertheless, it is sufficient to feed poor people on his behalf: a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg), nearly 3 kg of the staple food of the country.

If he was not able to make up for these days before the next Ramadan because of his illness, then neither feeding nor fasting is required because he was not careless.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The fifth question of fatwa no. 16342

Q 5: My grandfather died while being committed to fasting in Ramadan and he did not make up for it because of his illness. What is the ruling on this case?

A 5: If a person dies without making up for the obligatory fasting of Ramadan, because he could not do so, there is no harm on him because he is excused. Yet, if a person was able to make up for the missed fasting but neglected it until he passed away, then it is better for his relatives to fast on his behalf.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 263)

The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(If anyone dies in a state \(that he had to complete\) some days of fasting, his heir must fast on his behalf.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). The "heir" mentioned in the Hadith also includes the relatives of the deceased. However, if there is no one to fast on his behalf, then poor people should be fed from his estate on his behalf. The Kaffarah (expiation) in this case, according to a group of the Companions (may Allah be pleased with him) of the Prophet (peace be upon him), is half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of food given to a poor person for each day.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The sixth question of fatwa no. 17575

Q 6: A man died when he had to make up for 10 days that he missed in Ramadan. He had recovered in the month of Shawwal but he was quite negligent in making up for what he missed. Should his heir fast on his behalf or is this only limited to vow and fasts of expiation? If the heir prefers giving food to fasting, is it permissible? In addition, how many Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of food should be given? Please answer us. May Allah reward you.

A 6: It is allowable for his heirs to fast the days he missed on his behalf. This is according to the Hadith of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(If anyone dies in a state \(that he had to complete\) some days of fasting, his heir must fast on his behalf.\) The Hadith is general and includes the fast of Ramadan, the fast of vows and the fast of expiation according to the correct opinion maintained by scholars. The man was able to fast but remiss in it, so if the heir does not fast, he should offer food to a poor person on the man's behalf for each day. This can be paid from the deceased man's estate.

If the heir donates food from his money, there is nothing wrong with this. The quantity of food is half a Sa` for each day from the staple foodstuff of the country, such as rice. This amount equals nearly 1.5 kg.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The second question of Fatwa no. 17000

Q 2: A man works in a non-Muslim country. He was forced not to fast during the month of Ramadan, and he died after he returned to his country. What is the ruling on this case?

A 2: If a person dies before making up for the days of fasting he missed in Ramadan, then any of his heirs can fast on his/her behalf if they want. The Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have said: \(If anyone dies in a state \(that he had to complete\) some days of fasting, his heir must fast on his behalf.\)

Q: My mother (may Allah be Merciful to her and admit her into His spacious Paradise) died before the month of Ramadan this year and her age was roughly one hundred years. In her last days, she said that she had never made up for the days of fasting in Ramadan that she missed because of the period. She was actually unaware of the relevant ruling. Are we duty bound to fast and expiate on her behalf? If yes, please give us Fatwa on the following, may Allah reward you with the best:

- 1. We do not know the number of days she missed: How can we count these days?
- 2. Is it permissible that anyone other than her heirs fast on her behalf for a remuneration or for free?
- 3. What should we do first: fast or pay charity?
- 4. Should the Sadaqah (voluntary charity) given as expiation be paid intermittently for each day or be gathered and given out at once?
- 5. What is the amount of Sadaqah that should be given as expiation? Can we give it out meat in the form of rice or wheat?
- 6. Can we pay Sadaqah to charities to give it to those who deserve it? It is worth mentioning that some residential buildings for expatriates are nearby, including men, women and children. There is also a garrison nearby, but we do not know whether those people are in need of Sadaqah. We would like to know what we should do. May Allah reward you.

A: You can try and work out the number of days your mother has missed, and then fast these days on her behalf along with feeding a needy person an amount of 1.5 kg of the staple food of the country as expiation for delaying in making up the missed fasting. This is based on a Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: (If anyone dies in a state (that he had to complete) some days of fast, his heir must fast on his behalf.) (agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim). Some of the Prophet's (peace be upon him) Companions said that feeding a needy person an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg); i.e. approximately 1.5 kg of the staple food of the country, is a must for every day of fasting missed along with making up for that day. This ruling applies to a person who delays making up the days he missed from a Ramadan until the next Ramadan comes without a valid excuse.

Making up for Fast

Fatwa no. 18557

Q: My grandfather is 88 years old; he was born in 1907. He witnessed the war waged by the Algerians in 1954 to gain liberation from the French colonization. At that time, he was a soldier in the ranks of the National Liberation Army. Due to war, the soldiers had to abstain from fasting during four months of Ramadan, a period during which they were in a state of war; namely for four years. My grandfather was not the only one who did so, but rather all the soldiers did. Now he is 88 years old as mentioned above, and he did not make up for any of the days of these four months of Ramadan. The man asks:

1. Can my grandfather pay Kaffarah (expiation) in compensation as he is aged and cannot endure fasting?
2. If your answer is in the affirmative, how much should he pay in Algerian dinars as compensation for these months, and to whom should he pay it?
3. Can he pay Kaffarah for the month of Ramadan for this year?

A: If your grandfather is actually unable to make up the four months of Ramadan he did not fast, then he has to feed a needy person an amount of 1.5 kg of the country's staple food for each day he failed to fast. Giving money does not serve as a substitute for providing food. The Kaffarah for the four months can be given at once to some poor families. He should repent for this delay in making up for the missed days of fasting.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

A 6: This woman must make up for the days she did not fast from the previous months of Ramadan and feed a needy person an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the country's staple food for each fasting day she missed as expiation for delaying the making up of these days until another Ramadan came.

Fatwa no. 19355

Q: A woman had sexual intercourse with her husband during the day of Ramadan and it was during her menstrual period and she was expecting to take the after-menstruation Ghusl (full ritual bath) on that day upon the termination of her period. Is it Wajib (obligatory) on both of them to offer a Kaffarah (expiation)? I hope that you will explain all the Kaffarahs due in this regard to me.

A: According to Ijma` (consensus of scholars), having sexual intercourse with a menstruating wife is forbidden. Whoever does so intentionally and is aware of the prohibition and knows that his wife is in her menstrual period and then he commits a prohibited deed which is one of the major sins. In such a case he has to show sincere Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and give out one or half a Dinar as a Kaffarah for that. Evidences are explicit in the Qur'an and the Sunnah on the strict prohibition of such a deed.

However, the prohibition is much more strict and the sin is graver when one has sexual intercourse with his wife during the day in Ramadan while he is observing Sawm and whether it is during her period or not. This is because this act involves a violation against the sanctity of Ramadan, breaking his Sawm without a valid excuse and committing what Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) and His Messenger (peace be upon him) have prohibited.

Therefore, it is Wajib on the husband who has sexual intercourse with his menstruating wife during the day in Ramadan to make up for that day and offer Kaffarah for doing so during the day in Ramadan. The Kaffarah due is freeing a Muslim bondman. If this is unfeasible or beyond one's capacity, one has to observe Sawm for two consecutive months, and if one cannot do that, he is bound to feed sixty needy people. He must also offer Tawbah and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah). He is also bound to give out one or half a Dinar in charity as a Kaffarah for having intercourse with his menstruating wife. This Kaffarah is based on the Hadith related by Ahmad, Abu Dawud, at-Tirmidhy, An-Nasa'y and Ibn Majah with a good chain of transmitters on the authority of Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both): \(That the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) ordered whoever has sexual intercourse with his wife during her menses to pay a Dinar or half a Dinar in charity.\) Whatever is given out will be valid, and one Dinar equals almost four sevenths of the Saudi pound.

As for the woman who had intercourse with her husband, if her period had stopped before having intercourse she has to offer a Kaffarah for having intercourse during the day in Ramadan exactly like her husband, and this is whether or not she had taken the after-menstruation Ghusl, provided she welcomed her husband's desire, was aware of the prohibition and of her Sawm. This is because a woman, according to the most correct opinion maintained by scholars, has to abstain from eating and drinking once the period stops even if she has not yet taken the after-menstruation Ghusl, exactly like the Junub (person in a state of major ritual impurity) due to the sanctity of Ramadan. However, if they had intercourse during the period and she was not sure whether it had stopped or not, then she has to offer a Kaffarah for the sexual intercourse during her period if she welcomed her husband's desire, was aware of the prohibition and that it was during her period. However, she is not bound to offer a Kaffarah for having intercourse during the day of Ramadan as the rulings of Sawm do not apply to her during her menstrual period, but she still sinned for allowing her husband to have intercourse with her during her period. She also has to offer sincere Tawbah from this abominable act and make up for the days she on which she did not observe Sawm during the period but after her period stops.

A 1: The woman who invalidated her Sawm by having intercourse with her husband when she was making up for one of the missed days of Ramadan has to make up for that day. In addition, she has to offer Tawbah (repentance to Allah) as it is impermissible for her to break her Sawm.

Q: I did not observe Sawm (Fast) on one of the days of Ramadan because of an illness. Afterwards, I made up for that day but at ten o'clock in the morning on that day, some guests visited me at home and I broke my Sawm as I thought that my Sawm was under the ruling of a voluntary Sawm. Then, in a religious session I heard that I was mistaken for doing so, and the preacher told me to ask Your Eminence. I hope to know the ruling on what I have done, and what I should do?

A: Whoever commences an obligatory Sawm like making up for a missed day of Ramadan or any other obligatory Sawm like that for vowing or for an oath, is forbidden to break their Sawm without a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse because when one commences an obligatory Sawm he has to complete it unless he has a Shar`y excuse. However, if one breaks that type of Sawm without a Shar`y excuse they will not have to offer a Kaffarah but will have to make up for the days they broke whether they did so with or without a Shar`y excuse. Nevertheless, they are sinful for breaking the obligatory Sawm without a Shar`y excuse, and thus have to offer Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) and resolve not to do so any more.

The first, second and third questions of Fatwa no. 20236

Q 1: Is it permissible for a person to intentionally break their Sawm (Fast) which is a make-up for a missed day of Ramadan? And should a person offer a Kaffarah (expiation) if they intentionally break their Sawm by having intercourse with their wife?

A 1: It is forbidden to break the Sawm which is due as a make-up for Sawm or for vowing or as Kaffarah without a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: (and render not vain your deeds.) From this verse scholars deduced the rule that reads: "Whoever engages himself in a Fard (obligatory, based on a definitive text) act is not allowed to break it". Therefore, if one's Sawm is broken by sexual intercourse they will be sinful but no Kaffarah is due on them, for Kaffarah belongs to having sexual intercourse only during the days of Ramadan.

Q 2: A man who is used to offering a voluntary Sawm has been advised by doctors that Sawm will harm him. Is he forbidden to observe Sawm in such a case?

A 2: It is preferable for patients not to observe Sawm if they find hardship in that. This is the Rukhsah (concession) for patients. However, they are permitted to observe Sawm and in such a case this will suffice for the obligatory Sawm.

Q 3: A fasting man's mouth bled but he did not swallow the blood and did not wash his mouth. Was his Sawm broken by swallowing his impure saliva?

A 3: If anything goes into the fasting person's mouth like blood or any other object, he/she has to spit it out because it is forbidden to swallow the same. If they swallow it intentionally, they will have their Sawm broken. However, if they do so unintentionally, their Sawm will not be broken.

Q: I broke my Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan for a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse. When I was making up for that day, I broke my Sawm again before the Zhuhr (noon) Prayer as I was ignorant about the ruling. What should I do in such a case? And is there any Kaffarah (expiation) due?

A: You have to make up for that day which you failed to complete while observing Sawm. If you delay making it up until the next Ramadan without a Shar`y excuse, you have to, along with making up, feed a needy person an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of your town's staple food.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 275)

to make up for that day, but remembered after about four years? What should he do in such a case?

A: Whoever breaks their Sawm during Ramadan for a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse has to make up for the days missed even if many years have passed. If this delay was not for a Shar`y, the person in question has to feed a needy person for each day missed an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of wheat or rice or any of the town's staple food.

The first Question of Fatwa no. 20023

Q: It is claimed, and only Allah knows the truth, that if a woman is duty-bound to make up for a number of Ramadan missed fasts, it is permissible for her on embarking upon the recommended fast of the six days of Shawwal to say: "O Allah, I intend both obligatory and supererogatory fasts". What is the Shari`ah (Islamic law) ruling on this?

A: Making up for some Ramadan days only discharges the obligation of missed Ramadan fasts and it is thus impermissible to combine another kind of fast with it through one intention. However, it is Mustahab (desirable) and an abundantly deserving reward to fast the supererogatory six days of Shawwal after making up for the missed fasts of Ramadan. Anyway, the above-quoted saying has no basis in Shari`ah.

Q 3: A woman missed the fasts of three months of Ramadan during which she gave birth to children. However, she has not made up for them yet in spite of the passage of 19 or 20 years. Nevertheless, she still remembers her obligation and is willing to discharge it but cannot do so, because she is ill. Bearing in mind that she is unable to fast, what should she do?

A: If this woman's illness is contingently curable, she should wait until she is cured and then make up for the missed Ramadan fasts. If she delayed making up fasting until a subsequent Ramadan came, without a valid excuse, she should, in addition to making up for the missed days, feed a poor person for each day she missed some 1.5 kg of wheat, rice or the like. However, if the delay was for an excuse such as illness, travel or the like, she will be duty-bound only to make up the fasts. If the woman is incurably ill, making up for missed fasts will be waived and she will be liable to feeding a poor person for each day she missed in the manner explained above.

Q 2: A woman made up for previous missed Ramadan fasts. However, instead of paying the Kaffarah (expiation) individually per each day, she paid its total amount at once after finishing making up for all missed days. Is it permissible to do so?

A: There is nothing wrong with calculating the total amount of food due from days when making up was delayed without excuse, and giving it to the poor all at once.

Q: When I first began menstruating, I did not observe Sawm (Fast) during Ramadan because I was so young. However, I made up for the missed Ramadan fasts intermittently in order not to be noticed by anyone. Is it permissible for me to re-observe Sawm consecutively? Am I liable for Kaffarah (expiation)? If yes, what is the amount to be paid as Kaffarah? As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!) May Allah preserve you!

A: It is sufficient for you to make up for the days of fasting you missed when you was young, even if inter mittently. However, you are liable for Kaffarah if you delayed making them up till a subsequent Ramadan. In this case you should feed a poor person for each day you delayed making up an amount of half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of a basic foodstuff.

Q: My mother is around 60 years old. She got married when she was 17 years old. She broke her fast during the first four years after fasting had become obligatory for her, mainly when she was 16, 17, 18 and 19 years old. She is sure that she broke her fast for two days when she was 16 years old but is unsure whether she fasted the rest of the month. However, she is certain that she broke her fast on some days of the month. When she was 17 years old, she broke her fast for the entire month of Ramadan; when she was 18 years old, she broke her fast for 24 days and only fasted the first six days of the month because she was breast-feeding. When she was 19 years old, she broke her fast for an entire month.

My question is: What must she do now? Please note that she started to make up the missed Ramadan fasts when she was 19 years old only 17 days ago. If there is a Sadaqah (voluntary charity) that she can pay, is it permissible that she pay it to her orphaned children? May Allah reward you with the best.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 281)

A: If your mother is able to, she must make up for the number of days on which she broke her fast during the months of Ramadan and feed a Miskin (poor person) half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food of the country such as rice, dates, or wheat for each missed day of fasting if she has the means. If she delayed making up the missed days due to a valid excuse, she has not to feed the poor, but only make up her missed days of fasting.

Q: My mother is around 65 years old. Since she started her menses until she reached menopause, she did not know the ruling on making up for missed days of fasting for the days on which she had the period and so on until she reached menopause. She has not made up her missed days of fasting. The average duration of her period was four days. After she learnt that she must make up for her missed days of fasting approximately two years ago, she started to fast three days every month. Therefore, we ask Allah (Exalted be He) first and then Your Eminence to give us a detailed answer to this question.

A: Your mother must make up for her missed days of fasting in Ramadan starting from the time she reached puberty. In addition, she must also feed a Miskin (a needy person) for each day she missed which she delayed from one Ramadan to another if she is able to do this. If by fasting three days each month, her intention is to make up for the missed days of fasting, then these days are counted from among her missed days based on the Hadith of the Prophet (peace be upon him): \(The reward of deeds depends upon the intentions and every person will get the reward according to what he has intended.\)

Q 1: Someone did not fast a day in Ramadan and then made it up on 20th of Shawwal. However, this day coincided with a Friday. Many people said that it is impermissible to devote Friday to fasting. Do I have to repeat this fast?

A 1: It is established in the Prophetic Sunnah (acts, sayings, or approvals of the Prophet) that it is prohibited to single out Friday for a voluntary fast unless one fasts a day before or after it or if it coincides with a day that someone usually fasts. This is based on the Hadith narrated by Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said: The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: «Do not single out the night (preceding) Friday among the nights for prayer and do not single out Friday among the other days for fasting except if it coincides with a day on which you habitually fast.» (Reported by Muslim and Al-Nasa'y).

The Prophet (peace be upon him) said in an authenticated Hadith: «None of you should fast on Friday unless he fasts a day before it or a day after it.» However, if fasting on this day is not because it is a Friday but with the intention of making up a missed day of fasting or because it coincides with the Day of `Arafah (9th of Dhul-Hijjah), then there is nothing wrong with this In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills).

The third question of fatwa no. (18252)

Q 3: What is the ruling on a woman that broke her fast in Ramadan for a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse but could not make it up before the following Ramadan? She broke her fast the next Ramadan due to severe illness and recovered afterward. Then she started to make up the missed days of fasting of the first Ramadan, bought bread, and distributed it among her neighbors. Does this suffice the missed days of fasting?

A 3: If her delay in making up the fast days until the next Ramadan was due to a valid excuse, then she must only make up the missed days and does not have to give out food. But if the delay was due to an invalid excuse (not Islamically lawful), she has to make up the missed days of fasting and give out food for each day: half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food of the country, which is the equivalent of 1.5 kg. She should also make Tawbah (repentance to Allah, Glorified be He).

Q 1: An old woman broke her fast during the daytime in Ramadan four years prior to her death due to an illness. She had intended to make up the missed days of fasting for this period by giving woolen rugs worth 3000 dirhams to the Masjid (mosque). She has also given out in charity some 4000 dirhams but we do not know her intention toward the Masjid concerning that sum. She passed away in 1993 (may Allah have mercy on her). Is this sum sufficient to compensate for the missed days of fasting or must we, i.e. her relatives, do this on her behalf? We need a detailed answer.

A 1: If this woman broke her fast due to an illness that continued until she passed away or recovered but could not make up the missed days of fasting due to a Shar`y excuse (Islamically lawful), then there is nothing due upon her or upon her heirs, whether making up the missed days of fasting or giving out food. This is because fasting was not obligatory upon her. Therefore, she is absolved of any fasts or compensation.

However, if she recovered from her illness and was able to make up the missed days of fasting but was negligent in this regard until she passed away without making them up, then her relatives are to make up the number of unperformed fasting days on her behalf. This is based on an authenticated report narrated by `Aishah (may Allah be pleased her) who said that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(If anyone dies in a state \(that he had to complete\) some missed days of fasting, his heir must fast on his behalf.\) The term "heir" in the Hadith means a relative. If none of her relatives makes up her missed fast days on her behalf, then they are to feed a Miskin (needy person) half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food of the country for each missed day of fasting. This is to be paid from her estate.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 286)

The fact that this woman gave money in Sadaqah (voluntary charity) during her lifetime, or her intention to compensate her missed days of fasting by giving woolen rugs to the Masjid, neither fulfills her obligation to make up the missed days of fasting nor equals the Kaffarah (expiation) of feeding the poor, which becomes obligatory in this case if none of her heirs volunteers to make them up on her behalf.

I broke the fast for the rest of that month but I cannot remember how many days I made up because I did not make them up consecutively. I am almost certain that I did make them all up. What is the ruling in this case? Please give me a detailed answer. May Allah grant you success.

A 2: If a woman is not certain how many obligatory unperformed days of fasting she made up, must resolve this problem by trying to find out how many missed days of fasting remain unperformed and then make them up. If she delayed making up for the missed days of fasting until the following Ramadan without having a valid excuse, she is to make them up as well as give out food to a Miskin (a needy person) for each delayed unperformed missed day of fasting the equivalent of half a Sa' (1 Sa' = 2.172 kg) of the staple food of the country, such as dates, wheat, or rice. This is equivalent to approximately 1.5 kg.

Q: I was in the army that participated in the Palestine War in 1368 A.H. I spent a long time in Palestine including the blessed month of Ramadan. Currently, I do not remember whether I fasted, made up the days or broke the fast during that month. After a long time, I met one of the people who had been with me in Palestine during the war and he told me that we did not fast that month and I found out that he made up the missed days of fasting of that month. As I previously mentioned, I do not remember whether I fasted that month or made up for the missed days of fasting of the month.

My question is: What am I to do concerning the fast of this month and how can I make up for the missed days? I am now a diabetic, old man and fast the unperformed days of fasting. I repeat that I do not know whether I made up for these missed days of fasting. I ask Your Eminence to tell me the ruling on this and what I must do.

A: It is a duty upon you to make up for Sawm (fast) since you are not certain that you fasted. The principle is that you must still make up for the unperformed days of fasting, especially since your colleague informed you that neither of you fasted that month of Ramadan. In addition to making up the missed days of fasting, you must feed a Miskin (a needy person) for each delayed missed day of fasting the equivalent of 1.5 kg of the staple food. If you are unable to make up the missed days of fasting due to a chronic illness, then you have to feed a poor person for each missed day of fasting the amount of food we mentioned above.

Q 1: It was the ninth month, which coincided with the month of Ramadan and I was ill and therefore could not fast, so I only fasted twelve days from the entire month. My father gave Sadaqah (voluntary charity) for the days I did not fast. My question is: Was it permissible for my father to give Sadaqah for the days I did not fast or must I make up for these days?

A 1: You must make up for the days of Ramadan on which you did not fast due to your illness. The Sadaqah your father gave does not suffice for making up for these days.

Q 2: I am a woman. I intended to make up for the missed days of fasting in Ramadan. When I started to make up the missed days I did not wake up until after Fajr (dawn) Prayer. I ate my Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast) and refrained from eating. I did not notice this until I had abstained from eating and made the intention to fast; I had made the intention to make up for the days of Ramadan before I went to sleep. May Allah reward you well.

A 2: If you ate your Suhur after dawn and did not notice until after you had stopped eating, then you must make up for this day.

Q: Is it obligatory on me to make up for the missed days of fasting in Ramadan, especially as I did not know that it is obligatory to make them up? This occurred at a time when I was helping my family out with many chores outside the house. For this reason, my father used to tell me not to fast because I was young. Now I suspect that there are some days of fasting which I did not perform. Must I make them up consecutively? Must I give food to the poor in compensation? How do I do this and from what kind of food?

A: Whoever is alive during Ramadan and is eligible to fast must perform the fast except if he has a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse, such as traveling or illness during which it is difficult to fast. If the case is as you mentioned that you were eligible to fast, then it is obligatory for you to make up for the days you did not fast and make Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah). It is not necessary to make up the missed fast days consecutively but it is better than making them up separately. You are to make Kaffarah (expiation) for each missed day of fasting that you have delayed until the following Ramadan by feeding a Miskin (a needy person) half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of rice, wheat, or the like of the staple food of the country.

Q: My wife broke her fast on two consecutive months of Ramadan due to a gynecological illness and childbirth. Moreover, she vowed to fast for a month if one of her children, who was suffering from meningitis, recovered. However, she has not been able to fulfill her vow, because she is ill and busy raising seven children. For this reason, I hope Your Eminence will tell me whether she must feed the poor instead of fasting due to her poor health and raising up her children?

A: Raising children is not an excuse for failing to make up for the missed fays of fasting in Ramadan and feeding the poor instead. She is to delay making up her missed fast days until she can perform them. This is based on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse): \(but if any of you is ill or on a journey, the same number \(should be made up\) from other days.\) If her illness is chronic and there is no hope of recovering from it then it is a valid excuse for not making up the missed days of fasting and feeding the poor instead. Allah (Exalted be He): \(And as for those who can fast with difficulty, \(e.g. an old man\), they have \(a choice either to fast or\) to feed a Miskîn \(poor person\) \(for every day\).\), i.e. those who cannot make up for the missed days of fasting due to old age or an illness where there is no possibility of recovery. She has to fulfill her vow to fast a month, based on the words of the Prophet (peace be upon him) who said: \(Whoever makes a vow to obey Allah should obey Him.\) If she is unable to start fasting in fulfillment of her vow, then she is to delay fulfilling it until except for a Mutamatti` (pilgrim performing `Umrah during the months of Hajj, followed by Hajj in the same year with a break in between) or Qarin (pilgrim combining Hajj and `Umrah without a break in between) who cannot slaughter a Hady (sacrificial animal offered by pilgrims). This is because it was authentically reported from `Aishah and Ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) that they said: It is not permissible to observe Sawm on the Days of Tashriq except for one who cannot find a Hady. (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [Authentic Book of Hadith]) In addition, it is forbidden to single out Fridays for observing Sawm because it was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) has prohibited this except if one fasts a day before or after it.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18489

Q 2: It is known that women must make up for their missed days of Sawm (Fast). It is also known that performing the Faridah (obligatory act) first is better than performing a voluntary act of worship. Is it permissible for a woman to observe voluntary Sawm, such as the six days from Shawwal and the Day of `Arafah (9th of Dhul-Hijjah), then make up for the missed days of Ramadan afterwards? `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) used to observe all voluntary Sawm and only make up for her missed days of Ramadan in Sha`ban. Is this correct? What is the ruling on the voluntary Sawm I observed on six days from Shawwal and the Day of `Arafah? I still have not made up for the days I missed during Ramadan.

A: To be on the safe side, it is preferable for a woman to start making up for her missed days of Sawm before observing any voluntary Sawm. This is because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who observes Sawm in Ramadan and then follows it with \(fasting on\) six days of Shawwal, it would be as if they have observed Sawm perpetually.\) A person who has missed days of Sawm cannot be said to have fasted the month of Ramadan until they make up for those missed days. Since observing compensatory Sawm is an obligation one must fulfill, it takes precedence over observing any other voluntary Sawm.

The first question of Fatwa no. 13935

Q 1: If the month of Shawwal starts and a woman has five missed days of Sawm (Fast) and she wants to fast the six days from Shawwal, what is the better course of action: to make up for her missed days of Sawm and if there are enough days left to fast the six days of Shawwal, or to fast the six days of Shawwal and afterwards make up for her missed days of Sawm over the course of the other months? Is it true that `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) used to delay making up for her missed days of Sawm in Ramadan until the next Sha`ban? Is it permissible to delay observing compensatory Sawm for this long period when a person does not know how long they will live?

A: It is permissible for a person to start observing compensatory Sawm even if they miss fasting the six days from Shawwal.

The third question of Fatwa no. 19307

Q 3: Is it permissible for a woman to observe voluntary Sawm (Fast) without her husband's permission?

A: It is not permissible for a woman to observe voluntary Sawm except with her husband's permission. This is based on the following Hadith narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: \(No woman should observe Sawm while her husband is present except with his permission.\) (Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [Authentic Book of Hadith], refer to Fath-ul-Bary (9/293)) Also, Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) narrated that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(A woman is not to observe Sawm on a day while her husband is present without his permission except in Ramadan.\) (Related by Abu Dawud in his Sunan [Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes], refer to `Awn-ul-Ma`bud, (vol. 7, p. 128), and Ibn Majah in his Sunan, vol. 1, p. 56) Based on this, it is not permissible for a woman to observe voluntary Sawm except with her husband's permission, since observing voluntary Sawm is a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet) while fulfilling the husband's rights is Wajib (obligatory) and because Sawm prevents a woman from fulfilling some of her obligatory duties towards her husband.

Q 1: What is the ruling on someone who observed Sawm (Fast) on the Two `Eids?

A: It is not permissible to observe Sawm on the Two `Eids and anyone who does so is blameworthy and it is obligatory for them to make Tawbah (repentance to Allah) from this sin. This is because Allah (Exalted be He) has made these days for eating and drinking and for observing Dhikr (Remembrance of Allah). Therefore, whoever observes Sawm on these days disobeys Allah (Exalted be He) and His Messenger (peace be upon him).

Q 2: What is the ruling on someone who intentionally violated the sanctity of Ramadan?

A: If you mean that he broke his Sawm (Fast) on one or more days during Ramadan without a valid excuse and without engaging in sexual intercourse, then he has committed a major sin and it is obligatory for him to make sincere Tawbah (repentance to Allah) and make up for the day on which he has broken his Sawm. However, if he broke his Sawm by engaging in sexual intercourse, it is obligatory for him to do what was mentioned above in addition to offering Kaffarah (expiation), which is to emancipate a believing slave. If this is not possible, he is to observe Sawm for two months consecutively. If he cannot do this, he must feed sixty Miskin (needy persons) each with half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 3 kg. approx.) of the staple food of the country.

If you mean that he violated the sanctity of Ramadan by an act other than breaking his Sawm, such as by Ghibah (backbiting) or Namimah (tale-bearing), then he is to make Tawbah and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness from Allah) and his Sawm will be valid.

Q: We hope that Your Eminence will tell us the ruling on observing voluntary Sawm (Fast) on behalf of a deceased parent or relative.

A: Voluntary Sawm is not to be observed on behalf of a dead person, rather one can make Du`a' (supplication), give Sadaqah (voluntary charity), offer Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims), or perform Hajj or `Umrah on their behalf. These matters are mentioned in Allah's Purified Shar` (Law) and they benefit the deceased if Allah (Exalted be He) accepts them. There is no evidence on observing voluntary Sawm or anything else - except what was mentioned above - on behalf of the dead. Therefore, it is not permissible to observe it.

Fatwa no. 19101

Q: It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to some young men: \(And anyone who cannot afford it \(i.e. marriage\) should observe Sawm \(Fast\).\) Does "Sawm" in the Hadith mean observing Sawm, like that of Ramadan, throughout the year or just abstaining from prohibited acts and not from food and drink? Are there any authentic reports from the Prophet (peace be upon him) about observing Sawm in Rajab, Sha`ban, the first ten days of Dhul-Hijjah, and the first of Muharram? May Allah benefit you!

A: First: "Sawm" in the above Hadith refers to the prescribed Sawm, which is abstention from all that breaks Sawm from the break of dawn until sunset.

Second: It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to observe Sawm in Sha`ban. `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) said: \(The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) never observed Sawm in any month more than in Sha`ban. He used to fast the entire month.\) Another wording of the Hadith reads: \(He never observed Sawm in any month more than he observed Sawm in Sha`ban. He used to fast the entire month except for a few days; rather, he used to fast all of Sha`ban.\) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

Third: There is no Hadith Sahih (a Hadith that has been transmitted by people known for their uprightness and exactitude; free from eccentricity and blemish), as far as we know, proving that the Prophet (peace be upon him) observed Sawm on the first ten days of Dhul-Hijjah. However it is desirable to observe Sawm on these days since they are included in the general meaning of the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(There are no days during which the righteous action is so pleasing to Allah than these ten days \(i.e., the first ten days of Dhul-Hijjah\).\) (Related by Al-Bukhari and Ahl-ul-Sunan [authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes]) The merit of observing Sawm on the Day of `Arafah (9th of Dhul-Hijjah) was established by the following Hadith narrated on the authority of Abu Qatadah (may Allah be pleased with him) who said that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Observing Sawm on the Day of `Arafah is an expiation for two years, a past year and a next one. And observing Sawm on the Day of `Ashura' \(10th of Muharram\) is an expiation for a past year.\) (Related by the Six Hadith Compilers except Al-Bukhari and Al-Tirmidhy [i.e. Muslim, Abu Dawud, Al-Nasa'y, and Ibn Majah])

(Part No. 9; Page No. 299)

Fourth: As for observing Sawm in Muharram, the Prophet (peace be upon him) was asked: \(Which Sawm is best after Ramadan? He said: Allah's month of Muharram.\) (Related by the Six Hadith Compilers except Al-Bukhari)

Since `Ashura' is one of the days of Muharram, its virtue was mentioned above in the Hadith narrated on the authority of Abu Qatadah.

Fifth: There is no Hadith Sahih that recommends observing Sawm in Rajab. Accordingly, it is not permissible to single out this month for Sawm.

Q 8: If one is observing voluntary Sawm (Fast) and finds it difficult to continue until sunset, is it preferable to continue despite difficulty or to break the Sawm?

(Part No. 9; Page No. 300)

Fatwa no. 16785

Q: What are the days, apart from Ramadan, on which it is Mustahab (desirable) to observe Sawm (Fast)? What are the days on which it is not Mustahab to observe Sawm? Does it suffice a person to fast the month of Ramadan only? Is observing Sawm in Ramadan a Faridah (obligatory act) or a Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet)? Please clarify this with evidence from the Qur'an and Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet).

A: Observing Sawm in Ramadan is one of the five pillars of Islam. The textual proof of its obligation is the Qur'an, Sunnah, and Ijma' (consensus of scholars).

In the Qur'an, Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿O you who believe! Observing As-Saum (the fasting) is prescribed for you as it was prescribed for those before you, that you may become Al-Muttaqun (the pious - see V.2:2)...﴾ And: ﴿The month of Ramadan in which was revealed the Qur'ân, a guidance for mankind and clear proofs for the guidance and the criterion (between right and wrong). So whoever of you sights (the crescent on the first night of) the month (of Ramadan i.e. is present at his home), he must observe Saum (fasts) that month, and whoever is ill or on a journey, the same number [of days which one did not observe Saum (fasts) must be made up] from other days.﴾

(Part No. 9; Page No. 301)

In the Sunnah, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ﴿Islam is based on five (pillars)...﴾ and he mentioned Sawm of Ramadan as one of them. Also, on the authority of Talhah Ibn `Ubaydullah (who narrated: A Bedouin with unkempt hair came to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and said: "O Messenger of Allah! Tell me what Allah has enjoined on me as regards Sawm." The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "The month of Ramadan." He asked: "Do I have to do more than that?" He (peace be upon him) said: "No, unless you wish to perform voluntary (Sawm).") (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

There is consensus among Muslims that observing Sawm in Ramadan is obligatory and is one of the pillars of Islam. The days on which it is Mustahab to observe Sawm include the six days of Shawwal for those who completed their Sawm of Ramadan; the Day of `Ashura' (10th of Muharram) and one day before or after it; the Day of `Arafah (9th of Dhul-Hijjah) for non-pilgrims; three days each month and it is better to observe them on the White Days (13th, 14th, and 15th of every Hijri month); Mondays and Thursdays; every other day; and during Muharram.

The days on which it is prohibited to observe Sawm include the two `Eids; the Days of Tashriq (the 11th, 12th, 13th of Dhul-Hijjah) except for a Mutamatti' (pilgrim performing `Umrah during the months of Hajj, followed by Hajj in the same year with a break in between) or Qarin (pilgrim combining Hajj and `Umrah without a break in between) if they cannot find a Hady (sacrificial animal offered by pilgrims); and Friday if it is singled out for voluntary Sawm but there is no harm if one fasts a day before or after it.

Fatwa no. 15770

Q: What is the ruling on observing Sawm on the Days of Tashriq (11th, 12th and 13th of Dhul-Hijjah) for pilgrims and non-pilgrims? The thirteenth day of Dhul-Hijjah is the last day of the Days of Tashriq and the first day of the White Days (13th, 14th, and 15th of every Hijri month). Is it permissible for someone who habitually fasts the White Days to fast the Days of Tashriq? I hope Your Eminence would give me a written Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) which I can distribute among those who ask about this matter.

A: It is forbidden by Shari'ah (Islamic law) to observe voluntary Sawm on the Days of Tashriq, whether or not one is a pilgrim. As for non-pilgrims, Muslim related from Nubayshah Al-Hudhaly that he said: The Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(The Days of Tashriq are days for eating, drinking and making remembrance of Allah \(may He be Glorified and Exalted\).\) Also, Abu Dawud related in his Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) from `Amr Ibn Al-`As (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: \(These are the days on which the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) has ordered us to break Sawm and forbade us from observing Sawm.\) Malik said in Al-Muwatta': These are the Days of Tashriq.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 303)

Moreover, Abu Murrâh, the freed slave of Umm Hany, narrated that: \(He went with `Abdullah ibn `Amr to the latter's father `Amr ibn Al-`As. The latter pushed the food nearer to them and said: 'Eat.' His son said: 'I am observing Sawm.' `Amr then said: 'Eat, for these are the days on which the Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) ordered us not to observe Sawm and forbade us from observing Sawm.\) A Mutamatti` (pilgrim performing `Umrah during the months of Hajj, followed by Hajj in the same year with a break in between) and Qarin (pilgrim combining Hajj and `Umrah without a break in between), who cannot find a Hady (sacrificial animal offered by pilgrims) to slaughter, is to observe Sawm on these days due to the Hadith related by Al-Bukhari (may Allah be merciful to him) from Ibn `Umar and `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with them both) who said: \(No one was permitted to observe Sawm on the Days of Tashriq except for one who cannot find \(or afford\) Hady.\)

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 16374

Q 4: What is the ruling on someone who believes that Sawm (Fast) of the six days of Shawwal must be observed starting from the second day of the month, especially for the elderly?

A: One can observe Sawm of the six days of Shawwal throughout the entire month; whether at its beginning, middle, or end and whether consecutively or separately. This is based on the following Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who observes Sawm of Ramadan and then follows it with six days \(of Sawm \) in Shawwal...\) The words of the Prophet (peace be upon him) are general, denoting the permissibility of observing Sawm on any day of the month. The fifth question of Fatwa no. 17705

Q 5: What is the ruling on a woman who observed Sawm (Fast) for the six days of Shawwal when she had not yet made up for her missed days of Sawm during Ramadan?

A: It is a priority to make up for the missed days of Sawm of Ramadan before fasting the six days from Shawwal, because a Faridah (obligatory act) takes precedence over a Nafilah (supererogatory act). Hence, it was preferable for the woman mentioned in the question not to do so, and she must make up for her missed days of Ramadan.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18020

Q 1: We know that there is a great reward for observing Sawm (Fast) on six days during Shawwal. A woman broke her Sawm during Ramadan for six days for a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) reason, and she wants to make up for them during Shawwal. Is it permissible for her to combine the two intentions, that is, the intention of observing compensatory Sawm for the days she missed during Ramadan and the intention of observing the six-day supererogatory Sawm of Shawwal? In other words, is it permissible for her to observe Sawm for only six days during Shawwal with the intention of being compensatory Sawm and at the same time seeking the reward of observing Sawm for the six days of Shawwal? Is it permissible to combine the intention for the two Sawm like Qiran Hajj (combining Hajj and `Umrah without a break in between)?

A: Observing compensatory Sawm for six days during Shawwal is not counted as the six-day supererogatory Sawm of Shawwal. This is because one should not begin observing the six-day supererogatory Sawm of Shawwal unless one has already made up for the days they missed during Ramadan. This is based on the following Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who observes Sawm of Ramadan and then follows it with six days \(of Sawm\) in Shawwal, it would be as if they had fasted permanently.\) Accordingly, it is obligatory for a person who still has some missed days of Sawm from Ramadan to start compensatory Sawm before observing the six-day supererogatory Sawm of Shawwal.

It is permissible to combine the intention for performing `Umrah and Hajj at the same time, since the rites of `Umrah are part of Hajj which is more inclusive than `Umrah. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(The \(rites of\) `Umrah will remain part of Hajj

Fatwa no. 14562

Q: It is known that the Day of `Arafah (9th of Dhul-Hijjah) coincided with a Friday. We observed Sawm (Fast) on that day based on the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Observing Sawm on the Day of `Arafah expiates for the previous year and the coming one.\) (Related by Muslim) The Imam (the one who leads congregational Prayer) of our Masjid (mosque) told us that it is not permissible to observe Sawm on a Friday unless one observes Sawm a day before or after it. Therefore, most of us broke our Sawm, while the others continued their Sawm even though they were confused. Please note that our Sawm was in reverence for the Day of `Arafah, seeking its reward, and not out of preference for Friday. Please give us a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar), may Allah benefit you. Who is right: the Imam of our Masjid and those who broke their Sawm on that day, or those who continued their Sawm? What should we do if the Day of `Arafah or `Ashura' (10th of Muharram) coincides with a Friday?

A: It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) forbade singling out Friday for observing Sawm and he ordered that one is to observe Sawm one day before or after it. However, if the Day of `Arafah or `Ashura' coincides with a Friday, it is permissible to observe Sawm on it due to the significance of the day. Imam Muslim related on the authority of Abu Hurayrah (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Do not single out the night of Friday \(i.e. Thursday night, as in the Hijri calendar the night precedes the day\) for observing Qiyam \(standing for optional Prayer at night\) and do not single out its daytime

(Part No. 9; Page No. 307)

for observing Sawm except if it coincides with a day one normally fasts.\) About the virtue of observing Sawm on these days (i.e., the Day of `Arafah and `Ashura'), it has been mentioned that they expiate for a past year, while observing Sawm on the Day of `Arafah expiates for the coming year as well. Therefore, a person is to observe Sawm during these two days for this reason and this is permissible. It was related in the Sahih (authentic) Book of Hadith of Imam Muslim on the authority of Abu Qatadah that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(I seek a favor from Allah that observing Sawm on the Day of `Arafah will expiate for the year preceding it and the one after it.\) About observing Sawm on the Day of `Ashura', he (peace be upon him) said: \(I seek a favor from Allah that it may expiate for the year preceding it.\)

Fatwa no. 20247

Q: Kindly find an attached book titled "Min Akhta'ina Fi Al-`Ashr" (Some of Our Mistakes on the First Ten Days of Dhul-Hijjah) by Muhammad Al-Ghufayly! We would like you to read it and review the included Fatwa to see whether it is correct? On page no. 13, paragraph no. 5, it states, "Most people's observation of Sawm (Fast) of the whole ten days is a mistake..." Consequently, most of the people of Al-Rass abandoned Sawm of the first ten days of Dhul-Hijjah, because of this book and this Fatwa. For decades, people used to observe Sawm of such days believing this act to be Sunnah (supererogatory act of worship following the example of the Prophet). However, after reading this book, they have been disapproving of those who observe Sawm of these days. I ask Your Eminence to issue a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by qualified Muslim scholar) on this regard and clarify it in local newspapers, so that Al-Haqq (the Truth) will become evident before the public.

A: Sawm of the first nine days of Dhul-Hijjah is not a mistake as is claimed by some people. Rather, according to the Jumhur (majority of scholars) of scholars it is Sunnah. Shaykh `Abdul-Rahman ibn Qasim said in his commentary on Al-Zad book, "Sawm of the first nine days of Dhul-Hijjah is (an act of Sunnah, based on) the opinion of the Jumhur of scholars. In Al-Insaf book, it is stated that there is no difference in this regard." It is included in the general meaning of the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: «There are no days in which good deeds are more beloved to Allah than during these ten days.» (Related by Al-Bukhari, Ahl-ul-Sunan [authors of Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes], and others). Musaddad narrated that Abu `Awanah narrated on the authority of Al-Hurr ibn Al-Sabah who narrated on the authority of Hunaydah ibn Khalid on the authority of his wife on the authority of a wife of the Prophet (peace be upon him) who said: «The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) used to fast the first nine days of Dhul-Hijjah, Day of `Ashura' \(10th of Muharram\) and three days of every month - that is, the first Monday \(of the month\) and Thursday.» (Related by Abu Dawud. It is also stated in Al-Muntaqa that it is related by Ahmad and Al-Nasa'y). Al-Shawkany said in his book Nayl Al-Awtar: "We previously mentioned Hadiths in 'Kitab Al-`Eidayn (Book of the Two `Eids)' indicating the virtue of performing good deeds on the first ten days of Dhul-Hijjah in general. Sawm is included among these deeds. The opinion of those who claim that the term Tis` (nine) (that is mentioned in the Hadith) of Dhul-Hijjah refers to the ninth day of Dhul-Hijjah is an untenable interpretation and an evident mistake due to the difference between the nine and the ninth."

The first question of Fatwa no. 17635

Q 1: What is the story of and truth regarding Day of `Ashura' (10th of Muharram)?

A 1: When the Prophet (peace be upon him) arrived in Madinah after his Hijrah (the Prophet's migration to Madinah), he found the Jews observing Sawm (Fast) of the Day of `Ashura'. When the Prophet (peace be upon him) asked them about such Sawm, they said, "This is a day where Allah saved Musa (Moses, peace be upon him) and his people and drowned Fir`awn (Pharaoh) and his people. Consequently, Musa observed its Sawm giving thanks to Allah. So, we observe Sawm during it." The Prophet (peace be upon him) then said: \("We have more right to Musa \(Moses peace be upon him\) than you," so he fasted on `Ashura' and ordered us to fast on it.\)

Q 2: Should the ninth and tenth or the tenth and eleventh of Muharram or all these three days be fasted upon the occasion of `Ashura' (10th of Muharram)?

A 2: Sawm (Fast) of Day of `Ashura' is a stressed Sunnah. It is best to observe Sawm on the previous or the following day after it according to the guidance of the Prophet (peace be upon him) in order not to coincide with the practice of the Jews. If Sawm is observed on the three days, this would be more perfect, according to Ibn Al-Qayyim's Zad Al-Ma`ad.

Q: It is narrated in a Hadith that (When the Prophet (peace be upon him) came to Madinah, he found the Jews observing Sawm (Fast) on 'Ashura' (10th of Muharram). So, he observed Sawm during it and ordered that Sawm should be observed in it.) How can this be reconciled with his order to act differently from the way of People of the Book in many matters?

A: Upon arriving in Madinah, the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to act like the People of the Book in matters where there was no revelation. Then, Allah legislated for him to act differently from the way of the People of the Book. Consequently, the Prophet ordered the Ummah (community based on one creed) to do so. One of these practices was the Sawm of the Day of 'Ashura'. It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: (If I live till next year I will fast the ninth,) i.e. along with the tenth day. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: (Be different from the Jews; fast a day before or after it.)

Q: Is it permissible to observe Sawm (Fast) of the White Days (13th, 14th, and 15th of every Hijri month) on days other than their fixed days during the same month?

A: The voluntary Sawm of three days in every month is one of the best acts of `Ibadah (worship). The Prophet (peace be upon him) advised Abu Hurayrah and Abu Dhar (may Allah be pleased with them) to do so. He said to Abu Dhar: ﴿If you want to observe Sawm on three days in the \(Hijri\) month then let it be on the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth.﴾ (Related by an-Nasa'i and at-Tirmidhi) At-Tirmidhi ranked the Hadith as Hasan (a Hadith whose chain of narration contains a narrator with weak exactitude, but is free from eccentricity or blemish). These are the white days. However, if the person observes Sawm on three days at the beginning, end, or middle of the month, it is valid to do so.

observe Sawm (Fast) on Monday and Thursday and the White Days (13th, 14th, and 15th of every Hijri month). Rather, one should observe Sawm of either one of them. Is this correct? If so, why?

A 2: What you heard regarding the invalidity of combining the Sawm of Monday and Thursday and the White Days is incorrect. It is Mustahab (desirable) to observe Sawm of these days because there are proofs urging the observation of their Sawm.

The first question of Fatwa no. 14241

Q 1: I like to observe Sawm (Fast) on Mondays and Thursdays because our deeds are presented to Allah (Glorified be He) on these two days. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: ﴿These \(Monday and Thursday\) are two days on which people's deeds are presented to the Lord of the Worlds, and I want my deeds to be presented when I am observing Sawm.﴾ Is it permissible to observe Sawm of Monday and Thursday of every month? In summer, it is too hot for me to observe Sawm of these two days every week. Should I observe Sawm on them every week in winter? Please advise; may Allah reward you with the best.

A 1: When the Prophet (peace be upon him) performed any deed, he would do so consistently. However, if there is hardship in observing Sawm on these days, it is permissible for you not to observe their Sawm during summer and to observe their Sawm in winter because observing Sawm on Monday and Thursday is Nafilah (supererogatory) and not Wajib (obligatory). Whoever observes Sawm during this time will be rewarded. However, there is no sin upon the one who does not.

The first question of Fatwa no. 17600

Q 1: I am a young man and I used to observe Sawm (Fast) similar to the Sawm of Dawud (David, peace be upon him). However, someone told me that if the day to observe Sawm falls on a Saturday or Friday, it should not be observed without a day before or after. He said that this is the opinion of Shaykh Al-Albani (may Allah have mercy on him). I have continued observing Sawm although I am still confused. Please advise me on the ruling of observing Sawm on Saturday or Friday without observing the Sawm of a day before or after or if it happens to coincide with the Day of `Arafah (9th of Dhul-Hijjah) or the Day of `Ashura' (10th of Muharram)?

A 1: It is permissible for one who observes the Sawm of Dawud (peace be upon him) to observe Sawm on Friday or Saturday alone without a day before or after. This ruling also applies to the Day of `Arafah and `Ashura'. It should be known that the Hadith which states that Sawm on Saturday is forbidden except in case of obligatory Sawm is not Sahih (authentic).

Q: I was circumcised twenty-three years ago. There was a belief when I ignored Shari`ah (Islamic law) rulings that a man should not observe Sawm (Fast) until he is circumcised and that a girl should not observe Sawm until she have menses. During that period, Ramadan came once when I was more than fifteen years. However, I had been circumcised and was still recovering from the surgery so I could not observe Sawm the entire Ramadan. I should mention that I did not observe Sawm of Ramadan before that time. Your Eminence Shaykh, have I to make up for the previous missed days of Sawm or feed the poor? It should be known that I was ignorant of Shari`ah rulings

A: If the case is as you mentioned that you had reached the age of fifteen and had not observed Sawm because of the prevalent ignorance of Shari`ah rulings thinking that a man should not observe Sawm until he is circumcised and that after your circumcision you were recovering from surgery and did not complete the Sawm of Ramadan, it is Wajib (obligatory) on you to make up for the missed days in Ramadan after reached puberty. If you do not know the exact number of these days, you should base their number on the most likely estimation. Ignorance is not an excuse for the one who lives in an Islamic country. Since you delayed the making up for breaking Sawm of these days until you the following Ramadan, you should make up for them in addition to feeding a Miskin (needy) for each

Laylat-ul-Qadr

The first question of Fatwa no. 18376

Q 1: Can Laylat-ul-Qadr (the Night of Decree) be seen in a dream or while one is awake? Is it special or general? What are its signs? I heard that following Laylat-ul-Qadr, the sun on the next day will be red and the sky will be cloudy. If this occurs, this means that its blessings embraced both worshippers and Kafirs (disbelievers).

A 1: It is stated in the Sahih (authentic) Hadiths of the Prophet (peace be upon him) that the sun on the next morning of Laylat-ul-Qadr will have no rays. It is also stated that Laylat-ul-Qadr was shown to the Prophet (peace be upon him) in a vision and then was caused to forget (by Allah).

Scholars differed on specifying its exact night. According to the correct opinion maintained by scholars, its timing remains unknown. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) made it unknown for worshippers to do their best in performing acts of `Ibadah (worship) hoping they will coincide with it. It should be sought in the last ten days of Ramadan, most likely during the odd nights. The Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: Seek it in the last ten nights of Ramadan; seek it in the last nine, seven, five, three or last night.

With regard to a Muslim's seeing it, it may be shown to a Muslim in a dream. It is narrated in the Sahih that `Abdullah ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with them both) said that some of the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) were shown in their dreams that Laylat-ul-Qadr was in the last seven nights of Ramadan. Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) stated: It seems that all your dreams agree that \(Laylat-ul-Qadr\) is in the last seven nights.

(Part No. 9; Page No. 317)

Whoever wants to seek it \(Laylat-ul-Qadr\) should do so in the last seven \(nights of Ramadan\).

However, if it is shown to the Muslim in a dream, they should not act according to such a dream because it may be from the devil. Legislation and rulings of Shari`ah (Islamic law) are not based on dreams or Ru'yas (true dreams). The Prophet (peace be upon him) held that opinion about the Ru'ya of the Sahabah because they had the same dream.

I`tikaf

Fatwa no. 16526

Q: We often hear people say that it is impermissible to observe I`tikaf (seclusion for worship in a Masjid) in any Masjid (mosque) other than the three Masjids: Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah), Al-Masjid Al-Nabawy (the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah), and Al-Masjid Al-Aqsa (the Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem). They support their opinion with the Hadith in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) stated: "No I`tikaf (should be observed) except in the three Masjids." They say that the Hadith is specific whereas the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) is general and that the specific should have precedence over the general. However, I heard that our honored Shaykh `Abdul-`Aziz ibn Baz had a different opinion. I would like you to inform me of his evidence hoping that Allah will open our hearts to accept the truth. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: I`tikaf is not limited to the three Masjids. Rather, the Jumhur (dominant majority of scholars) is of the opinion that it is Mashru` (Islamically permissible) to observe I`tikaf at any Masjid, preferably Al-Masjid Al-Jami` (the large mosque where Jumu`ah [Friday] Prayers are held). Muslims have been observing I`tikaf at every Masjid without specifying because Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: (And do not have sexual relations with them (your wives) while you are in I'tikâf (i.e. confining oneself in a mosque for prayers and invocations leaving the worldly activities) in the mosques.) With regard to the Hadith narrated by Hudhayfah (may Allah be pleased with him): "No I`tikaf (should be observed) except in the three Masjids" it is not Sahih (authentic).

Q: If the one observing I`tikaf (seclusion for worship in a Masjid) leaves the Masjid (mosque) for a certain reason, such as going home to wake his family up for Suhur (pre-dawn meal before the Fast) because there is no one at home to do so, does this violate the conditions of I`tikaf ?

A: Whoever enters I`tikaf should not go out unless there is a need to conduct his necessary requirements such as fetching food and drink if there is no one to do so; or to relieve oneself if there is no toilet annexed to the Masjid. He may leave the Masjid during the time of Suhur to wake up his family to prepare Suhur meal and to be ready for Fajr (Dawn) Prayer if they cannot wake up on their own or if there is no one else to do so because this act is one of the aspects of cooperation in doing good deeds and enjoining Ma`ruf (that which is judged as good, beneficial, or fitting by Islamic law and Muslims of sound intellect). Whatever is needed to perform a Wajib (obligatory) matter becomes itself a Wajib. However, such a person should not sit at home after waking his family up. He should return to his place of I`tikaf at the Masjid.

Q: We work at a shop that sells clothes. On the last ten days of Ramadan

we cannot observe I`tikaf (seclusion for worship in a Masjid) during the day because of work conditions. Is it valid to observe I`tikaf only at night and work during the day at the shop?

A: It is permissible to observe I`tikaf even for an hour at a Masjid (mosque) where congregational Salah (Prayer) is offered. It is valid to observe I`tikaf without observing Sawm (Fast) during the time of I`tikaf according to the most correct opinion maintained by scholars. `Abdullah ibn `Umar (may Allah be pleased with both of them) narrated on the authority of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab that the latter said, "O Allah's Messenger, I vowed in Jahiliyyah (pre-Islamic era of ignorance) to observe I`tikaf for a night at Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah)." Consequently, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said to him: 'Fulfill your vow.' Therefore, he performed I`tikaf for one night. (Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. This is the wording of Al-Bukhari vol. 2, p. 260 in Arabic version) Had Sawm been a condition for the validity of I`tikaf, the Prophet (peace be upon him) would not have approved the I`tikaf of just one night without its day. Hence, it is permissible for you to have the intention of observing I`tikaf only at a night without observing it on the day because of the reason you mentioned. Q 14: Is the reward for good deeds multiplied in Al-Masha`ir (Sacred sites where the rites of Hajj are performed: Mina, `Arafah and Muzdalifah). Does the same apply to misdeeds?

A: The reward for good deeds is multiplied in the Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) due to the honor of this place. Offering Salah (Prayer) at Al-Masjid Al-Haram equals one hundred thousand Salahs at any other Masjid (mosque). According to the most correct opinion maintained by scholars, this applies to the whole area of the Haram (all areas within the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah) and, therefore, the misdeeds committed inside the Haram, are considered severe misdeeds. Allah (Exalted be He) says: \(and whoever inclines to evil actions therein or to do wrong \(i.e. practise polytheism and leave Islâmic Monotheism\), him We shall cause to taste from a painful torment.\) However, these misdeeds are not multiplied. Fatwa no 19468

Q: I am sometimes deputized to deport prisoners from Bishah to Jeddah and then to their original countries.

(Part No. 10; Page No. 7)

Some deported workers may be Christians or Hindus. When we approach Makkah, two roads lie ahead of us: one is designated for Muslims and the other for non-Muslims. Because the non-Muslim road is very long and tiring, we take the Muslim road and, therefore, we pass by the sacred Masha`ir (Sacred sites where the rites of Hajj are performed: Mina, `Arafah and Muzdalifah). We do not stop at these places but we just use them as a shortcut. Is this permissible?

When I asked some of my colleagues, they said that they have asked one of the judges at Bishah governorate who said it was lawful to do that. Please give us your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar). May Allah reward you.

A: As long as there are Christians, Hindus, and other non-Muslims among the deported workers, then you must take the road designated for non-Muslims, even though it is more tiring. It is unlawful to deport them via the Muslim road since this will lead them to enter the precincts of the Haram (all areas within the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah), which is prohibited. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿O you who believe (in Allāh's Oneness and in His Messenger Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم)! Verily, the Mushrikûn (polytheists, pagans, idolaters, disbelievers in the Oneness of Allāh, and in the Message of Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم) are Najasun (impure). So let them not come near Al-Masjid al-Harâm (at Makkah) after this year.﴾

Q 3: I am thirty-three years old and I would like to accompany my aged father to perform Hajj. He does not know how to read or write. I am also ignorant of many rulings related to Hajj. What do you advise me to do?

A: We advise you to choose a company of righteous people to travel with, who can assist you in doing good and warn you against doing evil. We also advise you to have Taqwa (fear/wary of offending Allah) while performing Hajj and in all your affairs. You should avoid lying, bad language, sins and ill manners. Q: I am a woman and I failed to make up for some days of the fast of Ramadan that I missed last year. I intend to make Hajj this year 1413 A.H., which is my first time to make Hajj. Should I first make up for the days of fasting that I missed for a Shar`y (Islamically lawful) excuse, or should I set out for Hajj and then after returning make up for the days of fasting that I missed?

A: Making up for days missed of Ramadan does not prevent the Mukallaf (person meeting the conditions to be held legally accountable for their actions) from performing the obligation of Hajj. This is because the compensatory Sawm (Fast) is an obligation that can be fulfilled at any time of the year until the start of the next Ramadan.

Q: I intend to perform Hajj this year, In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). My question is: Do I have to perform `Umrah before I can perform Hajj, given the fact that I have not performed `Umrah this year?

A: You are permitted to enter Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) to perform any of the three types of Hajj: Tamattu`, Qiran or Ifrad Hajj.

Tamattu` Hajj: In this type of Hajj, which is the best type, a pilgrim performs `Umrah during the months of Hajj followed by Hajj in the same year with a break in between. It is required in this type of Hajj to offer a Fidyah (ransom, i.e., sacrificial animal) for Tamattu`, if the pilgrim is a non-resident of Al-Masjid Al-Haram.

Qiran Hajj: In this type of Hajj, a pilgrim combines between Hajj and `Umrah without a break in between. The pilgrim must remain in the state of Ihram until the rituals of throwing the pebbles at the Jamarat (stone pillars marking the pebble-throwing areas) and shaving or shortening the hair on the day of `Eid are completed. Having fulfilled this, all the acts prohibited during Ihram become permissible for the pilgrim except having intercourse with one's spouse. After that, the pilgrim has to perform Tawaf (circumambulation of the Ka`bah) and Sa`y (going between Safa and Marwah during Hajj and `Umrah) for both Hajj and `Umrah. Major Tahallul (final removal of the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) can then be performed.

(Part No. 10; Page No. 10)

This type also requires the pilgrim to offer a Fidyah like a Mutamatti` (pilgrim performing `Umrah during the months of Hajj, followed by Hajj in the same year with a break in between).

Ifrad Hajj: In this type of Hajj, a pilgrim performs Hajj only. The pilgrim must remain in the state of Ihram until they finish all the rituals of Hajj, as clarified earlier. It is not required in this type of Hajj to offer a Fidyah. Also, it is not required to perform `Umrah unless the pilgrim has never performed `Umrah before.

Q: Do I receive a better reward if, during Ramadan, I travel to Makkah Al-Mukarramah (Makkah, the Honored) where I stay for a few days to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage), Salah (Prayer) and other acts of `Ibadah (worship)? Or should I give in charity the expenses of `Umrah? I live in the city of Riyadh. May Allah safeguard and preserve you.

A: If you can combine between the two deeds mentioned in the question, it would be better and greater in reward. This is because you will be doing many good deeds. You will be drawing closer to Allah by doing voluntary acts of `Ibadah. If you fail to combine between the two deeds, you may give the money in charity to the poor. You may do so if you have performed Hajj and `Umrah. This is based on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿But he has not attempted to pass on the path that is steep (i.e. the path which will lead to goodness and success).﴾ ﴿And what will make you know the path that is steep?﴾ ﴿(It is) freeing a neck (slave)﴾ ﴿Or giving food in a day of hunger (famine),﴾ ﴿To an orphan near of kin.﴾ ﴿Or to a Miskîn (poor) cleaving to dust (out of misery).﴾ The poor will benefit from the Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and you will receive a great reward. Sadaqah strengthens bonds of solidarity and cohesion among Muslims. It also helps in fulfilling the needs of the needy and assisting them to observe their religious duties and attain their worldly gains.

Q: A Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) has been recently circulating throughout Jeddah and neighboring villages. The Fatwa states that it is not permissible to perform `Umrah (lesser Pilgrimage) during the months of Hajj as a voluntary act of `Ibadah (worship); and that whoever does this will be required to perform Hajj in the same year. On 8/11/1416 AH, His Eminence Shaykh Muhammad ibn Salih Al-`Uthaymin delivered a lecture in Jeddah. A lot of inquiries regarding this Fatwa were presented to him during the lecture. He answered and said that this Fatwa was invalid. He asked me to send Your Eminence a letter of inquiry about this Fatwa so that you will issue a written reply to it. This is being done in the hope that everyone will benefit from it. What is the opinion of Your Eminence?

A: `Umrah may be performed in any month of the year. Allah has appointed certain months during which Hajj is to be performed. This is indicated by the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: \(The Hajj \(pilgrimage\) is \(in\) the well-known \(lunar year\) months \(i.e. the 10th month, the 11th month and the first ten days of the 12th month of the Islâmic calendar, i.e. two months and ten days\).\) Whoever performs `Umrah during the months of Hajj is not obligated to perform Hajj. This is simply because there is no evidence to put him under this obligation. The Prophet (peace be upon him) is reported to have performed `Umrah during the eighth year of Hijrah (the Prophet's migration to Madinah) following the Battle of Hunayn. He started Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) from Al-Ji`ranah in Shawwal and did not perform Hajj that year.

Fatwa no. 19104

Q: My mother and I went to Saudi Arabia to perform Hajj in 1413 A.H. She was almost sixty five years old. My paternal uncle and my father-in-law accompanied us, and neither of them is relative to the other. The husband of my wife's sister also accompanied us. We stayed in one tent. Neither my mother nor my wife's sister wears Hijab (veil)

(Part No. 10; Page No. 13)

due to their ignorance of the relevant ruling.

The question is: Was my mother's Hajj valid or not?

Appreciate your guidance, may Allah reward you with the best! Was the Hajj of my wife's sister valid or not?

A: A woman should wear Hijab in front of Ajanib (men lawful for the woman to marry), not to stay alone with them, and behaves with proper decorum and modesty, whether she happens to be performing Hajj or anything else. Hajj is not invalidated if the woman displays her face in front of Ajanib out of her belief that a woman in a state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) should not cover her face. However, she will be considered as having committed a prohibited act by displaying her face in front of Ajanib. She will be held sinful for doing so. She must turn to Allah in sincere repentance and offer many voluntary acts of `Ibadah (worship) while humbling herself before Allah, asking for His forgiveness that He may accept her Tawbah (repentance) and pardon her sin.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Fatwa no. 19439

Q: I live with my family which consists of my wife, my daughter and I. I practice Islam to the best of my ability; however, my brothers and sisters are not practicing Muslims. Only a few of them offer Salah (Prayer).

(Part No. 10; Page No. 14)

They also listen to music, seek the help of the dead and slaughter animals for their sake. They commit other acts violative of Shari`ah (Islamic law). I want to move out that house. I receive a monthly salary of 4000 Moroccan Dirhams and I have also saved 30,000 Dirhams. Should I purchase a piece of land or perform Hajj? The price of the land I want is 35,000 Dirhams. Its total area is 60 km2. The price of land increases day after day and I cannot afford to rent a house due to increasing rent prices which exceed 700 Dirhams. The living conditions are also costly. I have never performed Hajj. If your answer obligates me to perform Hajj, do I have to perform Hajj before my father who also has never performed Hajj? May Allah reward you with the best.

A: You are not required to perform Hajj unless you possess the financial means which exceed your needs and those of the family which you support in terms of food, clothing and housing. This is based on the Saying of Allah (Exalted be He): \(And Hajj to the House \(Ka`bah\) is a duty that mankind owes to Allah, for those who are able to undertake the journey.\) The ability to undertake the journey means: sufficient provision and a means of transportation as available in one's time. Your father is not required to perform Hajj if he falls short of possessing the necessary financial means. All praise be to Allah.

Q 12: I have performed Hajj more than five times for myself and on behalf of my father before adopting the creed of the Ahl-ul-Sunnah wal-Jama`ah (those adhering to the Sunnah and the Muslim main body). Is my Hajj acceptable?

A 12: You have to perform Hajj for yourself after Allah (Exalted be He) guided you when it is possible for you.

The second question of Fatwa no. 14945

Q 2: Some say that it is impermissible for a girl to perform Hajj when she grows up if she ever happens to have her hair cut at birth. Is that true, and why?

A: It is an act of Sunnah (commendable act) to cut the hair of the newborn on the seventh day of his or her birth. It is also an act of Sunnah to make `Aqiqah (sacrifice for a newborn) and give Sadaqah (voluntary charity) equal to its hair's weight in gold. It is not a requirement to shave all the hair of the baby. As for the invalidity of the Hajj performed by a woman who had her hair cut at birth, it is a groundless superstition.

Q 4: I am the eldest of my orphaned siblings. My mother wants to perform Hajj but I cannot afford the costs of her Hajj and travel. Am I to blame if I disobey her in this? Appreciate your guidance, may Allah reward you with the best!

A 4: If your mother asked you to help her perform Hajj and you cannot afford the costs of Hajj due to your financial inability, you are not to blame because you cannot fulfill her request. Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) states: \(Allâh burdens not a person beyond his scope.\) and: \(and has not laid upon you in religion any hardship\) Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) also states: \(So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can\) Furthermore, Hajj is not mandatory on her in this case so long as she cannot afford the costs of Hajj herself. You should speak kindly and gently to her and treat her in the best manner. You may promise her to help her perform Hajj in the future whenever it is possible for you.

Q 2: What is the ruling on a person, who wants to perform Hajj but has a brother or a neighbor who is suffering from dangerous disease and cannot afford the necessary treatment and medical care? Should the person in question perform Hajj or help the sick brother?

A 2: If the person has not performed the obligatory Hajj, he should perform the Hajj whenever he has the prerequisites of obligation. But if it is a voluntary Hajj, he should help the ill person who is in dire need of help, as this is better than performing voluntary Hajj.

Second question of Fatwa no. 16112

Q 2: What is the ruling on someone, who wants to enter Makkah to take their luggage and belongings to travel to another country? Note that they have performed `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) recently in Rajab (the seventh month of the Islamic calendar). Should they assume Ihram (ceremonial state for Hajj and `Umrah) and perform `Umrah or not?

A 2: Whoever passes by one of the Miqats (sites for entering the ceremonial state for Hajj and `Umrah) that have been authentically set by the

(Part No. 10; Page No. 18)

Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) while they intend to perform Hajj or `Umrah, should assume Ihram regardless whether they pass on air or land. However, if they do not wish to perform Hajj or `Umrah, then Ihram is not required. If someone passes the Miqats without intention to perform Hajj or `Umrah then intends to perform Hajj and `Umrah from Makkah or Jeddah, they may enter the state of Ihram from the place of their intention in Makkah or Jeddah. As for intending to perform `Umrah by someone who is outside the Haram (all areas within the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah), they should assume Ihram from the place where they intend to make `Umrah. However, if someone intends to perform `Umrah after entering into the Haram, they must go out to the nearest point of Al-Hil (all areas outside the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah) and assume the state of Ihram for `Umrah from it. Leaving an interval between one `Umrah and the next of a period of forty days, a week or the like is not lawfully established. Therefore, a person can repeat `Umrah several times in the year without having an interval between a `Umrah and the next.

Thirteenth question of Fatwa no. 19773

Q 13: Is it obligatory to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) upon entering Makkah in an errand to serve the guests of The Most-Merciful? If `Umrah is obligatory and the intention is determined, should Ihram (ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) be assumed from the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah)?

A 13: Whoever goes to Makkah and has never performed the `Umrah of Islam, should assume Ihram for `Umrah from the Miqat that they pass by on their way and they should perform the rituals of `Umrah. As for a person who has performed `Umrah previously, it is not obligatory on them. However, if they intend to perform `Umrah during their travel, they should assume Ihram for `Umrah from the Miqat and it is impermissible for them to pass it without Ihram. But if they intended to perform `Umrah after they had passed the Miqat, they should assume Ihram from the place where they intended to perform `Umrah, i.e. outside the Haram (all areas within the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah). And if they intend to perform `Umrah while they are inside the Haram, they have to go outside the Al-Hil (all areas outside the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah) and assume the state of Ihram for `Umrah from it.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19672

Q 1: Allah (Blessed and Exalted be He) says: ﴿The Hajj (pilgrimage) is (in) the well-known (lunar year) months (i.e. the 10th month, the 11th month and the first ten days of the 12th month of the Islâmic calendar, i.e. two months and ten days).﴾ It is known that the rituals of Hajj start on the eighth of Dhul-Hijjah and continue for some days. We would like Your Eminence to highlight the meaning of this Ayah (Qur'anic verse) so that we can understand it properly.

A: According to the more correct of the two scholarly opinions: the months prescribed for one who wants to enter Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) to perform Hajj, referred to in the Ayah: ﴿The Hajj (pilgrimage) is (in) the well-known (lunar year) months (i.e. the 10th month, the 11th month and the first ten days of the 12th month of the Islâmic calendar, i.e. two months and ten days).﴾ are Shawwal, Dhul-Qa`dah, and the first ten days of Dhul-Hijjah.

This is the view of Ibn `Abbas, Ibn `Umar and Ibn Al-Zubayr (may Allah be pleased with them). The same view is held by Al-Suddy, Al-Shu`by, Al-Nakh`y, Imam Al-Shafi`y and others. Accordingly, it is Mustahab (desirable) for a person who wants to perform Hajj to enter Ihram during these months. Though it is Makruh (reprehensible) to enter Ihram in other months, it will still be considered as a valid Ihram, and must be continued until the pilgrim finishes the rituals of Hajj.

Allah (Glorified be He) has facilitated the way of `Ibadah (worship) for His Servants; thus, whoever wants to perform Hajj must make intention for Ihram during these appointed months of Hajj, whether it is Tamattu` Hajj (`Umrah during the months of Hajj followed by Hajj in the same year with a break in between), Qiran Hajj (combining Hajj and `Umrah without a break in between) or Ifrad Hajj (performing Hajj only). It is Mustahab on the eighth day of Dhul-Hijjah, known as the Day of Tarwiyah, for those present in Makkah, who want to perform Hajj, as well as Mutamatti` pilgrims (performing Tamattu` Hajj) who end Ihram following `Umrah, to enter Ihram for Hajj before Zhuhr Prayer from Makkah, Haram (all areas within the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah), or their place. This is based on the command of the Prophet (peace be upon him), because most rituals of Hajj begin after the Day of Tarwiyah.

Fourth question of Fatwa no. 16825

Q 4: Is it true that whoever stays away from Makkah for forty days should make `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) upon entering Makkah even if he performed `Umrah several times before?

(Part No. 10; Page No. 21)

physically and financially able. Any other performance of `Umrah is only Sunnah (a commendable act). Moreover, performance of `Umrah is permissible at any time of the year, as no specific time is prescribed exclusively for doing it.

First and second questions of Fatwa no. 21515

Q 1: What is the ruling on entering into Makkah Al-Mukarramah (Makkah, the Honored) without assuming the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) after staying away from it for forty days? What is the authenticity of the Hadith related in this regard to the effect that whoever enters Makkah after staying away for forty days without assuming Ihram is disobeying Allah (Exalted be He) and disobeying His Messenger (peace be upon him)?

A 1: There is nothing wrong with entering Makkah without assuming the state of Ihram for a person who does not intend to perform Hajj or `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage), because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said after specifying the Miqats (sites for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah): «And these Miqats are for the people at those very places, and besides them for those who come through those places with the intention of performing Hajj and `Umrah.» This indicates that a person who does not intend to perform Hajj or `Umrah may pass them without assuming the state of Ihram.

Q 2: What is the ruling on kissing Al-Hajar Al-Aswad (the Black Stone in a corner of the Ka`bah) in case one is not performing Hajj or `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). We heard that this is impermissible?

Q 1: What is the ruling on a Muslim whom Allah grants reasonable fortune that enables him to perform Hajj but his father has not performed Hajj yet and the available money does not suffice them both; should the son only perform Hajj or should he let his father perform Hajj first?

A 1: If a person has the money that enables him to perform Hajj, he must perform the obligatory Hajj of Islam and it is impermissible for him to let his father perform Hajj first, because his help to his father is only a recommendable act but his performance of Hajj is obligatory on him in this case. If his father has his own fortune, he must perform the obligatory Hajj and if he does not have enough money to perform Hajj, it is not obligatory on him in this case.

Q 34: Am I allowed to perform Hajj or `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) if I happen to be indebted?

I plan to pay my debts back after I return. Do I have to buy Ihram (clothing worn during the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) from my own money or is it permissible to take it as a gift from a fellow Muslim?

A: First: Financial capability is an essential requirement for Hajj. Once a Muslim is financially capable, Hajj becomes obligatory for them. In case of debt, the debtor may perform Hajj if Hajj does not prevent them from fulfilling their debts or if the creditor satisfactorily permits the debtor to perform it. Otherwise, just to be on the safe side, one may delay performing Hajj until after they repay their debt. However, their Hajj will be valid if they perform it.

Second: You are permitted to accept the gift as long as you know it was earned lawfully.

(Part No. 10; Page No. 24)

A: If the situation is as you mentioned in the question. You are not required to perform Hajj under the circumstances mentioned in the question because you are not financially capable. However, if you are financially capable of performing `Umrah, then you are obliged to perform it. This is based on the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) in which Allah (Glorified and Exalted be He) says: ﴿So keep your duty to Allâh and fear Him as much as you can﴾ Allah (Glorified be He) also says: ﴿And Hajj \(pilgrimage to Makkah\) to the House \(Ka'bah\) is a duty that mankind owes to Allâh, those who can afford the expenses \(for one's conveyance, provision and residence\)﴾ Whenever you have the financial means to perform Hajj, then you must perform it.

Fatwa no. 18802

I am a modest employee in a government company. I have two boys and a girl. We live in a small house consisting of one bedroom and a reception. After struggling for five years, I managed to buy a piece of land on which to build a larger house for my children and me, but have been told by some people that I cannot do this unless I perform the obligatory Hajj first. Should I stay with my children in this small house? Or should I sell the land so as to be able to perform Hajj? Or should I build a larger house on the land for my children and me? I know that the process of building a house is not easy; it will take at least ten more years of struggling for me to manage to build the house, but I know that I must separate my children while they are sleeping and I currently have only one room for us all to sleep in. What can I do? What is the most preferable and obligatory course of action?

A: The Faridah (obligatory act) of Hajj is only obligatory upon the one who has the financial and physical ability; if someone has the physical, but not the financial, ability to perform Hajj, it is not obligatory upon him, because Allah (Exalted be He) says: «And Hajj \(pilgrimage to Makkah\) to the House \(Ka'bah\) is a duty that mankind owes to Allāh, those who can afford the expenses \(for one's conveyance, provision and residence\)» Hajj is, therefore, obligatory upon the one who possesses money, on condition that this is excess money that is not used for buying his food, his children's food, or his primary needs. Such primary needs include providing a sufficient residence for himself and his children. Therefore, Hajj is not considered obligatory upon you, and you do not have to sell the land that you bought to build a house for you and your children on. Whenever Allah grants you an extra amount of money that you do not need for your food, your children's food, or the needs of the ones to whom you are responsible for providing financial support, Hajj becomes obligatory upon you.

On the other hand, if a person has the financial ability to perform Hajj or `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage), but is physically not able to perform them because of old age or an illness that he is unlikely to recover from, he must delegate someone to perform Hajj or `Umrah on his behalf from his own money; and if he dies before the obligatory Hajj has been performed, a sufficient sum of money must be taken from his legacy and given to someone to perform Hajj and `Umrah on his behalf, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) called this a debt. When a woman asked him about performing Hajj on behalf of her father, he said: «So pay Allah's debt, as He is the one who deserves to have His debt paid.»

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The first question of Fatwa no. 18452

Q 1: I want to perform Hajj and `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) but I cannot afford them. I hope Your Eminence guide and help me, please?

A: If you are unable to perform Hajj or `Umrah, there is nothing wrong with that for Allah (Exalted be He) has forgiven you. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And Hajj \(pilgrimage to Makkah\) to the House \(Ka'bah\) is a duty that mankind owes to Allāh, those who can afford the expenses \(for one's conveyance, provision and residence\)﴾ Allah (Glorified be He) made the ability to afford them a condition. Therefore, anyone who cannot afford Hajj and `Umrah is free from that obligation until they are able to perform them.

It is impermissible for you to ask anyone to help you to perform them. You should rather ask Allah (Exalted be He) to provide for you and enable you to visit His Sacred House. If Allah (Exalted be He) grants you provision from His Bounty and it becomes feasible for you to perform Hajj or `Umrah, it is Wajib (obligatory) on you to perform them; otherwise, you are not obliged.

Q 3: We all know, hear and see the wealth that the people of the Gulf have of Allah's great Grace and Bounty. We say Ma sha` Allah la quwwata illa billah, i.e. it is Allah that wills and there is no power but with Allah (an expression said upon seeing the good fortune and prosperity of others to express one's satisfaction and content with Allah's planning). Allah is the Source of sustenance. To be precise and to the point, I thought and hesitated a great deal about my desire to perform Hajj. Motivated by my many thoughts about visiting the Sacred House of Allah, I thought to send a message to any radio broadcast or association and ask them to present my request to whoever may donate some money for my ticket to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) but I reconsidered and feared lest Allah should not accept that from me, because I beg for money. If I do this, what is the ruling according to your discretion? Is it permissible?

A 3: We advise you not to ask anyone for a donation to perform `Umrah, as `Umrah is only obligatory on a person who is physically and financially able and a woman must have a Mahram (spouse or unmarriageable relative) as well. As you do not have the necessary money to perform `Umrah, you are excused and you should be patient until Allah (Exalted be He) provides for you what you urgently need. May Allah facilitate your affairs in the right way.

Q 1: I'd like to head for the Sacred House of Allah (Exalted and Glorified be He) to perform Hajj or `Umrah (lesser `Umrah) but I do not have a father, a brother, a son, or a paternal or maternal uncle to leave at home to look after my 66-year-old mother and my three adult single sisters - may Allah grant them good husbands.

A 1: If your sisters and mother can live without you until you return from Hajj or `Umrah, you should perform Hajj and `Umrah. However, if they cannot live without you, you have to stay and look after them.

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

The first question of Fatwa no. 13934

Q 1: I am an Egyptian primary school teacher and I work in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. By the Grace of Allah, I was able to perform Hajj last year in 1410 A.H. I provide for my six children, my mother, and my wife who do not have anyone except me. Moreover, I have no other source of income except my salary. Your Eminence surely knows that Hajj is expensive these days: a person needs approximately five thousands pounds to perform Hajj and as a middle class man I cannot afford this large sum of money. My seventy year old mother does not have this amount of money and she does not own property to sell to get this sum to perform the obligatory Hajj. Is it permissible for me to perform the obligatory Hajj on her behalf because she cannot afford it? It is worth mentioning that the cost of Hajj will be low since I am living in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. Please guide me, may Allah benefit you!

A: Hajj is not obligatory on your mother since she cannot afford it. Moreover, it is impermissible for you to perform Hajj on her behalf as she can physically perform it if she has the money.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

(Part No. 10; Page No. 32)

the wife is unsatisfied with that. Is it Haram (prohibited) for him to make an extension of stay?

A: You are allowed to extend your stay so that you can perform Hajj. The wife's consent is not a prerequisite for that.

Q: My mother is seventy-five years old and she wants to perform Hajj. She is financially capable and she does not have minor children. However, there is something that prevents her from performing Hajj. My eighty-six-year father is suffering from an illness. He has been bedridden for two years. Although he does not complain from pain, he cannot do anything for himself. He relieves himself while in bed. My mother, may Allah help her, takes good care of him all the time along with our help, both sons and daughters. We suggested that one of my elder sisters would take good care of our father while she is performing Hajj. Is my mother's obligation to perform Hajj is waived in this case or do we have to take care of our father in order to allow her to perform it?

(Part No. 10; Page No. 33)

Benefit us may Allah benefit you, respected Shaykh!

A: If there is someone who can take good care of your sick father and a Mahram (spouse or unmarriageable relative) to travel with your mother, then it is Wajib (obligatory) on her to perform Hajj because Hajj is a Rukn (integral pillar) of Islam. Once the conditions of Hajj are fulfilled, it will be impermissible to delay it. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And Hajj \(pilgrimage to Makkah\) to the House \(Ka'bah\) is a duty that mankind owes to Allāh, those who can afford the expenses \(for one's conveyance, provision and residence\)﴾

Q: I am forty-five years old. I have not performed Hajj before as my work conditions did not allow me to do this. I had a car accident and one of my feet was cut off and the other one was badly injured. Ever since, I have been on iron crutches. I can move only for a few steps. I cannot throw Jamrat (stone pillars at which pebbles are thrown during Hajj, Jamrat-ul-`Aqabah being the closest to Makkah). I cannot walk to the Haram (the Sacred Mosque in Makkah) to make Sa`y (going between Safa and Marwah during Hajj and `Umrah) and Tawaf (circumambulation around the Ka`bah).

I cannot stay three days in Mina. Benefit me, may Allah safeguard you! Is there anything wrong if someone performs Hajj on my behalf?

A: You have to perform Hajj and make Tawaf and Sa`y while using a wheelchair or carried by someone. You should also stay for some time in `Arafah and Muzdalifah. You may ask someone to throw Jamarat on your behalf. Unless you are capable of staying at Mina, nothing will be required of you. However, it is not permissible for you to ask someone to perform the rites of Hajj on your behalf as long as you are physically capable of performing them.

Q: I suffer from a skin disease (psoriasis), which is not infectious. This disease is spread all over my body, especially in the areas of my shoulders, chest, belly, arms and legs. I want to perform the obligatory Hajj or `Umrah but the clothes of Ihram (clothing worn during the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) let a large part of the infected areas appear. I myself feel disgusted when I look at myself in the mirror. I fear that people may hate my appearance while I am wearing the clothes of Ihram. Thanks to Allah, I have the necessary costs for Hajj or `Umrah. May Allah reward you with the best for answering my question. Please note that people are averse to be with those who suffer from skin diseases when it covers large areas of the body and the arms and they do not know if it is infectious or not.

A: You must perform the obligatory Hajj and `Umrah, as the existence of this skin disease on some parts of your body and your concerns that people may keep away from you do not constitute a legal excuse that permits you to abandon Hajj. You may wear Makhit (clothes sewn to fit body limbs), if the clothes of Ihram harm you. In this case, you must pay a Fidyah (ransom), for wearing Makhit, of either fasting for three days, feeding six poor persons an amount of 1.5 kg of rice or other staple food of the country, or offering sacrifice (one sheep). The appearance of psoriasis on many parts of your body does not constitute an excuse for you to abandon the obligatory Hajj, especially as you mentioned that it is not infectious according to dermatologists.

A 4: If you can perform Hajj by yourself, the obligatory Hajj of Islam is due on you.

And if you cannot perform Tawaf (circumambulation of the Ka`bah), you may be carried during it. It is also permissible to deputize someone to throw the pebbles on your behalf. Q: My 65-year-old maternal uncle died and he

(Part No. 10; Page No. 37)

(may Allah be merciful with him) was an insane person, who lacked good disposition of his affairs. My mother told me that he was afflicted with this condition since he was 15 years old. I understood from you previously that an insane person is exempted from the legal duties. Is he exempted from Hajj?

Please, give us your Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar). May Allah reward you with the best! I hope I will receive your Fatwa soon, before the time of Hajj for this year, in order to perform Hajj on his behalf, if Hajj is obligatory on him. May Allah reward you with the best!

A: An insane person is exempted from Hajj and from other religious acts of worship, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) says: \(There are three \(persons\) whose actions are not recorded,\) i.e. they are not called to account about their deeds. He mentioned among them "an insane person until he recovers." As the ruling is as mentioned, do not perform Hajj on his behalf. The insane person in question is defined as the one who lacks reason until he is like a mad person.

Q: I am a disabled woman and I live with some of my relatives. Indeed, they are not close relatives to me; I only meet with them in the sixth great grandfather and their mother is my cousin. I do not have anyone of my immediate family members, as they all died when I was a child. My paternal uncle's son brought me up and I always treated him like a brother, who was the only remaining immediate member of my family. Now he is dead and I only have distant relatives, who are not close to me in relationship. I performed Hajj with a relative, who is only connected to me through the fifth great grandfather. Is he a Mahram (spouse or unmarriageable relative) for me or not? Was my Hajj with him acceptable? During the performance of Hajj and upon throwing the last Jamrah (stone pillar marking the pebble-throwing area), I collided with a person and lost consciousness. This caused the stone not to reach the target basin. Now, what should I do in this case?

A: The existence of a legal Mahram with a woman, such as a father, son, brother, husband, paternal or maternal uncle, and the like, is a prerequisite for her when performing Hajj. Thus, a woman who has no Mahram is not obligated to perform Hajj until she has a Mahram. As you performed Hajj in the company of a non-Mahram relative as mentioned in the question, you committed a sin by traveling with him. Now, your Hajj is acceptable, but you have to repent and ask Allah for forgiveness for traveling without a Mahram.

As for throwing the pebbles, which you mentioned in your question, that did not reach the basin of throwing, if it was only one pebble, we ask Allah that he will forgive this for you.

Q: A sister, who does not understand Arabic, asks about the religious ruling on the following issues:

- This sister was a Christian and by Allah's Will she accepted Islam, praise be to Allah. Now she is a good practicing Muslim. She came to live in the Kingdom with her husband long time ago. But, whenever she asks her husband's permission to perform the obligatory Hajj he refuses, giving the excuse that he has heavy debts.
- Her husband is keen to travel abroad every summer for his vacation taking her and the family with him, and this causes him to take loans and so fall in debt.
- He has performed Hajj alone in the past.
- Now she asks if it is permissible for her to perform Hajj in the company of a group of female Muslim friends who are accompanied by their husbands, if she can bear the necessary costs?
- Please, give some advice to the husband!

Thank you very much.

(Part No. 10; Page No. 40)

A: This woman does not have to travel to perform the obligatory Hajj unless she has a Mahram (spouse or unmarriageable relative) to accompany her. Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) says: “It is not lawful for a woman who believes in Allah and the Last Day to travel, unless she has a Mahram \(unmarriageable male relative\) with her.”

It is also impermissible for her to travel with a group of pilgrims none of whom is Mahram for her on account of the above cited Hadith. So, she has to wait until a person who is Mahram for her can accompany her to perform Hajj.

The third and fourth questions of Fatwa no. 19373

Q 3: Is it permissible for a married woman to travel with her brothers to perform Hajj without her husband's consent?

A: It is not permissible for a woman to travel to perform Hajj without her husband's consent unless she is going to perform the Obligatory Hajj; as the husband does not have the right to prevent her from traveling if she will be in the company of another Mahram (unmarriageable relative). On the other hand, it is not permissible for a woman to travel to Hajj or for any other purpose without a Mahram. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(It is not lawful for a woman who believes in Allah and the Last Day to travel except with a Mahram.\) Traveling in the company of a trustworthy group of women does not serve as an alternative for traveling without a Mahram, whether to perform Hajj or for any other purpose.

Q 2: My mother died without performing Hajj and she was deaf and dumb. I, her son, do not know whether she was offering Salah (Prayer) or not before her death. He added that people in some locations were reckless in their observation of religious duties in the past due to their ignorance of the religious obligations and prohibitions. This was forty years ago. Now my question is: is it obligatory to perform Hajj on her behalf, if I can?

A 2: If the person in question can perform Hajj on behalf of his late mother, this would be good and an act of gratitude to her. However, it should be noted that when a person dies, his/her affairs are left to Allah's (Exalted be He) Judgement and his/her deeds should not be questioned by people after their death.

Q: Fifteen years ago, my mother owned a golden necklace which she sold for two thousand riyals at that time. She gave my father the entire sum to keep it as a trust with him. At the time of Hajj, she wanted her trust back from him but he swore by Allah that he only had five hundred Saudi Riyals left of it at that time. Actually, her intention in getting the money back from him was that she would give it to him again and ask him to use it to perform Hajj on behalf of her mother. Thereupon, my father said: if this is your wish, then I shall certainly perform Hajj for your mother. At that time, the maximum expenses of performing Hajj were between eight hundred and one thousand riyals, and my mother agreed to his saying. Now the Hajj season was over and he did not perform Hajj as he promised. My mother then asked my father for five hundred riyals to give them to her father who was ready to go back home and he had no money. Yet, my father again swore that he had nothing left but five hundred riyals, so she took this sum from him and absolved him from repaying her another five hundred riyals. Now, the outstanding debt due to her on him is only one thousand riyals which she left with him so as to perform Hajj for her late mother. It should be noted that her mother had previously performed Hajj and his performance of Hajj for her is supererogatory, not obligatory.

Dear Shaykh, is my father now still obligated to perform Hajj for my late grandmother? Is it permissible for him to deputize someone to perform Hajj for her, taking into consideration the difference of time and costs?

(Part No. 10; Page No. 45)

Now, Hajj expenses are six thousand riyals or greater. Is it permissible for him to spend her money on acts of Sadaqah (voluntary charity) on her behalf? Please note that it was agreed between my father and my mother as a condition for their marriage that he is obligated to take my mother to perform Hajj, regardless of the above mentioned Hajj. So, his promise to take my mother to perform Hajj was her dowry. Now, is it permissible for him to perform only one Hajj in fulfilment of his two commitments? What should he do if he is overwhelmingly occupied with so many things? Is it permissible for me to perform the two times of Hajj in his stead, or what should be done in this case?

A: After your father's payment of five hundred riyals as partial fulfilment of his debt to your mother, and his exoneration from another five hundred riyals, now only one thousand remains as a debt due on him. If he has solemnly promised to perform Hajj on behalf of your grandmother, he must live up to his promise without delay. However, if he is unable to do it himself due to his being occupied, he may deputize someone whom your mother accepts as deputy and he should give him an adequate sum of money to perform Hajj, even if the costs are greater than the sum he had initially received. Your father is responsible for the delay in performing the Hajj all these past years, because the sum was enough in the past. If your father deputizes you to perform Hajj for your grandmother and your mother consents, this is permissible, whether you take the money from your father or leave it to him. It should be noted that two obligations of Hajj cannot be fulfilled by the performance of one Hajj: one on behalf of the person performing it and another which is done by proxy. As for his commitment to perform Hajj with your mother, he should fulfill it and take her to perform Hajj, as stipulated in the marriage contract. He should not deputize anyone to perform Hajj on her behalf as long as she is able and living. It is better for him to take your mother to Makkah to perform Hajj for herself and he performs Hajj on behalf of your grandmother, provided that he had already performed Hajj for himself. For, if he had not performed Hajj for himself, he must do so for himself first.

Q : My paternal aunt gave me a sum of forty thousand riyals (40.000) to keep as a trust and said to me: Spend a sum of it on performing Hajj on my behalf. I asked her what to do with the rest of the sum and she said: Do with it as you wish. Now, she is very old and lacks sound reason and judgment, as she is unaware of things. I feel confused about the sum: is it permissible for me to spend it in some charitable acts so that she may have the reward of it, or this is not permissible for me, as it should belong to her heirs after her death. I do not know what she meant when she said: Do with as you wish, and I am unable to verify her intention now.

A: You should perform Hajj for her as she requested you, if you have not already carried it out. You should then spend the rest of the sum in the proper manner to cover her living expenses, if she needs this. After that you should preserve the remaining sum to be added to her inheritance after her death. May Allah grant us all success to do what is most pleasing to Him.

Please, be informed that he died because of an illness (I ask Allah to safeguard you and us against it) and because he is a relative I want to perform Hajj on his behalf seeking only for the sake of Allah and not for any worldly benefit.

A: It is unobjectionable that a Muslim performs Hajj on behalf of another Muslim brother whether a relative or not and whether money is received in return or not. Following is a description on how to perform Hajj on behalf of someone else: You should intend to assume the state of Ihram (ceremonial state for Hajj or `Umrah) on their behalf. While doing so, there is nothing wrong with saying, "O Allah! Labbayka (Here I am at Your Service) on behalf of so-and-so". Thereafter, you should perform the rites intending them to be on behalf of that person. However, one who performs Hajj on behalf of someone else must have performed Hajj for themselves. \(The Prophet \(peace and blessings be upon him\) heard a man saying: "O Allah! Labbayka \(Here I am at Your Service\) on behalf of Shubrumah! The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) asked him, "Who is Shubrumah?" He replied, "A brother \(or a relative\) of mine." The Prophet then asked again, "Have you performed Hajj on your own behalf?" The man replied, "No," whereupon the Prophet \(peace and blessings be upon him\) said, "You must perform Hajj on your own behalf first, and then you may perform Hajj on Shubrumah's." \) (Related by Abu Dawud and Ibn Majah and ranked as Sahih (authentic) by Ibn Hibban.)

Q: Is it permissible for me to perform Hajj on behalf of my mother using the Zakah (obligatory charity) due on my money?

A: Dear questioner, it is not permissible for you to assign a portion of the Zakah due on your money for performing Hajj on behalf of your deceased mother. This is because she might have left behind an estate, in which case performing Hajj on her behalf should be funded out of it. If she left no estate, Hajj is not obligatory for her as she did not have the ability to perform it. Hajj is obligatory only for those who can afford its expenses. Allah (Exalted be He) says: ﴿And Hajj \(pilgrimage to Makkah\) to the House \(Ka'bah\) is a duty that mankind owes to Allāh, those who can afford the expenses \(for one's conveyance, provision and residence\)﴾

Q 2: Is it permissible for a person, who has not performed Hajj for himself as it is beyond his financial capacity to do so, to perform Hajj on behalf of his brother who asks him for that?

A: To perform Hajj on behalf of someone else, a Muslim must have performed Hajj for themselves first. This is substantiated by the Hadith stating that the Prophet (peace be upon him) on hearing a man saying: "O Allah! Labbayka (Here I am at Your Service) on behalf of Shubrumah," said: You must perform Hajj on your own behalf first, and then you may perform Hajj on behalf of Shubrumah. Furthermore, it is generally not permissible to perform Hajj on behalf of anyone else except for the deceased or a chronically ill person who is unable to perform Hajj by themselves, such as a very old or an incurably ill person.

Q 3: What is the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) ruling on a man who acquired a large sum of money out of which he financed his parents' journey to Makkah for Hajj? Please, be informed that the man has yet to perform obligatory Hajj.

A: Whoever has the financial ability and has not performed obligatory Hajj must proceed to perform the Faridah (obligatory act) acting in accordance with the Ayah (Qur'anic verse) that reads: ﴿And Hajj \(pilgrimage to Makkah\) to the House \(Ka'bah\) is a duty that mankind owes to Allāh, those who can afford the expenses \(for one's conveyance, provision and residence\)﴾ If he does not proceed, he will remain liable for it. However, there is nothing wrong with financing one's parents' Hajj journey. What is prohibited is performing Hajj on behalf of someone else before performing it for oneself. This is substantiated by the Hadith stating that the Prophet (peace be upon him), on hearing a man saying: "O Allah! Labbayka (Here I am at Your Service)" on behalf of someone else, said: ﴿"Have you performed Hajj on your own behalf?" He said: "No." He said: "Perform Hajj on your own behalf, then perform it on behalf of Shubrumah."﴾ Shubrumah is the person on whose behalf the man was saying Labbayka.

(Part No. 10; Page No. 51)

Fatwa no. 14191

Q: I contracted a disease at the end of the month of Dhul-Qi'dah, 1410 A.H., which affected my abdomen and reached my brain. It also makes me feel pain in my heart and excessive perspiration in my legs. I was afraid of two things: First: that this disease causes my death before performing the obligation of Hajj (pilgrimage). Second: that if I resolved to travel and perform Hajj while being sick, I will die making me guilty of risking my life by traveling during my sickness. Then I put my trust in Allah and travelled and reached the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) on Dhul-Hijjah 6th, 1410 A.H. I entered into the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) for `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) in preparation for Hajj and I did not specify. Then I performed `Umrah and made Tahallul (removal of the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) and then the disease attacked me again which made me severely depressed and loathsome to accidental onlookers. I returned home before entering into any of the

(Part No. 10; Page No. 52)

Hajj rituals, neither making Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) nor any other ritual.

I hope you could inform me about the ruling on what has happened and what I should do if the disease remains with me in the future? May Allah reward you!

Firstly: With regard to your Ihram for `Umrah as a Mutamatti` (pilgrim performing `Umrah during the months of Hajj, followed by Hajj in the same year with a break in between) while ending the `Umrah rituals and there was no Ihram for Hajj owing to your incapacity to enter into it, there is no sin on you for this.

Secondly: If your illness lasts and you cannot perform Hajj yourself and there is no hope for you being cured from this disease, it is permissible for you to delegate another person to perform the obligatory Hajj on your behalf.

Q: There is an old woman who has hit her seventy years of age and is blind. She is well off and can afford the cost of Hajj and desires to perform it. She has three sons. Now, should they accompany her to perform Hajj despite her old age and blindness, or it is permissible for her to delegate someone to perform Hajj on her behalf in this case? Give us a Fatwa! May Allah reward you with the best! May Allah benefit people with your knowledge!

(Part No. 10; Page No. 53)

A : If the old woman mentioned above is able to reach Makkah while riding and has a Mahram (spouse or unmarriageable relative) who can assist her, then it is compulsory for her to go and perform Hajj. If she cannot reach there but she can afford the cost, it is obligatory for her to delegate one of her sons or someone else to perform Hajj and `Umrah (the lesser pilgrimage) on her behalf. If she is poor and one of her sons took upon himself to help her with the cost of Hajj, either to perform it himself or delegate someone else to perform it on her behalf, then it is permissible to do so.

The first question from fatwa no. 20790

Q 1: A man stood on `Arafat and then he caught a disease which prevented him from completing the rest of the rituals: including spending the night in Muzdalifah , and Mina, throwing pebbles (at the pebble-throwing area during Hajj), Shaving or shortening the hair, slaughtering the sacrifice, Tawaf (circumambulation of the Ka`bah), and Sa`y (going between Safa and Marwah during Hajj and `Umrah) He was compelled to travel to his country after contracting the disease. He was bound to remain in bed and did not recover from his illness until his death. He made Tahallul (removal of the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) from his Ihram (clothing worn during the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) after his illness and wearing Makhit (clothes sewn to fit body limbs). Does he delegate someone to perform Tawaf-ul-Ifadah (final obligatory circumambulation of the Ka`bah in Hajj) on his behalf and do Sa`y (going between Safa and Marwah during Hajj and `Umrah) or delegate someone during the Hajj days to spend the night in Muzdalifah, throw pebbles (at the pebble-throwing area during Hajj), shave and shorten the hair, make Tawaf (circumambulation of the Ka`bah)

and Sa'y? Or, should he only delegate someone to do just Tawaf on his behalf because it is a pillar (of Hajj) and it is valid to perform it by way of making up for it?

A 1: If the mentioned person was ill until his death and he did not manage to perform the ritual for which he entered into Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah), nothing will be required of him and he should not delegate anyone to do it on his behalf, according to the Hadith of the person whose mount broke his neck and died. The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) did not order that someone do anything on his behalf. On the authority of Ibn Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) it is related that: While a man was standing at `Arafah, he fell off his mount which broke his neck, or he said: It broke his neck, the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: Wash him with water and Sidr \(lotus tree/ lotus jujube\) and shroud him in two pieces of cloth, and neither perfume him, nor cover his head, for he will be resurrected on the Day of Resurrection saying: "Labbayka \(always ready to obey\) \(i.e. like a pilgrim\)." (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim) and the wording is that of Al-Bukhari May Allah grant us success! (Part No. 10; Page No. 55)

A : If you are physically disable and your disability is permanent and you can afford the cost to pay another person - who had already performed Hajj and 'Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) for himself - to perform hajj and 'Umrah on your behalf, then it is obligatory for you to do so, according to the general meaning of the saying of Allah (Most Exalted be He): «So keep your duty to Allāh and fear Him as much as you can» and the saying of the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him): «When I command you to do anything, do of it as much as you possibly can.» On the authority of Ibn Abbas (may Allah be pleased with him and his father) [«it is narrated that a woman from Khath'am said: O Messenger of Allah! In general, the rest of his body is healthy; his mind is sound and he is perfectly conscious of things around him, though he is often forgetful. His mother hired someone to perform Hajj on his behalf, is it permissible to perform hajj on behalf of a living person? And does Hajj become nonobligatory on him in this circumstance, or does one of his relatives have to perform Hajj on his behalf?

(Part No. 10; Page No. 56)

A 1 : If your brother is not capable of performing Hajj himself and his disability is permanent and hopeless to be removed, he should delegate someone to perform Hajj on his behalf, according to the Hadith in which: [\(A man who said to the Prophet Muhammad \(peace and blessings of Allah be upon him\) that his father cannot sit firm on his mount, and asked whether he could perform Hajj on behalf of his father. Q: Since I know for certain that performance of the obligation of Hajj requires effort and money, I authorized someone to perform Hajj on behalf of my mother. I gave him a sum of money so that he can spend out of it, but this person told me that he works for one of the pilgrims' guides and thus does not need to spend any money from the time of his going to perform Hajj until he completes it and comes back. I endeavored to make him understand that Hajj will not be acceptable unless the money is spent. But he insisted not to take it. Then I convinced him to accept the money as a gift and he consented to this after a long discussion. He travelled and performed the obligation of Hajj and came back safely by the will of Allah. However, when he returned he gave me the money back saying that during his stay in Muzdalifah

he was informed that this sum which he received as a gift will deprive him of his personal reward with Allah for performing the obligation of Hajj. He then got angry with me because he thought that I knew beforehand that his acceptance of the money will be deprived of his reward with Allah, since he received the worldly reward (i.e. the sum). This embarrassed me very much. I know that spending one's money for making Hajj is a condition. I want to give him this sum in any form whether it is in the form of a gift or expressing gratitude and appreciation of his person. I beg Your Eminence to furnish me with a way I can give him this sum without depriving him of his reward with Allah for performing this obligation on behalf of my mother.

A: If this person you authorized to perform Hajj on behalf of your mother has performed the rituals of Hajj with the intention of doing them on her behalf, his Hajj on her behalf is valid. Both of you will be rewarded for this and your mother will receive the Thawab (reward from Allah) of Hajj In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills), whether he received the money you paid him or not. If he refused to take the money out of altruism and seeking the reward (from Allah), this will increase his reward and make his Hajj more acceptable.

Q: My mother is fifty years old and she enjoys good health and has never performed Hajj or `Umrah (the lesser pilgrimage). I have endeavored to accompany her to perform Hajj or `Umrah but in vain and she usually replies: Allah will facilitate Hajj for me, and I will perform it In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills) in due time, and ...so on.

Her real problem is: She is obsessed with fear and a phobia from riding cars. Throughout her fifty years of age, she has never ridden a car and does not imagine that a car will transport her at all. I have tried to get her out of this dilemma by letting her ride a car with me but all attempts failed. Even when she knew about my attempt, she would become more adamant with this and may sever her relationship with me. She rarely leaves her home. This is my problem and I do not know what is my duty towards my mother, particularly in regard to performing the obligation of Hajj. I hope Your Eminence will reply to me as soon as possible.

A: : If the matter is as you have mentioned, it is obligatory to wait, her apprehension may abate and she performs the obligatory Hajj herself. It is obligatory for her to do so according to the saying of Allah (Most Exalted be He): ﴿And Hajj \(pilgrimage to Makkah\) to the House \(Ka'bah\) is a duty that mankind owes to Allâh, those who can afford the expenses \(for one's conveyance, provision and residence\)﴾ This impediment which you mention can be hoped to be removed in this case. But, if her performance of Hajj becomes unforeseeable, you should perform Hajj on her behalf because as you have mentioned, her condition is

A: Performing Hajj on behalf of a disabled living person due to their old age or incurable disease is permissible provided that one has already performed obligatory Hajj first. Saudi Arabia, who can perform `Umrah or Hajj on her behalf. Taking into consideration that he has already performed `Umrah and Hajj for himself, is it permissible for him to perform both on her behalf though his financial situation cannot afford that? Please guide us.

A: It is not permissible to perform Hajj on behalf of others, unless they are permanently unable or dead. However, anyone who may recover in the near future should wait until they get well and be able to perform Hajj. If this is the case with your mother, she should wait until she recovers and is able to perform Hajj by herself or in your company being carried aloft on a recliner in Tawaf (circumambulation around the Ka`bah) and Sa`y (going between Safa and Marwah during Hajj and `Umrah), and you can throw the pebbles at Jamarat (stone pillars at which pebbles are thrown during Hajj) on her behalf.

Q: My father died about fifteen years ago. He was known as a Muslim who used to observe the Sawm (Fast) of Ramadan, pay Zakah (obligatory charity) to its recipients, give in Sadaqah (voluntary charity) and do good deeds. However, he did not attend the congregational Salah (Prayer) or even the Jumu`ah (Friday) Prayer. In addition, he never performed Hajj. I am confused as I want to perform Hajj on his behalf. Is it permissible to perform Hajj on behalf of my dead father or not?

A: If you mean that your father used to abandon the congregational Salah and pray individually, then he abandoned an obligatory act and committed a grave sin but it does not take him out of the fold of Islam, so you may supplicate to Allah for him and perform Hajj on his behalf. But if you mean that he never prayed either individually or in congregation, he then died as a non-Muslim, unless he made Tawbah (repentance to Allah) before his death, so it is not permissible to supplicate to Allah for him or perform Hajj on his behalf because abandoning Salah is tantamount to Kufr (disbelief) that takes a person out of the fold of Islam. It was reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «Between a man and Shirk \(associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship\) and Kufr there stands giving up Salah.» (Related by Muslim in his Sahih [Book of Authentic Hadith]). Also, he (peace be upon him) was reported to have said: «The covenant that stands between us and them is Salah; whoever gives it up commits Kufr.» (Related by Imam Ahmad and the four compilers of Sunan (Hadith compilations classified by jurisprudential themes) through authentic Isnad [chain of narrators]). There is a lot of other evidence that supports this view.

The third question of Fatwa no. 17006

Q 3: Is it permissible to make up Sawm (Fast), Salah (Prayer) or perform Hajj on behalf of dead people?

A: Whoever dies without performing the obligatory Hajj, a sum of their estate should be paid for a person to perform Hajj on their behalf, as Hajj is like a debt owed to Allah and should be paid off. However, whoever died and left no estate and a relative or a Muslim brother performed Hajj on their behalf on the condition that they have already performed Hajj for themselves first, it will benefit the dead and absolve them of the obligation. Similarly, if a person died without fulfilling an obligatory Sawm, like the Sawm of Ramadan or vows and another person makes up for their missed Sawm, it will absolve them of the obligation. This is based on the Hadiths reported with regard to making up for Hajj and Sawm on behalf of dead people. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both) that he said: «The Messenger of Allah \(peace be upon him\) heard a man saying: "O Allah! Here I am in response to Your call on behalf of Shubrumah. The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) asked him: "Who is Shubrumah?" He replied: "A brother or a relative." Then the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) asked: "Have you performed your own Hajj?" He replied: "No." Whereupon the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) told him: "You must perform Hajj on your own behalf first, and then on behalf of Shubrumah." » (Related by Abu Dawud and others). It was also narrated on the authority of `Aishah (may Allah be pleased with her) that she said: "The Prophet \(peace be upon him\) said: «If anyone dies in a state \(that he had to complete\) some days of Sawm, his heir must fast on his behalf.» (Related by Al-Bukhari, Muslim and others). If there is no one to make up for their Sawm, half a Sa` (1 Sa` = 2.172 kg) of the staple food of the country should be given from their estate to feed a poor person for each missed day. With regard to Salah, one is not to make up for obligatory or supererogatory Salah on behalf of a dead person, as there is no evidence to support this.

Q 2: Is it permissible to give in Sadaqah (voluntary charity) on behalf of my dead son or not? Was it obligatory upon my son who died at the age of eighteen to have performed Hajj? Is it permissible to name my future son after him?

A: Giving in Sadaqah on behalf of a dead person is one of the Shar`y (Islamically lawful) charitable deeds whose reward may reach the dead according to the intention of the payer of Sadaqah. This is supported by many pieces of evidence reported in the Sunnah (whatever is reported from the Prophet). With regards your son, it was obligatory upon him to perform Hajj because he died after reaching the age of puberty as long as he was physically and financially able. If he left an estate, it is obligatory to perform Hajj on his behalf using what he left to pay for the expenses. And yet, if someone else volunteers to perform Hajj on his behalf, it will be permissible. It was authentically reported on the authority of Ibn `Abbas (may Allah be pleased with them both) that he said: «A man came to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) saying: "My father died before performing Hajj. Should I perform it on his behalf?" He \(peace be upon him\) said: "Don't you see that if debt was due from him, would you not pay it?" He said: "Yes." He \(peace be upon him\) said: "Then Perform the Hajj on behalf of your father.» (Related by Al-Nasa'y and others). A: A sum of money that covers the expenses of Hajj from the hometown of the deceased should be taken from his estate to perform Hajj on his behalf, on the condition that the one who will perform Hajj on his behalf, whether a relative or non-relative, has already performed Hajj for himself first.

The second question of Fatwa no. 18702

Q 2: Is it permissible to perform Hajj on behalf of the deceased from their social insurance which they used to receive when they were alive?

A: If the person saved money from social insurance or other sources and were able to perform Hajj but they did not, it is obligatory to perform Hajj on their behalf paying for the expenses from their estate as Hajj becomes like a debt and so takes priority over the inheritors' right. However, if the deceased performed Hajj, it is not obligatory to perform Hajj on their behalf from their social insurance or other sources of the estate, unless the deceased made a will to this effect, on the condition that the expenses should be within one-third or less of the estate unless the heirs accept to overstep the one third. However, if you mean that the social insurance is still being paid after death because the competent body is ignorant of the death, this is to be considered ill-gotten money and so it is not permissible to use it to perform Hajj on behalf of the deceased. This competent body should be informed of the death (of its client) to apply the suitable law.

The first question of Fatwa no. 19909

Q 1: I am the mother of a twenty-year old youth who worked in the military, and after graduation, he moved to work in Jizan. We rejoiced at that because he was close to us. After a year of work, while he was on his way to work, he died in an accident. I intended to perform Hajj on his behalf; was Hajj obligatory on him or not? His death affected me so much that I could not forget that day. I hope Allah will accept him as a martyr; would he be considered a martyr as he died on his way to work? We found out that he offered the Fajr (dawn) Prayer on that day and we heard of a Hadith that reads: \(Anyone who offers the Fajr Prayer will come under the Protection of Allah.\) He never told a lie to anybody. He was grateful to his parents and never disobeyed them to the extent that his father once hit him one day for trivial disputes but he did not react badly or show disgust.

A: If your son died before performing the obligatory Hajj and he left money, it is obligatory to perform Hajj on his behalf, paying for the expenses from his estate, because Hajj is obligatory upon the free, sane, financially and physically able, and pubescent Muslim. Puberty is reached when one of its signs occurs or when the boy reaches fifteen years of age. This is supported by what was related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (Book of Authentic Hadith) on the authority of Ibn `Abbas: \(A woman came to the Prophet \(peace be upon him\) and said: "My mother vowed to perform Hajj but she died before performing it. Should I perform it on her behalf?" He said: "Yes! Perform Hajj on her behalf. Do you not think that if your mother owed a debt that you would pay it off for her? Fulfill her debt to Allah, for Allah is more deserving that what is owed to Him should be paid."\) This indicates that if anyone dies without performing Hajj, it is obligatory upon one of their children or relatives to perform Hajj on their behalf paying for the expenses from their estate. A non-relative may be given enough money from the deceased's estate to perform the Hajj on his behalf.

However, if your son died and left no money, Hajj would not be obligatory upon him due to his being financially unable to perform it, and yet, it is Mustahab (desirable) for a relative to perform Hajj on his behalf and may Allah reward him with the best In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). You ought to make Du`a' (supplication), ask for Allah's Mercy and Forgiveness for him. You should also give in Sadaqah (voluntary charity) on his behalf as much as possible, if you are able to do so. We advise you to be patient and confident in Allah's Recompense. You should not be overcome with grief. Render thanks to Allah for His Divine Decree; may the death of your son in a car accident forgive his misdeeds. The calamities and good deeds purge a person of sins and misdeeds. The greatest reward comes with the greatest trial, when Allah (Glorified be He) loves people, He tests them. If your son, as you said, offered the Fajr Prayer, which is a good deed, on the day of his death, and was grateful to you and his father, Allah (Exalted be He) will hopefully give him a great reward. It was authentically related by

(Part No. 10; Page No. 69)

Muslim in his Sahih (Book of Authentic Hadith) on the authority of Anas ibn Sirin that he said: I heard Jundab Al-Qasry saying that the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) said: \(Anyone who offers the Fajr Prayer will come under the Protection of Allah, so do not fall short with regard to the rights of Allah, for anyone who does that, Allah will seize him and will throw him on his face into Hellfire.)

 In a narration related by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (Hadith compilation): (Anyone who offers the Fajr Prayer will come under the Protection of Allah, so do not fall short with regard to the Rights of Allah.) Imam Al-Tirmidhy and Ibn Majah have other narrations with the same meaning. The Hadith here refers to performing the Fajr Prayer in congregation as supported by many other authentic Hadiths. May Allah (Glorified by He) forgive your son and purge him of his sins! Finally, if you perform the Hajj on his behalf, you will be rewarded greatly provided that you have already performed your Hajj first. However, a mere intention to perform Hajj on his behalf does not oblige you to perform it. May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 20794

Q 3: What is the ruling on performing Hajj on behalf of one's deceased parents? Is it permissible according to Shari`ah (Islamic law) to perform Hajj on their behalf more than once or does only one time serve the purpose?

(Part No. 10; Page No. 70)

Please, be informed that they already performed Hajj.

A: It is Mustahab (desirable) for a person who performed Hajj for themselves to perform Hajj on behalf of the deceased. Moreover, there is nothing wrong with repeating it, for it is a way of doing more good for them.

Actually, I bore the costs of his Hajj journey and gave him 2600 riyals. Does Hajj performed in this manner discharge my obligation toward my grandmother's will?

A: It is unobjectionable to deputize someone to perform Hajj on behalf of your grandmother who deputized you to perform Hajj on her behalf provided that the person deputized is trustworthy and has performed Hajj on his own behalf. It is also unobjectionable to finance his Hajj journey out of your own money or your grandmother's.

Fatwa no. 18709

All praise be to Allah Alone, and peace and blessings be upon the Last of the Prophets.
To proceed:

The Permanent Committee for Scholarly Research and Ifta' has reviewed the Fatwa request submitted to His Eminence, the Grand Mufty, by the Chairman of the Board of Directors of Islamic Heritage Revival in Kuwait, which was referred to the Committee from the Secretariat General of the Council of Senior Scholars, with No. 5171, dated 29/10/1416 A.H. The authority mentioned above posed a number of questions. After examination, the Committee replied to the following question:

Q 1: Some benevolent people ask us to delegate others who can perform supererogatory Hajj on behalf of their relatives; taking into consideration that the people on whose behalf Hajj is to be performed are alive and can perform it themselves. Is this permissible? Also, is Hajj by proxy on behalf of a deceased person permissible in case of supererogatory Hajj?

A: Hajj by proxy is only allowed on behalf of a deceased person or a living person who is permanently unable to perform Hajj. If a person is living and able to perform Hajj, there is no evidence that Hajj can be performed by proxy on their behalf, even if it is supererogatory Hajj.

Q 2: Is it permissible for a Muslim to donate the expenses of Hajj to another Muslim, given the fact that the recipient of the donation is financially capable of performing Hajj?

A: It is permissible for a person to perform Hajj with the money which is granted to him without his asking for it, even if he himself was capable of paying for the costs of Hajj. However, it is better if he undertakes the expenses of Hajj from his own money in order to combine the reward of performing Hajj and the reward of paying for it.

(Part No. 10; Page No. 73)

Q 3: Is it permissible for a charitable person to donate some of money to poor students or others so that they can perform obligatory or voluntary Hajj?

A: Providing financial assistance to the poor so that they can perform obligatory or voluntary Hajj is a meritorious act because it encourages cooperating in righteousness and piety. However, the rich must pay for the expenses of Hajj from their own wealth as they are in no need of help.

Q 4: Is it permissible for a Muslim person to volunteer to perform Hajj on behalf of another Muslim who is not their relative; whether it be an obligatory or a voluntary performance for the latter?

A: It is permissible for a Muslim person to volunteer to perform Hajj on behalf of another Muslim, even if the latter be a non-relative, dead or alive but incapable of performing Hajj by themselves due to being elderly or having an incurable disease. It was authentically reported that (a woman from Khath'am said to the Prophet (peace be upon him): "O, Allah's Messenger, my father is an old man who cannot sit firmly on the back of a mount, is it permissible for me to perform Hajj on his behalf?" The Prophet (peace be upon him) replied: "Perform Hajj for your father.") The authenticity of this Hadith is agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim.

It was also authentically reported from Abu Razin Al-'Uqayliy (may Allah be pleased with him) that he said: ("O Allah's Messenger, my father is an old man who cannot sit firmly on the back of the mount nor can he perform Hajj or go on a journey. May I offer Hajj and 'Umrah on behalf of him?" The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, "Perform Hajj and 'Umrah on behalf of your father.")

Q 5: Is it permissible to authorize a man from India, for example, to perform Hajj on behalf of a dead person from Kuwait? Also, is it permissible to authorize a person living inside one of the Miqats (sites for entering the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) like Jeddah or Makkah, for example, to perform Hajj for another person who lives in a remote country?

A: It is permissible for a person to authorize another person to perform Hajj on their behalf, even if the country of the authorized person is different from that of the principal, and even if the country of the authorized person is closer to Makkah than the that of the principal. There is no proof indicating the conditionality that the authorized person and the principal have to belong to the same country.

Fatwa no. 15951

Q: About 57 years ago, my father intended to perform Hajj. At that time, I was not pubescent. Someone knew about my father's intention to perform Hajj and that I would go with him. He said to my father, "There is a woman who gave me crops in return for performing Hajj on her behalf. I know that you are going to Hajj and your son will accompany you. I ask you to allow your son perform Hajj instead of me on behalf of that woman." My father said, "I cannot do so before asking a Mufty (Islamic scholar qualified to issue legal opinions)." Hence, they asked a person who used to issue Fatwas (legal opinions issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) during their time and he permitted this act. Accordingly, my father and that man agreed to let me perform Hajj on behalf of that woman in return for 12 Riyals. That man equipped me with some things. I went with my father on foot, performed Hajj, and took the sum of money from the man.

(Part No. 10; Page No. 75)

What is the ruling on my Hajj on behalf of that woman? If it is invalid, who should bear the responsibility: I, my father, or the man? Please advise. May Allah grant you success! As-salamu `alaykum warahmatullah wabarakatuh (May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you!)

A: Deputizing you before becoming a pubescent to perform Hajj on behalf of that woman does not suffice for her obligation because performing Hajj on behalf of another person is invalid until you perform the obligatory Hajj for yourself. This Hajj is considered Nafilah (supererogatory) because you were not pubescent. It is Wajib (obligatory) upon the man who took the crops from the woman to perform Hajj on her behalf. You have to pay back the money to him.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 18808

Q 4: If someone dies and one of his relatives had intended to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) on his behalf, intending the reward to go to the dead person, is this `Umrah valid if it is performed after his death? And does its reward reach the dead person if Allah (Exalted be He) wills?

A: It is permissible for someone who has previously performed the obligatory `Umrah to perform it on behalf of a dead person, and its reward will reach the dead person if Allah (Glorified be He) accepts it. Hajj may also

(Part No. 10; Page No. 76)

Q: I want to perform Hajj this year. I reside in the eastern region while my family resides in Jeddah. I want to be Mutamatti` (pilgrim performing `Umrah during the months of Hajj, followed by Hajj in the same year with a break in between). Do I have to enter the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) in Jeddah or in the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) of As-Sayl? If I enter the state of Ihram at As-Sayl, should I take off Ihram (clothing worn during the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) in Jeddah near my family while I am Mutamatti`? Should the state of Ihram continue until Hajj approaches?

A: Whoever passes by one of the Miqats or parallel places on land, by air, etc., intending to perform Hajj or `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage), they must enter the state Ihram at that Miqat even if their home is in Jeddah or Makkah. If the person intends, upon Ihram, to perform Qiran Hajj (combining Hajj and `Umrah without a break in between), he should remain in Ihram from the Miqat until he throws Jamrat (stone pillars at which pebbles are thrown during Hajj, Jamrat-ul-`Aqabah being the closest to Makkah) on the Day of Nahr (Sacrifice, 10th of Dhul-Hijjah, when pilgrims slaughter their sacrificial animals) and shaves his hair or performs Tawaf-ul-Ifadah (final obligatory circumambulation around the Ka`bah in Hajj). If he goes to his family in Jeddah before Hajj, he should remain in his Ihram until the end of the rituals. However, it is permissible for those who enter Ihram at the Miqat intending to perform `Umrah of Tamattu` Hajj (`Umrah during the months of Hajj followed by Hajj in the same year with a break in between), to remove the state of Ihram and there is nothing wrong with them going to Jeddah or any other place. Then, they should enter the state of Ihram for Hajj at the place in which they reside after performing `Umrah. It is permissible for the Qarin (pilgrim combining Hajj and `Umrah without a break in between) to perform Tawaf (circumambulation around the Ka`bah) and Sa`y (going between Safa and Marwah during Hajj and `Umrah) when they reach Makkah. They should regard it as `Umrah and shave or shorten their hair if they do not have a Hady (sacrificial animal offered by pilgrims) with them. Then, they should enter the state of Ihram for Hajj upon its time from the place in which they reside either in Makkah or outside it. In this way, they become Mutamatti`. It is permissible for those who intend to perform Ifrad Hajj (performing Hajj only) and have no Hady to make their Ihram for `Umrah like the Qarin. The Prophet (peace be upon him) ordered the Sahabah (Companions of the Prophet) who intended to perform Qiran and Ifrad Hajj while having no Hady to do so.

If he has to stay in Makkah for a day or two days, should he enter Makkah in the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah)?

A: Anyone who wants to enter Makkah for the sake of Hajj or `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage), they must be in the state of Ihram once they pass by the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah). Ihram is not obligatory upon those who enter Makkah for the sake of a visit or any other need without intending to perform Hajj or `Umrah. Q: We went to Makkah Al-Mukarramah on Wednesday 29 Sha`ban, 1414 A.H. We had the intention to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) on the second day of Ramadan. We traveled by air from Riyadh to Jeddah; however, we passed through the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) without entering the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah). On the second of Ramadan, we went to the Miqat, entered the state of Ihram, and performed `Umrah. Is there anything upon us for passing the Miqat without being in a state of Ihram though we had the intention to perform `Umrah in Ramadan?

A: It is not permissible for those who come to Makkah intending to perform `Umrah to pass the Miqat without being in a state of Ihram. However, if you return to the Miqat through which you passed and enter the state of Ihram there, there is nothing upon you because you corrected your mistake.

Q: I frequently travel to Jeddah during the school holidays for treatment, vacation, and visiting my relatives. I have a house there. I used to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) on every trip. I used to enter the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) either at the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) or in Jeddah after residing there for a week, more, or less. During these years the members of my family became thirteen. Therefore, I used not to enter the state of Ihram except in Jeddah. Some friends told me that it is permissible to do so while others contested this ruling. It should be known that my intention is to perform `Umrah after staying in Jeddah for some time.

A: It is impermissible for those who come to Makkah intending to perform `Umrah or Hajj and pass by one of the Miqats specified by the Messenger of Allah (peace be upon him) to pass the Miqat without entering the state of Ihram even if they want to go to Jeddah or any other place before performing the rituals. If they pass the Miqat in this state and enter the state of Ihram after passing it, they must slaughter a Fidyah (ransom) in Makkah to be distributed among the poor of Haram (all areas within the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah). If they cannot slaughter a Fidyah, they have to observe Sawm (Fast) for ten days. If they come to Makkah without intending to perform `Umrah and then decide to perform `Umrah after passing the Miqat, they should enter the state of Ihram at the place of intention whether it is in Jeddah or any other place beyond the Miqat. Hence, you have to offer Fidyah in return for passing the Miqat without entering the state of Ihram while you intend to perform `Umrah. There should be a Fidyah for every time you did so. Any member of your family who did the same as you has to offer a Fidyah too.

Q 3: Is it permissible for a person travelling by plane to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) to say Talbiyah (devotional expressions chanted at certain times during Hajj and `Umrah) of `Umrah without entering the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah)? This because he wants to fulfill some tasks in Jeddah and then enter the state of Ihram from there before going to perform `Umrah. If this is not permissible, what should he do?

A 3: It is impermissible for those who travel with the intention of performing Hajj or `Umrah to pass the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) without entering the state of Ihram according to their intention and taking off their Makhit (clothes sewn to fit body limbs). In addition, they should avoid the prohibited acts during Ihram.

Accordingly, your mentioned act is impermissible because it contradicts the Shari`ah ruling. However, it is permissible to go to Jeddah without entering the state of Ihram to fulfill your need and then return to the Miqat to enter the state of Ihram for Hajj or `Umrah.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

The first question of Fatwa no. 16417

Q 1: I am from Egypt and work in Madinah, Saudi Arabia. I traveled to Jeddah and wanted to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). However, I did not enter Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) at the Miqat. Is it permissible for me to enter Ihram in Jeddah once I reach it or after I stay there for three days to be like the resident and then perform `Umrah?

A: Anyone who comes from Madinah intending to perform `Umrah must enter Ihram at the Miqat of People of Madinah, i.e. Abyar `Aly. If you have work in Jeddah, this does not exempt them from entering Ihram at the abovementioned Miqat. If the person delays entering Ihram until they do that in Jeddah, they make a mistake and ignore a Wajib (obligatory act) and this necessitates offering Fidyah (ransom). This Fidyah is a sheep or one seventh of a Badanah (a camel or a cow or an ox driven by pilgrims to be offered as sacrifice within the sacred precincts of Makkah) to be slaughtered in Makkah and distributed among the poor there. The person who offers the Fidyah should not eat from it because it is a Kaffarah (expiation) for their deed. When the Prophet (peace be upon him) specified Miqats he said: \(These Miqats are for those living at those very places, and for those who come through those places with the intention of performing Hajj and `Umrah.\) If they return to the Miqat through which they passed and then enter Ihram, there is nothing upon them.

Q: Shaykh, I love you for the sake of Allah. I reside in Madinah. I want to visit my relatives in Yanbu`, about 250 kilometers to the west of Madinah, stay for a few days, and then go to Makkah to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). Do I have to enter the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) at the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) of the people of Madinah or the Miqat of the people of Yanbu`,

(Part No. 10; Page No. 83)

(i.e. Al-Juhfah)? If it is obligatory to enter the state of Ihram at the Miqat of the people of Madinah, what should I do if I enter the state of Ihram at the Miqat of the people of Yanbu`? May Allah reward you with the best in return for what you do for us and the Islamic Ummah (nation based on one creed).

A: If you leave Madinah intending to perform `Umrah, you have to enter the state of Ihram at the Miqat of Madinah, Dhu Al-Hulayfah which is called nowadays Abyar `Aly. It is impermissible for you to pass this Miqat without being in a state of Ihram even if you want to visit your relatives in Yanbu`. You should visit them while you are in the state of Ihram. After specifying the Miqats, the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: «And these Miqats are for those living at those very places, and for those who come through those places with the intention of performing Hajj and `Umrah.» Therefore, it is impermissible to pass the Miqat without being in a state of Ihram while you intend to perform the rituals of Hajj or `Umrah, and you have to offer a Fidyah (ransom). The Fidyah is to slaughter a sheep, which meets the same conditions for Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims), in Makkah and distribute it among the poor of Haram (all areas within the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah). If you cannot slaughter a Fidyah, you have to observe Sawm (Fast) for ten days.

Fatwa no. 20227

Q: I would like to inform Your Eminence of the location of the governorate of Badr in Madinah because people differ on specifying their Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah). Some people mentioned a Fatwa (legal opinion issued by a qualified Muslim scholar) issued by Your Eminence stating that people of this governorate should enter the state of Ihram from their homes in Badr. Shaykh,

(Part No. 10; Page No. 84)

The governorate of Badr lies to the south west of Madinah, 150 kilometers from Madinah and the Miqat of Abar `Ali. This governorate lies at the old road between Makkah and Madinah, about 120 kilometers off Rabigh and Miqat of Al-Juhfah. The order of places from Makkah to Madinah is as follows:

We walk from Makkah to the Miqat of Al-Juhfah then to Badr and then to Abar `Ali and then to Madinah. Badr lies at the road of the people of the Levant (the region covering Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, and Palestine) who pass by Badr and then walk with the people of Badr in the same way until they reach the Miqat of Al-Juhfah. Moreover, Badr is not parallel to any Miqat. Rather, it lies beyond the Miqat of Abar `Ali from the direction of Makkah and before the Miqat of the people of the Levant. Hence, is the Miqat of people of Badr the same as the Miqat of the people of the Levant, i.e. Al-Juhfah, or is it at their homes? We need your answer so that people will have a clear vision and have their confusion dispelled. May Allah safeguard you!

A: You have to enter the state of Ihram at your place of residence if you want to perform Hajj or `Umrah because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(and whoever is living within these boundaries can enter Ihram from his home.\) You are within the Miqat of Madinah. May Allah grant all of us success!

Fatwa no. 15850

Q: I work and reside in Riyadh. I was sent to Jeddah on 15 Shawwal, 1412 A.H. for a certain mission. I took my wife with me to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) after ending my mission. We entered the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) in Jeddah after ending the mission. Taking into consideration that I intend to perform Hajj this year, is there anything upon me? Please advise; may Allah reward you with the best!

A: Anyone who comes from Riyadh to Makkah for the sake of performing `Umrah and has work to do in Jeddah have to enter the state of Ihram in the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) which they come across. It is Al-Sayl which is called: Qarn Al-Manazil. They should enter the state of Ihram whether they pass by this Miqat on land or by air. If they want to pass by Jeddah for the sake of work, they should pass by while entering the state of Ihram. The asker's act of delaying Ihram until he reached Jeddah is not permissible. He has to offer Fidyah (ransom) which is to slaughter a sheep in Makkah and distribute its meat among the poor of Makkah. By the same token, his wife has to offer Fidyah (ransom) due to delaying Ihram until she reached Jeddah. Anyone who is unable to offer a Fidyah should fast ten days. Their `Umrah is valid; however, each one of them should offer a Fidyah as we said along with repenting to Allah (Glorified be He).

The fourth question of Fatwa no. 20628

Q 4: A- I intend to travel to Jeddah and hope to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). I keep thinking of the `Umrah while I am still in Riyadh and say: If I have enough time when I reach Jeddah, I will perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). But now, If I arrived in Jeddah and did not make intention beforehand to perform `Umrah, and my brother suggests that we perform `Umrah, I need to know if prior intention for performing `Umrah is a prerequisite or not. Is it permissible to enter into the state of Ihram in Jeddah if I have intended to perform `Umrah? Or, I must enter into the state of Ihram from the Miqat (site for entering the ceremonial state for Hajj or `Umrah)?

B- I am resident of Riyadh. I traveled to Abha and from there I continued my journey until I reached Jeddah. Two days after arriving in Jeddah, I went to the Miqat of Al-Sayl Al-Kabir where I entered into the state of Ihram and performed `Umrah. Is this correct? My brother is a resident of Jeddah, and he entered into the state of Ihram with me and we performed `Umrah together. Is his `Umrah valid? Please note that he permanently lives in Jeddah and passed by Makkah.

A: If you intended to perform `Umrah while you were in Riyadh and then went to Jeddah for some personal affairs without entering into the state of Ihram, you must enter into the state of Ihram in Al-Sayl Al-Kabir if you wish to perform `Umrah. It is impermissible for you to enter into the state of Ihram in Jeddah in this case, because Al-Sayl Al-Kabir is the Miqat for people in your case. However, if you were not sure about performing `Umrah when being in Riyadh and did not know whether it would be possible or not and did not resolve your intention to perform `Umrah until you arrived in Jeddah, then you should enter into the state of Ihram in Jeddah. But, If you had traveled from Riyadh to Abha and continued your journey to Jeddah with the intention to perform `Umrah, in this case if you came from the coastal road, your Miqat is that of the people of Yemen, i.e. Yalamlam. If you passed it without entering into the state of Ihram, you must offer Fidyah (ransom) that meets the same specifications for Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims) to be slaughtered and its meat distributed among the poor of Al-Haram. If you came via the road of Al-Ta'if, you should enter into the state of Ihram in Al-Sayl Al-Kabir or in Muharram Valley. If this is the case you did, then your entering into the state of Ihram in Al-Sayl Al-Kabir meets the obligatory act for people in your circumstance. It is authentically reported that the Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) stated about the regional Miqats: \(These Miqats are for the residents of these very places and also for non-indigenous people who pass through these places\) With regard to your brother, who resides in Jeddah, the ruling that applies to the People of Jeddah applies to him. It is permissible for him to enter into the state of Ihram in Jeddah. As he has gone with you to Al-Sayl Al-Kabir and entered into the state of Ihram there, such Ihram is valid and there is nothing upon him because of the general meaning of the above Hadith.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

The third question of Fatwa no. 16748

Q 3: I live in Al-Khabar and I want to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage), with Allah's Leave. Where should I enter into the state of Ihram (ceremonial state for Hajj or `Umrah) and put on Ihram (clothing worn during the ceremonial state for Hajj and `Umrah)?

A 3: Whoever intends to perform Hajj or `Umrah should enter into the state of Ihram at the specified respective Miqat (site for entering the ceremonial state for Hajj or `Umrah) through which he passes. As you will head to Makkah from Al-Khabar, you should enter into the state of Ihram at the Miqat of Al-Sayl if you pass through it or through a region parallel to it by land or by air. With regard to putting on the Ihram garment, this should be done upon entering into the state of Ihram for Hajj or `Umrah or before it. It is the intention to perform Hajj or `Umrah or both of them that counts. Mere putting on the Ihram garment without declaring the intention is not considered a state of Ihram.

May Allah grant us success! May Peace and Blessings of Allah be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family and his Companions!

Fatwa no. 17901

Q 1: What is the ruling on the following? A man went from Al-Dammam to Jeddah to receive his wife, children, and father-in-law. While staying in Jeddah, the father of his wife wanted to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). He intended to perform `Umrah when he set out from Egypt, but he did not enter into the state of Ihram (ceremonial state for Hajj or `Umrah) at the assigned Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) thinking that he must first settle in Jeddah for one, two, or three days and then he would commence with the rites of `Umrah. This is in fact what he did. He and his wife started the rites of `Umrah and all of them went out to Makkah and entered into the state of Ihram at Masjid Al-Tan'im in Makkah. The father-in-law and the wife of this man completed the rites of `Umrah.

However, after entering into the state of Ihram, something prevented this man from completing the `Umrah or performing any of its rites except Ihram at the above-mentioned Miqat.

(Part No. 10; Page No. 89)

Are the rites of these people valid, especially entering into the state of Ihram at the abovementioned Miqat? Is it permissible for one to take off the garment of Ihram before commencing the rites of `Umrah due to a particular impediment to completing `Umrah?

Please advise us on this matter in detail. May Allah keeps you safe.

A 1: Those who come to Jeddah intending to perform `Umrah should enter into the state of Ihram at the respective Miqat through which they pass. Those who come from Zhahran should enter into the state of Ihram at the Miqat of the people of Najd, which is Al-Sayl Al-Kabir or the Muharram Valley. Those who come from Egypt should enter into the state of Ihram at Al-Juhfah or in parallel regions to the abovementioned two Miqats, either by air, by land or by sea. If they intend to stay in Jeddah, they must offer Fidyah (expiation) for abandoning an obligatory act, which is entering into the state of Ihram in the specified Miqat. Fidyah is to slaughter a sheep which meets the same specifications for Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims) in Makkah and distribute its meat among the poor of Al-Haram. The one who offers it must not eat anything thereof. One-seventh of a Badanah (a camel or a cow or an ox driven by pilgrims to be offered as sacrifice within the sacred precincts of Makkah) suffices as a Fidyah instead of a sheep. Those who can not afford offering Fidyah must observe Sawm (Fast) ten days.

Those who, for some reason, were prevented from completing the rites of `Umrah and took off their Ihram garment, there is nothing on them if they made a condition upon entering into the state of Ihram that their Ihram should be ended wherever Allah causes them to stop it. If they did not stipulate this condition, they must wear the Ihram garment again and complete the `Umrah because it has become obligatory upon one once he has entered into the state of Ihram. Ihram is binding for him until the completion of this `Umrah. If was engaged in sexual intercourse with his wife during this period for which he the Ihram garment was taken off, then `Umrah must be resumed and completed as normal. However, he must enter into the state of Ihram once again for performing another `Umrah from the same Miqat through which he had first passed by in his way to Jeddah. This second `Umrah should be completed as compensation for the `Umrah invalidated by him for having sexual intercourse while being in the state of Ihram. Fidyah (expiation) by slaughtering a sheep in Makkah must also be offered and its meat be distributed among the poor of Al-Haram. If the person can not afford offering a Fidyah, he must observe Sawm (Fast) ten days as expiation for deliberately invalidating the `Umrah by sexual intercourse.

Q 2: I traveled from Al-Jubayl to Jeddah. During my stay in Jeddah and before returning to Al-Jubayl, I decided to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). Actually I began to fulfill the rites of `Umrah, where I entered into the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah; clothing worn during the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) in Al-Juhfah (or Rabigh, its present name) and fulfilled all the other rites of `Umrah. Is this permissible? I am asking this question because I was told by some people that my Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) would have been that of the people of Jeddah, who begin their Ihram from their houses. Please give us a detailed answer. May Allah safeguard you.

A 2: If you only had the intention to perform `Umrah when you were in Jeddah, your Miqat should be the place where you intended to perform `Umrah - Jeddah. It was unnecessary for you to go to Al-Juhfah. Yet there is no sin on you for so doing and your `Umrah is valid, because when the Prophet (peace be upon him) specified the Miqats, he (peace be upon him) said: \(And these Miqats are for those living at those very places, and besides them for those who come through those places with the intention of performing Hajj and `Umrah.\) This refers to the people of Madinah, Al-Sham (the Levant), Najd (Nejd), and Yemen. Then, he (peace be upon him) said: \(...and whoever is living within these boundaries can enter Ihram from the place where they are staying, even the people of Makkah can assume Ihram from Makkah.\) (Agreed upon by Imams Al-Bukhari and Muslim). As for the people coming from Makkah, this applies to those who want to perform Hajj, but those who want to offer `Umrah should enter

Ihram from Al-Hil (all areas outside the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah). It was authentically reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) commanded `Aishah \(may Allah be pleased with her\), while she was in Makkah and when she wanted to perform `Umrah, to enter Ihram from Al-Tan`im, which is a place of Al-Hil.\)

May Allah grant us success. May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions.

First and second questions of Fatwa no. 20088

Q 1, 2: A person went to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) and for many years, he used to leave Riyadh and go to Masjid Al-Tan'im where he assumed the state of Ihram (clothing worn during the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah). He performed `Umrah many times in this manner. His late wife, his children, mother-in-law and father-in-law also used to accompany him and did the same. After leaving Riyadh to Al-Tan'im, he used to assume Ihram for his first `Umrah and after completing his `Umrah, he used to come back to Masjid Al-Tan'im where he assumed Ihram again and began a new `Umrah on behalf of some dead people. Please, advise about what is due on him. May Allah reward you.

Another person came to Jeddah bound for Riyadh but on the next day, he went to Makkah and assumed Ihram from Masjid Al-Tan'im and then came back to Jeddah and traveled to Riyadh. What should he do? May Allah reward you.

A 2: It is obligatory upon a person who intends to perform Hajj or `Umrah, when living outside the Miqats (sites for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah), to enter Ihram for Hajj or `Umrah from the prescribed Miqat by which he passes by on his way or comes parallel to it if it is not on his way or if he is aboard a plane. It is impermissible for him to pass the prescribed Miqat without entering into the state of Ihram, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: \(Those \(Miqats\) are meant for the people who live at these \(places\) and for those who pass by them for the sake of Hajj or `Umrah. And those who live within them \(within the boundaries of these places\), they should enter into the state of Ihram at these very places. Even the people living in the region of Makkah should start their Ihram from their very place in Makkah. \) (Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim).

The person in question and those in his company should have entered into the state of Ihram from Qarn Al-Manazil, which is now called Al-Sayl Al-Kabir, because it is the prescribed Miqat for him. Thus, their Ihram for `Umrah from Al-Tan'im was a mistake, because they passed their prescribed Miqat without Ihram. However, their `Umrah is acceptable, but each of them must offer a sacrificial animal as expiation for each `Umrah done after passing the Miqat without Ihram while intending `Umrah and assuming Ihram from Al-Tan'im. This is because they missed an obligatory act that should be observed in `Umrah, namely passing by the Miqat without Ihram. Abandonment of any obligatory act entails the expiation of slaughtering a sacrificial animal, i.e. a ewe for each time this obligation was neglected. The expiation may be a ewe that meets the same conditions for an Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims), or 1/7 of a camel or a cow driven by pilgrims to be offered as a sacrifice within the sacred precincts of Makkah and distributed to the poor in the region of Al-Haram (all areas within the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah). If the person is still alive, he should offer this sacrificial animal but he is dead, it should be offered from his heritage if he left property. If he left nothing, any of his children or relatives may slaughter the sacrificial animal instead of him and he will be rewarded In sha'a-Allah (if Allah wills). That is because this takes the same ruling of the debts due on the dead person.

As for the `Umrah that this person initiated from Makkah and entering into the state of Ihram from Al-Tan'im, there is nothing wrong with that, as he did what is legally permissible for him. That is because it is permissible for someone living in

Makkah or just visiting it while they have no intention to perform Hajj or `Umrah to perform `Umrah and enter into Ihram from the nearest point of Al-Hil (all areas outside the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah) to perform `Umrah while they are in Makkah. Al-Tan`im is the nearest point of Al-Hil to Al-Haram. Similarly, if someone comes to Jeddah from Riyadh, or from any other place while having no intention to perform Hajj or `Umrah and then intends to perform Hajj or `Umrah, their Miqat will be Jeddah. They should start Ihram from it but if they miss Ihram in it and assume it from Al-Tan`im, they have to offer a sacrificial animal as expiation as previously clarified in the beginning of the question. This is because they missed a religious duty prescribed for `Umrah.

May Allah grant us success! May peace and blessings be upon our Prophet Muhammad, his family, and Companions!

Sixth question of Fatwa no. 18425

Q 6: I wished to perform `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage). I assumed the state of Ihram (ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) from my house in Riyadh. I boarded the plane, and during the flight the captain of the plane announced: After a short while we shall fly over the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah), and I will inform you when we reach it. Later, he announced: Now, we are about to land at the airport of Jeddah. However, I did not make the intention to perform `Umrah or announce the Talbiyah (devotional expressions chanted at certain times during Hajj and `Umrah) except at the airport. In other words, I did not know until we had landed that we had passed the Miqat. So only then I made the intention to perform `Umrah and pronounced Talbiyah. Is there any sin on me for missing the Miqat, as I passed by it without announcing Talbiyah or making the intention to perform `Umrah until I had went past it? Please answer my question. May Allah reward you with the best reward.

A: If you did not intend to perform `Umrah and assumed the state of Ihram only at the airport of Jeddah, while you were heading from

(Part No. 10; Page No. 94)

Riyadh or some other place that is outside the prescribed Miqats, then you have to offer Fidyah (ransom) by slaughtering a sheep in Makkah that meets the same specifications for Ud-hiyah (sacrificial animal offered by non-pilgrims) and the meat should be distributed among the needy.

Q: Is it permissible for pilgrims, whether performing Hajj or `Umrah, to begin Ihram (ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) from Abar `Aly, in Al-Madinah Al-Munawarah; taking into consideration that they first arrive in Jeddah airport then continue the journey to Madinah and so they need to enter Ihram from Abar `Aly?

A: Pilgrims who arrive at Jeddah airport, where they intend to leave Jeddah for Madinah before commencing the rituals of Hajj or `Umrah, then end their visit to Madinah and want to return to Makkah, should enter Ihram from the Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj or `Umrah) of the people of Madinah, i.e. Dhul-Hulayfah, which is called "Abar `Aly". This is because they fall under the same ruling as the people of Madinah, in compliance with the statement of the Prophet (peace be upon him) regarding the Miqats: \(These Miqats are for those living at these very places, and also for non-indigenous people who come through these places with the intention of performing Hajj and `Umrah.\) (Agreed upon by Imams Al-Bukhari and Muslim)

Fatwa no. 19210

Q: I would like to know the opinion of your Eminence on what was written by `Adnan `Ar`ur in an treatise entitled: "The legal Proofs on the validity of Jeddah as a Miqat (site for entering the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah). I would like you to elaborate on this issue. May Allah guide you to every good deed.

A: A previous declaration was issued by his Eminence, the Grand Mufty, on the concerned treatise. Following is the text of this declaration:

All praise is due to Allah, the Lord of all Worlds. May Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon Prophet Muhammad and upon all his family and his Companions. To proceed,

The Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) pointed out the Miqats (sites for entering the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah) that no one intending to perform Hajj or `Umrah (lesser pilgrimage) should pass without assuming the state of Ihram (clothing worn during the ritual state for Hajj and `Umrah). They are as follows:

Dhu Al-Hulayfah , Abyar `Aly : For the residents of Madinah and all people setting out from other places beyond it and who shall pass by it in their way.

Al-Juhfah : For people setting out from Al-Sham (the Levant), Egypt, Morocco and people of other regions who come from that direction.

Yalamlum (Sa`diyah): For people coming from Yemen and people from other places who come from that direction.

Dhat `Irq : For people setting out from Iraq and people from other places who come from that direction.

Qarn-al-Manazil : for the people of Najd, Al-Ta'if and people from other places who come from that direction.

Other people who live within the radius of the borders of these Miqats from the side of Makkah, should assume the state of Ihram from their house; even the residents of Makkah should assume their Ihram for Hajj from their place in Makkah. As for `Umrah, they should assume their Ihram from the nearest point of Al-Hil (all areas outside the Sacred Sanctuary of Makkah) as the people of Jeddah and those staying therein do when intending to perform Hajj or `Umrah.

Those who pass by these Miqats when going to Makkah but not intending to perform Hajj or `Umrah, they do not have to assume Ihram according to the sound view of scholars. However, if they intend to perform Hajj or `Umrah after having passed the Miqats, they should assume Ihram from the place wherein they made the intention to perform Hajj or `Umrah, unless one intends to perform `Umrah while being in Makkah. In this case, he should go to the nearest point to Al-Hil and assume Ihram as previously stated. To sum up, assuming the state of Ihram in these Miqats is obligatory upon all those who pass by them or come over a region parallel to them by land, sea, or air when intending to perform Hajj or `Umrah.

The publication of this declaration was necessary especially after a brother published a treatise entitled "The Legal Proofs on the validity of Jeddah as a Miqat". In this work he endeavoured to prove that there is an additional Miqat besides the Miqats prescribed by the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). He argued that Jeddah is an valid Miqat for assuming Ihram for Hajj and `Umrah for people coming to it by land, sea or air. According to him, they may postpone their entering into the state of Ihram until they reach Jeddah where they can assume Ihram. That is because, according to his view, Jeddah is parallel to Al-Sa`diyyah and Al-Juhfah and so it is a proper Miqat. However, this argument bears great plain error that is obvious to all those who have sound knowledge and geodesic expertise. It is clear that Jeddah is within the boundaries of the prescribed Miqats and a person who comes to it inevitably passes by or is parallel to one of the prescribed Miqats that were specified by the Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him), whether the pilgrim comes by land, sea or air. Thus, it is impermissible for a pilgrim to pass by the prescribed Miqat without entering into the state of Ihram, if he is intending to perform Hajj or `Umrah. The Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said upon prescribing the Miqats: \(Those \(Miqats\) are meant for the people who live at these \(places\) and for those who pass by them

(Part No. 10; Page No. 97)

for the sake of performing Hajj or `Umrah.) Therefore, it is impermissible for a pilgrim who intends to perform Hajj or `Umrah to pass by these Miqats until he reaches Jeddah without making Ihram and start his Ihram only from Jeddah. Jeddah is located within the boundaries of the Mawaqit.
